ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The research and publication of a project such as the reconstitution of the DEBATES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF UNITED CANADA, 1841-1867 has required extensive co-operation from many people and it has also required significant expenditures of money. The Centre d'Etude du Québec has been privileged : individuals and institutions have willingly assisted the project to its first fruition, Volume I of the DEBATES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF UNITED CANADA, 1841.

The initiation of the project was the work of Elizabeth Nish, the Research Director of the C.E.Q. The material needs were furnished by the Faculty of Arts of Sir George Williams University and its then Dean, Dr. John O'Brien. He and his successor, Ian Campbell, have always encouraged the project, both materially and morally. M. Roger Charbonneau, the Director of the H.E.C., did likewise. The Library of Sir George has played and indeed still plays a vital role. Former Chief Librarian Keith Crouch, and his successor Helen Howard, have seen to the appropriate library budget expenditures. The point of departure for the DEBATES is newspapers. These were all acquired by the Sir George Williams Library.

Research and publication were facilitated by the contributions of several agencies, in particular the Canada Council, the Ministère des affaires culturelles du Québec, the Social Science Research Council, and the Committee for the Advancement of Scholarly Activities of Sir George Williams University. Their monetary contributions were essential to the realization of the project.

In the earlier stages of the project, Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, then the Director of the Public Archives of Canada, proffered his support. Dr. W. I. Smith, his successor, has been equally generous.

Professors J.M.S. Careless and John Terry Copp both read the manuscript version of the introduction to the DEBATES. Erik Spicer, Librarian of the Canadian Library of Parliament, and assistant Parliamentary Librarian Pamela Hardisty, as well as the Chief Editor of Canadian HANSARD, Newall Price, were all most helpful in their comments and suggestions.

Last, but by no means least, all the assistants of the C.E.Q. are to be thanked. The slow and often boring aspects of the project were their burden. The printing-off, cutting, and typing from almost illegible documents were difficult and patience-consuming tasks. In particular, Mlle Hélène Paré's work in preparing the index must be acknowledged.

One person yet remains to be acknowledged : Elizabeth Nish. The project is hers from conception to realization.

HISTORY WITHOUT HANSARD

RESEARCH

Canada is a parliamentary democracy whose historians have consistently chosen to represent the past through a political orientation.<sup>1</sup> Our historiographical and popular heroes are almost always statesmen whose lives centred around national or provincial Parliaments and their peripheral institutions. One of their primary functions was to talk : talk on the hustings, talk their path to power, and above all, to talk in Parliament. By origin, tradition and definition Parliament is a "talking place".<sup>2</sup> Its chief characteristic and purpose is to decide the country's policies through debate. Yet the words of its talkers in their talking place were not systematically recorded until 1880, and our historians are helplessly grounded in this documentary lacuna from which they must produce their studies.

The Canadian Assemblies and Legislative Councils customarily kept only JOURNALS as the sole official records of their proceedings. These JOURNALS contain just the skeleton outline of legislative events, such as the texts and proposers of official motions and resolutions, and some division lists. No debates were recorded. Therefore a great deal more happened than the JOURNALS record. In addition, the format and purpose of the JOURNALS preclude using them to judge the significance of specific legislative events. Since the JOURNALS were intended solely to record legislative events, they can provide neither implicit nor explicit commentary. The bitterly debated motion, the motion gliding through a perfunctory passage and the motion hustled through by a bare quorum are all described in an identical and unrevealing format.

Fortunately we are not confined to the JOURNALS. The contemporary newspapers almost all contain accounts of legislative proceedings, including the debates that occurred. It is upon these newspapers that we must rely for our parliamentary reports.

Every researcher in Canadian history who has had to study legislative activity and political thought and alignments knows that the lack of a HANSARD is one of the severest defects in our historical legacy. For researchers working on a biography of an individual politician the problem is compounded. For such a work it is essential to know precisely what role the man played in the legislative proceedings. Yet gathering this information requires reading many newspapers in order to gain an adequate picture of each individual debate ; the inconsistencies in parliamentary reporting from paper to paper permit no alternative. A great many factors influenced the reporting : the editor's and/or reporter's bias ; the major interests of the people serviced by the paper ; the amount of space allotted to parliamentary reporting ; the extent of the reporter's bilingualism ; his shorthand, or worse, his longhand speed ; and the accoustical properties of his place in the Gallery. Therefore it is only possible to obtain a full picture of a debate by reading accounts of it in several newspapers. Moreover, all this reading is necessarily undertaken without an index though an index would save much time by indicating all those debates in which the biographical subject had participated.

A comparison between the Canadian and American or British situation presents the problem in its true proportions. If an American or English researcher chooses to study a specific piece of legislation he will follow this methodological routine in approximately this order :

- a. Read the secondary literature on the topic.
- b. Using the Index, read all that was said in the House in the debates in which the final piece of legislation was produced.
- c. Read any relevant official documents and governmental records.
- d. Consult the private papers of the individuals concerned.
- e. Finally, depending upon his topic, make an analysis of the legislation, the role of the legislators in producing it, and its effects, etc.

Should a Canadian choose to study an identical subject in the Canadian past, he will have to follow a different methodological routine :

- a. Find secondary literature to read. This literature will probably be scanty and inadequate since other historians, reacting to the same lacunae in the documentation available, have usually avoided the problems inherent in undertaking the research by avoiding that sort of topic.

b. Without any index or other historiographical aids, read several newspapers in both languages to reconstruct the debates. However, if the researcher follows the usual technique of merely taking notes, he will not necessarily be abstracting what for his work are the essential points. This is because he never had the complete picture before him ; he had at best merely differing and incomplete versions. Unless he systematically reconstructs each debate in its entirety by comparing and collating the reports of each debate from each paper consulted, his notes will contain information abstracted from a context which is probably incomplete, and perhaps distorted.

- c. Read any relevant government documents and records. When these exist they are adequately indexed, though there is a lack of such documentation due to austerity measures taken by Canadian legislators reacting against escalating and what they considered unjustifiable printing costs.<sup>3</sup>

- d. Consult the private papers of the individuals concerned.

- e. Depending on the topic, analyse the legislation and the role of various legislators in producing it, and its effects, etc.

However, it is almost impossible that the researcher has been able to properly reconstruct each relevant debate. Therefore the result of his labours will necessarily be a piece of scholarship which despite its merits and insights, is less valid and further from excellence than he could have produced had he had the same materials to work with as his English or American counterparts in their own national histories.

If the subject in American or English history is biographical, the methodology used would be the same as that described for studying legislation, but would include an additional stage. It would be necessary to consult the Index to HANSARD or the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and to read every speech the biographical subject ever made, probably on every issue, if the biography were a really comprehensive one.

If, on the other hand, a Canadian politician is the subject under consideration, the researcher has additional work. He must try to establish his subject's role in debates of which he has at best imperfect knowledge. And of course there is no index available to him because there is no organized mass of material to which an index could refer.

HISTORIOGRAPHY

The consequences for Canadian historiography produced by the lack of a HANSARD are serious though completely understandable. There is a distinct tendency to study not legislation and the legislative proceedings of Parliament, our decision-making body, but to study instead political alignments and manoeuvres from the perspective of personality and intrigue more than from the point of view of social and intellectual history. In other words, the nature and usability of extant historical documents has dictated the nature of our written history. And our excess of strictly Whig and constitutional history, the surfeit of which is in direct proportion to our deplorable lack of social history, is largely attributable to the lack of a HANSARD in the 18th and 19th Centuries. Worse, the tradition so established carries over into works in the period after 1880 when there was a HANSARD. This is partly because tradition dictates what type of history will be produced, partly because historians lack training and a seminal literature in the field, and partly because of the lack of historical continuity. How can social history in the late 19th Century be understood if what preceded it, caused it, shaped it, influenced it, is mostly unknown? In sum, when in 1792 the Canadians first experienced government by elected representatives, a great range of life, power and thought was channelled away from the older and traditional outlets and levels and into British institutions where direct records of it were promptly lost to posterity because it went almost unreported.

In the past there have been many responses to this historiographical state of affairs. Most expressed regret, avoided investigating those subjects studied in countries with more adequate documentation, and confined themselves to the traditional delimitations of our national history writing. This essay introduces the product of a different response, a HANSARD for the year 1841 which has been reconstructed from contemporary newspaper accounts. This HANSARD is an integration of parliamentary newspaper reports into the official JOURNALS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY. It is based upon a methodology which follows scientific devices and techniques to produce a text which is inseparable from its historical context. Above all, this text is the issue of two powerful and intimately-associated institutions, Parliament and the parliamentary Press.

3. Olga Bishop, PUBLICATIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PROVINCE OF CANADA 1841-1867, p. 8: "The first change in this policy of automatically printing all reports took place in 1852, when as a result of the high cost of printing the Standing Committee on Printing of the Legislative Assembly recommended a policy of selection rather than continuing the policy of automatically printing all reports. The Committee's recommendation was adopted and from 1852 to 1859, all reports tabled in the House were reviewed by this Committee before they were ordered printed. As a result, some of the reports tabled were printed in abstract only, while others were not printed at all. In 1859, as a result of the continuing increase in the cost of printing a joint committee of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly was established. This Committee adopted even a more rigid system of selection. From 1860 to 1867, approximately one third of the reports tabled were not published."

CHAPTER II :

THE MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS AND THE PARLIAMENTARY PRESS

BRITAIN'S SYSTEM : 1641-1830

The newly-created Canadian Union Parliament was very much the child of the Mother of Parliaments. Both its predecessors had always operated upon British principles ; <sup>1</sup> it is the very nature of British-derived Parliaments to do so. After the Rebellions, the members of the Union Parliament sought even more conscientiously to follow the British model. To follow this model was first and foremost to find appropriate precedents by "searching" British history and records. <sup>2</sup> Parliamentary practice is in fact "the sum of ... ((these)) rules and principles...." <sup>3</sup> The British system for recording legislative proceedings was an integral part of parliamentary practice, one which by 1841 already had a long and fascinating history reflecting the struggles between the various groups in British society.

Britain's first official parliamentary paper was ordered printed in 1641. This act of daring coincided, significantly, with the abolition of the Court of Star Chamber. <sup>4</sup> British parliamentary printing evolved as cautiously as it began and the debates were not printed verbatim until 1909. In fact, parliamentary reporting was prohibited for hundreds of years by parliamentarians fiercely guarding those rights and privileges won during the long struggle to assert themselves over the aristocratic hierarchy and monarchy. To record the gains they made in the conflict, the parliamentarians needed an accurate record of their proceedings. Yet they wished to record only their decisions, never the heated and unguarded words of their debates. Their decisions might be enforced throughout the Kingdom, but their deliberations could easily land them in prison. Therefore the Clerk of the Commons, though he swore "to attend upon the Commons ... making true entries, remembrances and journals of the things done and past in the same," was bound as well by an ancient resolution that "the entry of the Clerk of particular men's speeches was without warrant." <sup>5</sup> Over the years this stricture was punctiliously observed. The Clerk recorded only those remarks to which another member had formally objected. <sup>6</sup> Even questions and answers, unless incorporated into a motion or resolution, were never recorded in the British JOURNALS.

The history of parliamentary printing parallels the struggle between the Commons and the administration in the days when the latter was independent of and in no way responsible to the Commons. Then, Command Papers represented executive strength. Sessional Papers, on the other hand, reflected the Commons' initiative.

These were official publications. Parliamentary debates were unofficial, and were published by printers who knowingly risked legal proceedings every time they printed a report.<sup>7</sup> For years Parliament "kept the press in a kind of mysterious awe, which made it necessary to have recourse to such devices."<sup>8</sup> Reporters were forbidden to take notes in the Commons' Public Gallery upon pain of reprimand from Mr. Speaker, or a term in prison.<sup>9</sup> A few risked taking and smuggling notes from the Gallery. Others simply attended Parliament, listened to the proceedings and afterwards wrote them up from memory.<sup>10</sup>

The most unorthodox of these methods were made famous by their most brilliant practitioner, Dr. Samuel Johnson. From 19 November 1740 until 23 February 1743 Johnson wrote debates for Edward Cave's GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE under the non-actionable but transparent titles of "Debates in the Senate of Great Lilliput" and "Debates of the Political Club."<sup>11</sup> Johnson's debates, later a primary source for parliamentary histories, began when William Guthrie memorized them, transcribed them and sent them to Dr. Johnson via publisher Cave. Johnson revised them. At a later period he did them entirely himself, though "sometimes ... he had nothing more communicated to him than the names of the several speakers, and the part which they had taken in the debate."<sup>12</sup> He manufactured these debates, "the mere coinage of his own imagination,"<sup>13</sup> at the frenetic rate of three MAGAZINE columns an hour.<sup>14</sup> He usually attempted to compose each speech in the speaker's own style, but "he always took care to put Sir Robert Walpole in the wrong, and to say every thing he could against the electorate of Hanover,"<sup>15</sup> and "the Whig dogs."<sup>16</sup> Johnson's editor was several times reprimanded for publishing these debates;<sup>17</sup> he persevered nonetheless and so did several other editors.

In 1771 the battle of Parliament against the Press was largely ended by Parliament's capitulation to public opinion. Two printers were arrested for failing to appear at the Bar of the House on charges of "misrepresenting the speeches and reflecting on several members of this House." The two City of London aldermen hearing their case dismissed the charges and released the printers from custody. In addition, one of the aldermen, John Wilkes, who was also MP for Middlesex, ordered the printers to prosecute their arresting officer. Soon a third printer was arrested on the same charge. The Lord Mayor Brass Crosby and aldermen William Oliver and Wilkes freed him as well. They also committed the messenger executing the arrest warrant for assault. Then the three defiant officials repeatedly ignored summons to appear at the Bar of the Commons. The Commons finally had two of them, Mayor Crosby and alderman Oliver, committed to the Tower of London, only to see them gain early release at Parliament's prorogation: Parliament can keep prisoners only for the duration of its own life. Thereafter massive popular demonstrations in support of the released prisoners convinced the Commons to cease its persecution of parliamentary reporters though some years elapsed before they were granted real tolerance.<sup>18</sup>

After 1771 overt persecution was succeeded by the new tactic of strictly enforcing the standing order for the exclusion of "strangers". This policy succeeded to the extent that the 13th Parliament, from May 1768 to June 1774, was known as the "the Unreported Parliament". Ironically, posterity has not been the loser, because one of the Commons' own members undertook to report the debates himself. Sir Henry Cavendish, MP for Lostwithiel from 1768 to 1774, recorded forty-eight volumes quarto of what he judged to be the most important debates of the session. These included the debates on the Quebec Act which have been of such great interest to Canadian historians. Cavendish not only took excellent Gurney shorthand, but his reports have other advantages as well.

The speeches are more minutely detailed than is usual, or even necessary, in parliamentary reporting; but, from this exactness and fulness, one great advantage is derived — that every speech contains the actual words made use of, taken down without the least attempt at embellishment, and with such evident marks of the peculiar mind of the speaker, that we seem to have before us the very man himself.

It is another source of advantage to these Debates, that they were all reported by one person, sitting in the House, not liable to be confused by interruptions, not liable to be turned out in the middle of a speech, and having no motive for the immense labour which he underwent, but the desire of possessing himself of a record of the proceedings of the time, taken with the utmost accuracy.<sup>19</sup>

By the end of the 18th Century reporters worked regularly from the Galleries, and in 1803 the Commons' Speaker Abbot set aside the back row of the Public Gallery specially for reporters.<sup>20</sup> After the Fire of 1834 the rebuilt Parliament Buildings contained an official Reporters' Gallery.<sup>21</sup>

The people's identification with the Press' struggle against Parliament ultimately won them both the right and the means to know what passed within the deliberative chambers of their elected representatives. Originally the members of the Commons, both symbols and representatives of their oppressed people, had insisted upon the right to "parliamentary privilege". This privilege consisted principally of freedom of debate, and was at first preserved by vigilance and secrecy.<sup>22</sup> After 1771 vigilance by secrecy replaced vigilance by persecution; sometime after the "Unreported Parliament" toleration replaced secrecy; in 1803 encouragement replaced toleration. At last parliamentary reporting was officially acknowledged and even provided for in a tangible and constructive manner.

It was in this same year that William Cobbett published the PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, forward from 1803, as a supplement to his WEEKLY POLITICAL REGISTER. Three years later he undertook the formidable task of publishing the debates from 1803 backwards. He did this by collating all the important sources for parliamentary reporting, such as Dr. Johnson's fabrications, under the title PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY OF ENGLAND. FROM THE NORMAN CONQUEST, IN 1066. TO THE YEAR, 1803. His main source for the period 1066 to 1660 was THE OLD PARLIAMENTARY or CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND, which he compressed into his first three volumes. These debates, and those covering the period from 1660 to 1714, are so inadequately presented that they must be supplemented by various manuscript sources. The later volumes in the PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY contain almost contemporary accounts, and are therefore less unreliable, though even the best sources such as Dr. Johnson render Cobbett's entire HISTORY suspect when it is judged in terms of the modern criteria for evaluating parliamentary reporting. Cobbett's other main sources are: the JOURNAL of Sir Simonds D'Ewes; the collections of Rushworth, Somers and Hardwicke; the Debates of the Commons in 1620 and 1621; Chandler and Timberland's DEBATES; Grey's DEBATES of the Commons from 1667 to 1694; Almon's DEBATES; and Debrett's DEBATES.<sup>23</sup> These works were produced by methods ranging from reasonably accurate (smuggled notes) to highly selective and interpretative (notes compiled from memory), from completely imaginary but very probable (Dr. Johnson's Tories) to deliberately falsified (Dr. Johnson's Whigs). However, they may be supplemented and verified by a vast number of pamphlets, newspaper reports, and even accounts in manuscript collections. These thirty-six volumes are the direct ancestor of HANSARD.

The debates from 1803 are divided into Five Series of PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES. The First Series is Cobbett's PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, 1803-1820,<sup>24</sup> published from 1812 "under the superintendence" of Thomas Curson Hansard. The Second Series, published in 1829 as HANSARD'S PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, covers the period 1820 to 1830; Third Series, 1830 to 1891; Fourth Series, THE PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (authorized edition) 1892 to 1908. The Fifth Series, from 1909 onwards, is the Official Report, printed by His Majesty's Stationery Office. In 1943 the name "Hansard" was added to the title page as belated tribute to the family publishing firm so long patronized by the Commons.<sup>25</sup>

MR. HANSARD 1830-1891

This brief survey of parliamentary reporting provides the historical background and context in which to examine in some detail the Third Series, from 1830 to 1891. This Series gives in its turn the historical background for Canada's nineteenth Century Parliaments, and for its parliamentary reporting techniques. "Hansard" is the name associated with this period. In 1821 Cobbett sold his interest in the POLITICAL REGISTER to Thomas Curson Hansard, Common's Printer Luke Hansard's son, who as a partner in his father's firm of Luke Hansard & Sons had been publishing the REGISTER since it began in 1803.<sup>26</sup> Hansard's system for producing the debates is of considerable interest for our Canadian study. During his tenure, HANSARD'S PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES were "compiled by gentlemen of some literary importance, from every source which was at that time available; newspapers, pamphlets, manuscripts, and other very miscellaneous sources; but ... never from reports in the Reporters' Gallery."<sup>27</sup> This methodology was not substantially modified until years after Hansard's death in 1833.

In 1833, Hansard's eldest son, also named Thomas Curson, became proprietor and manager of the firm.<sup>28</sup> He employed a staff to fashion debates from collations of the reports in the London and county newspapers, Press Association reports, and any relevant public documents.<sup>29</sup> Yet his system produced reports too painfully inadequate to overcome even such competition as Charles Dicken's employer THE MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT.<sup>30</sup> In addition to its poor quality, HANSARD'S publishing delays made it almost useless for current reference.<sup>31</sup> By 1855, Hansard faced bankruptcy.<sup>32</sup> However, the Treasury rescued him by guaranteeing to purchase one hundred sets at the price private members paid. In 1858, one hundred and twenty sets were taken. By 1878 this had increased to one hundred and twenty-four.<sup>33</sup> Despite this arrangement the enterprise continued as a private one, unconnected to the government. It provided only security enough to enable Hansard to continue it, and impetus enough to improve and develop his methodology. In fact we know a great deal about his methodology because he was more than once called upon to give detailed testimony about it. This is fortunate for the present study because Canadians considered his finished work the epitome of parliamentary reporting, and consequently their model and ideal.

Hansard's methodology was always based on collation of different materials. The page proofs of the debates thus produced were sent to the members whose remarks had been reported. Approximately half of them responded and returned corrected versions of their speeches.<sup>34</sup> This was supposed to guarantee that the speeches were accurately reported, though in fact a guarantee was impossible because the newspapers used to collate debates were all victims of "undeniable and universally acknowledged deterioration".<sup>35</sup> Consequently,

The existing reports collected by Mr. Hansard, though perhaps as good as could be expected under the circumstances, are yet so far from excellence, that many Members have ceased to even open the reports of their speeches, which are sent to them for correction. Knowing that the reports, in any case, would be travesties of what they had said, they were indifferent as to whether the travesty was great or small, and refused to take interest in, or accept any responsibility for, the report. Such a state of things deprives "Hansard" of almost any authority.<sup>36</sup>

Hansard's attitude towards his work compounded the problem of inadequate source material. No doubt influenced by the tradition of Johnson, Dickens and other literary giants, he claimed that his HANSARD was also a literary production.<sup>37</sup> Therefore he judged verbatim reports, or apparently even substantive reports, of no great value. "It might happen that you put into a Member's mouth what he ought to have said, rather than what he said?" Hansard was asked. "That would not be a very great evil," he replied.<sup>38</sup> Though he was trained in the law,<sup>39</sup> where courtroom proceedings are reported verbatim, complete with grammatical lapses,<sup>40</sup> Hansard felt that verbatim parliamentary reporting conflicted with literary considerations. In addition, he believed that "the public do not require verbatim reports."<sup>41</sup> In theory Hansard's methodology and his goals combined a reasonable approach to the available material with inappropriate and unattainable literary aspirations. In practice, his work evidenced much less concern with the latter aspect than his testimony indicated.

HANSARD was critically evaluated throughout the third period. Several contemporaries expressed no little contempt for both Hansard's work and for the system which produced it. "I understand he simply prepares reports, and like an eclectic philosopher, picks out the passages which he understands to be most representative of the characteristics of the speaker," one of his contemporaries commented.<sup>42</sup> Veteran parliamentary reporter Charles Ross, Supervisor for the LONDON TIMES' Reporters' Gallery, testified about the use of his paper's reports: "Of course Hansard has done nothing but cut them out."<sup>43</sup> Other knowledgeable witnesses agreed. "Hansard is practically copied from the 'Times'"<sup>44</sup> and "He takes ... his reports practically from 'The Times' newspaper...."<sup>45</sup> they said. HANSARD was universally admired for only one feature: its format. As a printer Hansard was excellent; as an editor he was unable to satisfy even his own explicit criteria. In reality he relied almost entirely upon the labours of the LONDON TIMES' reporters. Nonetheless he was not thrown out of business. Instead, various parliamentary officials made several attempts to improve the quality of his work.

The Commons finally confronted the problem of HANSARD's inadequacy in 1877 when a Select Committee decided after careful investigation to change the nature of the agreement with Hansard. Instead of merely buying whatever he produced, the government subsidized him to report four specific areas of the Commons' proceedings. These four areas were: 1) discussion on Private Bills "By Order", 2) discussion on Committee of Supply, 3) discussion in Committee on Public Bills and 4) debates after midnight. This contract automatically exempted Hansard from reporting most Wednesday sittings, when private members' bills as opposed to private bills "By Order", were debated.<sup>47</sup> These Wednesday proceedings were largely ignored by the Press. This meant that Hansard, because of his great dependence on the newspapers for reports of everything except his own four points, was helpless to provide even barely adequate reports of Wednesdays' proceedings. He himself described this situation as "the blot on the whole system of Parliamentary reporting."<sup>48</sup>

Hansard's new contract involved him in his first change in methodology since he had assumed his father's business. He had to employ parliamentary reporters. He had a seat in the Commons' Reporters' Gallery, reserved until 6 o'clock P. M. when he had to surrender it.<sup>49</sup> One of his staff of five shorthand writers always occupied the seat during proceedings on the four points.<sup>50</sup> The reporters edited the speeches, improved grammar and syntax, and eliminated repetitious materials. They took only very exceptional speakers in the first person, for Hansard actually believed some M.P.s to be incapable of expressing their opinions in their own words: "There are some speakers who really cannot be reported in the first person," he testified.<sup>51</sup> The transcribed speeches were sent to "undergo also a collation and revision where there are other sources of information" such as public documents.<sup>52</sup> Then they fell under the editorial pen of Hansard himself. Hansard even edited members' corrections. "If a speech be returned to me corrected in a manner I do not like, I put it aside, and print the original report," he informed a Select Committee.<sup>53</sup>

Judged by our modern criteria, Hansard's HANSARD was wrongly conceived. Judged within its own historical context, it was inadequately produced, failing to satisfy even its editor's standards. "It is literary work; it is collation," Hansard explained,<sup>54</sup> but his final product satisfied no literary goals, and in fact was not really even collation, for even after he employed his own reportorial staff he lifted his texts almost entirely from the columns of the LONDON TIMES. As a source for the proceedings in the House of Commons HANSARD's authority is based mainly on the fact that it is well known, helpfully indexed, and readily accessible. Its reputation for excellence, accepted uncritically in Canada, was never established in England by men who had a personal acquaintance with the Parliament which it reported. "The authority of 'Hansard' is not, and never has been in any sense official or authoritative; it has rested always upon the confidence placed in the character of those who conduct it," its editor believed.<sup>55</sup> But the important criterion is not the character of those responsible for a production but rather the standards established for it, its methodology, and the successful use of that methodology to achieve the stated goals. The prestige of the Hansard family and its reputation for excellence in the printing trade was an unfortunately important influence in maintaining the inferior HANSARD as the main source for the Commons' debates.<sup>56</sup> The Joint Select Committee of the House of Lords and Commons of 1888 was of this opinion as well, concluding that "the present system under which Debates and Proceedings in Parliament are reported is inconvenient and inadequate...." Nor did that system conform in any way to the Committee's recommendations for an ideal official HANSARD.

An Official Report must be verbatim, and except, perhaps, as to gross grammatical errors, uncorrected. It must be verbatim, because the length at which each member should be officially reported cannot be left to the discretion of the reporter.... It must be uncorrected, except as to grammatical errors, because ... further corrections might involve the alteration of what had actually been said, and would so far prejudice the credit and interest of the Report.<sup>57</sup>

CONTRACT HANSARD 1891-1909

Despite this official disapproval of his work, Hansard's contract was continued for another two disappointing years. Then the Hansards sold their shares to the Hansard Publishing Union. Soon afterwards the Union declared bankruptcy. Subsequently, one firm after another held the contract, giving it up each in turn to an equally unsatisfactory successor. Speeches were still reported verbatim only on very special occasions, and as a rule were neither fully nor even accurately reported. At last in 1907 a new Select Committee recommended that government assume the cost and, most important, the responsibility for parliamentary reporting. As a result, the first verbatim Official Report of the debates of the House of Commons appeared in 1909.<sup>58</sup> Only in the 20th Century has England been able to make satisfactory arrangements for accurate reports of the proceedings of its House of Commons.

The reasons for the centuries-long delay in making these arrangements tell the constitutional and ideological history of both Parliament and parliamentary reporting. Above all others in importance was the question of parliamentary privilege. In its centuries-long struggle for legislative and administrative supremacy, Parliament jealously guarded the right of each of its members to speak freely in the House exempt from punishment and censure. Parliamentary privilege became an established tradition.

Parliament must be as independent as possible, and individual Members and Senators as free as possible of external restraints and pressures, in the transaction of public business. The privileges of each House of Parliament, and of the members thereof, are based upon those enjoyed by the House of Commons in the United Kingdom as part of the lex et consuetudo parliamenti, the ancient law of parliament. In general any act or omission which obstructs or impedes either House, or any member or officer thereof, in the performance of parliamentary duties, is a breach of privilege — a contempt of parliament — which is punishable as such by the House concerned. An offender may be brought before the bar of the House and admonished or even imprisoned for the breach. In addition, each member of either House has the privilege of freedom of speech in anything he may say in pursuance of his parliamentary duty.<sup>59</sup>

Before it became a cherished tradition, privilege was overwhelmingly important, because it had a primarily practical significance. Arduously won in inch by inch concessions, it was the Commons' defense against repression and vicious persecution. First and foremost it was a weapon, an impenetrable coat of armour to envelop vulnerable M.P.s. While this privilege was being secured on the practical level, it was also being ideologically developed, and safeguarded. Breach of parliamentary privilege constituted contempt of the House; contempt incurred certain carefully-defined penalties.<sup>60</sup> Parliamentary privilege was thus established as part of the parliamentary system, incorporated into the constitutional framework, and it has remained an integral part of British parliamentary practice and theory.

Intimately related and almost parallel was the struggle for freedom of the Press. Those who would defend the people's representatives against mighty and oppressive rulers, and those who supported the people's right to know what their elected representatives said and did, tread ideologically common ground. The public's right to know was necessarily associated with the agency of their knowing, the Press. Therefore liberty for the one would seem to secure the other's right. Yet for Centuries this premise was tactically if not fundamentally false. Freedom of the Press was in fact irreconcilable with parliamentary privilege. Privilege meant more than exemption from suits based on remarks made in the House. Privilege was associated with secrecy; for example, a single member could have the House emptied by "espying strangers" present who were not authorized parliamentary personnel.<sup>61</sup> Even when strangers were permitted to attend, "the theory of the law is that no person is authorized to repeat things that pass in Parliament."<sup>62</sup> In 1738 this theory became an actual issue and the incensed House unanimously resolved that it is a high indignity to, and a notorious breach of the privileges of this House to print the debates or other proceedings of the House, as well during the recess as the sitting of Parliament, and that this House will proceed with the utmost severity against such offenders.<sup>63</sup>

Gradually, as we have seen, popular encouragement of parliamentary reporting prompted an end to open persecution after 1771 and led to tolerance by 1803 and to acknowledged right in 1835. Newspaper accounts of parliamentary proceedings were still not privileged, but the tradition was established that actions would be taken against publishers only for violation of civil rights, and never because the very existence of the reports constituted a breach of parliamentary privilege.<sup>64</sup>

Acceptance of parliamentary reporting in the newspapers forced Parliament to grapple with the new issue of whether or not the House had a right to publish an official report of its own proceedings. The problem lay in the risk of legal proceedings being instituted against members if the official reports contained allegedly libellous material. Newspaper accounts of parliamentary proceedings, for instance, were not privileged; they were merely a "repetition by an unauthorized person of the speaker's words."<sup>65</sup> This question had to reach crisis proportions before it was settled.

In 1837 John Joseph Stockdale swore out a libel action against the Hansard family's publishing company for having published a report of the Inspector of Prisons which included allegedly libellous material. What transformed this essentially legal problem into a real crisis was the commitment to Newgate Prison of the two Sheriffs of London, Messrs. Wheelton and Evans, for executing the Queen's Writ against Hansard. Litigation dragged on for years after their release. It ended only with the passage of an Act of Parliament prohibiting actions based on reports printed by order of the Houses. Such reports thereby became privileged.<sup>66</sup> This Act constituted the legislative and legal end to the issue.

Nonetheless it lingered on as a problem for the tradition-oriented parliamentarians. The experts gave it as their opinion that an authorized Official HANSARD either fell within the category of privileged reports described in the Stockdale case Act or that another act could easily be passed to give HANSARD this status. This opinion still failed to reassure some members. Canadian M.P.s felt a similar reluctance and uneasiness when confronted with the same problem. "The question of privilege was one which gave us all concern; that we should be authorizing, under the authority of the House, that which might be possibly libellous, but I do not know of any instance in which the difficulty has practically arisen."<sup>67</sup> The dim feeling of uneasiness was stronger than the reality. Sometimes it stemmed from a vaguely expressed but strong emotional conviction that no change should be made. Historical continuity had to be preserved.

Even after the main problem, breach of parliamentary privilege, had been satisfactorily reconciled, minor problems and a continued reluctance to act prevented the immediate introduction of an official HANSARD. It was argued for example, that if Parliament alone could guarantee the impartiality of an official report, then by the same token Parliament was responsible for its impartiality. "The people have a right to have a report of the debates of their representatives which has some official character, and which is not tainted by the supposed political proclivities of the different newspapers, which would otherwise be the sole repositories of the proceedings of this House," said one Canadian Prime Minister.<sup>68</sup> But through what specific agency should Parliament exercise its responsibility? Through a Committee specially appointed for the purpose? through the Speaker, to whom the reports would be delivered and who could decide whether a report was exact? through the chief of the reporting staff, who by virtue of his contact with Parliament and parliamentary reporters could judge whether or not a report was accurate?

There were additional problems and considerations. An important question was whether the report should be verbatim or abridged. A few parliamentarians favoured verbatim reporting. Many more argued against what they considered its excessive length, its inclusion of errors, and its unnecessary repetition. This group usually favoured an abridged, edited and revised report but could not suggest means to guarantee against substantive alterations. Therefore they were compelled to accept the verbatim report by default, and without enthusiasm. These questions were admittedly technical ones, and while it was important that each be dealt with seriously, none would have deterred a committed Parliament from making suitable and early arrangements for a HANSARD.

Another issue concerned free enterprise and its rights. "Such was the prestige of HANSARD as a private enterprise that Great Britain was the last parliamentary country to establish an official report of debates,"<sup>69</sup> is a common enough belief. A truer explanation would result from ellipsizing this statement. Such was the prestige of ... private enterprise that Great Britain was the last parliamentary country to establish an official report of debates. However, private industry had done such a consistently poor job for so many years that it was plain to everyone that HANSARD was not an attractive commercial proposition. The 1888 Committee on Parliamentary Reporting particularly underscored this point. "The debates in Parliament form a most important, if not the most important, part of our history. It seems absurd and false economy on the part of a great nation to leave to chance the records of the most important factor in the making of its history."<sup>70</sup>

Some objections to an official HANSARD cannot be classified into any category other than eccentricity or obstinacy. For instance, Leonard Henry Courtney, Chairman of Committees in the House of Commons, advised against recording parliamentary proceedings for purposes of historical research. "I do not wish to preserve forever the materials out of which results have been formed, or to keep every stage of the growth of every man, or, to use another simile, to keep the scaffolding always around the building after the building is finished," he testified, adding that:

those who are to come after us will live under the weight of material we are accumulating.... It is a question of cost altogether, not merely pecuniary cost, but the cost of the wear and tear of our lives and the lives of other people, in having to go through the mass of rubbish which would be accumulated for us to study; we should not be able to live.<sup>71</sup>

HANSARD 1909-1969

When in 1909 the House of Commons did get around to publishing its own HANSARD, the format and methodology decided upon was precisely as it is today. HANSARD both then and now is the official report of all debates though not of the entirety of parliamentary proceedings.<sup>72</sup> It includes every word spoken in Parliament: all debates, the answers to both oral and written questions, and all divisions.<sup>73</sup> The shorthand writers, Editor of Debates, and Assistant Editors are all part of the staff of Parliament. HANSARD reporters, working ten minute shifts from the front row of the Reporters' Gallery, attend all sittings.<sup>74</sup> The revisions of their transcriptions are limited to correcting grammar, spelling and punctuation errors, certain other so-called grammatical faults such as split infinitives, and incorrect forms of address, e.g. the Honourable and gallant Member, instead of the Honourable and learned Member. There is also a carefully controlled ironing out of rough constructions and awkward passages. No substantive changes are permitted. Members are permitted to make no alterations in their speeches, and their corrections are subject to the Editor's approval.<sup>75</sup> Thus the provisions for HANSARD resolve all the problems that unwilling and sluggish parliamentarians had deemed almost insolvable. Ironically, Britain's HANSARD of 1909 was modelled on Canada's, Canada having in 1880 caught up with and then surpassed the mirror whose reflection she had been.<sup>76</sup>

30. When Dickens was on the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT, it was probably not as bad as usual. William J. Carlton, in CHARLES DICKENS: SHORTHAND WRITER, p. 87, points out that in 1833 the MIRROR "was quoted as the authoritative record of the debates 27 times in the House of Commons and five times in the House of Lords." However, we read in THE HISTORY OF THE TIMES: THE "THUNDERER" IN THE MAKING, p. 427, that the TIMES, which was acknowledged by all to be the very best source for parliamentary reports, wrote that "No-one who knows anything about the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT can understand it to be any such thing (as an authentic record of the proceedings of Parliament). It is an authentic record of the speeches which noble lords or hon. members, after a day's reflection, think they ought to have made; but it is not an authentic record of the speeches which they actually did make. The version of a member's speech, given by the reporters for the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT (who have been frequently the reporters for the morning papers and some of them reporters for THE TIMES), is sent to the member who made the speech, in order that he may correct it — as the operation is delicately termed. If this version contain passages which the noble or honourable orator repents him of, or which may be disagreeable to his constituents, he strikes them out, of course; and if (which after having heard the speeches of others, is not improbable) any good things occur to him, as things which he might have said with advantage, it is not to be expected that he will resist this temptation of inserting them, though he never thought of uttering them at the time. Now, it can hardly be necessary to suggest, that no reliance is to be placed upon reports of the proceedings in Parliament which are conducted upon such a system as this." pp. 427-428.

56. The excellence of the Hansards' printing is unquestioned ; even the Thomas Curson Hansard whose parliamentary reporting is challenged, was an expert on printing, and even wrote books on the history of printing. The Hansards who published the parliamentary papers, who painstakingly prepared manuscripts and indexed them, were another and quite separate branch of the parliamentary reporting Hansards, though they were both engaged in parliamentary printing. No doubt the right of Hansards to print the parliamentary papers was as emotionally significant a question to many parliamentarians as it was to the Hansards themselves. Luke Graves Hansard, for example, wrote : "Our constant attention has been directed to retain inviolate the printing for the H.C. As all our fortune was involved in this business — as we were the appointed persons for executing it — there seems no presumption in considering it (under the blessing of Providence) as our rightful portion, and therefore just in us to use every honest means to retain it and resist all encroachments.... We considered all Public Parliamentary Printing connected with the H.C. as our right." P. and G. Ford (eds.), *LUKE GRAVES HANSARD, HIS DIARY, 1814-1841. 1875 another member again "espied strangers" and the House was temporarily cleared, but immediately a motion was carried suspending the order to clear the Galleries. See Symon, THE PRESS AND ITS STORY, p. 82.

74. However, with regard to sittings which go late into the night there is a different policy followed in Britain and in Canada. In Britain, the HANSARD reporters do not have to continue to work. Instead, parliamentary reporters from the Press Gallery are called in to work and though they may be very good, they are not trained HANSARD reporters, and so presumably British HANSARD suffers as a result. In Canada no such risk is taken. HANSARD reporters may be called upon to attend sittings no matter how protracted these may be.

With a knowledge of many countries and their methods of reporting parliamentary debates, he said without hesitation, 'I believe the Canadian system to be the best in the world.'"

CHAPTER III :

CANADIAN PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING

LOWER CANADA

Parliamentary reporting in the Canadas began simultaneously with the meeting of the very first Parliaments in 1792. In both provinces it was undertaken by newspapers, and only Upper Canada ever attempted an official record of its Assembly's debates. From 1792 until the Union, six Lower Canadian newspapers, two bilingual, two English and two French, carried the bulk of the parliamentary reports. These were the QUEBEC GAZETTE,<sup>1</sup> the MONTREAL GAZETTE,<sup>2</sup> the QUEBEC MERCURY,<sup>3</sup> LE CANADIEN<sup>4</sup> and the MONTREAL HERALD.<sup>5</sup> In 1826 they were joined by LA MINERVE<sup>6</sup> of Montreal. Despite frequent setbacks, these papers endured while others flourished then soon floundered around them. There were the most important of the Seat of Government papers, the others were Montreal's most significant English and French language publications. However, these papers seldom provided five, later six, independent parliamentary reports. They were more often than not obliged to copy from each other.

All the newspapers used basically similar systems, so it is possible to give a general characterization to the parliamentary reporting of this pre-Union period.<sup>7</sup> As a rule routine business was summarized, and divisions were either omitted or reported merely as totals. Individual voting records were not usually given. Debates were reported when they were considered important and interesting. They were given in the third person, in summary. There was no such thing as verbatim reporting. Indeed, until about 1830 the participants in a debate were not always individually identified; the general tenor of all the speeches was given instead. The problems involved in parliamentary reporting during this early period were almost impossible to overcome: lack of money to hire reporters; lack of qualified reporters; lack of experience with Parliaments in general and in particular with methods for reporting their proceedings; the two languages in the Assembly; and poor communications. And :

C'est la même personne qui est quelquefois obligée de demeurer attachée à un bureau pendant six à sept heures de tems, à prendre note de ce que disent les orateurs dans cet espace de tems; souvent au milieu du bruit ou des chuchotements de ceux qui les entourent et fatiguée par la chaleur qui règne dans l'appartement. En Angleterre et en France, ce travail est divisé entre plusieurs, et devient par là même plus facile. Les discours d'ailleurs étant prononcés tous dans une même langue, il est possible d'apprendre exactement et de mettre en pratique l'art de la sténographie au lieu qu'ici, comme quelques membres parlent l'anglais et d'autre le français, il faudrait connaître deux systèmes de l'art d'écrire par abréviation pour rapporter exactement les observations qui sont faites.<sup>8</sup>

In addition to all these other problems, the lack of competition in the newspaper field provided publishers with little incentive to try to improve parliamentary reporting; moreover, the lack of parliamentary tradition meant that there were no widely-accepted standards by which to judge performance. Despite these major barriers against excellence, parliamentary reporting in Lower Canada continued to improve. Gradually it became less incomplete and sketchy. One expedient devised to improve it was the joint hiring of an extra reporter for two or more papers. This reporter was in addition to the regular reporting arrangements for covering parliamentary proceedings. LE CANADIEN and the French edition of the GAZETTE DE QUEBEC,<sup>9</sup> and the English edition of the QUEBEC GAZETTE, the QUEBEC MERCURY and the MONTREAL GAZETTE hired two reporters between them.<sup>10</sup> The MINERVE, more independent-minded, hired its own reporter.<sup>11</sup> However, these arrangements did little more than to cut costs for the individual papers; they did little to improve the quality of the parliamentary reports. This was because none of the reporters engaged were skilful enough at their profession. They were either not bilingual enough; too old to hear properly; too young to understand properly; not very proficient in even the inadequate, unscientific shorthand systems available at the time; or else they were too politically involved to report impartially.<sup>12</sup>

The only other major attempt made to improve parliamentary reporting involved trying to convince the House to subsidize parliamentary reporting. However, despite the close association between individual newspapers and many men in the Lower Canadian Assembly, the members rejected this plan.<sup>13</sup> Years of intensively studying Blackstone and British constitutional practice had so steeped them in British tradition that they would not risk compromising their House by sanctioning possibly libellous statements.<sup>14</sup> Of course, even had the newspapers been relieved of the financial burdens involved in providing parliamentary reports, there is no guarantee that the quality of the reports would have been much improved. The calibre of the reporters available was poor, and even when they continually submitted error-filled reports, they were not fired because it was virtually impossible to replace them.

In summary, Lower Canadian parliamentary reporting may be characterized as barely adequate and exceptionally error-prone, especially when one reporter tried to report in both languages, though errors were often corrected in later issues. On the other hand, in comparison with the system current in Upper Canada, Lower Canadian parliamentary reporting was honestly-motivated and always strove to produce completely objective as opposed to partisan or even interpretative reports.

UPPER CANADA

The history of parliamentary reporting in Upper Canada really begins in 1820, when two Irish stenographers began to attend the House and to report its debates. For a long while only the UPPER CANADA GAZETTE, succeeded by the YORK WEEKLY POST, and the OBSERVER, Seat of Government papers, supplied parliamentary reports. Newspapers in other areas simply could not afford to pay reporters in York. They had to fall back, no matter how reluctantly, on copying the two York papers.<sup>15</sup> However, Upper Canadians craved parliamentary news, indeed demanded it,<sup>16</sup> and as a result the Assembly agreed to pay reporters to report its proceedings. However, this arrangement, begun in 1821, was discontinued after two years because it produced politically-biased and inadequate reports. Then in 1825 the House printing contract was awarded with the expectation that it would provide the contractor with profit enough to enable him to pay for having the debates reported. This arrangement did not work out in practice, largely because this essentially financial arrangement did nothing to correct the problems of reportorial personnel.<sup>17</sup> In 1829, for example, the three men contracting for the Assembly's printing and the King's Printer reported the debates. Of these, one was also an M.P. and allowed this to bias his accounts. Another reporter gave excellent accounts of speakers he supported politically, but never of speakers he disliked. A third reporter was in prison, serving out a term for libel against the Attorney-General. The fourth was mediocre at his job.<sup>18</sup> A final official arrangement for the 1831-32 session failed as well,<sup>19</sup> and so until the Union, parliamentary reporting was left exclusively in the hands of the newspapers. Fortunately, these increased in number, and slowly improved the quality of their reports.

In Upper Canada, accounts of debates were not only third person summaries of speeches, but often tended to be slanted or garbled reports emphasizing a special political interest as well. Yet all official attempts to provide accurate reports failed, because none of the schemes tried or suggested dealt with the fundamental problems: multitudinous and rival newspaper establishments; little capital to finance them; and politically-committed reporters. Indeed, the entire history of Upper Canadian parliamentary reporting reflects the colony's raging political battles. However, the most fundamental barrier to impartiality was the growth of a tradition which required the establishment of dozens of newspapers, each representing the views of small local factions who had not sufficient capital to sustain these papers.<sup>20</sup> Had there been more money available and fewer papers to finance, their positions might have been far less precarious. In addition, it might have been possible to solve the other perennial problem, the dearth of reporters. Competent shorthand writers and reporters did exist in Upper Canada, but they were so rare that each believed himself to be an irreplaceable commodity. These reporters were also ambitious and intelligent men seeking to establish themselves in the New World. Therefore they used their reporting skills to advance themselves not only as reporters, but as proprietors and editors of newspapers and as printers. In Upper Canada, the reporting, printing and newspaper businesses were inextricably entwined, and all were politically-oriented. The political commitments of specific reporters took their toll of objective parliamentary reporting.

UNITED CANADA

The Rebellions of 1837 and 1838 brought the separate histories and régimes of the Canadas to a close, and the Union Act of 1840 imposed legislative union upon them. The first Parliament of the new régime met at Kingston, Upper Canada, in June 1841. Many members of the new Assembly, recalling the experiences of both Upper and Lower Canada in the area of parliamentary reporting, hoped to establish a satisfactory system at the very beginning of this new régime. The first such attempt was made by Upper Canadian newspaper editor Francis Hincks.

Mr. Hincks gave notice that tomorrow he would move for a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the propriety of granting compensation to three reporters who would undertake to report in a true, faithful, and correct manner the proceedings of the House.<sup>21</sup>

Then Hincks abruptly abandoned his proposal, apparently to support another simpler, more popular one. This scheme was limited to subscribing for "five hundred copies of the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT for one month, for the use of the members of this House." <sup>22</sup>

The Kingston MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT was a politically-uncommitted paper which from the inception of the Union Parliament had been devoted exclusively to reporting debates. Its owner Henry Fowler apparently handled most of the reportorial duties in the Assembly. <sup>23</sup> The motion to subscribe to the MIRROR engendered a debate in which many members questioned both the quality of any newspaper reports and the constitutional propriety of bestowing upon any newspaper the kind of recognition which could easily be construed as official approval of its reports. A majority of members feared exposure to the possibility of law suits arising from allegedly libellous remarks made in the House and reported by the quasi-official government organ. Other members objected that to single out the MIRROR for that kind of patronage was to deprive other papers of it. <sup>24</sup> A suggestion that each member personally subscribe to the MIRROR was ignored. Eventually a substitute motion was carried, appointing a Select Committee to investigate the subject of parliamentary subscriptions to provincial newspapers. <sup>25</sup>

The Committee-men heard testimony from several Kingston newspaper owners and they studied other information. <sup>26</sup> They submitted their report on the 30th of June. This report recommended that the House subscribe for five hundred copies of the MIRROR, and that French language newspapers should be invited to submit estimates for publishing translations of the MIRROR's debates. This latter proposal was designed to subsidize a French as well as an English newspaper. <sup>27</sup> Many members challenged the Committee's findings; as a result consideration of the report was ordered deferred until the next day. The issue was considered serious and caught the interest and attention of the House. In a related debate on the same day one member warned that :

The hon. gentlemen must recollect the very great difference there is between the circumstances of England and of this country. Something more than the ordinary newspaper patronage was necessary here to induce reporters to give their attention to reporting the debates of the House of Assembly. <sup>28</sup>

Reluctant members still remained unconvinced, because they saw no real guarantee that even the MIRROR contained reliable reports. Indeed, one member had already begun what was ultimately an ever-increasing series of complaints. He claimed that "The reports contained in the Mirror were partial reports (hear, hear), and words were put in the mouths of hon. members which they never uttered (hear, hear)." <sup>29</sup> Another member "did not altogether believe in the correctness of the report contained in the "Mirror," he would mention an instance when exactly the reverse of what he (Mr. Johnson) had said was stated...." <sup>30</sup>

The introduction of this new aspect confused the issue when finally the House divided on the motion to encourage the MIRROR by subscribing to it. Members were hard put to decide whether a yea vote would indicate approval of the MIRROR's reports or whether it would simply mean support for the general principle that Parliament should provide the Canadian people with an authorized record of legislative proceedings, "merely facilitating the publication of the debates of that house, in order that the constituents of hon. members might the better understand what was said there." <sup>31</sup> Other members distorted the issue by simplistically defining it as merely a question of patronage, whether or not to pay reporters. In the end, the House reluctantly agreed to instruct its Clerk to subscribe for five hundred copies of the MIRROR.<sup>32</sup>

This commitment came to please fewer and fewer members as the MIRROR's reports grew increasingly unsatisfactory. As early as the 20th of July the member for Carleton moved "That the Clerk of this House be instructed to inform the Proprietor of the CANADIAN Mirror of Parliament, that his paper is no longer required for the use of members of this House."<sup>33</sup> This motion was negatived on division, but only six days later was carried without opposition.<sup>34</sup> One of the MIRROR's former supporters now described it as "little better than a humbug,"<sup>35</sup> and "many who had, on a former vote, supported the work, said it had fallen off, and had not met their views either in its usefulness, correctness, or regularity."<sup>36</sup> The most telling criticism came from Francis Hincks, co-sponsor of the original motion to subscribe to the paper.

The MIRROR has been a complete failure. The debates have not been faithfully reported, nor has there been any thing like a correct account of the proceedings of the House. The sheet was reduced to less than half its original size, and not published regularly, — in short to have continued any thing like patronage to the MIRROR would have been a job. The resolution ... was supported by nearly all those who had originally been in favour of getting the debates published.<sup>37</sup>

The Assembly's displeasure at the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT extended to other papers. On the 23rd of July a member charged that the MONTREAL HERALD, in an article concerning

The simple question put by him a few days back to His Excellency's advisers as to whether any relief was intended to be offered to any of the misguided men who had left this country had been (as he could not but imagine wilfully) misconstrued by the Editor of the Montreal Herald into the actual introduction of a bill for the indiscriminate pardon of all ; a measure which every lawyer must well know would be unconstitutional and a direct interference with the prerogative of the Crown, and therefore illegal. (Hear, hear.)<sup>38</sup>

From the very beginning the Assembly's experience with parliamentary reports in newspapers was very disappointing. United Canada's first semi-authorized HANSARD endured only one short month. It never was officially translated, and it was considered a practical failure, a waste of money and a bad precedent.

Despite this initial lack of success, the Canadian Parliament was not permitted to shelve the issue of official parliamentary reporting. Almost every year the parliamentary reporters made new attempts to provide a better system. In 1842 "Hamilton Hunter, and others, Reporters in attendance upon the House," petitioned "for better accommodation to enable them to take the debates."<sup>39</sup> Specifically, they wanted some "elbow-room."<sup>40</sup> The House avoided acting on this petition, and on many others requesting some sort of assistance. Though such small material improvements would undoubtedly have assisted the reporters, the members expressed interest in more fundamental changes, and therefore ignored these lesser and temporary measures. However, by 1843 some members recognized the necessity of somehow providing reports better than those available in the Press. At the same time they did not support the idea of creating or subsidizing an official HANSARD. They confined the issue to that of hiring special reporters appointed by the House, or paying parliamentary reporters on the staffs of various newspapers, to report more accurately and more fully than their employers required. The motion raising these problems requested

That a Special Committee of seven Members be appointed to enquire into the expediency of adopting some method by which faithful and correct Reports of the debates and proceedings of this House may be given to the country, to report thereon with all convenient speed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.<sup>41</sup>

This motion was lost by five votes, but an amendment which expressed the contrary point of view, was also lost, by a single vote. This amendment stated that "it is not expedient or proper that this House adopt any measure, towards publishing the debates of the Members thereof."<sup>42</sup> The House was almost evenly divided on the question of whether it had the responsibility to provide reports of its debates, or whether it had even the right to do so. Before being defeated, the original motion generated a debate in which all the important aspects of the issue were elaborated.

To begin with, there was no general agreement about the need for parliamentary reports, or about the adequacy of the reports already supplied by the provincial Press. Some members considered them perfectly adequate already.<sup>43</sup> "Although all the long speeches were not printed, yet such a synopsis was given, as put the country perfectly in possession of the business that was done, and with the correct tone of the opinions of the house on important matters,"<sup>44</sup> one member testified. Others disagreed with this appraisal of the parliamentary reports, and eagerly cited specific cases when their remarks had been misrepresented. Col. Prince, for example, complained that "When speaking upon Mr. Hamilton's motion respecting the fisheries, he was made to say Mr. Prince 'supported the preservation of salmon during the period of incubation.'"<sup>45</sup> The members were also unable to agree about whether or not their constituents wanted fuller reports; whether they would read reports lengthier than the usual synopses; or whether they should be satisfied with the official JOURNALS. Several members also felt it wrong to encourage the House's already superabundant speech-making. "There was too much speechifying already, without making any comfortable arrangements for extending it."<sup>46</sup> Others disagreed and even attributed a certain urgency to the matter because they expected the proceedings of the 1843 Parliament to be of exceptional interest to the public. In short, the representatives reached no consensus either about the value of parliamentary reporting in general terms or about improving the existing system.

In the debate the central issue was the payment of reporters. Some members favoured the idea although there was only Canadian and no British precedent for it. They argued that England's different circumstances had allowed a different tradition to prevail. In London there existed several daily papers, established and affluent, whose combined reports gave extremely good coverage to parliamentary proceedings. Among Canadian newspapers, on the other hand, even those located at the Seat of Government could not afford enough competent reporters to provide adequate coverage. Therefore Canada could not follow the British tradition and leave parliamentary reporting to the newspapers. On the other side, those members opposed to paying reporters argued that the Upper Canadian experiments, and the Union government's experience with the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT in 1841, were lessons which gave strict warning against paying reporters either directly or indirectly. Singling out a few reporters or papers automatically discriminated against all the others, especially those out of town papers which sent a parliamentary correspondent to Kingston at great expense or else paid a local reporter for condensed reports of parliamentary proceedings.

The most profound problem, contingent on the issue of paying reporters, concerned the constitutional implications of paying reporters; fortunately for our study of Canadian parliamentary attitudes this issue was also discussed. Henry Sherwood, the Conservative Upper Canadian who had made the original motion, defended it, rather surprisingly, on the grounds that Canada should disregard the fact that paying reporters was unconstitutional in England because "when the different circumstances of the two countries were taken into consideration, he thought they might be warranted in deviating from the English practice." His constituents demanded better coverage, he informed the House, and their demands took precedence over the constitutionality question.

One of the reasons given in England against the House employing reporters is this, if any statements were given which had not been made, and for which the reporters might be called to account, it would be unreasonable and unfair to bring them to the bar of the House and punish them for what the House itself had employed them to do. For his part, however, he could not understand that because you employ a man he may with impunity misrepresent what is said. If reporters, employed by the House, were to misrepresent, they would be equally and justly liable to be called to account as those who might not be so employed.<sup>47</sup>

Of course this simplistic view of the concept and meaning of parliamentary privilege was challenged.

Mr. Cartwright opposed the motion upon the principle that according to the existing law of England, statements might be made in the House that amount to libel, if published as given, and that it might subject the parties to prosecution; the House would in that case be called upon to protect the persons who might suffer.<sup>48</sup>

But Henry Sherwood was apparently unfamiliar with the relevant current events in England, for he offered it as his opinion that "if the report was faithfully and correctly taken, and a true report of what was said, the parties publishing it could not be prosecuted for libel. The law of England and of this country," he added, "permits a true and faithful report of the proceedings of Parliament being given; and if any action were taken upon it, no damages would be granted." This too was corrected by another member, Mr. Boswell, who explained that "those who published true reports of libellous statements that might be made in the House of Commons, were liable to prosecution..."<sup>49</sup>

By the time the division was taken, all the relevant issues had been dealt with, though no conclusions had been reached. Even the Press was not unanimous in supporting the motion; the MONTREAL GAZETTE, for example, commented that

The fact is, the scheme was got up for the express benefit of a few individuals connected with the Press, to pay them out of the public purse, and to gratify the loquacity of certain members of the House who have the knack of stringing words together on any subject, perfectly regardless, while under the influence of their own music, either of the value of the public time, or the infliction to which they subject those who are doomed to listen to them.<sup>50</sup>

Ultimately, both motion and opposing amendment were narrowly lost, and the issue was merely postponed.

The postponement was not lengthy. In the next session the issue arose again in the form of a petition from parliamentary reporter E.H. Parsons and some of his colleagues, requesting remuneration over and above their newspaper salaries for their services in reporting the debates during the 1844-1845 session. The House negatived a motion to refer this petition to the Standing Committee on Contingencies.<sup>51</sup> The House apparently wished to avoid a repetition of the previous year's inconclusive debate. Even the newspapers paid almost no attention to the petition and its summary dismissal by the House.<sup>52</sup> In fact, there is no record of any debate on the motion.

Certain reporters continued to agitate the question nonetheless. They were encouraged by members who were directly involved in the newspaper business and others who were simply interested in seeing the proceedings of the House better publicized. In the session of 1849 Ludger Duvernay of LA MINERVE and others of his colleagues petitioned the Assembly for assistance in publishing the parliamentary proceedings.<sup>53</sup> A month later, David Wylie and other Montreal reporters made the more specific request that the House pay them for reporting its debates.<sup>54</sup> This latter petition was not shelved. It was referred to the Standing Committee on Contingencies which in its Fifth Report declared that

They have ... considered the Petition of Messrs. Wylie and others, Reporters of the Debates in Your Honorable House, praying for some remuneration in addition to that allowed them by their employers, the Editors of the papers for which they report, in consideration of the value of their labour to the public, and which Your Committee fully acknowledge. But Your Committee regret that there are objections, as they believe of an insuperable nature, to the appropriation of any portion of the monies advanced to defray the contingent expenses of Your Honorable House to such a purpose. There is no precedent to be found for it, in so far as Your Committee are advised, in the Journals of the House of Commons, and the introduction of it here would prove, they apprehend, exceedingly inconvenient.<sup>55</sup>

Unfortunately the Committee kept no records from which we can learn more than this about its reasons for refusing the request.

In 1849 another abortive attempt was made to supplement the existing system of parliamentary reporting. The PILOT advertised for public subscriptions to a complete report of the debates in both the Assembly and the Legislative Council on the Rebellion Losses Bill. "The debates will be carefully compiled from the reports published in the PILOT, HERALD, GAZETTE, and COURIER of this city, and will be strictly impartial."<sup>56</sup> However, the project was contingent upon collecting sufficient money to cover the expenses involved. Apparently the required amount of money was not committed because no further mention of the collated debates was made.

The following year another group of parliamentary reporters, M. Moore and others, sponsored the by then almost routine petition for remuneration. Their request was rejected by the House Committee on Contingencies on the grounds that the Committee was not aware of any precedent for it in the Journals of the House of Commons.... The votes and proceedings printed daily at the public expense, by order of Your Honorable House, afford the country, in an abridged and correct form, a full view of the various matters before it and the manner in which they are disposed of, beyond the expense for the publication whereof Your Committee deem it unnecessary to go.<sup>57</sup>

This report expresses a markedly changed attitude from the sympathetic, appreciative and almost receptive-enough Committee Report of 1849 which had objected to paying reporters only from fear that constitutional propriety forbade advancing money for that purpose from contingent funds. The 1850 Report, on the other hand, not only categorically stated that the JOURNALS provided the public with enough information about their representatives' activities but in addition expressed not even a modicum of appreciation for the reporters' work. This strikingly different attitude is explained by an "incident" which occurred after the reporter's petition had been received, but before it had been considered. This "incident" undoubtedly influenced the Committee members' opinion of reporters, their functions, and above all, their rights.

One of the GLOBE's parliamentary reporters, George P. Ure, forgot the constitutional ambiance in which he worked. He forgot that he was present in the House by tolerance, not right, and when he was thwarted from carrying out his professional duties he made his position plain. One day Ure and his colleagues in the Reporters' Box were attempting to take notes of the speeches being made in the House, though as usual many of the remarks were inaudible to them over the talking and laughter. Ure noticed in particular that the member for Gaspé, crotchety old Robert Christie, was out of his place. He was loudly talking and joking with two ladies in the Public Galleries and completely drowning out the debates. Ure was exasperated. He leaned over from the Reporters' Box and caught Christie's eye. "Will you be kind enough to allow me to hear the speaker?" he demanded. Christie was as astonished as he was annoyed, and he immediately ordered the Sergeant at Arms to take Ure into custody. However, when that officer failed to comply with his request Christie "continued to talk as if nothing had happened."<sup>58</sup> Then an hour later, accompanied by Col. Prince, he accosted Ure and demanded that he apologize. Ure refused. "You were," he informed the irate Christie, "talking and making a noise by setting two other persons near you at laughter, so that I could not do my duty; you were out of your place, which is at the other end of the room, while I was in mine; and you were where you had no business to be."<sup>59</sup> The next morning Ure learned that Christie intended to bring the matter before the House. Though he was unrepentant, Ure dreaded such an unpleasant confrontation and to avert it he had a carefully worded note of apology delivered to Christie.

Sir, — It is contrary to my inclination to insult or wound the feelings of any one, and if my asking you to allow me to perform my duty, was considered by you as an insult, I sincerely ask your pardon. I trust that you nor no hon. member will again have occasion to say that I have violated that principle of politeness and courtesy due to your rank as a gentleman and a senator.<sup>60</sup>

Not surprisingly, Christie rejected this uncompromising note. Crisis! Reporter Ure had innocently confronted the country with the whole complex issue of the relation of Press to Parliament. How should the people's representatives react? After all, Ure was M.P. George Brown's reporter. Eventually however, the members gave priority to tradition, the constitution, their own place in an historical continuum and their appreciation of their own Bagehotian dignity rather than to the practical aspects of the case.<sup>61</sup> These latter were in fact precisely as Ure had stated. Christie had been talking and laughing and so had prevented Ure from properly reporting the Assembly's debates. The fundamental implications of the situation were formally recognized and lent a sense of urgency to the matter. Members were put under pressure to take an immediate and strong stand on the issue. It was dealt with in the House by no less important a personage than Attorney General Robert Baldwin, the very member whose speech Christie's antics had prevented Ure from reporting! Baldwin moved that Ure be summoned to the Bar of the House for a reprimand. When this motion was carried, every single one of Ure's colleagues filed out of the Reporters' Box and quit the House in protest.

The wording of the Speaker's reprimand to the quiet, inoffensive reporter publicly exposed all the issues so long evaded or shunned by Canadian parliamentarians. These were basically: the constitutional and practical status of reporters in the House; the traditional rights of members; and in fact the entire relation of Parliament to the Press. As it had been in England, the issue was quickly defined as a struggle between the people's chief spokesmen and agents, between their Parliament and their Press. Each side asserted that its rights constituted important priorities necessary to protect the people. The people themselves had no means of expression. The situation was roughly parallel to that in England in 1771 in the sense that the issues were clearly defined and understood by both parties to the dispute, and members of the two opposing groups were almost unanimously committed to the principles laid bare by the defining process. Paying reporters could no longer be the only aspect of this issue worth discussing in depth. The other issues associated with that question were: Canada's place in the British constitutional empire; the relation of the parliamentary representatives and the strangers cum reporters; the principle of fulfilling the well understood wishes of the people through both the responsibility and accountability of the government; traditional rights as opposed to present-day relevancy.

You have been admitted into the House as one of the Reporters for the Public Press.... You happened to be, by the position you have thus assumed for yourself, under the sufferance of this Honorable House, a self-constituted expounder of the proceedings of Parliament.... Of a breach of those privileges, you have been adjudged guilty in repeatedly addressing one of the members in insulting and unbecoming language, displaying an ignorance of the relative positions in which you stood. You had every opportunity to reflect on your offence after it was committed, which, however, you did not think proper to do, as appears from your conduct. You are totally mistaken as to your position; you are no part of this House, and have no pretended position to maintain, or duty to perform, which can interfere with the privileges of Members, or give you any right over them.<sup>62</sup>

This reprimand contained an unambiguous definition of the proper relations between members and the "self-constituted expounders of the proceedings of Parliament," and the House was prepared to stand by this position.

Meanwhile, the reporters and some newspaper proprietors met to decide their own position. They expressed unequivocal support for and solidarity with Ure: "The affair having occurred beyond the bar of the House, we conceive the Reporter was quite justified.... ((We)) consider his case as that of the Press generally."<sup>63</sup> They hammered out a document consisting of several Resolutions to which they all agreed. Their statement expounded principles so advanced that each strained at the evolutionary bounds of the constitutional rationale underlying Press-Parliament relations in English and in Canadian theory. Yet the determination and certainty with which the reporters and their employers presented their Resolutions give clearest evidence of Canada's political and constitutional atmosphere. The people, at least as they were interpreted by their Press, were infinitely more aware of and concerned with the significance of Parliament vis à vis their personal rights than they were interested in its historical and traditional foundations. Instead, Canadians asserted their power as the collective electorate; their right to a free press; the accountability of their representatives to the Canadian electors. After all, these constitutional issues had been popularly agitated to the point of armed rebellion, and in simplified terms the Canadian people understood them thoroughly.

Another most important point concerns the intimate association between the Canadian national character and the newspaper establishment. "Canadians are all politicians and every ministerial paper must needs have an opponent," wrote one newspaper publisher to explain why hundreds of papers were published in such a small colony.<sup>64</sup>

The importance of the press in stamping the character and directing the current of public thought, and its vast political power is manifested in the position which it maintains, and is reflected in the minds of almost every intelligent person. It has been instrumental in abolishing corruptions and in awakening the masses from slumbering apathy, and much of the success which may be predicted for Canada may be laid to the account of its newspaper press, which all feel with Junius is the palladium of the social, religious, civil and political rights of an Englishman.<sup>65</sup>

In addition, Canadian newspaper editors and owners had always been willing to suffer for their convictions. It was neither unusual nor shameful for an editor to suffer imprisonment for his views, usually because he had attacked powerful men who in their turn had decreed that his articles were libellous and actionable. Therefore in 1850 the traditionally courageous, self-confident and prolific Fourth Estate took a strong and positive stand on the issue before them. They expressed a perfect awareness of the constitutional and historical implications of their position, and an equally open-eyed disregard for the tradition-oriented position.

Resolved, — That the existence of an obsolete privilege of Parliament to the effect that persons not members shall only be admitted to the House on sufferance, and may be expelled therefrom at the wish of any one member, is not doubted by this meeting: but they are perfectly satisfied that the revival of it is inconsistent with the advance of the age, and will not be sustained by the public opinion of this Province.

That notwithstanding the existence of the "privilege" in question, the Press has been for a long period recognised as a necessary agent for the attainment of good government in the representative system of every free country, by the providing of a special place for the accommodation of Reporters from the Public Journals in all the National Legislative Chambers; and that the communication of the proceedings of the legislative bodies to the public by means of the Press has become an essential element in the working of every free constitutional government, which for the safety and weal of the community, should be facilitated and encouraged.

That the Canadian Legislative Assembly has in this manner recognized the Reporters from the Public Press, by setting aside a portion of the House to their use, and has thereby admitted that it is desirable and necessary that Reports should be taken — that gentlemen who come to the House with that view are entitled to all necessary facilities; and especially that such order and reasonable silence should be maintained in the vicinity of the Reporters' Gallery, outside the Bar of the House, as the nature of their duties requires.

That had the member who took offence, been called on to forbear disturbing the silence of the Reporter's (sic) Gallery while he was within the House, this meeting would not have attempted to justify the circumstance, however much they might have regretted that any hon. member would treat as an offence that which certainly was not so intended. But the affair having occurred beyond the bar of the House, we conceive the Reporter was quite justified in courteously requesting the hon. member to refrain from hindering him in the exercise of his recognized duty in the place he occupied.

That the censure of the House passed on the Reporter after he had apologized in private to the hon. member, and publicly at the bar for his unwitting infraction of the theoretical privilege of the House, will, in the opinion of this meeting, fall very lightly in public estimation; that the conduct of the gentleman in question cannot be truly designated as "insulting" or "unbecoming," but was, on the contrary, throughout his communication with the hon. member for Gaspe, correct in principle, and altogether unobjectionable; and that they consider his case as that of the Press generally.

That the decision of the House, that it is a breach of the privileges of that body deserving of marked censure for a Reporter courteously to request silence of a member outside the bar of the House, is such a gross act of disrespect to to (sic) the Press, and interferes so directly with the fulfilment of their duties to the public, that the members of this meeting feel it incumbent on them to protest against it by withdrawal from the House.<sup>66</sup>

This manifesto was one of Canada's strongest statements for responsible government from the public perspective, that is, responsible government as implying parliamentary accountability to the people as well as executive responsibility to the members. The right of members to "spy strangers" was dismissed as "an obsolete privilege" which was "inconsistent with the advance of the age", the modern era of the 19th Century. In addition, this privilege would "not be sustained by the public opinion of this Province". Popular opinion and the people's right to liberty of speech and press were the most important criteria these newspaper men applied to the case. They believed that their argument was reinforced by the fact that

The Canadian Legislative Assembly has ... recognized the Reporters from the Public Press, by setting aside a portion of the House to their use, and has thereby admitted that it is desirable and necessary that Reports should be taken....

The history embodied in constitutional provisions for parliamentary privilege was brushed aside to accommodate the exigencies of modern day needs and practice. The newspaper group's confidence and solidarity led to a final threat: strike action.

The decision of the House ... is such a gross act of disrespect to ... the Press, and interferes so directly with the fulfilment of their duties to the public, that the members of this meeting feel it incumbent on them to protest against it by withdrawal from the House.

And they immediately made good their threat, and boycotted the Assembly.

In effect, this boycott was an attack which, according to the newspapermen's own definition of their relation to Parliament and its proceedings, affected a constitutionally vital service. This did not mean that the reporters were idle : to the contrary. They attended the sittings of the Legislative Council and for the first time ever their newspapers gave full reports of the debates in the Council while they covered the Assembly's proceedings by printing extracts from the JOURNALS.<sup>67</sup> In the Assembly, business was rushed through all its stages. Members rising to speak to a motion took their seats again almost immediately when they realized there was no reporter present. One reporter gloated that a typical member "casts a look at the gallery, and recollecting that he is only addressing a dozen or two persons, one half of whom are probably asleep, and the other not listening, down he drops again, fairly dumbfounded (sic)."<sup>68</sup>

During their boycott the reporters displayed a fair degree of bitterness towards the members but this was not a new development ; they often felt resentful during the normal course of things. Their resentment stemmed from many factors : the demanding nature of their job and their need to make a livelihood from it ; their familiarity with the House and its extravagances on behalf of its own members and supporters ; an inability to appreciate the fine points and sacrosanct principles and traditional dignity which in theory the Canadian Assembly embodied. It was difficult for the hard-worked Press corps to reconcile dignity in the Bagehotian sense with the connotations of personal dignity, a characteristic from which our members had notorious and frequent lapses. Very recently two members had forgotten their political animosities and had joined forces in pitching wads of paper at a colleague ; the latter's feint to throw an inkwell in retaliation frightened one of the paper-throwers into crawling to safety under the House Clerk's table.<sup>69</sup> This episode was typical rather than exceptional.

They have been very uproarious it is true, and have sadly lowered their dignity by pitching papers at each other lately, they behaved so badly, indeed, the other night, that Henry John Boulton left the Chair, saying that he would not preside over such a pack of vagabonds.<sup>70</sup>

Reporters also knew only too well that members were often drunk, and that in states of truly advanced inebriation they subjected the Speaker and each other to offensive, unconstitutional and sometimes vulgar remarks and situations. For these reasons Canadian parliamentary reporters had in their turn developed the almost traditional contempt for the group of men they serviced. Indeed, even the moderate BRITISH COLONIST had described the Ure-Christie fracas in the following widely-quoted passage in which contempt is as evident as irony.

Every one will acknowledge that brains are not essential to a member of Parliament. Since, then, the head alone of the hon. member was in the Stranger's Gallery, and a much more important part remained behind — (I mean that part which enables him to occupy a seat in the House) — it is clear that all that is necessary to constitute a member was within the Bar. Mr. Ure, then, was decidedly wrong in asserting that the honourable member for Gaspé was not in his place.<sup>71</sup>

The reporters were seriously angered over the treatment meted out to Ure at the hands of those for whom they could feel little respect. They considered the attack on him to be grossly unfair because they assumed that Christie was probably drunk while Ure was "a quiet inoffensive person, being a complete stranger, and

... ((could)) have no personal or political motive for treating the member rudely." They objected strongly to the Assembly's abusive treatment of their amiable colleague.

He makes an apology for having so spoken, first to the member himself, and secondly to the House; yet for this slight act, in spite of the apologies, this tyrannical body calls him up, passes a vote of censure upon and orders him to be reprimanded by their Speaker. That Speaker treats him like a criminal condemned to the hulks for stealing, talks of his having disgraced his profession, hitherto irreproachable — does everything he can to press him down. The gentleman is a stranger to the country; the laws of hospitality forbade that he should have been so treated, he came seeking a home for himself and his family, he should not have been hindered in so doing by a ban being put upon him; he wished to establish a fair fame in his new home; any one reading the Speaker's reprimand without note or comment, would form an unfavourable opinion of his character; he would have thought that he had been convicted of a gross crime instead of a simple inadvertence, even in the opinion of his judges.<sup>72</sup>

The reporters were incensed too at what they conceived to be the Assembly's assumption of multiple and incompatible functions which violated the constitutional right of British subjects to be governed by judicial authorities separate from the legislative authorities. Specifically, the reporters felt that the House had unilaterally defined disrespect to one of its members as a crime; then having legislated a criminal nature to the deed, had arrogated to itself not only the right to decide who had committed this crime, but also the right to try the offender. "Now, all this, it is very evident, cannot be maintained in this country, — we won't stand it," one parliamentary correspondent vowed. "In the Colonies, they have assumed this power as belonging to Parliament at home, but it is very doubtful whether they have a right to it." And then if the House were to attempt to exclude them ((reporters)), they might do it, as they have the power; but it would be so complete a subversion of the right which the people claim, to review the proceedings of their representatives, that they would be speedily turned out, and others substituted. The press, then, are there on the part of the public, and have a right to civil treatment and good accommodation, as well as the members themselves and if they are interrupted in their duties, they have a right to protest, and to have their grievances removed.<sup>73</sup>

To these reporters responsible government meant the accountability of the members to their constituents as much as it meant the establishment of links of reciprocal responsibility between legislators and the men delegated to execute their policies. This idea added a new dimension to the usual definitions of responsible government.

The Press was equally certain of its own role in the series of carefully established relationships which constituted the system of responsible government. The Press was more than a passive vehicle through which news of Parliament was communicated to Parliament's constituency. Its function was a vital one in ensuring the smooth and satisfactory flow of business. In a petition to the House, rejected as a breach of parliamentary privilege, the reporters and newspaper proprietors presented their views of their role in relation to the people and in relation to the House.

The people of this Province have a right to be present at such proceedings of your honorable House as have been heretofore, and are now usually considered to be public.

That inasmuch as the whole people of this Province cannot be personally present at such proceedings of your honorable House, it is the opinion of the undersigned that the reporters for the press, in addition to their right to be admitted as a portion of the public, ought also to be provided with suitable accommodation, so as to be enabled to make known the proceedings of your honorable House; and ought furthermore to be protected from such annoyance as may prevent or impede the publication of your proceedings.<sup>74</sup>

This point of view found support only among a tiny number of members. This was shown conclusively in the division on a motion by one of the Upper Canadian Grits. His motion maintained that while there was justice on both sides of the dispute, the British-oriented constitutional side and the Canadian-oriented practical side, it was more important that concessions be made to the exigencies of practicality and modernity.

While it is necessary for the independent discharge of the high functions of the Legislature that the privileges of Parliament should remain undefined and subject to the sole adjudication of the Representatives of the People, in whose behalf these privileges have always been asserted and maintained, yet it is equally necessary, for giving that moral weight to their proceedings which an unobstructed publicity alone can ensure, that every reasonable facility should be afforded to the Public, and especially to those connected with the Press, to be present at their deliberations; and that to meet, as far as practicable, the well known wishes of the People in this respect, suitable and convenient accommodation should be provided, under the direction of Mr. Speaker, in such part of this House as shall be most free from interruption for those who may be employed by the Press to attend there, while the Doors are open, subject nevertheless to the orders of this House.<sup>75</sup>

When the House divided, it defeated the motion by a huge majority.<sup>76</sup>

In the end, despite the intransigent stances of both House and Press, the agitation subsided after the session had been rushed to an early prorogation.<sup>77</sup> In the next session, the reporters apparently made no attempt to continue their boycott and their reports were again the sole record of the Assembly's debates.

For several more years the issue lay dormant, until the 19th of October 1854 when Mr. Pouliot moved for a Committee of five members to enquire and report by bill or otherwise, as to the best means for securing Reports of the Debates of this House. Their present reports were a mere travestie (sic) of the proceedings, and as they were sometimes used by members in the House, it was desirable that they should be full and accurate.<sup>78</sup>

The House agreed to this motion and a committee was appointed.<sup>79</sup> Its members were soon prepared to make their Report, and they submitted it to the House on the 7th of November.<sup>80</sup> The Report opened by justifying the encroachment upon the domain of private enterprise which any official arrangement for reporting the debates would entail, and it went on to explain the need for such an official record. For example, provincial newspapers could not expand their parliamentary reports or present them verbatim without ruining their circulation and revenues. Therefore the government should provide a MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT at public expense for at least a few years. The Committee recommended the contract system rather than a permanent arrangement involving the employment of an official reporting staff. The entrepreneur winning the contract should be committed to employing not less than four English and three French reporters, all proficient in shorthand, at weekly salaries of not less than seven pounds ten shillings.

The Committee made specific recommendations about the technical details of the proposed parliamentary report as well as about its general format. The most important of these details concerned the question of the length at which reporting should be undertaken. The Committee came out against verbatim reports on the grounds that much of the legislative proceedings was of too little importance to be reported at length. Therefore, "plus les Rapports seront condensés, tout en rendant clairement l'argument de l'orateur et en conservant ses idées dans leur pureté, plus ils seront acceptables au public qui lit."<sup>81</sup> The English system was to be the model; the American was rejected. The English system consisted of reporting only the principal speakers fully, and condensing the speeches of most other speakers. However, the Canadian Committee did not care to classify members and so could not decide whose speeches were to be fully reported, whose condensed. Nor could they decide whether that decision should be left to the judgment of the individual reporter or to the ruling of a Special Committee. Therefore they recommended that for the present, the contractor would have to agree to having his methodology determined later via instructions from an official source. The other important details specified by the Committee concerned the language and revision of reports. The debates were to be reported in their language of origin. The Committee believed that this would produce a more correct version than translation of reports could do. The reports were not to be printed until two mornings after delivery; this was to permit speakers to scan them and to correct any errors. However, members were not to add anything new to their speeches.

Though this Committee Report was submitted to the House in November 1854, consideration of its recommendations was postponed until the 14th of May 1855.<sup>82</sup> Even after this delay the reception of the report was postponed for another six months. A great many members were still most uncertain about the propriety of establishing an official HANSARD though their doubts no longer centred around the issue of parliamentary privilege. Instead they advanced more practical objections and concerns. To begin, many members believed there was no need for a HANSARD. They were quite satisfied with the newspaper reports already available. George Brown, for instance, who as proprietor of the TORONTO GLOBE had a direct interest in retaining parliamentary reporting as an area exclusive to newspapers, vehemently defended newspaper reports. He insisted that verbatim speeches would neither satisfy nor benefit anyone. They would humiliate the speakers, for one thing. Brown recalled that

Col. Prince was perhaps one of the most correct speakers they ever had in that House, and in consequence of some complaints of that Hon. member about the reporters, one of them named Shepard had reported one of his speeches verbatim, and nothing could have shown up the Hon. gentleman in a more ridiculous light.<sup>83</sup>

Another member offered an unusual and interesting amendment on this point. He proposed that all speeches be reported verbatim, but that each speaker be permitted to summarize and condense his own speech, provided that he leave the sense unaltered. The House, finding this idea unacceptable, negatived the amendment.<sup>84</sup>

George Brown's position was shared by the majority in the House. Brown believed that the public required even shorter rather than longer reports because with the advent of the telegraph the results of debates and divisions on motions were already known before the texts of speeches could be published. The third argument against a HANSARD was financial. Members doubted the propriety of spending so much money for a project of unproved value.

As was usually the case, there was a minority position on this issue as well. Some members did support the establishment of an official report of the debates. They complained that though the newspapers gave good accounts of those speakers they reported, they did not report everybody. As a result, members who had no paper interested in them personally were deprived of that means of communicating their opinions and legislative activities to their constituents.<sup>85</sup> These unreported members, however, were in a minority and their colleagues voted against the Pouliot Committee's proposals. The issue again lay dormant until 1857.

In 1857 the House resolved to investigate the American and the British systems of parliamentary reporting to determine which would be suitable for Canada.<sup>86</sup> However, no report was ever prepared, and so in 1858 another Committee was appointed to look into the matter.<sup>87</sup> Some of the newspapermen members defended the quality of the reports available in the newspapers; despite them the House passed the Resolution unanimously. John A. Macdonald expressed satisfaction that something might be done to establish an official report of debates because "This would save hon. members and the public at large the necessity of reading the COLONIST and LEADER as well as the GLOBE, in order to see fully both sides of the question under debate."<sup>88</sup>

The Committee members heard evidence from several reporters and printers and considered other information as well. They concluded that an official report of the debates was necessary, and that it should be modelled on the English HANSARD. The problem of the bilingualism prevalent in the Canadian Parliament was to be resolved by reporting each speech in the language of delivery. The Committee members reported that they had already called for bids, and of those submitted the lowest was from Thompson and Co. Their Report concluded by recommending that this tender be accepted.<sup>89</sup> When the Report was presented, the House fielded it by instructing the Committee to estimate not only the cost of printing the speeches in their order of delivery but also the cost of having them all translated.<sup>90</sup> A month later the Committee submitted the required information to the House.<sup>91</sup> After two days of debates, the House rejected the Report, and with it the idea of an official HANSARD, by a vote of 58 to 47.<sup>92</sup>

During the discussion several members had balked at the estimated cost of the proposed HANSARD. In fact, members gave their objections to the expense as their primary reason for opposing the project. One member remarked that "In the present financial position of the Province he thought they would not be justified in publishing their sayings and doings at such an enormous outlay for the benefit of posterity."<sup>93</sup> George Brown suggested a far cheaper way of providing "a trustworthy report of the debates for future reference" which relied upon rather than competed with newspaper reports. This report could be obtained by the librarian preparing each morning several copies of a collated report from different newspapers, selecting the best report of each speech. (Hear, hear.) A few volumes thus prepared for reference, and kept in the library, would secure a full report as complete as would be secured by this scheme — for it was clear that at the price named by the Committee, a fuller report could not be obtained than was now supplied by the newspapers.<sup>94</sup>

A majority of the French Canadian members, on the other hand, supported the project because they were on the whole underreported or unreported. One of them, George Etienne Cartier, reminded Brown that excellent though many of the Toronto papers' reports were conceded to be, "the hon. member, who was understood to be the proprietor of that newspaper, should remember that in Lower Canada the French reading community did not read the GLOBE and did not wish to read it." ("It is a great pity," Brown retorted. "They would be very much improved if they did. It is the very thing they want.")<sup>95</sup> In the vote rejecting an official HANSARD, a majority of the French Canadians voted with the minority.<sup>96</sup>

In 1861 and again in 1862 new attempts were made to improve the system of parliamentary reporting. In 1861 a Select Committee was appointed to determine whether Canada should try the old Upper Canadian system of employing reporters whose reports would be supplied to newspapers for publication. After one preliminary Report, this Committee was silent.<sup>97</sup> In 1862 a new attempt was made. This time the request came in the form of a motion to publish the debates in French. Mr. Loranger "moved that an appropriation of £300 be made towards the publication of the debates of the House in the French language, such sum to form part of the contingencies."<sup>98</sup> The debate on this motion centred round several issues: 1) the need to encourage reporters to cease neglecting French speeches; 2) the propriety of paying French but not English newspapers to undertake this job; 3) the possibility that a politically-based French newspaper would be selected to receive the subsidy for reporting the debates and would produce unacceptably slanted reports<sup>99</sup> 4) the propriety of government participation in this sphere traditionally reserved for private enterprise; 5) the right of the House to spend public money to publish their own debates in French or indeed in any language. A majority agreed that French-speaking members were "passed over almost unnoticed by the press, while hon. members who spoke English obtained full publicity.... French Canadian members were obliged to see their discourses published in such a mutilated form as to be scarcely recognizable." The usual arguments against reporting debates were advanced, though the immediate issue was confined to reporting only the French speeches. Several members supported the idea of an official HANSARD; even more opposed it as a disservice to themselves and to their constituents. Eventually Loranger's motion was defeated and the matter was dropped.<sup>100</sup>

In 1864 the issue of parliamentary reporting rose once again. This was partly the result of an incident between Press and House, and partly because the Confederation debates were in the offing. On the 31st of May reporters were excluded from the House, which "cleared" its Galleries. This happened after the reporters had protested their virtual exclusion from the parliamentary reading room by refusing to attend the House. Therefore, on the 31st of May and the 1st of June, the House debated in private, presumably about the "Press Question". Still, there was no decision taken to rescind the order regarding the reporters reading room privileges. At an evening meeting the reporters adopted several Resolutions which they forwarded to the Speaker. They inquired about the reading room order, and denied that they were attempting to blackmail the House. They explained that while they do not consider themselves open to the imputation of having attempted to coerce the House into the restoration of a valued privilege thus hastily withdrawn, they desire to protest against the deprivation to which they conceive they have been needlessly subjected.<sup>101</sup>

However, the House did not relent, and in a note to B. Chamberlin, editor and proprietor of the MONTREAL GAZETTE on the same day, informed the Press that it had no intention of retracting its decision.<sup>102</sup>

Upon receipt of this news, representatives of all the leading Canadian newspapers met to discuss what policy would be most appropriate for them to follow.<sup>103</sup> In the end they voted to return to their duties, but only because they felt committed to the public, "who look to the press accurately to report and faithfully to comment on the proceedings of the Legislature."<sup>104</sup> Just one week after this incident the House agreed to the appointment of a Select Committee on the subject of official parliamentary reporting.<sup>105</sup> When the Committee reported to the House, it recommended that tenders be solicited for undertaking reports of all speeches, in their language and order of delivery.<sup>106</sup> After a debate, the Committee's Report was lost by a vote of 42 to 26.<sup>107</sup> However, when the Confederation debates were on the horizon, provision was made to have them officially reported, though that was altogether an exceptional thing; the importance of the subject was considered to justify the House in authorizing a special report of the debates that might affect opinion in the various provinces as regarded coming into Confederation or not; but it was a special report on the question of Confederation only.<sup>108</sup>

Nor was the experiment altogether a happy one, because the estimate for this project had been $8,000.00 but the actual expense was $14,600.00.<sup>109</sup>

DOMINION CANADA

Confederation was achieved at last, but the new Dominion Parliament faced the same problems regarding parliamentary reporting that had plagued the Union Government. In the session of 1867-68 a Select Committee recommended that reports be taken verbatim in the language of origin, and then translated. Members would be permitted to make changes in grammar only, never in substance. Britain's HANSARD was to serve as the model. The Committee estimated that daily reports would average fourteen 1,400 word columns in a session of sixty days. Reporters were to be hired to report the debates and to supervise the reports on the basis of this estimate, without supplementary payment.<sup>110</sup>

In the same session, one of the problems traditionally used against having official reports was resolved. An act "to define the privileges, immunities and powers of the Senate and House of Commons, and to give summary protection to persons employed in the publication of parliamentary papers" was passed.<sup>111</sup> This act was designed to define parliamentary privilege in the broadest sense only. It had always been believed that definition confined in proportion as it defined, and that therefore the best policy was to let the appropriate authorities in England interpret the scope of privilege.<sup>112</sup> This act was Canada's answer to the old privilege problem that reporting what passed within the sanctuary of the House entailed. Britain's answer had also been a statute, similar in nature, passed to avoid a repetition of the Stockdale vs Hansard affair. Still the House continued to hesitate about establishing an official record of its debates. In 1868 when the Select Committee's Report was being debated, a division was called to test the Commons' opinion about the principle of official reports. The vote was 86 yeas, 73 nays.<sup>113</sup> In other words a small majority of the House supported the establishment of an official report of the parliamentary proceedings. In this and a subsequent debate on the same subject, the minority advanced constitutional arguments against the principle, but emphasized even more that the newspapers already published adequate abstracts of the speeches, that Canada could not afford to pay for an official report, and that publication would only encourage even more verbosity than the House already suffered. On the 27th of March 1868 the Committee Report was negatived, 94 to 48,<sup>114</sup> an apparent contradiction of the Commons' earlier support for the principle of parliamentary reports. In the same month the Senators also defeated a similar motion.

In 1870 another attempt was made to have the debates officially reported.<sup>115</sup> The sponsor of the motion complained that every time he had attempted to have the House consider the Report recommending an official report, he had been put off, only to be told later on, by opponents of his motion, that the end of a session was not the appropriate time to discuss methods for reporting Parliament's debates.<sup>116</sup> The truth of the accusation that this frustrating tactic had indeed been used was proved by an amendment, carried 97 to 35, to the effect "that it was inexpedient at that late period of the session to take action with regard to reporting the debates of the House."<sup>117</sup> The House supported this policy despite an earlier warning from another member that

It was utterly impossible for reporters, who had to send away a summary, to do more than they had done. He thought the reports published in the papers here would bear favourable comparison with any summary either in the Mother Country or elsewhere. If there were a parliamentary record, members would have an opportunity of correcting their speeches, — a thing it was utterly unreasonable to expect from newspapers which gave these debates to the public at great expense. The reporters were earnestly and sincerely desirous of reporting as correctly as possible; but mistakes would occur except (sic) every word that was uttered was taken down and afterwards carefully revised. He was firmly convinced the public interests would be served by having full reports....<sup>118</sup>

In the 1871 session the House negatived by a vote of 90 to 51 a motion to hire enough stenographers to report the debates in both languages.<sup>119</sup> In 1872 Sir John A. Macdonald himself, seconded by George Etienne Cartier, moved that the House buy six hundred copies of the parliamentary reports and speeches published under the title "Canadian Hansard" for the 1870 and 1871 sessions, for the use of members.<sup>120</sup> This publication, popularly known as the "Cotton Debates" because John Cotton of the OTTAWA TIMES had compiled it from newspaper reports of debates, was not satisfactory to members.<sup>121</sup> Therefore in 1874 the House named yet another Select Committee to recommend the best way to obtain a good correct record of debates.<sup>122</sup> The Committee members examined the systems in England, America, Australia and other countries. They concluded that the best kind of official report would not necessarily be verbatim. They favoured instead a report which captured the substance as opposed to the actual words of each speech. They added that no speaker should be omitted, and each speech should be reported in the language of origin. An experienced and impartial stenographer, to be known as the Reporter-in-Chief, would direct the reportorial staff of three English and one French stenographer. The contract was to be awarded to a firm prepared not only to undertake the project at a reasonable price, but also to guarantee the excellence of their work. A Committee of Direction composed of five members of the House would oversee the production of this HANSARD, and would make rules and regulations for its publication.

Considérant l'importance d'un HANSARD pour le public, comme étant le seul moyen à sa disposition de connaître parfaitement ce que les représentants disent et font en parlement, aussi bien que son immense valeur pour notre histoire constitutionnelle, commerciale et politique, votre comité considère la dépense modérée, et recommande cordialement qu'il soit procédé à l'ouvrage tel que ci dessus proposé.<sup>123</sup>

The outcome of this Report was the inauguration in 1875 of a contract system of reporting. The contractor was bound by several rules designed to ensure that the printer would receive an accurate copy of the debates. The contractor was responsible for the correctness and impartiality of the reports, and under no circumstances was he to compose any of the speeches himself. Members were not permitted to change the meaning or length of their speeches as reported; they were limited to making grammatical corrections.<sup>124</sup> After the contract with the printing firm of MacLean and Roger had been finalized, the Committee supervising the project announced that all speeches in the English edition would be printed in the language of origin, but that in the French edition the French speeches would appear in French and the English speeches in French translation. Members would have to submit corrections of their speeches to a Reporter-in-Chief to guarantee that they make no substantive changes. If corrections were substantive, the Reporter-in-Chief would notify the Select Committee which was authorized to prevent the publication of improperly revised texts.<sup>125</sup>

In 1876 the system was further refined by empowering the Chief Reporter to choose four parliamentary reporters whose capacities he could guarantee and for whom he would be responsible. The Reporter-in-Chief would also attend the sittings of the House to supervise his reporters and to gain a personal familiarity with both members and topics so that he could revise and condense the speeches, and "en conserve le sens, le ton et l'esprit parfaitement." He was also responsible for such technicalities as proof reading and indexing the debates. His model and authority was at all times to be the British HANSARD.<sup>126</sup>

Even this new contracting system was not very successful in producing excellent reports. For example, Luther Holton, an experienced and respected member of over thirty years standing in the House spoke out against continuing this system of semi-official reports :

I believe that the majority of the House are opposed to the continuation of the 'Hansard.' If I were not of that opinion, certainly I would not assume the responsibility of taking the course I am now pursuing ((of voting against the continuation of the HANSARD.)) With reference to the manner with which the reporters have discharged their duties, I have no fault whatever to find. I think that these duties have been fairly and faithfully performed. I strove with others for many years to have this system tried. It has been tried, and to my judgment, it is a failure. We are better without than with it; and I think that this is the present sense of the House.<sup>127</sup>

The HANSARD produced by the contract system was no more a success than "Scrapbook Hansard" or any other newspaper reports. Its reports were also very condensed, usually in the third person, and frequently suffered because the pressure of work forced a reporter to omit some speakers. In addition, a reporter's choice of whom to report and whom to ignore might well depend upon personal factors or upon his judgment of the superiority of one speaker as opposed to another on a given topic.<sup>128</sup> Worse still, reporters and members often collaborated and reporters accepted improved written versions of members' speeches.<sup>129</sup> In addition, despite provisions designed to prevent such abuses, members "corrected" their speeches "extensively".<sup>130</sup> The product of all these manipulations, characterized by one expert as "semi-authoritative," and "experimental," was at best extremely disappointing.<sup>131</sup>

In 1880, bowing to the proven inability of any other system to provide an adequate HANSARD, the House finally decided to employ its own staff. During the experiments with the contracting system too many members had continued to complain of being unreported, underreported or misreported. In addition, the compelling post-Confederation argument was advanced that :

speeches in Canada, as in the legislatures of most new countries, are necessarily longer, being often largely made up of facts and figures, containing information of value to the country, but difficult of access owing to the less perfect and mature statistical returns, and which it required the industry of the Members to produce in a readable shape.<sup>132</sup>

And after the Confederation of the far-flung provinces, many of the more remote district newspapers could never afford to maintain their own reporters at the distant Seat of Government, and they had to rely on other sources. An official HANSARD would provide these papers with much essential information and in so doing would serve both democracy and the Canadian public. As it was, soon after Confederation even the newspapers realized that their reporters could not satisfy the demands of sectional and district interests. As a result the leading Canadian papers, the TORONTO GLOBE, the MONTREAL HERALD, TORONTO MAIL and MONTREAL GAZETTE, joined forces and printed one parliamentary report produced by a common staff of reporters.<sup>133</sup> Individualism was becoming less and less possible, consolidation the only feasible alternative.

The ultimate consolidation was accomplished on the 4th of May 1880, HANSARD's official birthdate.<sup>134</sup> Less than thirty years later Great Britain followed suit. Basing her new system on the Canadian model, she set up an official HANSARD produced by a staff employed by and under the supervision of the House of Commons.<sup>135</sup> The two systems were thus at the same time mutually influencing and derivative, for Canada abstracted certain principles from her interpretation of the British system of parliamentary reporting and on the basis of these principles extended her own system beyond that of the British model. Britain then studied Canada's system and proceeded to model her own on the basis of the Canadian experience. In effect each country used the other's experience as an historical model and as institutions structured upon principles and guideposts and precedents upon which to base a new system.<sup>136</sup>

Footnotes — Chapter III.

1. The bilingual QUEBEC GAZETTE was established on 21 June 1764. During the period under consideration, after 1792, the QUEBEC GAZETTE, a weekly paper, was managed by Samuel Neilson ; from 1793 to 1796 by Dr. Sparks, the guardian of the paper's actual owner, John Neilson, until in 1796 Neilson himself assumed the direction of the paper. It was designed as "un véhicule complet des nouvelles, sans embrasser des disputes de partis." This was partly because the paper required government contracts and assistance to survive. In 1822 John Neilson's political career convinced him to give up the job of editor to his son Samuel, until his defeat in the elections of 1834 when he resumed the editorship of the paper again. The QUEBEC GAZETTE was weekly from 21 June 1764 to 25 December 1817; biweekly from 19 January 1818 to 30 April 1832; triweekly from 2 March 1832 until 28 April 1848. It was an official paper from 21 June 1764 to 1817. It was bilingual from 21 June 1764 until 30 April 1832; from 2 May 1832 to 30 April 1842 it had two different editions, one French and one English. On 29 October 1842 it became an English language paper only. See Beaulieu and Hamelin, LES JOURNAUX DU QUEBEC de 1764 à 1964, pp. 211-212.

2. The bilingual MONTREAL GAZETTE, a weekly paper, was founded on 3 June 1778. In this period the MONTREAL GAZETTE was edited by Fleury Mesplet until his death on 24 January 1794. His wife continued to issue the paper until one rival for the editorship, Edward Edwards, won out over the other, Louis Roy, in 1795. For a year Roy issued a competing MONTREAL GAZETTE, but in 1796 Edwards triumphed. He edited the MONTREAL GAZETTE until 1816, when he was bankrupted and the ownership of the paper went to James Brown, editor of the CANADIAN GAZETTE. In 1822 Brown sold the paper to Thomas Andrew Turner who changed it from a bilingual paper to a biweekly English language paper. It became the official paper in 1826, the same year Mr. Armour bought it. Once it became English only, it became the organ of English Montreal mercantile interests. From 3 February 1831 to 2 February 1832 the paper was triweekly; biweekly again from 6 February to 31 May 1832; triweekly from 2 June 1832 until 15 May 1841. See Beaulieu and Hamelin, LES JOURNAUX DU QUEBEC de 1764 à 1964, pp. 94-96; W.H. Kesterton, A HISTORY OF JOURNALISM IN CANADA, p. 5.

3. The QUEBEC MERCURY, a weekly paper, was founded on 5 January 1805 by Thomas Cary. It was overtly used as the organ of the English Conservative Lower Canadians. See Beaulieu and Hamelin, LES JOURNAUX DU QUEBEC de 1764 à 1964, pp. 210-211; Kesterton, A HISTORY OF JOURNALISM IN CANADA, p. 5; Helen Taft Manning, THE REVOLT OF FRENCH CANADA, pp. 60-64.

4. LE CANADIEN was founded on 22 November 1806 by politicians Pierre Bédard and François Blanchet. Its principal contributors were the most important French Canadian deputies of the period. Often forced to suspend publication, the CANADIEN changed hands several times. From 1831 to 1842 Etienne Parent edited it, and owned it in partnership with J.B. Fréchette. A weekly until 8 May 1832, it became a biweekly until 2 May 1832, and a triweekly from 9 May 1832 until 6 May 1857.

5. The MONTREAL HERALD was a weekly paper founded on 19 October 1811. From 6 June 1820 it was issued twice a week. It was edited by Scotsman Mungo Kay, who tended to be a constitutional, or moderate, Tory. After his death in 1818 many editors directed the paper, the most famous of whom were Alexander Skelton and Adam Thom. See Beaulieu and Hamelin, LES JOURNAUX DU QUEBEC de 1764 à 1964, pp. 99-100.

6. LA MINERVE was founded on 9 November 1826 by Augustin-Norbert Morin, who along with other French Canadians such as Ludger Duvernay edited the paper. It was a biweekly paper devoted to French Canadian interests, politically-oriented, and very influential. See Beaulieu and Hamelin, LES JOURNAUX DU QUEBEC de 1764 à 1964, pp. 116-117.

7. All information about parliamentary reporting in pre-Union Lower Canada is drawn from reading microfilms of all six papers during the period.

16. IBID., p. 382, cites several sources which comment upon this public demand for parliamentary reports: James Macfarlane of the KINGSTON CHRONICLE in 1822, and W. L. Mackenzie who in 1828 said that if one of his colleagues "excluded the proceedings in Parliament from his paper, people would give it up."

20. This exceptionally large number of newspapers has often been commented on. See for example, Kesterton, A HISTORY OF JOURNALISM IN CANADA, pp. 10-11; Edith Firth (ed.), EARLY TORONTO NEWSPAPERS 1793-1867, p. 13, citing Anne Brownell Jameson, WINTER STUDIES AND SUMMER RAMBLES IN CANADA, London, 1838. "Apropos of newspapers — my table is covered with them. In the absence or scarcity of books, they are the principle medium of knowledge and communication in Upper Canada. There is no stamp act here — no duty on paper; and I have sometimes thought that the great number of local newspapers which do not circulate beyond their own little town or district must — from the vulgar, narrow tone of many of them — do mischief; but on the whole perhaps, they do more good."; Rollo Campbell, TWO LECTURES ON CANADA, p. 41.

136. It is interesting that eight years after Canada had judged the contract system a hopeless failure, which it replaced with our familiar system, Britain decided to try the contract system. Twenty years later Britain arrived at the same conclusions as Canada had so much earlier and used the Canadian model to design the official British HANSARD.

CHAPTER IV :

THE TECHNIQUES OF PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING

BRITISH TECHNIQUES

In British-derived Parliaments, parliamentary reporting is an institution intimately associated with Parliament. It is also a highly skilled profession. Most parliamentary reporters consider their Gallery "an integral part" of the House they serve and are lodged in.<sup>1</sup> Many members agree, for they realize the value of parliamentary reports in informing their constituents about their own roles in the "talking place".<sup>2</sup> From any perspective, parliamentary reporting is a vital part of parliamentary procedure, and like Parliament itself, is the model for the corresponding Canadian institution. Consequently, a familiarity with the techniques, goals and personnel of British parliamentary reporting is essential for any study of HANSARD in either Britain, its colonies or its former colonies. It is certainly useful for understanding the techniques used by Canadian parliamentary reporters and for devising a way to reconstruct a HANSARD from their reports. However, in the same way that British parliamentary reporting is associated with Parliament and cannot be understood outside that context, so the Canadian transplant cannot be studied outside of its own context. This context includes its origin as a transplanted English institution, its relation to the Canadian Parliament, and its reaction to peculiarly Canadian influences and conditions.

First of all, Canadian parliamentary reporting was the colonial brand of a metropolitan profession. By the time of the Canadian Union, the English system was highly developed and enjoyed the benefits of money, experience and tradition. Of all the components essential to the manufacture of the reports, reporters possessed of certain skills and techniques were the most important. Fortunately, various Select Committees investigated parliamentary reporting and amassed a wealth of material about it, including lengthy interviews with LONDON TIMES' reporters.<sup>3</sup> Since HANSARD was virtually a transcript of their reports, they are the real if unacknowledged authors of HANSARD during Hansard's tenure.<sup>4</sup>

The ideal parliamentary reporter took either shorthand, or very fast longhand. He was an intelligent man who could exercise excellent judgment in editing his notes.<sup>5</sup> One professional described reporting as "an intellectual exercise which may be facilitated by writing in a particular way in shorthand."<sup>6</sup> In other words, reporting was quite distinct from mere shorthand writing. "Short hand writing ((is)) a mechanical art ((which)) may be learnt mechanically by any person who can read and write,"<sup>7</sup> whereas the skilful reporter "has to bring his mental faculties to bear upon the ends of his fingers, so to speak."<sup>8</sup> The ideal parliamentary reporter was supposed to be educated as well as intelligent, to have a command of a wide range of current events as well as a sound enough classical education to grasp members' more erudite allusions.<sup>9</sup> He also had to be able to instantly identify each member by sight as they rose to speak, to identify their voices<sup>10</sup> and he had to cope with any speech peculiarities or defects.<sup>11</sup> The functional parliamentary reporter also had to be unfailingly punctual; "in his fraternity to be late for a turn of duty is the unpardonable sin...."<sup>12</sup> These were the characteristics of the perfect 19th Century parliamentary reporter. In reality, of course, the Reporters' Gallery was filled, lacking some of these characteristics in some degree, and who therefore ranged from highly skilled to merely competent to genuinely mediocre in proportion to their deviation from the ideal.<sup>13</sup>

From 1835 onwards parliamentary reporters had their own Gallery which gave them a good view of the House. However, they had poor audibility.<sup>14</sup> For one thing, members talked a great deal among themselves, drowning out speakers on the floor.<sup>15</sup> Secondly, the construction of the House of Commons was accoustically unsound. Even the most favourably located reporter could at no time hear all the speakers. The middle seats were the best for reporting most speakers. Ministerial speakers, and front bench opposition members, the most important men in the House, were difficult to hear from right, centre and left hand Gallery seats.<sup>16</sup> "With regards to the seats on the right hand, Ministers speak with their backs towards them; those at the extreme left hand have the backs of the front Opposition Bench speakers turned to them.... The seats in the middle of the gallery.... I do not consider ... the best for ministerial speakers," one expert witness testified.<sup>17</sup>

In the Gallery itself there was always a great deal of noise and confusion. "You hear more of what is going on around you than you hear frequently from the floor of the House," one reporter declared.<sup>18</sup> Reporters for papers which required only a few columns of parliamentary debates spent most of their time chatting with each other. Those reporters working for large and efficiently-organized operations like the LONDON TIMES worked in short shifts and the noise they made going in and out of the Gallery, their legitimate discussions with each other and with their supervisor about their work made the Gallery a very noisy place.<sup>19</sup> To this was added the persistent buzz of their extra-curricular chatting, for even TIMES' reporters were not compelled to listen attentively to all speeches on all topics. Though it gave priority to parliamentary reports, the TIMES was nonetheless a primarily commercial operation which avoided losing readers by subjecting them to the more boring debates.<sup>20</sup> In other words, the newspaper policy of not requiring verbatim reports gave most reporters a great deal of spare time to entertain each other, incidentally distracting their working colleagues.

Most parliamentary reporters did not work independently on the debates. Usually the men from each paper, excepting only the small papers or those from the provinces, were supervised by a Chief Reporter. He was a man experienced in both reporting and in parliamentary affairs. Supervisors were available to instruct their reporters about how to take each individual speech, but usually the reporters were also experienced and knew without being told what was required of them.<sup>21</sup> The usual policy was to automatically report the two front benches as well as any other speaker whose remarks seemed interesting.<sup>22</sup> Reporters seldom took verbatim reports excepting only such extraordinarily able and important speakers as Gladstone.<sup>23</sup> Otherwise they just noted down the speaker's main ideas. A sample plan for reporting a debate might be :

Asquith, 1st person, fully.

Churchill, 1st person, cut down.

Bonar Law, fully.

Cecil, 3rd person, good summary.

Remainder of debate must be kept to lines.<sup>24</sup>

The TIMES' reporters were acknowledged to be the best parliamentary reporters of all. They always worked on short shifts.<sup>25</sup> This made their job much more difficult, because they often lost the trend of a speech or even of an entire debate.<sup>26</sup> The shift system was used solely to expedite the reports; an average reporter needed from one to two hours to transcribe fifteen minutes of shorthand.<sup>27</sup> The reporters went directly from the Gallery to the writing room to transcribe their notes which were immediately carried off for final editing and publication.<sup>28</sup> Transcribing the notes was not an automatic process. Under optimum conditions reporters could hear only about two-thirds of the words emanating from the floor of the House,<sup>29</sup> often making it "mere guess-work to fill up the blanks where one has not heard."<sup>30</sup> Often reporters reconstructed speeches by "imitating the general style of the orator, which by long practice they are able to do."<sup>31</sup> Conscientious reporters often provided adequate coverage of a debate by arranging that colleagues sit in different sections of the Gallery and compare notes afterwards.<sup>32</sup> However, not all reporters were on the TIMES or other large papers, and often these other reporters were slothful men who did not bother to take notes. They relied instead on inveigling their more diligent colleagues into dictating enough information to them afterwards to write up a report.<sup>33</sup>

In practice all reporters adhered to the general rule of noting only the most important speeches. There were only three main exceptions. Reporters for provincial papers or for the Press Association reported the remarks of certain provincial representatives at great length whether or not these men were important in the House. Also, certain individual members retained reporters to report their speeches in great detail.<sup>34</sup> In this way various unexceptional speakers were given publicity whom the newspaper would otherwise have underreported or ignored altogether. Finally, any sort of skirmish on the floor of the House attracted the reporters' attention more than most other, more solid, subjects. "Anything of a personal character is sure to attract attention," one Supervisor admitted.<sup>35</sup> There also existed an unorthodox method of obtaining speeches which lightened the reporters' task. Sometimes reporters accepted written copies of speeches from members,<sup>36</sup> though this was much frowned upon. The author of such a speech invariably made great improvements upon the speech as he had delivered it in the House. However, the practice survived because it was very much easier for the reporter than reporting.

Ministerial and opposition front bench speakers, as well as the speakers reported fully for other reasons comprised only a small percentage of the total number of speakers reported. The rest of the speeches were given in resumé or condensed form. This meant that reporters had to devise some method to indicate the relative length of each speech. They developed the system of giving the length of the speeches in an exact ratio, thereby providing a guide for comparing the length and importance of the speeches.<sup>37</sup> Unfortunately this system was not wholly accurate because many speeches were omitted altogether.

All condensed speeches and many of the more fully reported speeches were given in the third person.<sup>38</sup> This was the traditional style for parliamentary reporting, originating in the days when reporters could at best sneak notes, and before scientific shorthand was a common skill. Nonetheless, the 1888 Select Committee on Parliamentary Reporting was convinced that this tradition was totally unsuitable for present conditions. The Committee wrote that

A report in the third person is a bad report, not merely, nor indeed so much, because it is unduly brief, as because it is an incorrect report. The third person report has the tendency to bring down all speeches to a monotonous and dull level, for it is the individual reporter who is represented in them, and not the different speakers, diverse in temperament, thought and diction. Behind a report in the first person the reader can see the personality of the speaker. Such a report of a speech has colour, reality, the variety of life, while a report in the third person is bad, not only because it is too brief, but because it gives a false impression, and is, therefore, in the higher sense, an incorrect report.<sup>39</sup>

Yet parliamentary reporters identified first person reporting with verbatim reporting, a system they despised. One witness, for example, continually and contemptuously referred to first person reporting as "giving mere words".<sup>40</sup> This sort of contempt was as deeply rooted as were its historical origins. First of all, reporters took non-verbatim reports by tradition. Reinforcing this tradition, and no doubt one of its original causes, was the physical impossibility of even hearing, let alone reporting, every word uttered in the acoustically unsound House of Commons. Also, reporters in Parliament were not all personally equipped to handle verbatim reporting. Shorthand, an almost essential tool for verbatim reporting, was not a common skill among parliamentary reporters until the middle of the nineteenth Century.<sup>41</sup> The first really excellent and scientific shorthand system, replacing the cumbersome systems of old, was published by Sir Isaac Pitman only in 1837.<sup>42</sup> Needless to say, their stenographic inadequacies reinforced the reporters' dislike of verbatim reporting because they had a serious personal stake in keeping it at bay.

The reporters also had literary reasons for disliking verbatim reporting. Parliamentary reporting was traditionally associated with men of literary genius and many contemporary reporters also had claims to literary ability.<sup>43</sup> Added to these literary considerations was the reportorial group's scorn for most of the speakers it serviced.<sup>44</sup> Parliamentary procedure was often dignified in the Bagehotian sense only; to the daily observer it seemed a contemptible and pitiful spectacle.

Its appearance, indeed, frequently seemed to be that of a bear-garden rather than of a grave deliberative Assembly, and the occasional want of decorum pained and astonished the foreign observer. "Members," wrote one of them, "may be seen lying upon their backs on the seats, and kicking against the walls with all their might, to testify their approbation of one of the Minister's incomprehensible speeches. Finally, when the House breaks up, they trundle out like so many schoolboys dismissed to a long vacation, or so many fiddlers from the orchestra when the curtain rises to the First Act of a Tragedy." It is hardly surprising, then, that before the meeting of every new Parliament, dozens of bricklayers and carpenters were brought in to repair the walls, seats and wainscoting.<sup>45</sup>

Members also slept stretched out under the Gallery, and they ate and drank in the House. Many of them were notoriously drunk throughout the proceedings. In general parliamentary behaviour was so reprehensible that reporters had little respect for most members, and none at all for preserving their exact words.<sup>46</sup> As Charles Dickens wryly put it,

Night after night, I record predictions that never come to pass, professions that are never fulfilled, explanations that are only meant to mystify. I wallow in words. Britannia, that unfortunate female, is always before me, like a trussed fowl, skewered through and through with office-pens, and bound hand-and-foot with red tape. I am sufficiently behind the scenes to know the worth of political life. I am quite an Infidel about it, and shall never be converted.<sup>47</sup>

There was a final and equally important influence against verbatim reporting. This lay in the very nature of newspapers, the employers of all the reporters and the sources of the parliamentary debates.

Newspapers deal with reports as they do with every other article of intelligence ; as simply what will command a commercial market ; and it is impossible not to see that a great many of the speeches delivered would be such as would overcrowd their columns, and would not command their market. They would be performing a very different function from that which they now perform if they were to give a verbatim report of everything that passed in Parliament. A verbatim report of a long debate in Parliament would, I suppose, occupy the whole of "The Times,"

Lord Halsbury explained.<sup>48</sup> On very rare occasions the TIMES' reports were as long as forty-four columns, but this was most exceptional.<sup>49</sup> In the 1840's, the TIMES devoted about one hundred columns a week to parliamentary reports.<sup>50</sup> At an average rate of three columns for each hour of speaking time,<sup>51</sup> three columns represent about thirty-three hours of speaking time. Other papers devoted about thirteen or fourteen columns daily to parliamentary reports.<sup>52</sup> In later years both the quality and the amount of reporting deteriorated. The reports were shortened in response to what newspaper proprietors believed was declining public interest in parliamentary reports ; after all, the most important function of commercial newspapers is to cater to the reading public.<sup>53</sup> In addition, there was the inevitable temptation to shorten reports when every single column of parliamentary debates meant one less column of advertising at £20 per column.<sup>54</sup> Finally, once parliamentary reporting was judged less salable a commodity than it had been, the demands for high standards were lowered, the calibre of men attracted to the profession was less outstanding and the quality of their work was soon noticeably inferior to earlier reports.

Parliamentary reporting had a multi-dimensional aspect. It was a profession and institution of traditionally great importance in the development of Parliament and its associated organizations. It was equally a feature of the newspaper world ; indeed, its origins were written indelibly in newsprint ink. The newspaper world, unlike the parliamentary, was a commercial world in which news of all kinds was ultimately a commodity to be sold to the public. Both the parliamentary and newspaper worlds were steeped in politics as well, the parliamentary world thoroughly, the newspaper world less so. All these considerations were important aspects of the parliamentary reporter's profession, and in whatever juxtaposition each reporter placed them, were fundamental to the whole institution of parliamentary reporting.

The reporter had also to deal with the more mundane and concrete aspects of his profession. He had to supply his newspaper employer with the sort of reports readers desired, and he had to obtain these reports in a fairly traditional way. Usually his reports, given in the third person, were resumés of most, though not all, speakers' ideas. The length of these speeches was proportioned so that the reader could judge their relative lengths by comparing them. These reports were mixed with longer, fuller accounts of ministerial and front bench opposition speakers, though these too were usually given in the third person. Verbatim reporting was almost unknown ; it was reserved for extremely special occasions, or the rare brilliant speaker. Parliamentary reporting still reflected the two worlds the reporter worked in, the political world of Parliament, and the commercial world of the newspaper which employed him. This style, and the tradition and techniques which produced it, were for Canadians the ultimate in parliamentary reporting.

CANADIAN TECHNIQUES

Canadian parliamentary reporting, though modelled on the British institution, had also to cope with local Canadian conditions. Parliamentary news was an even more important feature of Canadian newspapers than it was in the Mother Country. Canadians were so relentless in their demands for detailed parliamentary reports that newspapers failing to satisfy them faced certain financial ruin.<sup>55</sup> As an institution parliamentary reporting was profoundly influenced by the newspapers whose columns it filled and by the relation of these newspapers to Parliament and especially to the individual politicians in Parliament. The Canadian Press had a more fundamentally political character than its British counterpart. Usually Canadian newspapers were either owned, operated, directed or greatly influenced by a member of Parliament or else by a member's most intimate political colleagues and allies. This established a more intimate association between the Canadian Parliament and the Press than between the Mother of Parliaments and the more literary, independent and financially secure British Press.

One of the most significant differences between the British institution and its Canadian transplant lay in their respective personnel. The Canadians involved were differently oriented and motivated than their English counterparts. Canadians had achieved a much greater degree of equality with each other and with their elected representatives than was true in England, and had for years enjoyed a much wider franchise. Canadian representatives were so far from having aristocratic pretensions that the first pre-Union Parliaments had included illiterates. The extensive Canadian franchise led to widespread participation in politics. The hope of patronage on the part of the individual elector also encouraged direct political involvement on the popular level. The dearth of cultural activities lent politics additional interest and attraction. Even the illiterates were able to join in. In Lower Canada, for example, the after-Mass reading of such current documents as political broadsides and religious mandements was an established institution.<sup>56</sup> In this sense the American influence on Canada was stronger than the British, though the democratic impulses which were reinforced by the proximity of America were channelled into British-derived rather than republican institutions.

Canada always had a political crisis either fermenting, being resolved or having just attained resolution, and these crises often involved journalists. Then, if Parliament dealt with the crisis, the newspapers naturally showed a vital interest in the debates. Usually this interest was openly partisan, and Upper and Lower Canadian editors were constantly being tossed into prison and paying fines because of their politically committed journalism.<sup>57</sup> This was much less true after the Union, but before that event there are countless examples of press persecution and suffering which forged the tradition of a fearless and popular political Press. Pierre Bédard and François Blanchet of LE CANADIEN were imprisoned for articles they wrote. Etienne Parent, editor of the same paper, was also jailed. Ludger Duvernay of LA MINERVE and Dr. Jocelyn Waller of the CANADIAN SPECTATOR were constantly at odds with the governments which had them incarcerated. Dr. Edmund Bailey O'Callaghan and his Montreal VINDICATOR were often in trouble. Bartimus

Ferguson of the NIAGARA SPECTATOR and Francis Collins landed in prison. Richard Cockrel of the ST. DAVID'S SPECTATOR and James Durand of the NIAGARA BEE suffered at the hands of the Upper Canadian legislature for certain political comments in their papers.<sup>58</sup> In other words, Canadian newspapermen were almost always serious and committed political activists.

The intensity and fervour of Canadian politics was almost matched by its sectional nature. The Legislative Union had not united the two colonies culturally or linguistically, and as a consequence a burning issue in one of the Canadas was often a mammoth bore in the other. The language problem was superimposed onto this sectionalist tendency. Issues were often effectively English or French as well as sectional, and the newspapers which gave excellent coverage to debates on one issue might easily neglect another which affected only the other section of the province. So in even the very best Canadian newspapers news coverage tended to be sectionally and linguistically selective.

The deeply political Canadian people expected more than widespread parliamentary coverage; they expected it in a paper which represented their own specific political interest in the particular town or district they inhabited. This explains the truly phenomenal number of newspapers in the small province. The average number was quite impressive, though it fluctuated rapidly because of the instability which led to newspapers' rapid establishment and then contributed to their equally rapid demise. In 1836 Upper Canada had thirty, Lower Canada twenty papers; by 1857 Upper Canada had one hundred and fifty-nine, Lower Canada fifty-four.<sup>59</sup> Usually each paper did more than represent the local interests of the section and a district or town within that section, and of course a specific language and political group, but strongly identified with one of the members of Parliament as well. For example, the HAMILTON SPECTATOR was closely identified with Sir Allan MacNab; BATHURST COURIER with Malcolm Cameron; LA MINERVE with Ludger Duvernay and the partisans of Louis-Hippolyte LaFontaine; LE JOURNAL DE QUEBEC with Joseph Cauchon; TORONTO GLOBE with George Brown; WESTERN HERALD with Col. John Prince; ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL with William Hamilton Merritt; MONTREAL PILOT with Francis Hincks; QUEBEC GAZETTE with John Neilson; L'AVENIR with Louis-Joseph Papineau; CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN with Egerton Ryerson; and L'AUREOLE with Denis-Benjamin Viger. The relationship was a more intimate one than that between members and papers in Britain, including even those British provincial newspapers which spotlighted their own local representatives.

Canadian newspapers were almost unique in their particularism and individuality. The dearth of skilled reporters meant that those available had the licence open to any professionals who are greatly in demand, and many reporters took advantage of this situation to impose their own personalities on their reports. Before the Union the Upper Canadian reporter was more inclined to do this than his Lower Canadian counterpart, who was quite restrained in his treatment of both friend and political foe.<sup>60</sup> After the Union the reporters from both sections indulged about equally in this personalism, very noticeably in political news and commentaries though not as much in strict parliamentary reportage. From time to time, however, reportorial biases and loyalties distorted even the most subdued and objective parliamentary reports. For example, in an otherwise typically straightforward account of the Assembly's proceedings, the MONTREAL TRANSCRIPT stated that "The Hyena laid upon the table the returns moved for respecting the Fee Fund of the District and Division Courts — 200 copies ordered to be printed. He also laid upon the table the public accounts of the last year.”<sup>61</sup> The Hyena was Inspector General Francis Hincks.

The small Canadian papers had only very limited space for parliamentary debates, and so fairly rigorous selection of the speeches to be published was essential. Despite the fact that debates had priority over all other news, it was still impossible for any paper, no matter how large or how often distributed, to give complete coverage.<sup>62</sup>

We have endeavoured to make a running comment on the proceedings in the House, and to put our readers in possession of the arguments employed on both sides, and occasionally to give important speeches. The employment of fifty reporters would not enable us to do more, unless we increased the size of our paper and published it daily at an immense increase of expense, one newspaper editor explained.<sup>63</sup> Most papers tried their best to give the maximum coverage possible. For example, they almost all relegated the Legislative Council to second place after the Assembly; this policy was a direct reflection of the Council's lack of power after 1841. However, it remained an unalterable fact that the papers were too small for full coverage.

It is possible to calculate exactly how much of the Assembly's proceedings were published in the newspapers. English newspapers were estimated to contain about one hour of debates in every three columns. Canadian newspapers required sixteen columns to cover the same amount of material contained within ten London columns. Some of the best Canadian newspapers in our period were estimated to devote thirty columns weekly to reports of debates, the equivalent of eighteen and three-quarters English columns.<sup>64</sup> They therefore contained weekly reports of approximately six and one-half hours speaking time, in other words averaging just a little over an hour's worth of speaking time for each day of an average six-day weekly sitting. Another way to determine how much material was omitted is to use today's estimate of an hour's public speaking at eight thousand words, an estimate also valid for the 19th Century when T.C. Hansard estimated one hour's debates to contain about seven thousand and eighty words.<sup>65</sup> With these figures as a guide, we can judge the degree to which Canadian newspaper coverage of Parliament was inadequate. Of course no paper gave verbatim reports, so the average weekly column rate represented very edited accounts of debates lasting many more hours than the figure arrived at by using the above column/word ratio. The extent of this editing is revealed by such comments as "Mr. Aylwin spoke for one hour and forty minutes," preceding a six line summary of Aylwin's entire speech.<sup>66</sup>

As a result of this need for strictly limiting the space allotted to them, the reports were usually third person summaries of speeches, with only very important or politically compatible speakers reported fully. First person reporting was almost unknown. Often speakers were omitted, sometimes because they were considered insignificant, other times because they were politically antagonistic. For example, the editor of the Montreal PILOT complained that the Press of the opposing political party had neglected to report certain speakers for purely partisan reasons.

It is a remarkable fact that Mr. Baldwin's closing speech by far the most important made during the debate appeared in no paper but the Pilot. The excuse for not giving it is that "it was physically impossible" there being neither pens nor types in the city to follow a discussion so enormously protracted.... Mr. LaFontaine was not reported because, forsooth! he did not speak

English which he can do "if he likes" and which he ought to do no doubt at the expence (sic) of his own countrymen to please the Gazette.<sup>67</sup>

The lack of financial security limiting the size and scope of Canadian newspapers also limited the number of reporters which any one paper could afford to employ. In Canada reporters worked "individually not as reporters at home, where each paper has a corps of them on every debate...." <sup>68</sup> Therefore, unless Canadian reporters arranged with colleagues to borrow notes for those times when they were absent from the House for meals and so on, their reports covered only what transpired when they were actually present. In the years 1841 and 1842, for example, the BRITISH COLONIST reporter habitually arrived at the House somewhat later than his colleagues. It was only in 1843 that he or his employers appear to have joined forces with the correspondent of the MONTREAL GAZETTE because in that year they began to publish identical reports. <sup>69</sup> Despite the disadvantages of working independently of one another, the reporters never formed a co-operative Press corps, though individual reporters co-operated from time to time. Instances of their co-operation are easily recognized. For example, sometimes newspapers would simultaneously print debates in which most speeches were completely different from those in another newspaper, but in which some few speeches were identical. It is reasonable to conclude that on these days the reporters spelled each other, or that one reporter dictated his own account of a debate to the reporter who had missed part of it. Another type of reporter, called the parliamentary correspondent, whose ranks included such men as the MONTREAL GAZETTE's H, LA MINERVE's X. Y. Z., LE CANADIEN's *** and the BATHURST COURIER's "Watch 'Em", also prepared reports. These men attended most Assembly sittings and then wrote summaries of the day's or week's work. Their précis were designed to comment on the debates rather than to reproduce them, though often, an individual speech was considered noteworthy enough to report in detail.

Like their English counterparts, Canadian reporters were also responsible for transcribing their notes and delivering them to the paper for publication. <sup>70</sup> For all except reporters on Seat of Government papers, this meant transcribing notes posthaste. They had to catch the mail in time to ensure an early arrival at the newspaper office. As a result, many reports are the product of almost all-night transcribing marathons. "The lateness, or rather, earliness of the hour at which I write, compels me to be brief, and I will merely state some of the opinions expressed by those, in whom your readers take most interest," one reporter explained. <sup>71</sup> These trying conditions made accuracy and completeness very difficult to achieve, but the reports were published regardless. Indeed, one editor introduced several corrections to an earlier parliamentary report by admitting that "In the hurry of writing out their notes Reporters will sometimes make mistakes," but he added that "Hon. members may think themselves fortunate that they are not oftener misrepresented." <sup>72</sup> Newspapers had to tolerate the reports supplied to them because they were simply unable to provide anything better, partly through lack of money, partly through a chronic scarcity of reporters. "I have sent you a summary of the proceedings in the Legislative Assembly during the past week," wrote Francis Hincks.

I have endeavoured to give the substance of my own observations on some of the questions which have been before the House; but as I am obliged to write entirely from memory, and after the lapse, generally, of two or three days, I could not venture to give any thing like a report of the debates which have taken place. It is much to be regretted that we have no efficient Reporters, as the questions under discussion are of the very highest importance.

Hincks added that to compensate for the scarcity of reporters, he would "be very happy, indeed, to insert the remarks of any member on either side of the House, provided they were compressed into a small space."<sup>73</sup> This was rather a desperate suggestion, but Hincks was evidently prepared to attempt anything to provide his readers with acceptably broad parliamentary coverage, no matter how unorthodox the methods.

Reporters also contended with poor accommodation in the Parliament buildings. In 1841 the Assembly was lodged in a building originally designed as a hospital. Though it had been quite luxuriously refurbished for the members, the reporters did not consider their Gallery adequate.<sup>74</sup> It should be noted that though they complained, Canadian reporters were still incomparably better off than their English counterparts, who worked in appalling conditions. "I have worn my knees by writing on them on the old back row of the old Gallery of the old House of Commons," wrote Charles Dickens of his reporting days, "and I have worn my feet by standing to write in a preposterous pen in the old House of Lords, where we used to be huddled together like so many sheep kept in waiting, say, until the Woolsack might want re-stuffing."<sup>75</sup> In 1841 however, in Kingston, Upper Canada, comfort was an important commodity whose absence provoked serious discontent.<sup>76</sup> On the whole the conditions under which reporters worked were quite difficult, but their newspapers were hard-pressed to improve them. They were too hampered by lack of money, personnel and column space. However, the public appetite for parliamentary reports was unflagging, and forced the newspapers to seek constantly to provide the best possible reports.

A comparison between the techniques and style of parliamentary reporting in Britain and in Canada points up the similarities between the two institutions. Both were the product of Parliament and the Press, and both were politically influenced. The differences were of degree. Canadian parliamentary reporting was more politically-oriented, more structured to conform to the exigencies of newspapers' demands and requirements. However, in concrete particulars Canadian parliamentary reporting operated quite differently from the English model because of conditions peculiar to Canada. Reporters had to work independently, because no paper could afford a large staff as in England, and at the beginning of the Union period, most papers could only manage to support one reporter. Nevertheless Canadian reporters co-operated only occasionally. Their reports consisted of condensed versions of speeches in the third person, written in a style not too dissimilar from the English, though in Canada no attempt was made to write speeches in the same style as the speaker habitually used. To the contrary, in Canada the style was invariably the reporter's own; indeed his personality tended to pervade the reports. These reports are the material from which the reconstructed HANSARD is drawn.

2. D.G. Crockett, "The M.P. and his Constituents," PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. XX, 1968-69, p. 282. "According to one member: 'Very often when people are talking in the House they are doing so for the benefit of their local newspapers.' Members regularly issue copies of their speeches to local newspapers and some contribute articles to the constituency press. A few will even attempt to win the confidence of reporters by offering them 'hints' on parliamentary developments."

3. There were several Committees which studied the problems of parliamentary reporting: SELECT COMMITTEE, 1862; SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING, 1878; SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING, House of Commons 203 of 1878-79; REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS ON REPORTING, House of Lords 66 of 1880; SELECT COMMITTEE, 1888; REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, House of Commons 253 of 1892; REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, House of Commons 213 of 1893-94; REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES, House of Commons 239 of 1907; REPORT AND SPECIAL REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATIONS AND DEBATES' REPORTS, House of Commons 285 of 1909. Of these the most important for our topic were those of 1862, 1878 and 1888.

4. Some of the most valued witnesses testifying before the various Select Committees were reporters: for example, Edward Lloyd, proprietor of the DAILY CHRONICLE, examined in 1888; John Moore, shorthand writer, reporter and manager of the Press Association examined in 1888; William Leycester, head the TIMES' staff in the House of Commons Reporters' Gallery, examined in 1888; and particularly Charles Ross, examined in 1878. Ross, who was in 1878 head of the TIMES' reporting staff in the House of Commons had entered the House as a reporter in 1820, and ceased working there only in 1883 at the age of eighty-three. He was also the compiler of the ROSS RECORD, a kind of edited HANSARD that he issued from 1861, and which in 1866 was given a government subvention. The members used this publication which was distributed weekly to them, often enough to be of use to them. See SELECT COMMITTEE ON PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING, 1878, pp. 48-49 (56-57). Another important witness was William Henry Gurney Salter, shorthand writer in the House of Commons, and descendant of the shorthand Gurneys. Gurney Salter testified in 1888. See also THE HISTORY OF THE TIMES: THE TRADITION ESTABLISHED, p. 595, which states that many of the journalists questioned in 1888 gave replies "of much historical value."

9. Martin Burrell gives an amusing example of one reporter's failure to recognize such an erudite remark: "John Bright once quoted Milton's lines;

'... I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope; but still bear up and steer

The reporter, who had somewhat foggy notions about poetry, observed, 'The honourable gentleman said that he wouldn't argue against the hand or will of heaven, nor would he bate a jot of heart or hope, but would bear up and steer right onward.'" BETWIXT HEAVEN AND CHARING CROSS, p. 267. Incidentally, this example also gives an indication of how accurate reporting could be.

10. This is almost more important than identifying members by sight because they constantly call out remarks during another member's speech and without ever being recognized by the Speaker. Therefore the parliamentary reporter does not have time to look up from his notebook each time he hears a new voice; he has to be able to recognize it by ear. This is true even today in the Canadian House of Commons because the tape recorder is manually tuned in to each speaker and usually in a fast exchange the operator can't switch it quickly enough and the exchange is lost unless the HANSARD reporter has managed to get most of it.

13. Earlier in the 19th Century reporters were defended in the House as to their respectability by James Stephen who "must have been almost the only M.P. of this period who, as a young man, helped to keep himself by reporting the debates in the House of Commons for one of the daily newspapers..." A. Aspinall, "The Old House of Commons and its Members (c. 1783-1832), PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. VI, 1961-62, p. 185. At that time it was shown that the reporters were "men of education and even literary distinction." Symon, THE PRESS AND ITS STORY, p. 81. When in 1832 Charles Dickens entered Parliament as a reporter for the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT, "Parliamentary reporting at this time had reached its zenith. The Galleries of the Lords and Commons were thronged with men of exceptional ability and, for the most part, of high intellectual attainments...." Carlton, CHARLES DICKENS : SHORTHAND WRITER, pp. 80-81. With occasional exceptions such as Dickens, the very best reporters were those on the TIMES whose paper had a staff larger than any of the others, and which gave approximately twice as much space to parliamentary reports as did any other paper. See THE HISTORY OF THE TIMES : THE TRADITION ESTABLISHED 1841-1884, pp. 448-450. There were, however, some less than ideal parliamentary reporters in the Gallery, such as Proby of the MORNING CHRONICLE who worked exclusively from memory; Morgan O'Sullivan, who once slept through a speech of Wilberforce's, then accepted an account of the speech from Peter Finnerty, another reporter, whose fraudulent account was published in O'Sullivan's and several other of his reporter friends' papers the next day, forcing Wilberforce to issue a denial in the House the next day. A sample of the speech : "Had it been my lot to be born and reared in Ireland, where my food would principally have consisted of the potato, the most nutritious and salubrious root, instead of being the poor infirm stunted creature you, Sir, and other Honourable Members now behold me, I should have been a tall, stout, athletic man, and able to carry an enormous weight." It is sometimes felt that because the new Gallery after the Fire of 1834 was so much improved from the old Gallery that it was almost perfect, when in fact all the evidence indicates that the inaudibility in the new Gallery was still quite a problem.

42. In 1837 Pitman's STENOGRAPHICAL SOUND-HAND was published, based on William Harding's modification of Samuel Taylor's AN ESSAY INTENDED TO ESTABLISH A STANDARD FOR AN UNIVERSAL SYSTEM OF STENOGRAPHY, OR SHORT HAND WRITING, London: 1786. See Carlton, CHARLES DICKENS: SHORTHAND WRITER, p. 39; R.C. Alston, TREATISES ON SHORT-HAND, p. 54, Plate LXX; Pitman, PITMAN'S SHORTHAND: NEW COURSE. Pitman's new system changed shorthand writing drastically by introducing a scientific and phonetic system using simple strokes, elimination of most vowel signs, and position writing, that is above, on and below the line. Before Pitman, shorthand writing was a laborious business, involving the most tedious memorization of arbitrary characters. One of the best pre-Pitman system was that of Gurney, which was quite common among parliamentary reporters. The Gurneys themselves were the official shorthand writers to the Houses of Parliament for reporting Select Committees, as was Felix Gurney-Salter of our own period, who testified before the 1888 Select Committee on Parliamentary Reporting so often cited above. This was the system used by Sir Henry Cavendish to take his famous DEBATES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS IN THE YEAR 1774, ON THE BILL FOR MAKING MORE EFFECTUAL PROVISION FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC, and also DEBATES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, DURING THE THIRTEENTH PARLIAMENT OF GREAT BRITAIN, COMMONLY CALLED THE UNREPORTED PARLIAMENT. It was also the system learned by Charles Dickens, whose impressions of learning it are immortalized in his autobiographical DAVID COPPERFIELD. Lamented David, "I bought an approved scheme of the noble art and mystery of stenography (which cost me ten and sixpence), and plunged into a sea of perplexity that brought me, in a few weeks, to the confines of distraction. The changes that were rung upon dots, which in such a position meant such a thing, and in such another position something else, entirely different, the wonderful vagaries that were played by circles, the unaccountable consequences that resulted from marks like flies' legs, the tremendous effects of a curve in a wrong place, not only troubled my waking hours, but reappeared before me in my sleep. When I had groped my way, blindly, through these difficulties, and had mastered the alphabet, there then appeared a procession of new horrors, called arbitrary characters, the most despotic characters I have even known, who insisted, for instance, that a thing like the beginning of a cobweb, meant expectation, and that a pen-and-ink sky-rocket stood for disadvantageous. When I had fixed these wretches in my mind, I found that they had driven everything else out of it; then, beginning again, I forgot them; while I was picking them up, I dropped the other fragments of the system; in short, it was almost heart-breaking." Dickens, DAVID COPPERFIELD, p. 545.

43. This is still true today of Canadian HANSARD reporters, though sometimes they write under noms de plumes.

"Like sad Prometheus fastened to the rock,
In vain he looks for pity to the clock,
In vain the powers of strengthening porter tries,
And nods to Bellamy for fresh supplies."

p. 291, citing instances of Sheridan's extreme drunkenness in the House. Another man who inadvertently evidenced contempt for the members was T.C. Hansard himself, and in one way or another there is a tenor of contempt for most speakers on the part of all the reporters and Supervisors called to testify before the Select Committees on Parliamentary Reporting.

55. McLean, "Early Parliamentary Reporting in Upper Canada," C.H.R., vol. XX, no. 4, p. 382, drives home this point and cites example after example. For instance, W.L. Mackenzie said of another newspaper publisher who was having difficulty finding someone to report for him in the Assembly: "He knows if he excluded the proceedings in Parliament from his paper, people would give it up." The truth of this after the Union period is equally indisputable. For example, even a small paper such as the CHATHAM JOURNAL considered parliamentary reports so important that it put out a second issue to cover them. See CHATHAM JOURNAL, 10 September 1842; another small paper, the BATHURST COURIER, wrote that: "The courier is 3s 9d. for three months, in advance. During the Session of Parliament it may be desirable," and so on. See BATHURST COURIER, 4 October 1843.

Par exemple, au cours des campagnes électorales, ou en dehors d'elles, les chansons pullulent; les candidats élus et défaits, leurs organisateurs, des professionnels, des curés, des habitants plus instruits s'évertuent à répandre leur évangile politique et social en lisant et commentant les journaux de leur choix à ceux qui ne savent pas lire."
57. They even took such direct action as leading their compatriots in armed rebellion.
58. Kesterton, A HISTORY OF JOURNALISM IN CANADA, p. 20, lists several of these well-known incidents of persecution of journalists.

60. This impression, gained from reading Lower Canadian papers' parliamentary reports from their beginning in 1792, was also noticed at the time. See, for example, McLean, "Early Parliamentary Reporting in Upper Canada," C.H.R., vol. XX, no. 4, p. 390, citing an editorial from the MONTREAL HERALD, commenting on debates as reported in the Upper Canadian papers. "Like all the journalists of that town, the editor permits his personal or political feelings to get the better of his impartiality in reporting the speeches of some members. In his respect, the debates in the House of Assembly of this province are much more fairly treated. However much the editors disagree respecting the soundness of the sentiments, or the accuracy of the facts advanced by different speakers, they reserve the expression of their approval or dissent for the editorial article. We would strongly recommend our Upper Canada contemporaries to imitate their brethren of the Lower Province in this respect."
61. MONTREAL TRANSCRIPT, 27 September 1842.
62. PILOT, 6 February 1846, for example, discusses the impossibility of any Canadian paper giving complete coverage to the debates. The problem was compounded by the lack of many dailies, which did not begin to become common until the second half of the Century. See Kesterton, A HISTORY OF JOURNALISM IN CANADA, p. 25. Before that time three times a week was about the average distribution for a large city newspaper, which meant even less space at the disposal of the editor for parliamentary debates than was to be the case when there was at least a daily paper.

But the fellows in these colonies have been spoilt by all sorts of luxuries, — large armchairs, desks with stationery before each man, and Heaven knows what — so I suppose they will complain." Sydenham to lord John Russell, Kingston, 12 June 1841, cited in G. Poulett Scrope, MEMOIR OF THE LIFE OF THE RIGHT HONOURABLE CHARLES LORD SYDENHAM, p. 234. The BATHURST COURIER of 6 July 1841 contains a description of the Parliament buildings : "The Parliament house is a moderately large stone building situated at the summit of a gentle slope towards the lake — was originally built for a provincial hospital, and is perhaps the most convenient place that could have been met with for that purpose. The interior accommodation, although necessarily contracted is more comfortable than could have been expected. In the Assembly, the benches, which look like long sofas partitioned off into seats are ranged at either end of the room, so the members at one end sit vis-a-vis to those at the other — in fact the ministerial party may conveniently sit on the right hand of the Speaker, and the opposition on the left. In the centre is the Clerk's Table, at the head of which, on a slightly elevated platform, stands the Speaker's very plain chair and writing desk."

CHAPTER V :

METHODOLOGY FOR RECONSTRUCTION : THEORY AND MODELS

SELECTING NEWSPAPERS

The first step in the production of an 1841 HANSARD is to employ all relevant information about the history, nature and techniques of Canadian parliamentary reporting to construct and elaborate a methodological model. This model must then be subjected to empirical testing, modified if necessary, and then applied to the material. The theoretical model so designed for this project is described below.

A. METHODOLOGY FOR SELECTING NEWSPAPERS TO BE USED

1. A few important motions are chosen from the JOURNALS of the Legislative Assembly. These motions fall within a relatively short period of time, never more than a few years apart. In this context, the criteria for judging a motion's "importance" are :

- a) That a debate was held on a motion. This did not always happen.
- b) That the motion was considered important by contemporaries, i.e. discussed editorially in newspapers or in private correspondence.
- c) That motions deal with matters concerning both as opposed to only one of the two Canadas. This permits comparison of parliamentary reportage in sectional and language terms as well as in terms of the factors described below in Section 4.

2. The debates on these selected motions <sup>1</sup> as reported in all available newspapers on microfilm are printed on the microfilm reader-printer. The print-offs are labelled as to source and motion, and filed by motion. The newspapers used are representative of :

- a) Upper and Lower Canada.
- b) Different sections within the province.
- c) French and English Canadians.
- d) Conservative-oriented, Reform-oriented, or independent political positions. For example, the MONTREAL GAZETTE is i) Lower Canadian ; ii) the organ of urban interests in the District of Montreal ; iii) English language ; and iv) politically Conservative.

3. The following is the list of newspapers included within the preliminary sampling for the years 1841 to 1847 inclusive.

L'AURE <sup>2</sup>

BATHURST/PERTH COURIER

BRITISH COLONIST (Toronto)
 BROCKVILLE RECORDER
 BYTOWN PACKET (Ottawa)
 LE CANADIEN (Quebec)
 CHATHAM GLEANER
 CHATHAM JOURNAL
 EXAMINER (Toronto)
 LE JOURNAL DE QUEBEC
 KINGSTON CHRONICLE AND GAZETTE
 LA MINERVE (Montreal)
 MONTREAL GAZETTE
 THE MONTREAL PILOT AND EVENING JOURNAL OF COMMERCE
 MONTREAL TRANSCRIPT
 ST. CATHARINES AND PORT ROBINSON JOURNAL
 TORONTO GLOBE
 WESTERN HERALD AND FARMERS' MAGAZINE (Sandwich)

Originally the methodology was designed to include not only newspapers on microfilm, but also those few not microfilmed but preserved in bound copies in archives and libraries. The plan called for copying the debates, and filing them as above. However, this idea was soon dropped, for several reasons. First of all, the best newspapers are already microfilmed, with the notable exception of the QUEBEC GAZETTE.<sup>3</sup> Secondly, usually papers have not been microfilmed because they survive in only a few copies or in mutilated form; for these very reasons they are equally unsatisfactory as source material for reconstructing debates.

4. The parliamentary reports selected are compared, and the newspapers in which they are found are classified in terms of the following characteristics :

- a) First or third person reporting.
- b) Frequency of parliamentary reporting, which is dependent upon how often the paper was issued, its size, and whether it gave priority to the proceedings of either the Assembly or the Legislative Council.
- c) Completeness of its parliamentary reporting.
- d) Emphasis on one person in the Assembly, i.e. Joseph Cauchon of the JOURNAL DE QUEBEC, Hincks of the PILOT.
- e) Source and originality of reports. For example, the source of most reports in the ST. CATHERINES JOURNAL in 1841 was the BRITISH COLONIST. The COLONIST's reports, on the other hand, were original to its pages until 1843. Then the COLONIST and the MONTREAL GAZETTE began to co-operate and publish identical reports.
- f) Accuracy, determined by comparison with the JOURNALS of the Assembly, and with other newspapers.
- g) Completeness of the newspaper on microfilm. For example, there existed a MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT devoted exclusively to reporting the debates. However, it is available only in fragments for short periods of time excepting the year 1846, and the years after 1858.<sup>4</sup>
- h) Possible clarification or supplemental material in commentaries separate from the actual reports of the debates.

5. Newspapers are selected for regular use in reconstructing the debates on the basis of the above eight factors. For example, it is obviously superfluous to read several newspapers falling into category 4e above. The main exception to this applies to the case of papers which contained original reports but were badly printed and are blurry. When these papers were regularly copied by provincial papers which had fewer columns per page, and used larger type, these latter papers were also used. A perfect example is the clearly printed ST. CATHERINES JOURNAL whose usual source for parliamentary news was the BRITISH COLONIST. The COLONIST is often nearly illegible, the fine print of its crammed columns having faded over the years.

6. The tests described in Sections 1 to 5 must be applied over and over again, for the validity of the original choices of newspapers changes radically within short time spans. This was because newspapers :

- a) Rose, e.g. PILOT began only in 1844.
- b) Declined, e.g. L'AUORE declined during la réaction 1844 to 1847.
- c) Died, e.g. WESTERN HERALD, 1842.
- d) Amalgamated, e.g. TORONTO EXAMINER with TORONTO GLOBE, 1855.
- e) Changed ownership, e.g. PILOT in 1849.
- f) Changed editors, e.g. Ronald Macdonald replaced Etienne Parent as editor of LE CANADIEN in 1842.
- g) Changed political affiliation, e.g. LE CANADIEN from 1844 to 1847.

7. On the basis of the above criteria, appropriate newspapers are chosen for given time spans. Every single debate reported is then printed off, taped onto file folders, catalogued by source and date, and filed by date of debate.

8. Xerox copies of the JOURNALS of the Legislative Assembly are filed with the print-offs of each day's debates.

9. Political commentaries are also printed off and filed with the motion or debate they describe. Commentaries which deal in more general terms with the activities of the Assembly are filed separately. Both these types of commentary are thus made available for use in a future methodological stage of reconstructing the debates.

DETERMINING ORDER OF SPEAKERS

B. METHODOLOGY FOR DETERMINING ORDER OF SPEAKERS IN EACH DEBATE

Determining the order of speakers in each debate is the first problem to be resolved because usually each newspaper gives a different list. The methodology established to deal with this problem has been computerized. The programme is concerned exclusively with the order of speakers. Consideration and examination of the actual texts of speeches are put aside until a later stage, and these texts are not part of the data used by the computer. The report of the programmer, below, explains the procedure of the computer. This report is elaborated further in the Sections dealing with 1) preparing data to be used; 2) the assumptions of the programme; and 3) the usage of the computer-produced lists.<sup>5</sup>

REPORT OF PROGRAMME FOR COMPILING LIST OF SPEAKERS<sup>6</sup>

The matching operation consists of two tasks.

Task 1 reads in the raw data (from cards) as reported with a slash (/) delimiter separating the names, an end (E N D) delimiter to signify the end of a report, a record-mark (or) delimiter to specify the end of a number of reports given by different newspapers for one sitting, and another record-mark to specify the end of all data (any number of sittings).

Task 2 reads in a parameter card specifying the number of newspapers reporting a certain sitting. This number of reports is then read into a two-dimensional table from the tape created in task 1. Each report occupies one row of this table. An index is then created specifying the number of names in each report (row) and the relative size of that row as compared to the other, e.g. three papers reporting.

	paper 1	paper 2	paper 3
no. of names reported	5	3	6
comparative size	2 (medium)	3 (smallest)	1 (largest)

The two largest rows are determined and a merge is attempted in the following manner : two names, i.e. name 1 from paper 1 and name 1 from paper 3 in the first instance, are compared and, if equal, that name is stored in a temporary array and the pointers of each row are then incremented (set to the next name). If the names are not equal, the pointer of the larger row is incremented and again the comparison is made and if equal, the two names, i.e. the one by-passed and the equality, are stored sequentially in the temporary array next to any names already there. If no equality is found after an arbitrary number of tries (arbitrary value is determined by the relative sizes of the rows being compared), the pointer is set back to whatever its value was before the present string of comparisons was attempted and the same procedure is carried out, only this time the pointer moves down the smaller row.

If there is still no go, the arbitrary values are multiplied by two, the pointer of the smaller row is reset, and the search sequence continues again with the pointer moving along the larger row. In the event of a name being present in each of the two rows, i.e. two different names, with no match in the other, one is arbitrarily accepted and the other is placed in no-match array. The pointers of both rows are incremented (past the two no-match items) as though an equal comparison had been made and the process continues until the end of one or both rows is reached. When the end of one row is reached before the other, the rest of the names of that other row are stored sequentially in the temporary array.

At this point all the names in the temporary array are printed out, followed by the printing of all names in the no-match array. The names in the temporary array are dumped into the largest row of the table (destroying anything that was there previously) and the index of this row is correspondingly updated.

The next largest row is determined, the pointers reset, and the process continues until all rows have been completed.

COMPUTER LISTS

C. METHODOLOGY OF PREPARING INFORMATION FOR COMPUTER, TO OBTAIN LIST OF PROBABLE ORDER IN WHICH MEMBERS SPOKE IN EACH DEBATE

The computer programme designed to establish the probable order of speakers in each debate uses forms which list the speakers in each debate as reported by all the papers consulted. These lists are prepared by copying each newspaper's list, but sometimes they are changed a little when they do not fulfil certain conditions. These lists must always be prepared consistently with the assumptions programmed into the computer. The lists, which are the only data the computer has to work with, must be corrected when discrepancies are found. (See Section D below, explaining the assumptions programmed into the computer, and the Report above, describing the techniques of the programme.) Sometimes a list for a specific debate is known to be invalid. For example, any obvious inversion of speaking order (as determined by internal evidence and comparison with other papers) is corrected before being fed into the computer, since the computer is not programmed to question or reject material, only to merge it. Tiny unimportant interjections reported in only one paper, such as : "Mr. Aylwin said 'Hear ! Hear !'", are not included in the information, because the computer would give them equal weight with speeches. Then when it sorted names it would produce a less valid list of speakers. Such interjections are noted separately and inserted manually. (See Section E below, on usage of computerized lists.) In cases where one or more newspapers have merely copied their report of a debate from another of the papers consulted, only a single list taken from the original source is fed into the computer. Under the conditions of the programme, duplication of that list would reinforce its validity, whereas in reality such duplications are nothing more than reflections on contemporary journalistic practice, and not on accuracy in parliamentary reportage.

ASSUMPTIONS OF PROGRAMME

D. ASSUMPTIONS OF PROGRAMME

All programmes proceed from a number of assumptions about the material dealt with and about the type of results expected. These assumptions, which affect both preparation of the raw data and usage of the results, are that : 1) Omissions in reporting speakers were possible. 2) Two or more speeches, even by one man on the same subject in the same debate, were never reported as one speech. 3) Reporters did not invert the order of speakers. 4) Every name mentioned in every list must be included somewhere. In the programme, if a name is not included in the context of the order of speakers, then it is specifically noted as mismatched. (See usage of computerized lists, Section E, and Report above). 5) The longest lists are most likely to give the most complete and detailed coverage of a specific debate. 6) The length of lists is determined by the number of names included in each list. This means that the credibility of a short list which may in fact be extremely thorough, but which gives only partial coverage of a debate, (e.g. the reporter did not return to the House after dinner,) is less than a somewhat longer list which actually represents a sketchier report of the entire debate. However, this same short list will reinforce the credibility of the order of speakers given by the longest list, up to the lunch period, when it is merged with the other lists. This is possible because the computer is programmed to search out identical names in sequence, and at this stage of its work does not scan any given list to see how much longer the search extends. Nor does it define the end of a list as necessarily representing the end of a debate. 7) Finally, the programme makes assumptions about the nature of the results it will produce. These results, in the form of lists, will give an order of speakers which is verisimilar rather than true, and the level of probability achieved in any one list is dependent upon the correctness of information fed into the computer. Probability, or verisimilitude, is also increased by the quality of manual manipulation of the computerized list. The latter process must attempt to reconcile scientific merging with empirical data not available to, or usable by, the computer.

USING COMPUTERIZED LISTS

E. USING COMPUTERIZED LISTS

It will be seen from the Report above that the programme produces computerized lists for each debate considered. Each list is the result of the merges described. To determine what speaking order will be accepted for a given debate, all the lists for that debate are considered. However, heaviest emphasis is placed on list 3, the product of merging the four papers giving the longest lists of speakers. The lists following, which are the result of merging smaller lists (see Report above) tend to greater mismatching of names, or redundancy, and are therefore less valid than earlier lists. However, the later lists are studied and on the basis of comparison, internal evidence, and in some cases, extra unprogrammed information not available to the computer, manual rearrangements and changes are made. Specifically, the names listed outside of the context of speaking order (mismatches) are inserted manually after their probable order is determined by comparison of lists, and by internal evidence. Interjections of the type mentioned in the Section dealing with preparation of data fed into the computer are similarly inserted. By these means a list establishing the order of speakers in each debate is produced. This final list is accepted as the most valid, in that it has been subjected to scientific and empirical criteria, and thus satisfies the objective of verisimilitude.

In the next methodological stage the list is no longer the outcome of a series of operations. Instead, each list becomes the basis and the essential guideline in an entirely different operation. It is in this next stage that the texts of the speeches are dealt with.

PREPARING TEXTS OF SPEECHES

F. METHODOLOGY FOR PREPARING TEXTS OF SPEECHES DELIVERED IN THE DEBATES

The same speech (the equality being established by the computerized lists discussed above) as reported by all the newspapers, is compared. This comparison can produce several different types of situations, each requiring a different solution.

1. The texts of the speech as reported may be identical in each newspaper. In this case, the procedure is to transcribe the text and to identify the source by the appropriate multiple references.

2. The texts of the speech as reported may be identical in each newspaper, but only because the speech as reported by one newspaper was copied by all the others consulted. In this case the text is transcribed from the paper in which it was originally reported, and the multiple references are qualified by being identified as copies of the single source.

3. The texts of the speech as reported may be very similar, deviating only in ways which in no sense change the meaning. If the evidence indicates that each paper reported the speech independently, then that speech is chosen which satisfies the following criteria :

a) It is reported in the first person.

b) It is found in a newspaper whose language is that of the speaker and has therefore not been translated.

c) It is found in a newspaper which gives political support to the speaker or the party with which the speaker usually acts.

If no text can satisfy all criteria, more reliance is placed on a) than on b) or c), and more on b) than on c).

4. The texts of the speech may be differently reported, but may agree on the type of material dealt with and the speaker's opinions on it and his interpretation of it. In this case, that speech is chosen which satisfies the following criteria :

a) It is reported in the first person.

b) The speech omits nothing mentioned in other papers and in fact is more elaborate and detailed than any of its fellows.<sup>7</sup>

c) It is found in a newspaper whose language is that of the speaker and has therefore not been translated.

d) It is found in a newspaper which expresses editorial support for the speaker or the political party with which he usually acts. If all these criteria cannot be satisfied, more emphasis is placed on criterion a) than on b) c) and d) ; more on b) than on c) and d) ; more on c) than on d). In fact, a speech reported in the first person will usually also be the most complete, detailed and accurate. In other words, if criterion a) is satisfied, it will follow almost automatically that the second criterion will also be satisfied.

5. The texts of the same speech may be reported in different papers as having encompassed entirely different material, and as having expressed opinions opposing or contradicting those reported in another paper. In this case, no one speech is selected to the exclusion of all the others : all are given. If it is possible, the speeches are divided into two or more categories, each category being defined in terms of general agreement on material and slant expressed. The speeches within each category are then subjected to the criteria used for speeches in situation 4. The most valid speeches in each category are selected accordingly and are transcribed. Any evidence found either internally or in political commentaries, which indicates that one or another version of the speech was given, is included in footnote form. Having been given all the relevant information and being familiar with the methodology followed in this project, the reader will be able to make his own judgement about the relative validity of the contradictory speeches. In practice, such contradictory reports are rare, and usually result from a reporter's honest mistake, usually in hearing. Audibility in the Gallery was not perfect, and "the whole meaning of a sentence may depend upon 'none' instead of 'one', upon 'not' or upon a verb."<sup>8</sup>

These five model situations have been described individually. Either individually or in combination they cover all the possible situations to be encountered in this stage of reconstructing the debates. The means of dealing with each individual situation have been explained. Combinations of these are dealt with by breaking the situation into components which will correspond to two or more of the situations outlined above, and then proceeding with each component problem as usual. The results are then reintegrated. For example, the texts of a speech as reported may correspond to situation 3 from the speaker's opening remarks until he expresses a strong opinion. At this point the speech may be reported in contradictory terms by different newspapers, as occurs in situation 5. To reconstruct the speech, that part which corresponds to situation 3 is handled as in model 3. Similarly, the latter part of the speech is dealt with as in the model of situation 5. The two parts of the speech are then appropriately reintegrated to produce a verisimilar reconstruction of the historical reality.

It is evident that in a work such as this reconstruction, the human factor is as important as the abstract theory, for no amount of methodological logic can guarantee an adequate implementation. There is also the problem of flaws and limitations within the available material itself. To deal with these problems, many checks and revisions are incorporated into the reconstruction process on the practical level. These checks, added to experience and familiarity in dealing with the material, help to ensure accuracy of work procedures. The inadequacies in the actual source material, the newspapers, constitute a more serious problem. To some extent its effects can be minimized by setting out in detail precisely what kind of flaws are inherent in the material, what difficulties are encountered in implementing the methodology, and then by explaining how these problems are resolved. Working the models is as crucial as designing them, and the result of their successful operation is a verisimilar reconstruction of the debates of the Canadian Parliament.

Footnotes — Chapter V.

1. The debates of 13 and 16 September 1842 satisfy the criteria of Section A 1, a), b), c), and are therefore used in selection of newspapers. The debates deal with the issue of Governor Bago's reconstruction of the Executive Council in 1842.

2. Unfortunately the microfilm of L'AUORE was not received in time to include it in the selection of papers used for reconstructing the 1841 debates, though it was used for the following years. However, its debates were consulted for 1841 just for reference, and they are very rarely anything more than commentaries on the debates, though often excellent commentaries. The AUORE's parliamentary reporting technique was not designed to give details of what an individual member had said.

4. See CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS ON MICROFILM CATALOGUE, "Per I: Canada. Parliament. Debates," which includes a complete copy of the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT for 1846, a fairly good not excellent account of the debates for 1846, noticeably deficient on speeches delivered in French; and scrapbooks put together from newspapers such as THOMPSON'S MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT, QUEBEC CHRONICLE, TORONTO GLOBE, TORONTO COLONIST, OTTAWA TIMES, TORONTO MAIL, QUEBEC DAILY NEWS, and QUEBEC MERCURY which are supposed to present an account of the debates for the years 1854 to 1874. In fact, the scrapbooks are hastily contrived and give only one newspaper account of each debate, and are not always complete.

5. This programme was designed on the basis of lists of speakers from newspapers reporting the debates of 13 and 16 September 1842. These are the same debates used in an earlier methodological stage to select newspapers for use, as they satisfied the criteria laid down in Section A 1, a), b), c).

CHAPTER VI :

METHODOLOGY FOR RECONSTRUCTION : WORKING THE MODELS

NEWSPAPERS AVAILABLE

When the models elaborated in the preceding Chapter were applied to the available source material, the discrepancies between ideal and real were immediately apparent. These discrepancies were never profound enough to invalidate the procedure or the project, but they do require explanation. The first problems arose with the implementation of the first methodological step, the selection of newspapers as sources for parliamentary reports. After the procedures described in Section A of the methodological model had been strictly applied, the following newspapers were chosen for reconstructing the debates for 1841 : KINGSTON CHRONICLE, BRITISH CALONIST, ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL, MONTREAL GAZETTE, WESTERN HERALD, LE CANADIEN, EXAMINER and BATHURST COURIER. In later years there were many more than eight suitable newspapers available, but in 1841 several newspapers had not yet resumed publication after being suspended during the Rebellions. Others had been permanently silenced. This was particularly true in Lower Canada. In addition, other excellent papers such as the PILOT, LE JOURNAL DE QUEBEC and the TORONTO GLOBE were only founded later in response to the politico/journalistic needs of the new Union régime.<sup>1</sup> Therefore the newspapers used for 1841 are not as varied as those used for the years following, and they do not adequately represent French Canadian interests and perspectives. Nevertheless, they do provide parliamentary coverage wide-ranging enough and competently enough produced to be used to compile a decent reconstruction. In the following table these eight newspapers are described in terms of categories A 2 and A 4 of the methodological model.

The characteristics of the newspapers are described in this tabular format for easy reference. However, the convenience of neat categories is marred by the fact that they are sometimes misleading, and therefore should be explained in more depth than such a table can contain.

The first point to be made is that Canadian parliamentary reporting was "not so much of a science" as its English model.<sup>2</sup> As a result, reporters were often quite unsystematic in their work, in particular about the vehicle they employed to present debates. Inconsistency was so much the key to their policy that none reported exclusively in the third or the first person. The MONTREAL GAZETTE had an even different reporting style. Its third person reporting was usually so far removed from the person reported that the result was less an attempt at reporting the speaker's words than presenting an analysis of his ideas within the format of the orthodox third person reporting style. As the table shows, speeches were sometimes reported in the first person. Certain of these speeches must be regarded with the suspicion that they had simply been handed to a willing reporter by the member speaking.<sup>3</sup> Such speeches were invariably polished, corrected and greatly improved. They were not even necessarily recognizable as the speech delivered to the Assembly. Fortunately, the speeches in this category are readily distinguishable because of their exceptionally splendid style, and so they can be viewed with an appropriately inferred suspicion, and used accordingly.

Another category which should be explained is that in which the completeness of each paper's reports is graded. Even papers described as excellent in this respect occasionally omitted entire debates from their parliamentary reports. There were many reasons for these omissions. Sometimes the reporters found debates boring or repetitive, and instead of reporting them they would content themselves with such remarks as, "It would be impossible and impracticable to attempt to give even an outline of the interminable remarks which were made upon the various items as they were brought before the consideration of the House,"<sup>4</sup> and "It is impossible to give you even an outline of the debate, which was exceedingly long and exceedingly tedious."<sup>5</sup> Or reporters might note that "After many hours wasted in reiterating the pros and cons of former discussion...."<sup>6</sup> a certain division had been taken, or a piece of legislation had been passed or defeated or postponed.

Another reason for omitting debates or parts of debates was that certain speakers were impossible to hear. Denis-Benjamin Viger, for instance, was probably the most unreported speaker in the House; time after time reporters noted that he spoke but that they could not hear him.<sup>7</sup> Even the active parliamentarian Robert Baldwin could not always be heard or understood. One reporter readily admitted this.

M.P.	Origin of Reports	Accuracy	Completeness of paper on microfilm	Amount of commentary on debates, and its usefulness	Average Number of Columns devoted to Assembly Each Issue	Coverage given to Legislative Council
	Original	A	Very	B	6	Seldom
	Original	A	Very	B	5 to 6	Quite regularly
n Hamilton	Copied	A	Very	C plus	5	Very seldom ain Holmes, Moffatt, R. Ogden	Original	A	Very	A	1½ to an entire page	Occasionally
ohn Prince	Copied	A	Very	C plus	4	Only on special occasions

s Hincks	Some original, some copied	A	Very	A	7 to 8	Very regularly and fully lm Cameron, sometimes m Morris	Copied	A	Very	C plus	4	Irregularly

I take this opportunity of stating, that I have often been prevented from reporting the speeches of both Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Viger, because it is impossible to hear them. They stand with their backs to the reporters' box — and they both speak in a low tone of voice. This, added to, the imperfect pronunciation of Mr. Viger, renders it impossible catch what he says.<sup>8</sup>

From time to time even the most fluent and skilled debaters went unreported. We read that "Mr. Christie spoke in favour of the Resolution but could not be heard in the Reporter's (sic) gallery,"<sup>9</sup> and that "Mr. Aylwin put a question to Mr. Harrison, but from the noise and impatience of the House, we could not catch it."<sup>10</sup>

Another serious problem was that in Canada, the Galleries were often cleared.<sup>11</sup> The exercise of the ancient privilege of "spying strangers" frequently prevented reporters from reporting debates or part of debates. Canadian parliamentary reports are larded with complaints on this score.

The house was cleared so often ... that it is altogether impossible to give any thing connected of (sic) the proceedings. As a garbled statement therefore could be of no service to your readers, I shall merely give you the on dits and such cursory remarks, as the occasional and momentary audiences permitted ... would admit of.<sup>12</sup>

Another reporter complained that "As the house monopolized the discussion by closing the doors, no particulars can be given."<sup>13</sup> Another explained that "The house sat in session this day till within a short period of adjournment, with closed doors ; the reporters being excluded, as well as the public, from the proceedings."<sup>14</sup> On the other hand, sometimes the reporters were absent from the House on their own initiative. We are told that "Mr. Dunn ... addressed the House, and we sincerely regret that there was no reporter...."<sup>15</sup> On another occasion "Mr. Baldwin was unfortunately not noted down.”<sup>16</sup> Once “the Reporters’ box was deserted during the greater part of the evening.”<sup>17</sup>

Another of the most common reasons for a reporter to omit a debate from his parliamentary report was simply that it was too long to include in the paper’s limited column space. When this was the case, the reporter would usually apologize for not being able to give a detailed report. “The hon. member went at great length into the question, and we regret that our limits forbid our transcribing the whole,” he might say.<sup>18</sup>

The last category in the table which needs to be explained more fully is that indicating whether a paper provided its own parliamentary reports or borrowed them from other papers. The table notes that three newspapers simply copied their reports. The ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL almost invariably printed reports edited from the BRITISH COLONIST, occasionally adding a speech of William Hamilton Merritt’s probably contributed by Merritt himself.<sup>19</sup> The WESTERN HERALD also copied its reports, but apparently preferred to eclecticize rather than to rely on any one paper. Its reports were often collations from widely divergent sources, including papers of very different political persuasion. The BATHURST COURIER was the third paper which contained borrowed parliamentary reports, usually drawn from the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, the MONTREAL GAZETTE, the EXAMINER or the BRITISH COLONIST. In addition to these extracts, however, the COURIER had a parliamentary correspondent named “Watchman” or “Watch ‘Em” who often contributed commentaries, and sometimes Malcolm Cameron and William Morris would send letters exclusive to the COURIER in which they described individual speeches or parliamentary events in general.<sup>20</sup>

These three newspapers, the ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL, the BATHURST COURIER and the WESTERN HERALD, were purposefully included in our selection. The JOURNAL was chosen because it printed faithful reproductions of the BRITISH COLONIST’s reports, and occasionally it can be used instead of the COLONIST which is often very difficult to read. Of course this is done only when the COLONIST is particularly illegible, and only after careful verification to see that there are no omissions in the passages used. The COLONIST is never too illegible to check whether or not the JOURNAL edited its reports. The PERTH COURIER and the WESTERN HERALD were consulted for different reasons. They printed parliamentary reports collated from what we may suppose they considered the best sources available. Thus they provide a kind of check that our reconstruction is not missing out on debates from papers or single issues which have not been preserved.<sup>21</sup>

The other five papers are much more original, though LE CANADIEN usually relied on translating other papers, particularly the KINGSTON CHRONICLE. Apparently LE CANADIEN only made special arrangements to report debates which concerned Lower Canada. When the session first opened, the EXAMINER printed many of its own reports, but later on in 1841 its debates were increasingly copied from the KINGSTON CHRONICLE. The most consistently original, and in most ways the best papers, were the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, the BRITISH COLONIST and the MONTREAL GAZETTE. Each of these had its own reporter, and seldom needed to co-operate with, or copy from another paper. Our selection of newspapers ranges from almost completely original papers to those which merely copied and collated their reports. In addition, it includes gradations within each category which the table cannot describe.

ORDER OF SPEAKERS

The second step in the methodological model is to establish the order of speakers in each debate. The necessity for carefully preparing lists for the computer has been emphasized. The importance of this aspect of the methodology becomes obvious when the attempt is made to actually put the theory into practice. Often accounts of debates were designed not to give the actual order in which the speakers rose but to summarize their ideas. Usually this was accomplished by categorizing all the pro speeches and all the con speeches, and dealing with them within these categories. This was a not uncommon reportorial technique; examples of it are plentiful. "A debate ensued. Messrs. Viger, Neilson and Baldwin spoke against the Bill ... Messrs. Harrison, Dr. Dunlop and Hincks spoke in favour of the bill."<sup>22</sup> "Col. Prince, Sir A. Macnab, Messrs. Small, Neilson and Morin, were conspicuous in support of the resolution. Messrs. Thorburn, Merritt, Aylwin, and Hincks in opposition to it."<sup>23</sup> "A long debate ensued on this motion which was resisted by Sir Allan McNab, Mr. Duggan, Mr. Aylwin and Mr. Thorburn, and supported by Messrs. Baldwin, Small, Steele, Williams and Hincks."<sup>24</sup> In all these cases the reporters classified the speeches according to their content rather than the order of their delivery. Each list is therefore almost useless for determining speaking order.

Fortunately, reporters usually presented their material via traditional techniques and the lists of speakers produced by these orthodox methods are easy to use though there are certain exceptional cases. For example, a debate was reported in the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, 10 July 1841, in the BRITISH COLONIST, 14 July 1841, and in the WESTERN HERALD, 21 July 1841. This same debate was also reported by the MONTREAL GAZETTE of 9 July 1841. However, the GAZETTE's lists of speakers, consisting only of three Lower Canadian members, does not coincide with any of the other reports. Therefore it is impossible to determine the probable speaking order by following the usual procedure of merging all the lists. Instead, all the lists except the MONTREAL GAZETTE's were merged, and a list produced. The GAZETTE's list was simply appended to the other. There is no internal evidence to either justify or invalidate this list; it is purely arbitrary.

There is one last point in the procedure for establishing speaking order which should be further explained. This is the part dealing with remarks interjected into speeches, and usually reported in only a few papers. These interjections, usually placed within another man's speech in parentheses, are a common feature of parliamentary reporting. In the reconstructed debates, the parentheses are usually omitted and the remarks stand as a regular part of the text separate from the speech they interrupted. Their author is identified whenever possible. This format is used because according to our methodology, all words spoken in the House in the course of a debate are judged to be a legitimate part of that debate.<sup>25</sup> Only such interjections as "hear, hear," and "no, no," are left in parentheses within a speech because in traditional parliamentary reporting, "hear, hear," and "no, no," are used to describe the mood of the House and are seldom transcripts of members' actual remarks. Therefore they are different from other interjections. In rare instances, too, interjections are reported outside of their context and in such a way that they cannot be inserted in the text. Then they are included in footnotes instead.<sup>26</sup>

SELECTING AND FOOTNOTING TEXTS

In section F of the methodology, five models for texts were given, and the various footnoting techniques were described. In practice, when the models are applied to newspapers texts, certain discrepancies between theory and reality appear. The first of these involves identical speeches. These do not really exist in the newspapers. The borrower always made small alterations as he transferred the words from one paper to his own. Nevertheless we treat reports as "identical" if the words are almost identical, though the punctuation, paragraphing and capitalizing may be somewhat different. For example, we describe debates in the KINGSTON CHRONICLE of 15 September 1841 and the MONTREAL GAZETTE of 17 September 1841 as identical though the GAZETTE's opening remarks read : "I take this opportunity of stating, that I have often been prevented from reporting the speeches of both Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Viger because it is impossible to hear them," and the KINGSTON CHRONICLE's version begins : "We take this opportunity of stating that we have often been prevented...."

Even when this problem of definition has been resolved, another crops up. It is often difficult to determine the original source of identical reports. Wherever the common source is known, it is given in a footnote. When it is merely inferred, the inference is explained and the supporting evidence is presented. In cases where the source is not given and there is not sufficient evidence to make any inferences, the only fact noted is that reports are identical. Of course the methodological model nowhere mentions the inference-making process. The model was designed primarily as a scientific tool, whereas inferring information is one aspect of reconstructing the debates which cannot be governed by rigidly defined rules. In addition, all inferred information is given only in footnotes ; it is a valuable supplement to the reconstruction rather than an essential part of it. The validity of each inference may be judged on the basis of the evidence available, and the reasoning applied to that evidence, and may then be used accordingly.

It has already been stated that there are no absolute rules for inferring one fact rather than another. However, there are guidelines. For example, the original source of identical reports is not necessarily that newspaper which first published the report. There are several other possibilities. Two reports could have been copied from a third report which is no longer extant. Reporters could have collaborated. Seat of Government papers, being the most favourably located, could often be issued first though they were not necessarily the original or sole source for the reports they contained. Each of these alternatives was at one time or another the correct explanation. An example of how one conclusion rather than another is inferred from the evidence is drawn from a debate on taxing imported produce, which took place on 4 September 1841. This debate was reported by the BRITISH COLONIST and the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, both issued on 8 September 1841. The KINGSTON CHRONICLE contained only four speeches. Of these, one was identical to a speech in the BRITISH COLONIST ; one was identical but longer ; two others were not reported by the BRITISH COLONIST at all. In this case the evidence indicates co-operation between the reporters of the CHRONICLE and the COLONIST.

Another example is the debate on the Bank of Issue which occurred on 3 September 1841. This debate was reported by the EXAMINER, 8 September, LE CANADIEN, 8 September, the BRITISH COLONIST, 8 September, the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, 8 September, the MONTREAL GAZETTE, 10 September, and the EXAMINER, 15 September. The KINGSTON CHRONICLE, MONTREAL GAZETTE and the EXAMINER all contained identical reports of this debate which they misdated Saturday 4 September instead of Friday 3 September. The EXAMINER copied its report from the CHRONICLE, using only thirteen speeches and omitting the rest. The CHRONICLE and the GAZETTE reported the same number of speeches, and the speeches were usually identical, except that occasionally one speech was shorter in one paper. Sometimes the CHRONICLE had a longer version of a speech, sometimes the GAZETTE. Also, the order of speakers was not quite the same in the two papers. The reason that some, but not all, the speeches are identical, is probably that the reporters from the two papers co-operated by taking turns copying speeches and taking notes during their lunch and break periods, and worked independently at other times. The possibility exists that one paper merely copied its report from the columns of the other as was frequently the case.<sup>27</sup> However, in this specific instance all the evidence indicates that co-operation between reporters is the reasonable explanation. The other alternative is that only one reporter handled the entire debate, but this is not likely because the debate was one of exceptional length and the usual alignments of reporters and newspapers militates against that possibility. There is a final possibility, the idea that the different reporters coincidentally reported certain speeches in identical words, but this is not even seriously considered because in non-verbatim reporting it is so unlikely as to be impossible.

Sometimes it is impossible to infer anything from the evidence. For example, the EXAMINER and the BRITISH COLONIST, both of 25 August 1841, reported a debate on the Upper Canada District Council Bill very similarly except that the EXAMINER reported Cartwright's speech differently, and listed only Cartwright, Buchanan and Hincks as speakers. The probable explanation for this is not readily suggested by the information available. Consequently the facts are stated, and no attempt is made to draw any conclusions from them.

Probably the most important and most copied source for parliamentary reports in 1841 was the KINGSTON CHRONICLE. For example, a debate on the Administration of Justice in Gaspé, of 7 July 1841, was reported by the MONTREAL GAZETTE, 20 July, the EXAMINER, 14 July, and LE CANADIEN 16 and 19 July. All these reports were identical to each other and to the KINGSTON CHRONICLE of 10 July. In this particular instance the evidence indicates not co-operation, but rather copying from one source. This conclusion is based on the evidence described, on the fact that the EXAMINER and LE CANADIEN were in the habit of copying from the CHRONICLE, and on the assumption that the MONTREAL GAZETTE, a daily, would not have waited so long after the event to publish a report its reporter had either reported or helped to report.

JOURNALS : RULES AND REGULATIONS

The resolution of the problems of selecting and collating texts from newspapers is by no means the final stage of the reconstruction. The next step is to integrate the texts into the JOURNALS in the most appropriate way. This integration is somewhat complicated because the JOURNALS did not refer to the debates through which legislative decisions were made. The JOURNALS were designed only to describe the official proceedings of the House, the results as opposed to the intermediate stages of the deliberative process. Consequently the RULES AND REGULATIONS of the Assembly assume an immediate and direct importance for this project because they dictate the procedure followed in Parliament as well as the format of the JOURNALS.<sup>28</sup> The JOURNALS are the unchanging framework within which the collated debates are integrated and so it is essential to know what rules determined their format and content.

For the first few days of its life the Union Parliament struggled along without any official rules until "the obstructions by which the regularity of the house was continually interrupted in the absence of rules for its guidance...."<sup>29</sup> convinced the members to adopt the RULES AND REGULATIONS of pre-Union Lower Canada as a temporary expedient. At the same time a Committee was established to recommend rules appropriate for the new regime. On the 19th of June the new rules and regulations were ordered printed.<sup>30</sup> Those rules governing the JOURNALS and debates which are pertinent to the collated work are outlined, and their effects on the reconstruction of the debates are explained.

In general, the JOURNALS were supposed to record all legislative activity incorporated into formally worded motions and resolutions. The format was the traditional format of all the colonial JOURNALS. The RULES AND REGULATIONS added other instructions, some of which directly affected the debates.

The first important point involves divisions. Divisions were not to be recorded in the JOURNALS unless two members so requested.<sup>31</sup> This is quite understandable; in the English Parliament divisions were systematically and automatically recorded only in 1836.<sup>32</sup> As a result of this policy we are often dependent upon newspapers for this information about divisions. However, complete and accurate division lists were very difficult to report, as the reporters constantly explained to their readers. "This ... was carried — yeas 31, nays 14. — As the yeas and nays were not taken we are unable to give all the names of the majority, but as the House remained divided for some time, we jotted down the minority, which we publish as an act of justice to those gentlemen...."<sup>33</sup> Another reporter wrote "We regret the yeas and nays were not taken, that the country might know who the opponents of the Bill are."<sup>34</sup> The newspaper division lists were not very reliable. When the same divisions happened to be included in the JOURNALS there were often discrepancies between the two accounts. These should probably be attributed to errors on the part of the reporters. The House Clerk had better facilities for making his records and so presumably made correspondingly fewer errors.

There is one last point to be mentioned about divisions. Sometimes newspapers did not give the complete division but merely provided commentary about it. This commentary is included in our footnotes. For example, the EXAMINER reported that on one issue "It may be proper to observe that Mr. Parke subsequently declared that his vote had been given in consequence of an informality in the resolution which was afterwards amended, and that he was in favour of it."<sup>35</sup> Wherever possible the JOURNALS are supplemented in respect to divisions, but this additional information is often unreliable and should be used cautiously.

The JOURNALS must also be heavily supplemented by newspaper reports in the area of private bills and petitions. Private bills introduced by petition could not be presented in printed form.<sup>36</sup> Therefore most petitions, unless they were singled out for study by a Committee, were identified in the JOURNALS not by content, but by the name of their authors and the members presenting them. As a consequence, information about petitions is sometimes scarce. Reporters had to rely on their hearing to describe most of the material, having no printed copy to consult. They frequently made errors when they described petitions, and even more frequently they omitted information.

A third subject which was not recorded in the JOURNALS was notice of motions and resolutions to be proposed, questions to be asked, and documents to be requested from government officers. Twenty-four hours notice was required, and apparently this rule was broken only when the Executive agreed.<sup>37</sup> When members gave this notice of their legislative intentions, only the newspapers noted the event. In the case of questions and answers, neither the notice nor its implementation were recorded in the JOURNALS.

One of the most significant rules governing the format of the JOURNALS concerns the widest field of all, motions. Before being debated or put, motions had to be submitted in writing and seconded, minus their preambles, then read in English and French by the Speaker. Once a motion was read, it was in the possession of the House. However, with the House's permission, it could be withdrawn or amended.<sup>38</sup> Practically, this meant that withdrawn motions, even those which had engendered lengthy debates, do not appear anywhere in the JOURNALS. Similarly, amended motions are recorded only in their new forms. In all these cases, the reconstructed debates are dependent upon newspaper accounts to fill in a great many of the lacunae left in the JOURNALS' account of legislative proceedings.

There is one last point to be noticed. The hour and members present at adjournment were noted only when a quorum was lacking.<sup>39</sup> Therefore in the case of normal sittings this information is not available unless a newspaper happened to give it.

The few RULES AND REGULATIONS discussed above affected the format of the JOURNALS. However, for the most part these RULES AND REGULATIONS dealt with actual parliamentary procedure. The rules which help to explain the reconstructed debates and rules which created problems for parliamentary reporters are discussed. To begin, the House was supposed to meet at two in the afternoon.<sup>40</sup> This rule was disregarded, however, and sittings often began at ten in the morning and continued until late into the night. These protracted sittings made the reporters' task more difficult since Canadian reporters worked individually and had to make private arrangements for relief, or else had to omit material whenever they could not be present in the House. Another frequently practiced rule permitted members to exercise their traditional privilege of having the Galleries cleared whenever any individual member so desired.<sup>41</sup> This meant that reporters were arbitrarily excluded from the House whenever a member "spied strangers". The consequences of empty Galleries on parliamentary reports have already been discussed in detail.

Several rules outlined how members must conduct themselves during debates. Members were to speak more than once on a question only when it was considered essential that they explain misconceptions arising from their original speech.<sup>42</sup> They were not permitted to present new material in a second speech. They were also forbidden to interrupt each other.<sup>43</sup> In practice, however, both these two rules were often enough broken, and were lapses from parliamentary propriety on the part of members and not errors in reporting. Another rule governing conduct in debate was that only in Committee of the Whole House were members permitted to speak more than once on a question. This was the sole exception to the rule that ordinary House rules obtained in Committees of the whole House as well as in the House.<sup>44</sup>

A brief outline of certain other rules explains the most important features of Canadian parliamentary procedure, and also makes the reconstruction easier to understand and to use. Aid and supply bills always had to be adjourned to the Committee of the Whole House, whose opinion had to be taken before any resolution or vote could be passed.<sup>45</sup> All public bills had to be introduced by motion to leave, specifying the title of the bill, or introduced by motion to appoint a Committee to prepare and bring in the bill, or by an order of the House on the Report of a Committee.<sup>46</sup> No bill was to be committed or amended until it had achieved second reading,<sup>47</sup> and except for emergencies each of a bill's three readings was to occur on different days.<sup>48</sup> Members introducing a bill, motion or petition on a subject were automatically to be included on any Special Committee appointed to study that subject.<sup>49</sup> The last rule of interest for this project was that orders of the day took priority over all other motions before the House.<sup>50</sup> The above are the most important of the rules regulating the daily proceedings in the House. The next step is to explain how, in view of the JOURNALS' format and the rules of debate and procedure, the reconstructed debates are integrated into the JOURNALS' text.

INTEGRATING TEXTS

Distinguishing the two different texts is simple; the left margin of each reconstructed text is always printed an inch to the left of the text from the JOURNALS. The difficulties arise in the physical integration of these texts with each other. The JOURNALS of 1841 only once record that "debates arose" upon a motion.<sup>51</sup> In that one case, of course, it is a simple thing to integrate the reconstructed debates into the JOURNALS. Otherwise the JOURNALS seldom provide the format for a graceful transition. The criteria for integrating collated debates into the official text are three: 1) that the resulting text be as clear as possible; 2) that the JOURNALS remain unaltered; and 3) that repetitious and distracting explanatory information be eliminated. The third point is important because the texts of the official JOURNALS and the reconstructed debates must be distinguished from each other; to make a third distinction for a category including commentaries and explanation would be far more confusing than helpful. These are the general guidelines. Specifically, there are six common formats in the JOURNALS into which the debates are routinely integrated. Each of these formats is described below.

The first of the JOURNALS' usual formats describes the proceedings of the House in Committee of the Whole. As prescribed in the RULES AND REGULATIONS, Mr. Speaker appoints a Chairman to replace him as arbiter of the House. The JOURNALS usually describe this by noting that:

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to ... being read,
The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.
Mr. X took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,
Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.<sup>52</sup>

The reconstructed debate is inserted between the phrase "Mr. X took the chair of the Committee" and "after some time spent therein", because the debate began after the Chairman replaced Mr. Speaker, and it concluded when after "some time" of unspecified length Mr. Speaker again resumed his normal House duties.

When a Resolution was made, the JOURNALS usually read:

On motion of Mr. X, seconded by Mr. Y.

Resolved — That....

Ordered — That....<sup>53</sup>

In this format, the debate is inserted between the "Resolved" and the "Ordered". This is a format which lends itself to having debates collated into its text.

Resolutions were also recorded in two other, more difficult, formats. The first one reads :

On motion of Mr. X, seconded by Mr. Y,

Resolved — That....<sup>54</sup>

The debate is added onto this Resolution because the text is more easily understood if we know the actual wording of the motion which engendered the debate.

Similarly, when the entire text says only that

On motion of Mr. X, seconded by Mr. Y,

Ordered — That....<sup>55</sup>

Here the debate is also added after the Resolution agreed upon is described. In these two cases the format of the JOURNALS is particularly unsuitable for gracefully collating debates into its text.

The sixth common format presents no such problems. It reads :

Mr. X moved, seconded by Mr. Y,

That....

The question being then put upon the motion, it was agreed to ((or negatived)) by the House.<sup>56</sup>

The text reads easily after the debate is inserted between the description of the motion and the division on it.

These six models are the most common in the JOURNALS. All other formats which do not fit into these six categories are decided individually. The principles upon which each such decision is based have already been elaborated. The JOURNALS must not be altered in any way ; each debate should follow very clearly from the official text ; and distracting explanatory material should be eliminated as much as possible. Eliminating such material may lead to some awkward transitions between the text of the JOURNALS and the collated debates. More significantly, it also achieves a very important goal. It avoids confusing any reader who is familiar with those RULES AND REGULATIONS which describe relevant procedural matters and the format of the official JOURNALS. Of course it is not always possible to exclude material from newspapers though it duplicates material in the JOURNALS. Sometimes excising such material produces a text which is too truncated to be easily understood.

FOOTNOTING TECHNIQUES

The technique for footnoting the collated debates is another point which should be discussed in some detail because the footnotes do more than identify the sources from which material is drawn. The footnotes also explain any variations in the methodology, and give certain details useful for understanding the debates. There are five main rules for footnotes. 1) The transcribed text of each speaker's words is identified. When alternate texts are presented, the sources for each text are given. When a single speech has been reconstructed from reports in more than one newspaper, the source of each specific portion of the speech is identified. Whenever possible the individual reporter is also identified : for example, Henry Fowler, publisher of the MIRROR OF PARLIAMENT, was named as the reporter of the KINGSTON CHRONICLE's debates of 10 July 1841. However, reporters were rarely mentioned by name, and it is only for later years that information about individual reporters on each paper is available.<sup>57</sup> 2) All alternate sources which have been consulted but not selected are noted, except for those papers which relied upon copying the JOURNALS for their account of a day's proceedings. 3) Commentaries on the debate in question are noted. In cases where such commentaries furnish material of exceptional interest, they are transcribed verbatim rather than merely indicated as items for possible reference. 4) The footnotes include any additional information explaining the methodology adopted to deal with situations which do not conform to any of the models described. 5) One of this project's fundamental assumptions is that the JOURNALS' account of proceedings was correct though not necessarily complete. However, there are occasional discrepancies between the JOURNALS and newspaper reports. These discrepancies are always noted. For example, sometimes the names of movers and seconders are different in the newspapers and the JOURNALS. In these cases the names cited by the newspaper are listed in a footnote.

SUBJECTIVE MATERIAL

The methodology has been designed to produce the most objective and verisimilar account of the debates possible. However, the objectivity of the methodology applies only to the process of selecting materials. It cannot always deal with the subjectivity inherent in certain material by simply omitting it, because sometimes this subjective material is all the information that exists about a certain debate. In addition, sometimes it is also constructed in such a way that it is impossible to excise its subjective elements. There are several types of this sort of subjective material. For example, we read on page 522 of the JOURNALS for 1841 that "At half past 10 o'clock at night, Mr. Speaker adjourned the House for want of a Quorum." This account is very uninformative compared with the newspaper report that "Messrs. Aylwin and Cameron now got extremely disorderly — many took advantage of this, and slipped off, leaving the House without a quorum...."<sup>58</sup> This is unquestionably a subjective piece of reporting, but it should be included in the text for its informational value. At the same time, it has to be included just as it is cited above, because if it is ellipsized it will no longer make sense.

Another common type of subjective report resulted from the reportorial habit of noting that a certain member had spoken, but giving little more than innuendoes rather than factual details about the substance of his speech. The BRITISH COLONIST used this technique more often than any other Canadian paper in 1841. For example, a speech of Mr. Baldwin's "was a repetition of former disagreeable excrescences on the bill....";<sup>59</sup> "Mr. Viger went on in his old strain about opposition, tyranny, injustice, robbery,";<sup>60</sup> "Mr. Draper very composedly swept away the whole fabric, which had been set up in opposition to the bill....";<sup>61</sup> "Mr. Berthelot bawled and tired the patience of the house as usual,";<sup>62</sup> "Some angry personalities were bandied, and some hints given to Sir Allan McNab, of his seeking after popularity at a sacrifice, perhaps, of some little principle,";<sup>63</sup> "After many wearying repetitions of former opinions, and a confused discussion....";<sup>64</sup> "Suffice it to say that Sir Allan was as bitter as ever, in his attempts to obstruct the bill which Col. Prince defended....";<sup>65</sup> "Mr. Attorney-General Ogden spoke to the Resolutions, and contributed not a little to the impaling of that unfortunate gentleman, Mr. Baldwin."<sup>66</sup> As much of the biased material is omitted as can be without ruining the sense of the speech; what remains must be used in the same way as any other subjective material.

Another reporting technique which often injected subjective elements into otherwise objective reports was the custom of reporting in the third rather than the first person. This necessitated introducing each speaker's words as having been "said", "stated", "remarked", "objected", and the literary consideration that each speaker be introduced by a different word led to much subjectivity. For example, "Mr. Neilson explained....";<sup>67</sup> "Mr. Buchanan thought....";<sup>68</sup> "Mr. Hale observed that....";<sup>69</sup> "Dr. Kimber's remarks were chiefly directed against....";<sup>70</sup> "Mr. Sherwood concurred with....";<sup>71</sup> "Mr. Hincks could not agree....";<sup>72</sup> "Mr. Boswell hoped....";<sup>73</sup> "Mr. Durand here rose to correct any impression that might have been formed from the vote...."<sup>74</sup> This need to introduce each text individually led inevitably to the introduction of the reporter's personality into his report. This is always one of the many disadvantages of third person reporting. Occasionally a reporter attempted to avoid such connotative introductory words though he continued to report in the third person. Then he usually resorted to rather ambiguous language such as "Mr. Moffatt had heard a great deal about responsible government."<sup>75</sup> Of course we can infer that Mr. Moffatt's actual words were "I have heard a great deal about responsible government," or words to that effect, but we cannot be certain, and so we cannot reword the speech.

There was another common reporting technique in which emotionally slanted material completely replaced factual data. For example, "This roused again some of those susceptible gentlemen, who have taken upon themselves the sole charge of our free existence."<sup>76</sup> Only by leaving in this very biased report can we tentatively identify which speakers spoke next; experience tells us whom the BRITISH COLONIST would describe in this way. Similarly, "Some warmth of feeling was exhibited between some of the Bankers—".<sup>77</sup> This too is a less than objective account of the proceedings, yet only by leaving it intact can we identify the KINGSTON CHRONICLE's Bankers. In the collated work these slanted and emotionally charged reports are easily spotted. Consequently, once the reason for including them is clear, it is possible to derive maximum use of them while judging them on the same basis as any other biased document.

APPENDICES

The Appendices to each day's proceedings are entirely supplementary to the JOURNALS and must be carefully explained. Nothing in the Appendices is recorded in the JOURNALS. The content of the Appendices is threefold: 1) notices of proposed motions, petitions, bills; 2) the debates on withdrawn motions; and 3) questions and answers. Substantial parts of the Appendices consist of notices of proposed measures. Debates on withdrawn motions are much more interesting because they appear nowhere in any official record, whereas the measures of which notice was routinely given appear later in the JOURNALS as a normal part of the legislative activity. However, debates on withdrawn motions were often fully reported in the newspapers. The reporters did not know until the actual event that a motion would be withdrawn and so their accounts of the debate were already prepared when the motion was withdrawn or ruled out of order. Their newspapers usually printed the debates on these aborted motions as fully as any others, provided they had been interesting. Under any circumstances, newspapers had little inclination and no time to edit their reporters' notes, and so in the final analysis it was the reporter who determined what reports were published. After painstakingly recording a debate, no reporter would care to toss his notes away just because the original motion had been withdrawn or overruled.

The third category in the Appendices is for questions and answers. "Of all British parliamentary devices, Question Time has probably been more praised than any other," writes one parliamentary expert.<sup>78</sup> Despite their importance, questions and answers were not recorded in the JOURNALS unless they were incorporated into a formal motion or address. All questions and answers reported in the newspapers are included in the Appendix for the appropriate day.

MISCELLANEOUS DATA

Finally, certain small and miscellaneous technical points should be explained. 1) The spelling of speakers' names at the opening of each individual speech has been standardized, and each name is printed in bold face type.<sup>79</sup> Changes from the spelling in the newspaper cited are not noted. The names most commonly misspelled in newspapers are McNab, Macnab, M'Nab instead of MacNab; Johnson instead of Johnston; Simson instead of Simpson; Doran instead of Durand; and Vigar instead of Viger. All spelling of names within a speech is left unchanged, however. 2) Whenever a speaker is noted as having delivered his speech in French or in English, this fact is noted. For example, "Mr. Turcotte (En Français)...."<sup>80</sup> and "Mr. Viger, (in French),...."<sup>81</sup> whether or not there exists a report of the speech in the language of delivery. 3) A system of double pagination is used in this work. The page numbers in parentheses on the left-hand side refers to the page of the JOURNALS while the right-hand number is our own. 4) Three of the newspapers are referred to in abbreviated form, the KINGSTON CHRONICLE AND GAZETTE as the KINGSTON CHRONICLE, the WESTERN HERALD AND FARMER'S MAGAZINE as the WESTERN HERALD, and the ST. CATHARINES AND PORT ROBINSON JOURNAL as the ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL. 5) The various parentheses used in the newspapers are represented in our text by ( ). 6) Double parentheses always contain our own comments, explanatory notes or suggestions. Only the word "sic" is contained within single parentheses. 7) When we must interpolate a word for the sake of clarity, we stay as close as possible to the usual style of the newspaper.

The style and methodology in even the most minute aspects have been designed to achieve the goal of a verisimilar account of the debates of the Legislative Assembly. The texts are unaltered; even grammatical and spelling errors remain uncorrected. One reason for this decision to sacrifice style to fidelity was that the reader can best use his own judgment if he has the original material before him. He can then decide how to use the material: he can reproduce it exactly; or he can edit it and improve upon its style in whatever way he judges most appropriate. The editing in this work was minimal and was never imposed for purposes of literary style, but only to render collated passages less disjointed, truncated and confusing. The criterion was never that a passage was awkwardly phrased, but rather that it was incoherent. For example, even the habitual tense changes were never altered to make them consistent so that not infrequently speakers in one debate are each reported in a different tense. In one fairly typical debate, "Sir Allan McNab thinks" while "Captain Steele said" and "Mr. Cooke had opposed".<sup>82</sup> The real editing occurred in the earlier stage of the work, when the passages here reproduced as the reconstructed debates were selected. Therefore all elegancies of language are gratuitous, and such texts were invariably selected for content and not for their felicity of expression.

19. See for example ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL, 30 September 1841, reporting a debate of 8 September. The JOURNAL alone of the papers dealing with this debate reports Merritt's speech, and furthermore, it is the only one of its speeches reported in the first person. It is on the basis of these facts, plus Merritt's known connection with the paper, that we are justified in suspecting that Merritt himself wrote up this elegant and eloquent speech for his constituents, and presented it to them via the JOURNAL.
20. For example, Cameron wrote a letter to the Editor of the BATHURST COURIER, dated Kingston, August 28, 1841, discussing the content of a speech he had made in the Assembly.
21. For example, in its issue of 6 October 1841, the WESTERN HERALD copied an excellent parliamentary report from the TORONTO HERALD, which is no longer extant. Therefore it is only because we used the WESTERN HERALD that we now have a copy of the TORONTO HERALD's report.

25. This rule was followed by the best parliamentary reporters such as Dickens: in his day "Everything was recorded ... even to the parenthetical interruptions and mouvements de salle...." Carlton, CHARLES DICKENS: SHORTHAND WRITER, p. 89. However, the principle of HANSARD is different. What is not permitted in the RULES AND REGULATIONS is more or less considered to have not happened, and is accordingly expunged. Wilding and Laundry, AN ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PARLIAMENT, p. 283, report that "Descriptive comments such as 'prolonged applause' or 'ironical cheers' (which frequently appear in press reports) are totally banned. A simple comment such as 'laughter' is admissible if referred to by a member in the course of a speech."

26. For example, the following interjection from the BRITISH COLONIST, 4 August 1841, is put into a footnote rather than the text. "The cries 'go ahead' 'Walker', 'I wish you may get it,' and various other encouraging exclamations so interrupted the smoothness of the hon. gentleman's yarn, that.... he might have given up in despair all hope of joining it together." It was reported in such a way that it could not be integrated properly into the text of the interrupted speakers' words.

27. Usually papers acknowledged their sources; however, there were some cases where they did not do so. The PILOT, 19 March 1849, complained that "some of our Upper Canada contemporaries have been in the habit of stealing our Parliamentary reports ... without a word of acknowledgment. One leading journal in particular, that really ought to know better, has been guilty of this offense. As we have all the trouble and expense of preparing these reports, we think they might at least give us credit for them."

28. The RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY are found in the JOURNALS for 1841, 19 June 1841, pp. 40-48, or in the P.A.C. Pamphlet 1815, printed by G. Desbarats and T. Cary in Kingston, Upper Canada.

It has not changed substantially since. See Leslie Wolf-Phillips, "Parliamentary Divisions and Proxy Voting," PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. XVIII, 1964-65, p. 416; Richard A. Chapman, "The Significance of Parliamentary Procedure," PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. XVI, 1962-63, p. 179, footnote 2. An example of how a division was taken in the Commons on 4 July 1820 is found in A. Aspinall, "Extracts from Lord Hatherton's Diary," PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. XVII, 1963-64, p. 20. "Mr. Chetwynd ... was appointed Teller for the Ayes, and Mr. Gilbert for the Noes. When all the Members in the House walked to the left side he refused to take a stick and count, but the Committee, which seemed to think he was assuming and pertinacious, insisted and made him examine the Gallery and look behind the Speaker's Chair, and then come up to the Table and inform the Clerk that 'The Ayes were none'. They then made him count the 50 or 60 members on the left side, which he did with gestures of repugnance and shame which made us all die with laughter."

One of the few times that the JOURNALS include members' actual words occurs on pp. 166-167. It comes in the form of a dissentient on the part of Mr. Christie from a Report on the Gaspé Fisheries Bill. "(Mr. Christie dissents from that part of the report which attributes the falling off, of the Salmon Fishery, to the practice of using stakes:— This is not the fact, — the Salmon Fishery cannot, in the Ristigouche, be carried on without the use of stakes. — In other respect (sic) he agrees with the report.)"

However, reports were not signed, and so at best authorship of debates can only be inferred or assumed. Colin Seymour-Ure, in "The Parliamentary Press Gallery in Ottawa," PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS, vol. XVIII, 1964-65, p. 36, comments that : "The Gallery was already in existence at the time of the Canadian Confederation in 1867, though almost nothing is known about it before then."

CHAPTER VII :

INTEGRATING PARLIAMENT AND PARLIAMENTARY PRESS

THE CANADIAN HANSARD 1841

The reconstructed debates are much more than the product of explicitly detailed and minutely analysed methodological stages. Fundamentally, they are the joint product of the Assembly and of the newspapers. They are the records of the "talking place" modified by physical circumstances and shaped by the Canadian journalistic tradition. To present the reconstructed debates in a modern format, to contain them within the same framework as modern HANSARD's differently conceived verbatim reports, would be to remove the fact from its context, to separate the inseparable, and to render it meaningless in the process. The intimate relations of our Parliament and our Press produced the parliamentary reports; our editing of these reports involves only combining different reports, never sculpting them for false presentation as debates-as-delivered. In our format the reporter is as much present as the speaker he serves; his role in the process is never forgotten. Our format, lacking in felicity of style, easy transitions and consistency, is a constant reminder of what the parliamentary debates are, and this format is the proper one and the most useful one in which to present the Canadian HANSARD, 1841.

Monday, 14 June 1841.

- Parliament meets. (1) On which day, being the first day of the meeting of this Parliament, for the Dispatch of Business,
His Excellency the Right Honorable Charles, Baron Sydenham, Governor General, having by his Proclamation, hereunto annexed, dated the fifth day of February last past, declared the Re-union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada into one Province, under the name of the "Province of Canada," and having, by his writs of Summons, issued under the Great Seal of the Province, bearing teste at the Government House, in the City of Montreal, the nineteenth day of February, also last past, called a Provincial Parliament, which said writs of Summons were returnable on the eighth day of April following, and having by divers Proclamations prorogued the said Provincial Parliament, from time to time, until this day, for the Dispatch of Business; the Honorable Levius P. Sherwood, William Hepburn, and Thomas Kirkpatrick, Esquires, Commissioners appointed, by Dedimus Potestatem, for administering the oath to the Members of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly, came, at the hour of twelve o'clock, at noon, into the room allotted for the sittings of the Assembly; and William Burns Lindsay, Esquire, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, attending according to his duty; and Thomas Aniot, Esquire, Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, having delivered, to the said Mr. Lindsay, a Roll containing a list of the names of such Members as had been returned to serve in this Provincial Parliament, (a copy whereof is hereunto annexed) the Commissioners did administer the oath to the Members who appeared, which being done, and the Members having subscribed the Roll containing the oath, they took their seats in the Assembly.
- Commissioners for Swearing in Members attend.
- Members being Sworn, take their Seats.
- Proclamation read. (2) The Proclamation summoning the Legislature for the dispatch of Business was then read by the Clerk;
- The 33rd Section of the Imperial Act, 3rd and 4th Victoria, Cap. 35. having been also read:
- Mr. Cuvillier chosen Speaker. Augustin Norbert Morin, Esquire, Member representing the County of Nicolet, stood up, and addressing himself to the Clerk, (who, standing up, pointed to him, and then sat down) proposed to the House for their Speaker, Austin Cuvillier, Esquire, in which motion he was seconded by William Hamilton Merritt, Esquire, Member representing the North Riding of Lincoln.
- Debates arose thereon,<sup>1</sup>
- Mr. Morin then rose... ((and)) moved that Mr. Cuvillier be the Speaker. M. remarked that he trusted all former differences would be buried, and the business of the country be proceeded with amicably. In proposing Mr. Cuvillier as Speaker of this House, he did so because he knew him to be a good British subject, and a gentleman well versed in parliamentary business.<sup>2</sup> He alluded to the important duty they were called upon to discharge, in selecting a gentleman to preside over them, whose political principles, whose virtues, whose energy and integrity, would entitle him to the confidence of the House, and of the People. Viewing the honourable character, parliamentary experience, and the knowledge of the English and French languages, possessed by Mr. Cuvillier; and possessing, as he does in an eminent degree the qualifications necessary to the proper discharge of the duties of the office, he had great pleasure in proposing him.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Merritt seconded the motion, and said that besides Mr Cuvillier's known qualifications, he should vote for him as possessing those opinions upon the working of the British Constitution in the colonies, which influenced the great body of the people in Canada — those great principles of government without which representation was useless. He also supported Mr. Cuvillier because he was a Lower Canadian, as it was his, (Mr. M.'s) desire to see all distinction of races and languages levelled, so that United Canada — united in feeling and interest — might move onward to advancement and happiness.<sup>4</sup>

Colonel Prince had much pleasure in supporting the nomination, he thought Mr. Cuvillier admirably adapted for the high office of Speaker, for these reasons: first, that his great experience in the parliament of Lower Canada rendered him especially eligible; secondly that he was a moderate reformer, the same as he, (Col. Prince,) was; and thirdly, that he wished to pay a compliment to his own constituents, a majority of whom were French Canadians, and he felt proud they should know he was the third person who spoke in support of a French Canadian as speaker of the Assembly. He also thought it due to Lower Canada that the selection of a speaker should be made from among her representatives, seeing that her privileges had certainly not been extended by the union; and he trusted that the gentlemen from that part of the province would accept it as an earnest of his desire to see all parties acting together in harmony, and having but one object in their proceedings — the furtherance of the prosperity of United Canada. He could not sit down without paying a compliment to the high character of the late Speaker, Sir Allan McNab, and this he could not express in a more appropriate manner than by hoping that Mr. Cuvillier might emulate the ability, impartiality and intelligence of his predecessor.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Hincks, to prevent mistakes, and to discharge his duty to his constituents, would explain the reasons which caused him to vote for Mr. Cuvillier, which were these: — That Mr. C. was opposed to some important details of the Union Bill, particularly the Civil List — that he was opposed to the policy which had been pursued towards Lower Canada — that he fully recognized the great principle of Responsible Government as laid down in Lord Durham's Report — and, that he had no confidence in the provincial administration as at present constituted.<sup>6</sup>

Capt. Steele regretted the observations that had fallen from Mr. Hincks, as they might destroy the unanimity of the House in favour of Mr. Cuvillier, which it was so desirable to preserve; and not only the Province but the Empire at large were watching their proceedings; and it was important that their first step should be such, as to shew respect and confidence in themselves and in the country. It was a pity that the apple of discord should have been thrown into the Assembly at the very outset of its proceedings.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Cartwright felt it his duty, after what had fallen from Mr. Hincks, to move an amendment: it had been his intention to remain silent and not have opposed Mr. Cuvillier, but when he heard that gentleman described in the terms Mr. Hincks had employed, he could not support him, he should, therefore, move in amendment that Sir Allan MacNab be appointed Speaker.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Johnston believed the hon. member for Oxford did not intend to impute to Mr. Cuvillier a want of confidence in the administration of his Excellency.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Price... stated that he was sure that his Hon. friend from Oxford did not allude to the head of the Government, but to the Council, the advisers of His Excellency.<sup>10</sup> Mr. Price would prefer an administration of either Whigs or Tories than the present mixed composition of the Executive, and he believed that Mr. Cuvillier required Responsible Government in accordance with Lord Durham's Report. As such, he supported him.<sup>11</sup>

Col. Prince desired the hon. member to explain what "a Tory is," (— a laugh.)<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Roblin regretted that this question had been brought up in this way, because it had a tendency to embarrass their proceedings at the very outset, and he did not wish to have abstract questions discussed at that stage of their career: he trusted Mr. C. would give no explanation of his opinions upon these subjects — the question before them was not whether

Mr. C. had confidence in the administration, but whether that house had confidence in Mr. Cuvillier — the question of confidence in the executive could readily be brought up afterwards as a separate question.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Thorburn fully agreed with Mr. Roblin, who was a consistent reformer, and enjoyed the confidence of his party; he believed Mr. Cuvillier would discharge his duty ably and faithfully — he (Mr. C.) was intimately acquainted with the wants and wishes of the colony; almost every merchant in Upper Canada knew him, and had always found him a high-minded man of the strictest integrity — if ever there was a time suitable for a peace-offering, that time was the present, (hear, hear,) and he, for one, was desirous to hold out the olive branch to our brethren from Lower Canada; he (Mr. T.) would yield to no man in honesty of political purpose, but at the same time he would resort to no factious opposition; he thought Mr. Cuvillier would be moderate in his opinions, and though he advocated reform, would avoid all extremes; he (Mr. T.) cordially agreed with col. Prince in what he had remarked concerning the late Speaker, Sir Allan McNab — he differed in politics with that gentleman (Sir A.N. McNab) but that difference created no change in his conduct, for Sir Allan had always deported himself towards him and others in a manly, honorable and courteous spirit.<sup>14</sup> He... concluded by hoping the hon. member for Lenox (sic) and Addington would withdraw his amendment.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Hincks explained by saying that he did not express nor desire any expression of opinion from Mr. Cuvillier, but claimed a right to say, on what ground he supported that gentleman.<sup>16</sup> Mr. Hincks wished to explain that the reason for which he, and the party with whom he acted, supported Mr. Cuvillier, were those he had already declared — other persons might have different reasons for their support, but his reasons were already before the house.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Cameron hoped the discussion was nearly at an end — he would support Mr. Cuvillier because he understood both languages, and he hoped his nomination would be unanimous as he had been brought forward and supported by leading men.<sup>18</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab rose to make a request to Mr. Cartwright, namely, to withdraw his amendment — he could not agree with those gentlemen who deprecated this discussion<sup>19</sup>... and he thought Mr. Hincks justified in giving his reasons for supporting Mr. Cuvillier, and that every member ought to do the same.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Cartwright withdrew the amendment accordingly.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Aylwin thought that in a house of eighty members some expression of opinion ought to be arrived at; he appreciated the feelings of the gentlemen from Upper Canada, but he should still cling to the name of his birth-place, Lower Canada; he considered the political opinions of the speaker ought to be distinctly understood, and were he not sure that the sentiments of the gentleman now nominated coincided with his own — were he not sure of his principles — he should have felt it his duty to propose another gentleman whose character he viewed with unmixed admiration — he alluded to Mr. Viger: but he would yield to Mr. Cuvillier's election the more readily because he was intimately convinced that he was opposed to the present oppressive policy pursued towards Lower Canada, for were he not so convinced, he would oppose him to the utmost of his power; the house had been told that Great Britain felt a deep interest in their proceedings — that the eyes of England were anxiously watching their movements — but which, he most sincerely doubted — if this were true, it became the more necessary that the opinions of that house as expressed in the choice of a speaker, should be so explicitly declared as to lead to neither mistake nor misapprehension — and he thought this could not be more effectually accomplished than by Mr. Cuvillier's giving to the house a distinct avowal of his political opinions upon those great questions which the country anxiously expected to see carried — if this were not done, he should support Sir Allan McNab, or rather, that tried friend to his country — that martyr to civil liberty — his friend, Mr. Viger.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Morin begged to explain — no one wished more than himself to see the British Government and Reform in flourishing operation in this great province, in one part of which it certainly had not existed; on the abstract question it was likely that Mr. Cuvillier might not differ from the gentleman who spoke some time before, but he (Mr. M.) thought Mr. C. should at present express no opinion upon that or any other subject — those who reposed confidence in Mr.

Cuvillier would record their vote in his favor, those who did not, would, of course, oppose his election.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. J.S. Macdonald intended to vote for Mr. Cuvillier, but after the opinions which had been attributed to him by Mr. Hincks, either Mr. C. must come out with a declaration of his real opinions, or he should vote against him; he was not prepared to go so far as to approve of a vote of want of confidence in the present executive, and he could not associate himself with any party entertaining such views.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Smith (of Frontenac) rose and said, that for his part he had every confidence in the administration, and thought the remarks of Mr. Hincks in bad taste at this particular time. Mr. Smith thought it would be imprudent in Mr. Cuvillier to state his political views, and in fact the proceedings of the hon. member for Oxford would, if carried out, be equal to a declaration of want of confidence in the Government, a course that would lead to the dissolution of this body.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Draper could not remain silent, lest his silence, after what had just been said, might be misunderstood. He had no apprehension that free discussions could lead to a dissolution of the house; indeed he did not hesitate to say that he would not remain a member of any government which could threaten to dissolve the house for its expression of opinion on any subject, as it was the admitted privilege of the house, and in strict accordance with parliamentary rights, to express its opinions. As regards Mr. Cuvillier, he should vote for him as speaker, not merely on account of his speaking French and English, and of his parliamentary experience, but because of his character for integrity, for he felt that even should he be opposed to Mr. C. in political opinions, he was sure of receiving justice and impartiality at his hands.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Buchanan objected entirely to the course pursued by Mr. Hincks, in mixing up past questions with present consideration. Parliament had been assembled to establish certain sound principles of government, not in animadversion of what had previously occurred, but as a superstructure for the future. He saw no reason for expressing any opinion with reference to the present Executive, because it had no character, (a laugh) he meant no distinctive political character....<sup>27</sup> — but they had as yet no opportunity of being properly before the country, to allow of an opinion being formed of them; and it was improper to call upon Mr. Cuvillier to make the declaration before voting for him, as that would be equivalent to taking the sense of the House, at the very outset of their proceedings, on a motion of want of confidence in the Executive.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. James Durand supported Mr. Cuvillier in consequence of his being an impartial and dignified gentleman, who would give a tone to the house, and he was satisfied that Mr. C. could never fill the chair were he not supported by the Reformers present. He believed Mr. C. was a Reformer, and would only support the Government when it acted in accordance with the expressed wishes of the people.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Cook said a few words.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Chesley insisted that Mr. Cuvillier ought, in justice to himself, to make some broad and intelligent avowal of the opinions he entertained.<sup>31</sup>

The House then calling for the question; it was accordingly put by the Clerk and

Resolved, in the affirmative, nemine contradicente, that Austin Cuvillier, Esquire, be the Speaker of this House.

And the Clerk having declared Mr. Cuvillier duly elected he was conducted to the chair by Mr. Morin and Mr. Merritt, when, standing on the upper step, he returned his humble acknowledgements to the House for the great honor they had been pleased to confer upon him by choosing him to be their Speaker;

Mr. C. ((Cuvillier)) begged that the House would reconsider its vote and choose some more competent person to be its Speaker....<sup>32</sup> but on the House persisting in its choice, Mr. C. before taking the chair, said, he could not express his feelings of sincere and heartfelt gratitude for the high dignity they had conferred upon him. It fell to the lot of few to fill the office correctly; he, Mr. C. however, would do his best endeavours to discharge satisfactorily the important trust conferred upon him. Then turning to the Lower Canadian members, he repeated his remark in French.<sup>33</sup>

And thereupon he sat down in the chair, and then the mace (which before lay under the table) was laid upon the table.

A member having risen to make a motion, Sir Allan MacNab stated, that the only motion in order, after the choice of their Speaker, was a motion to adjourn, which he proposed.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Aylwin objected, on the ground that, in terms of the proclamation convening Parliament for that day, and the provisions of the act of Union, they had not the power to adjourn, as there had not been in reality a meeting of Parliament — the Governor not having come down and summoned the Commons, as usual, to the bar of the Legislative Council. Without this meeting of the three estates together, on the day fixed in the proclamation, he contended there was, in law, no meeting of Parliament; and their whole proceedings would, in consequence, be null and void.<sup>35</sup>

That, this being the case, the Assembly had no powers beyond that expressly defined in the 33d clause of the Union Act, viz: the election of a speaker — and could not adjourn: — That if Parliament was to date from the 15th, when the Assembly went to the Council to meet the Governor, the proclamation calling Parliament together for the actual despatch of business was nugatory.<sup>36</sup> It did not constitute a meeting of Parliament, that the Commons met in their own chamber — it was essential that the three estates should, as the Common Council of the country, be convened together in one place; and Mr. Aylwin, in support of his position, quoted the authority of Lord Coke, and referred to the practice of the Imperial Parliament.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Viger (in French.) What is the commencement of a Parliament? It is to be opened by the attendance of a Sovereign, or a Sovereign's representative after the two houses have been assembled by proclamation. Then the Sovereign commands the Commons to proceed to the appointment of their Speaker. If you introduce irregularities, what irregularities will you not pass over! I tremble for the consequences of such admissions.<sup>38</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab. My motion before the House is, that the Speaker having been elected, that the House do adjourn. The House is indebted to the honorable members for giving it more knowledge on this subject. I think that I will withdraw my motion.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. I think that the honorable member should not be permitted to withdraw his motion. The proceedings have been irregular. I will not assist her Majesty's legal advisers as to the course to be pursued. But if the matter be withdrawn, and if the Clerk proceed to his Excellency and acquaint him that the Commons have chosen their Speaker, may not his Excellency answer, "I am happy that they have made so good a choice," — and so leave us here still.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Thorburn proposed that the motion be withdrawn; then that the Speaker leave the chair; upon which each member, at his discretion, can withdraw.<sup>41</sup>

He ((Mr. Thorburn)) was followed by Mr. Ogden.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Draper, (Attorney General.) The hon. member has made an extraordinary proposal — that the Speaker leave the chair. He cannot leave the chair until the House has adjourned. On the point before the House I have a case fresh in my recollection, from the proceedings of the English Parliament. It was, I believe in 1837. But without dating the year, it was when Mr. Abercrombie was elected Speaker of the Commons house of the Imperial Parliament. After the Lords and Commons had been summoned to meet the Sovereign, the Commons were merely directed to proceed to the election of their Speaker. The statute for the union of these provinces has given us the power of electing the Speaker without the concurrence of the Executive. To proceed with the case of Mr. Abercrombie: — The discussion on his election lasted through that day, and until 3 or 4 o'clock the next morning. The next day the Lords and Commons (sic) attended, and received the Royal speech. The cases are similar, except that the Parliament of England have standing orders which me (sic) have not here yet. The Parliament of England had a day fixed: the Speaker was not elected on that day. The 33d section of the statute of the union of the Canadas having made it unnecessary that our choice of a Speaker should receive the sanction of Royalty, we now stand exactly in the position of the English House of Commons in the proposed case after their election of Speaker. If the position be true, that there is no Parliament until after the three estates have met, there cannot be any meeting of the third estate until its Speaker is elected. How, then, was it with the British House of Commons on the first day of its proceeding towards electing a Speaker. The honorable member for Port Neuf has called for authorities. I have given him three facts in the mean time, while the books are sent for.<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Day, (Solicitor General.) The hon. member for Port Neuf opposes our adjournment, and says the house has no power to adjourn. He excels in the talent which he has so abundantly employed here — the perplexing his auditors with minor difficulties and legal subtleties.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Viger. — It has been said that a Session has commenced. What is the commencement of a parliament? Why, when the King meets them; he then tells them I cannot correspond with you till you have a speaker; the Governor does not know of our existence, he has not called us together. It has been said we are an organized body. How then? is the common law set aside by a statute; but the law for assembling the Parliament has been done away with.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Morin, (in French) — We have not the power of abolishing the common law of England, by that law the King comes down to the House of Parliament, commands the commons to proceed to the choice of a Speaker. We have no need it is true of the sanction of our Speaker, but in our assuming the power of adjourning we should abridge the prerogation of the Crown; we meet upon an act of the Crown before we can constitute a Parliament.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Thorburn. — If we examine into the usages (sic) of Parliament we shall find that it is competent for you Mr. Speaker to leave the chair, and to command the Sergeant at arms to summon us at any, even an hour's notice.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Viger. — The present is altogether an anomalous proceeding. The House should have been assembled first in the Legislative Council, not here.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — In the case adduced by the Attorney General, the House had attended at the Bar of the House of Lords and then received the command to go and select their Speaker. These were in a true position not as being assembled but because there had been a commencement of the Parliament. We were to have commenced to day but we have not met "the great men of the land." It may be that the "great men" are not assembled. The Solicitor General has referred to the old Prothonotary Perrot. He has confounded the election of a speaker with the only true commencement of a Parliament by the assembling of the three Estates. They having met, the royal command issues as to the election of a Speaker, but not before the attendance of the Governor. Every constituted body has a right to adjourn because they cannot go forty eight hours without eating or drinking, if for no other reason. To meet this present difficulty, his Exceley (sic) should send to meet us in the Legislative Council. If what is done is against law, all the votes of the house cannot make it law. — Her majesty's legal advises (sic) insinuate that a clause on the Union Bill meets all the difficulty. Why do they not state the law? The 33 § of the Union Bill will not get them out: but that section was made for this purpose specially. Under some administrations the election of Speaker was not confirmed. But you, sir, are a perfect Speaker, now notwithstanding the governments negative, which does not reach you.

As to the Union Bill, does that give this house power to adjourn? Then how can the Legislative Council adjourn for the other house is not in that clause of the act. Now after midnight the house must dissolve, because it would be contrary (sic) to fact to say "at a session of Parliament commenced on the 14th day of June in the year 1841" her majesty knows that this is beyond our privilege to do, it is more than the prerogative can do.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Hincks. — It is evident that we do not advance. It would be presumptuous in me to suggest a remedy. I believe that to day's proceedings must be until (sic) ((null)) and void. It is evident that His Excellency has been badly advised. The only way left is to prorogue the Parliament until to-morrow. Her majesty's legal advisers decline to bring forward (sic) any precedent. This Parliament has not yet met: this case the imperial parliament had met.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Thorburn. — My advice is this. As it requires twenty one members to make a quorum, members can leave at their discretion and when the number of the house is reduced beyond a quorum you can adjourn.<sup>51</sup>

Mr. Small. — If we leave on the way last proposed we shall get into another dilemma, when will the house meet again and by what authority, how will we know tomorrow that the Governor will meet us tomorrow.<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Boswell. — If her majesty's three legal advisers would provide some remedy, and I am astonished when it seems that a difficulty is entertained by a large majority of the House. I do not approve of the suggestion of a prorogation, I doubt if we look into the 33 section of the Act of Union, we shall find a statute (sic) of the case. Up to this all is correct we have made a Speaker conformably to the Act. But though the Speaker be chosen Parliament has not met. I see no way unless that his Excellency be advised to come down to us.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Durand. — How can we be prorogued.<sup>55</sup>

Mr. Cameron. — Our dilemma reminds me of the fable of the Bull and the Boat. A boat went down stream with a Bull on it, but the cable was of straw, and the Bull had eaten it; so the Bull had run away with the boat, and the boat with the bull. — Are we in the same position as the House of Commons after meeting the King and choosing a Speaker if we adjourn, for what hour to meet, the Legislative Council might tell us that.<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Prince. — We seem to have a right to adjourn. We are met to elect a Speaker. — Now suppose we had not elected a Speaker by midnight, should we not have power to adjourn at midnight and meet again for business to-morrow.<sup>57</sup> Colonel Prince objected particularly to continuing their sitting, as it had already arrived at that hour when they might be better employed in discussing their dinners.<sup>58</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — The object was not to elect our Speaker, if we look to the proclamation: No, not to elect a Speaker, but to meet with the "great men of the land." The Speaker may be elected without the other two estates of Parliament, but the House cannot proceed further. There is not commune concilium, no parliament yet. If the House do any thing further, it will do an unlawful act; yes, as direct a wrong as to issue a writ for the apprehension of any inhabitant of Kingston. If we were as bad off as a starved out jury after two days' confinement, we cannot adjourn. If we had not elected a Speaker, the Crown might direct us to adjourn and elect a Speaker, but we have not met the Executive. If the law of Parliament has been altered, her Majesty's legal advisers should show wherein it has been altered. This is not an assumption of authority, but a question of principle. A question has been raised and a decision of the House must be given.<sup>59</sup>

Mr. Boswell. — If her Majesty's legal advisers will undertake to move an adjournment, we may adjourn.<sup>60</sup>

Mr. Hincks rose to correct a misapprehension. The Governor must have met and left the House before the election of a Speaker. — The Imperial Parliament had met the Executive.<sup>61</sup>

Sir A.N. MacNab — I have heard with attention the other legal advisers of her Majesty — I should like to hear the opinion of the Solicitor General west.<sup>62</sup>

Mr. Baldwin did not speak, although called upon by Sir Allan Macnab....<sup>63</sup>

Mr. Johnston. — The wants of nature require an adjournment. We are not to be stayed by special pleading.<sup>64</sup>

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Mr. Aylwin, that the House adjourn until 2 o'clock to-morrow.<sup>65</sup>

Mr. Duggan. — If the House is disposed to escape from the dilemma, we have but one way. We do not know when we are to meet His Excellency. Now, under the 3d (sic) section of the Act of Union, it is provided that there shall be a Parliament of Canada, consisting of the House of Assembly and Legislative Council, and that these two Houses shall make laws with the sanction of Her Majesty or her Majesty's representatives.<sup>66</sup>

Mr. Simpson rose to put the motion of adjournment.<sup>67</sup>

Mr. Hincks. — Before the motion is put Her Majesty's legal adviser should acknowledge their mistake.<sup>68</sup>

Mr. Durand. — Will the Attorney General take the responsibility? <sup>69</sup>

Mr. Draper. — I take the responsibility if it is desired.<sup>70</sup>

Mr. Derbishire. — Three of her Majesty's legal advisers have advocated the motion to adjourn. What want we more as to their taking the responsibility? they have not followed a bad example of members rising again and again to speak over what they have said before.<sup>71</sup>

Mr. Durand addressed the Speaker. — Before the motion be put, I want to know your opinion, Mr. Speaker. Your Parliamentary experience and legal knowledge would be a great assistance to the house.<sup>72</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — The member for Bytown has called on her Majesty's legal advisers to assume the responsibility, but will the house stultify itself and refer to the authority of the Attorney General? <sup>73</sup>

Mr. Derbishire — and — Mr. Draper — respectively explained, Mr. Duggan rose three times, the Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)), though rising, giving way to him, but the cries of "question" prevailed.<sup>74</sup>

Mr. Simpson then addressing himself to Mr. Speaker, moved, seconded by Mr. John S. McDonald,

That the House do now adjourn until tomorrow at two o'clock P.M.
Upon which the House divided,

Tellers, { For the yeas, Mr. Aylwin, ..... 47, { For the noes, Mr. Manahan, ..... 27.

So it was resolved in the affirmative,

House Adjourns.

And the House accordingly adjourned until tomorrow at two o'clock P.M.

The House being met, and Mr. Speaker having taken the chair :

Message to attend the Governor General.

A Message was brought by Frederick Starr Jarvis, Esquire, gentleman usher of the Black Rod.

Mr. Speaker,

His Excellency, the Governor General, desires the immediate attendance of this Honorable House in the Legislative Council Chamber.

Mr. Speaker and House attend at Council Chamber.

Accordingly Mr. Speaker, with the House, went to the Council Chamber.

And there Mr. Speaker spoke to the following effect, viz :

May it please your Excellency ;

According to Law the Legislative Assembly have proceeded to the Election of a Speaker ; I am the person upon whom their choice has fallen.

Mr. Speaker claims Privileges of the Assembly.

If in the Execution of the important duties of my Station I should at any time fall into error, I intreat that the fault may be imputed to me, and not to the Assembly, whose Servant I have the honor to be ; and that they may be the better enable to discharge their duty to Her Majesty and their country, I do in their name and on their behalf, by humble Petition, lay claim to all their Rights and Privileges, particularly that they may have liberty of Speech for the better management of their debates ; access to your Excellency's person on all seasonable occasions, and that their proceedings may receive from your Excellency the most favorable interpretation.

Then the Honorable Speaker of the Legislative Council said :

Privileges obtained.

His Excellency, the Governor General, fully confides in the duty and attachment of the Assembly to Her Majesty's Person and Government, and not doubting that their proceedings will be conducted with wisdom, temper, and prudence, he grants, and upon all occasions will recognize and allow their Constitutional Privileges.

I am commanded also to assure you that the Assembly shall have ready access to His Excellency upon all seasonable occasions, and that their proceedings as well as your words and actions will constantly receive from Him the most favorable construction.

The House being returned.

Mr. Speaker reports having waited upon His Excellency, &c.

Mr. Speaker reported that the Assembly had been in the Legislative Council Chamber, and that he had informed His Excellency that the choice of Speaker had fallen upon him, and also that he had, in their name, and on their behalf, by humble Petition to His Excellency, laid claim to all their Rights and Privileges, that they may enjoy freedom of speech in their debates, and have access to His Excellency's person as occasion shall require, and that all their proceedings may receive from His Excellency the most favorable construction ; to which His Excellency had been pleased to say that he readily and willingly granted and allowed them all their Privileges, in as full and ample a manner as they have ever heretofore been granted, as well as ready access to His Excellency on all seasonable occasions, and that their proceedings as well as their words and actions will constantly receive from him the most favorable construction.

Mr. Draper moved for leave to bring in a bill requiring Justices of Peace to furnish returns of all fines, penalties, and convictions, that fell within their jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

Sir A. MacNab opposed this motion as irregular, notice of motion being first necessary.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Aylwin had a bill to bring forward to secure the independence of the Judges in the Eastern division of the Province. He had no objection to the motion, provided no preference was intended in favour of the Attorney General's bill.<sup>3</sup>

Ordered — That Mr. Attorney General Draper have leave to bring in a Bill to require Justices of the Peace to make returns of convictions and fines.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on this day three weeks.

A Petition of T. Parker and others of the county of Hastings in the District of Victoria, was presented to the House by Sir Allan McNab and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That according to previous notice given by an advertisement, an Election was held in the Town of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, in the Province of Canada, on Monday, the 22d day of March last, and the five subsequent days, for the purpose of choosing one discreet and proper person to represent the said County of Hastings in Parliament.

That the Candidates were, The Honorable Robert Baldwin, of the City of Toronto, and Edmund Murney, Esquire, of the aforesaid Town of Belleville.

That on Saturday, the 27th day of March, 1841, the Returning officer declared the said Honorable Robert Baldwin duly elected, because it appeared from the names taken on Record that the said Robert Baldwin had a majority of Thirty-six Votes, he, the Returning Officer, having refused a scrutiny demanded by the said Edmund Murney, Esquire, who declared that he had a majority of the legal votes polled.

That a protest was duly entered against the return made in favor of the said Robert Baldwin, upon various grounds, and the Petitioners now beg that their humble petition, together with the said protest may be taken into consideration by this Honorable House, and dealt with accordingly.

Petitioners beg leave to represent, that the said Honorable Robert Baldwin should not be the Member for the said County of Hastings, because it is contrary to all precedent, contrary to law and contrary to the constitution, that any person should be a Candidate for the Representation of a Town, County or Riding, who has previously been elected for any Town, County or Riding, and the said Robert Baldwin having, on the Eighth day of March last, attended as a Candidate at the Hustings, at the place appointed in the fourth Riding of the County of York, in the Province of Canada, by the Returning officer for the said fourth Riding of the County of York, for the purpose of choosing one discreet and proper person to represent the said fourth Riding of York in Parliament, and there he the said Robert Baldwin addressed the Electors of the said fourth Riding of York and solicited their suffrages, and was in consequence, by them elected to Represent the said fourth

Riding of York, and was therefore returned duly elected by the Returning Officer of the said fourth Riding of York; from all of which facts, which they are ready and willing to establish before this Honorable House, it is clear, and evident, that the said Robert Baldwin was elected Member of the said fourth Riding, and could not therefore either according to precedent, or according to law, or according to the constitution, become a Candidate for any other Town, County or Riding, he not having previously resigned his seat, for which he was elected, and yet the Petitioners most respectfully represent that notwithstanding all these facts the said Robert Baldwin did, contrary to precedent, contrary to law and contrary to the constitution, on the 22d day of March in the year of our Lord, 1841, present himself at the Hustings in the County of Hastings, aforesaid, being the day appointed as aforesaid to hold the Elections, for the purpose of choosing, one discreet and proper person, to represent the said County of Hastings in Parliament, and there he the said Robert Baldwin addressed the Electors, and solicited their votes, whereas from the fact of his having been before elected and returned, and being then at the time, that is to say on the said 22d day of March, actually the Representative of the said fourth Riding of the County of York, he the said Robert Baldwin was ineligible to become a Candidate, because thereby the due and proper number of the Representatives of this Province was lessened and diminished, and one voice taken therefrom, and that the votes recorded in favor of the said Robert Baldwin, were recorded in favor of a person, who, being already returned as a Member of this Honorable House, by another and different constituency, was disqualified from receiving them, and whose previous return for the said fourth Riding of the County of York, was a valid and sufficient, and legal notice to the Electors of the said County of Hastings, that the votes so recorded in favor of the said Robert Baldwin were thrown away and lost, and could not legally and rightfully be taken notice of by the Returning Officer — and that the said Robert Baldwin could not be thereupon legally returned, or elected; for all which reasons the Petitioners pray that the Return in favor of the said Robert Baldwin as the Member for the said County of Hastings may not be received, but that this Honorable House will be pleased, so to amend the return, or cause it to be amended, as to declare the said Edmund Murney the Member for the said County of Hastings; or otherwise that this Honorable House will, for the reasons aforesaid, and in consequence of the disqualification of the said Robert Baldwin, by reason of the premises, hold, declare, and determine the said Election so had for the said County of Hastings on the said 22d day of March, and the days then next ensuing as herein before mentioned, and all proceedings thereupon had, to have been and to be utterly null and void, and of none effect, and that the seat for the said County of Hastings in this House, by reason of the return of a disqualified person, is vacant and unfilled.

Petitioners beg leave further to represent that the said Robert Baldwin should not be the Member for the said County of Hastings, because, contrary to Law, and contrary to the Constitution, intimidation, to an alarming extent, was practised against the freeholders who supported the said Edmund Murney, Esq. in manner following, that is to say: that he the aforesaid Robert Baldwin, and the Committee, who maintained his canvas, and who supported him during the said Election for the said County of Hastings, in violation of the Constitution, in breach of the Peace, and with a view to the suppression of the voices or votes of a large body of the Electors of the said County of Hastings, and for the purpose of intimidating and keeping back from the Poll the said last mentioned Electors, and contrary to Law, did make use of, and for certain reward, hire, and did maintain and keep, during the said Election, for the said County of Hastings, at or near the Hustings, or polling place, where the votes were recorded by the Returning Officer, a large body of armed shanty-men, bullies, and ruffians, armed with bludgeons, clubs, and sticks, and other offensive weapons, not being freeholders of the said County of Hastings; and the Petitioners do further respectfully represent that the said body of men so there maintained and kept as aforesaid, were secretly encouraged by the said Robert Baldwin and by his Committee, with his advice, to behave and conduct themselves, and that they did behave and conduct themselves, in a noisy, riotous, and brutal manner, using threatening language and gestures towards the freeholders who came to record their votes in favor of the said Edmund Murney, and that they did push back, lay violent hands on, and abuse the said last mentioned freeholders, and that many of the said last mentioned freeholders were forced and obliged to, and did, for the maintenance of the peace, and for the preservation of their lives and limbs, and as the only method by which they could record their votes, feign and assume to be voters for the said Robert Baldwin, and that then, and not till then, they were permitted by the said shanty-men, bullies, and ruffians to approach the Hustings, and having so feigned themselves to be voters for the said Robert Baldwin, were violently pushed and passed from hand to hand by the said shanty-men, bullies, and ruffians, in and towards the said Hustings or polling place; and the Petitioners further respectfully represent that thereby many of the said last mentioned freeholders, who were personally known to the said shanty-men, bullies, and ruffians, or to some of them, as supporters of the said Edmund Murney, were forced back and deterred from voting, and that thereby the said Edmund Murney, Esquire, lost the support of a large number of the said last mentioned freeholders, for which last mentioned reasons, petitioners pray that the return in favor of the said Robert Baldwin, as the Member of the said County of Hastings may not be received, but that this Honorable House will be pleased so to amend the return, or cause it to be amended, as to declare the said Edmund Murney the Member for the said County of Hastings or otherwise, for the reasons last above set forth, hold declare, and determine the said election so holden in and for the said County of Hastings, on the said 22d day of March, and the days then next ensuing as aforesaid, and all proceedings thereupon had, to have been and to be utterly null and void and of none effect, and that the seat in this House, for the said County of Hastings, is vacant and unfilled.

Hastings Election

Petitioners beg leave stil further to represent that the said Robert Baldwin should not be the Member for the said County of Hastings, because, contrary to Law, and contrary to the Constitution, a large number of the names recorded as having voted for the said Robert Baldwin are not freeholders in the said County of Hastings, and consequently the majority by which he the said Robert Baldwin was declared elected, has no existence in fact or in law, and was and is a mere colourable majority; and because a larger number of legal votes were recorded in favor of the said Edmund Murney, than is in favor of the said Robert Baldwin, and because a large number of legal and sufficient votes offered for the said Edmund Murney were rejected by the returning officer, illegally and without reason, for which reasons the Petitioners pray that the return in favor of the said Robert Baldwin as the Member for the said County of Hastings, may not be received, but that this Honorable House will be pleased so to amend the return, or cause it to be amended as to declare the said Edmund Murney the Member for the said County of Hastings.

Petitioners beg leave further to represent that from evidence which will be submitted to the committee hereafter to be appointed by this Honorable House, the Petitioners firmly believe they will make it appear that the returning officer conducted himself throughout the said election with wilful and unwarrantable partiality, and was grossly biassed in favor of the said Robert Baldwin, and rested unfairly and partially, solely upon the opinion of the said Robert Baldwin, whose opinion in opposition to a request of the Magistrates, that the said bullies and shanty-men should be desarmed, was taken and accepted and acted upon by the said returning officer, who refused to accede to the request of the said Magistrates; and the Petitioners further represent, that by and through the refusal of the said returning officer to interfere and prevent the interruption which was offered by the hired bullies, ruffians and shanty-men, before mentioned, to the freeholders, in the interest of the said Edmund Murney, great injustice was done to the said Edmund Murney, and the Petitioners believe that the fact of the returning officer's canvassing for the said Robert Baldwin, subsequent to his appointment, will strongly corroborate the charge which they now prefer; and for these last mentioned reasons the Petitioners further pray that the said Robert Baldwin may not be declared the sitting Member for the County of Hastings; but that this House will so amend the return, or order it to be amended that Edmund Murney may be declared the sitting Member for the said County; or otherwise, that this Honorable House will hold, declare, and determine for the last mentioned reasons, the said election for the said County of Hastings and all proceedings thereupon had to have been and to be utterly null and void, and that the seat in this Honorable House for the said County of Hastings, is vacant and unfilled.

Ordered—That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Speaker reports His Excellency's Speech.

Mr. Speaker then reported, that when the House did attend His Excellency the Governor General, this day, in the Legislative Council chamber, His Excellency was pleased to make a speech to both Houses of the Provincial Parliament, of which Mr. Speaker said he had, to prevent mistakes, obtained a copy, which he read to the House, and it is as followeth:—

Speaker reports His Excellency's Speech.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, — and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

Speech at opening of Session.

I have deemed it right to assemble you at the earliest period which the circumstances of the Province, and the duties imposed upon me by the Imperial Act for the Union of the Canadas, under which this Legislature is constituted, have admitted; and it is with sincere satisfaction that I now meet you to deliberate on the great and important interests committed to our charge.

A subject of Her Majesty, an inhabitant of this Province, has been forcibly detained in the neighbouring States, charged with a pretended crime. No time was lost by the Executive of this Province in remonstrating against this proceeding, and provision was made for ensuring to the individual the means of defence, pending the further action of Her Majesty's Government. The Queen's Representative at Washington has since been instructed to demand his release. Of the result of that demand I am not yet apprised, but I have the Queen's commands to assure Her faithful subjects in Canada of Her Majesty's fixed determination to protect them with the whole weight of Her power.

Arrangements were completed during the course of last summer by which, under the directions of the Treasury, the rates of Postage between all parts of this Colony and the United Kingdom were greatly reduced; and a more speedy and regular conveyance of letters between different parts of this Province has since been established, by arrangements made by the Deputy Post Master General, under my directions. A Commission has been appointed by me to enquire into and report upon the whole Post Office system of British North America, and I confidently anticipate that the result of its labours will be the establishment of a plan securing improvements in the internal communication, by Post, within the Colony, equal to those which we have already obtained in the communication with the Mother Country.

Many subjects of deep importance to the future welfare of the Province demand your early attention, upon some of which I have directed Bills to be prepared, which will be submitted for your consideration.

Amongst them, first in importance at the present juncture of affairs, is the adoption of measures for developing the resources of the Province, by well considered and extensive public works. The rapid settlement of the Country — the value of every man's property within it — the advancement of his future fortunes, are deeply affected by this question.

The improvement of the navigation from the shores of Lake Erie and Lake Huron to the ocean — the establishment of new internal communications in the Inland Districts, are works requiring a great outlay, but promising commensurate returns. To undertake them successfully, large funds will undoubtedly be required, and the financial condition of the Province, as it stands at present, would seem to forbid the attempt. But I have the satisfaction of informing you that I have received authority from Her Majesty's Government to state, that they are prepared to call upon the Imperial Parliament to afford their assistance towards these important undertakings. In the full belief that peace and tranquillity will be happily re-established in this Province, under the constitution settled by Parliament, and that nothing but a relief from its most pressing difficulties is wanting to its rapid advancement to prosperity, they will propose to Parliament, by affording the guarantee of the Imperial Treasury, for a loan to the extent of no less

then a million and a half sterling, to aid the Province for the double purpose of diminishing the pressure of the interest on the Public Debt, and of enabling it to proceed with those great public undertakings, whose progress during the last few years has been arrested by the Financial difficulties. I shall direct a measure to be submitted to you, embracing a plan for this purpose, and I shall lay before you, for your information and that of the People of Canada, extracts from the despatches which convey to me this most gratifying assurance.

In immediate connexion with the outlay of capital upon public works is the subject of Emigration, and the disposal and settlement of public lands. There exist within the Province no means so certain of producing a healthy flow of Immigration from the Mother Country, and of ultimately establishing the Immigrant as a settler and proprietor within the Colony, as the power of affording sure employment for his labor on his first arrival. The assistance of Parliament, for the Public Works which may be undertaken here, will in a great measure provide for this ; but with a view further to aid Immigration, I am authorised to declare to you that Her Majesty's Government are prepared to assist in facilitating the passage of the Immigrant from the Port at which he is landed to the place where his labour may be made available, and that a vote of money for this purpose will be proposed to the Imperial Parliament. The conditions which Her Majesty's Government attach to this measure will be submitted to you, at the same time that I shall draw your attention to a scheme for the settlement and disposal of the Public Lands.

It appears highly desirable that the principles of local self-government which already prevail to some extent throughout that part of the Province which was formerly Upper Canada, should receive a more extended application ther, and that the people should exercise a greater degree of power over their own local affairs. I have directed a measure upon this subject to be submitted to you, and I solicit your earnest attention to the establishment of such a form of local government for those Districts of the Province which are unprovided with it, as may ensure satisfaction to the people, whilst it preserves inviolate the prerogative of the Crown, and maintains the administration of Justice pure from party and popular excitement.

A due provision for the education of the people is one of the first duties of the State, and in this Province especially, the want of it is grievously felt. The establishment of an efficient system by which the blessings of instruction may be placed within the reach of all, is a work of difficulty, but its overwhelming importance demands that it should be undertaken. I recommend the consideration of that subject to your best attention, and I shall be most anxious to afford you in your labours all the co-operation in my power. If it should be found impossible so to reconcile conflicting opinions as to obtain a measure which may meet the approbation of all, I trust that at least steps may be taken by which an advance to a more perfect system may be made, and the difficulty under which the people of this Province now labor, may be greatly diminished, subject to such improvements hereafter as time and experience may point out.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The financial Accounts of the Province will be immediately laid before you, and I shall direct the estimates for the public service to be submitted to you with the least possible delay. I rely upon your co-operation in the financial measures which it will be my duty to propose to you for taking advantage of the assistance which Her Majesty's Government propose to afford, and for carrying into effect the Public improvements which are deemed most desirable. I shall earnestly endeavor that whatever you may appropriate for this latter purpose shall be economically employed and rendered effective.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

Speech at opening
of Session.

In your wisdom and prudence I confide for the regulation of the different important matters which must necessarily come before you. Canada, united under a constitution, which the Imperial Legislature has framed with an earnest desire for the welfare of this portion of the British Empire, cannot fail to prosper under prudent and sage counsels. The generous aid which I have already announced to you — the determination which I am also empowered to state on the part of the Government, to devote annually a large sum for the military defences of the Province; the fixed and settled determination which I have the Queen's commands to declare, that her North American possessions shall be maintained at all hazards as part of her empire, are pledges of the sincerity with which the mother country desires to promote the prosperity of Canada, and to assist in the well working of the new institutions which it has established. The eyes of England are anxiously fixed upon the result of this great experiment. Should it succeed, the aid of Parliament in your undertakings — the confidence of British capitalist in the credit you may require from them — the security which the British people will feel in seeking your shores and establishing themselves upon your fertile soil, may carry improvement to an unexampled height. The rapid advance of trade and immigration, within the last eighteen months, afford ample evidence of the effects of tranquillity in restoring confidence and promoting prosperity. May no dissections mar the flattering prospect which is open before us — may your efforts be steadily directed to the great practical improvements of which the province stands so much in need, and under the blessing of that Providence which has hitherto preserved this portion of the British dominions, may your counsels be so guided as to ensure to the Queen attached and loyal subjects, and to United Canada a prosperous and contented people.

It was moved by Colonel Prince, that 1000 copies should be printed for the use of members....<sup>4</sup>

At the suggestion of Mr. Hincks it was agreed that one-half should be printed in the French language.<sup>5</sup>

Speech to be Printed.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,
Ordered — That five hundred copies, in each of the English and French languages, of His Excellency the Governor General's Speech delivered this day, to both Houses of the Provincial Parliament, be printed for the use of the Members of this House.

Speech referred.

On motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by Mr. Buchanan,
Ordered — That the Speech of His Excellency the Governor General, this day delivered to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature, be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Friday next.

Petition for power to Celebrate Marriage and hold Lands.

A Petition of James W. Sharrard and Thomas Henry, Christian Ministers, of the Home District, was presented to the House by Mr Small, and the same was received and read, setting forth, that Petitioners are believers in the old and new testaments and take the same as the rule of their conduct.

That their communicants are about 1200 and congregation about 2500.

That two thirds of their body are British subjects.

That they are not authorized to celebrate matrimony, nor hold lands.

That they desire no greater privileges than other certain religious bodies.

And praying for a law to enable them to celebrate marriage, and hold lands for certain purposes.

And further that they may be heard at the bar upon the subject of their religious belief.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

(10)

Rules and Regulations of House.

On motion of Mr. Simpson seconded by Mr. Child,
Resolved — That a Committee of seven Members be appointed to frame Rules and Regulations for the Government of this House; that the Rules of the two former Houses of Upper and Lower Canada be referred to it for its guidance, with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and to report thereon with all convenient speed.

Committee on Rules.

Ordered — That Mr. Simpson, Mr. Aylwin, Mr. Cameron, Sir Allan Mac Nab, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Prince, and Mr. Thorburn, do compose the said Committee.

Sir A. MacNab ((moved)) to add to the Committee the two Attornies General...<sup>6</sup>

Messrs. Morin and Viger ... ((saw)) an impropriety in appointing two of the officers of the Government on such a committee. Mr. M. ... insinuated that those gentlemen could not have the confidence of the House...<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Draper made a spirited reply...<sup>8</sup>

At last ... Messrs. Neilson and Aylwin ... dropped the subject.<sup>9</sup>

Messrs Ogden & Draper, were afterwards added ((to the committee)).<sup>10</sup>

(10)

Postage.

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Morris,
Ordered — That the Clerk be directed to charge to the Contingencies of the House, the postage on all letters not exceeding one ounce in weight, and on printed papers to and from Members of this House, during the present Session, provided, that when Petitions to this House are enclosed, the postage thereon shall be charged without restriction, as to weight.

He ((Mr. Thorburn)) entered into some explanation relative to the new post office regulations, which if adopted, would be satisfactory to the country. The surplus post office revenue would in future be paid into the Colonial instead of the Imperial Treasury, (as has heretofore been the case.)<sup>11</sup> In the course of his remarks ...((Mr. Thorburn)) stated, that he had calculated not less than £30,000 per annum was paid into the Imperial Treasury for postages in Canada — a portion of revenue which was unjustly placed beyond our control.<sup>12</sup>

Gaspé Fisheries Bill.

Ordered — That Mr. Hamilton have leave to bring in a Bill to regulate the Fisheries in the District of Gaspé.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Monday the twenty-first instant.

Kent Election.

A Petition of J. Woods and others of the Western District was presented to the House by Sir Allan N. MacNab and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That the election of one Member to serve for the County of Kent in this Honorable House was commenced at the Town of Chatham in the said County on Monday the twenty-second day of March, last. George Wade Foote, Esquire, the Sheriff of the Western District being the returning officer, and the Honorable Samuel B. Harrison, and Joseph Woods, (one of your Petitioners, being) Candidates for the suffrages of the Electors of the said County, when a Poll was declared, and the Election being contested, continuing as such Candidate from its commencement on the Monday, until the following Saturday, being the period allowed by law. That during the continuance and progress of the said Election, every facility was afforded as well to those Electors who were in favor of Mr. Harrison, as those who were in favor of the said Joseph Woods, of recording their votes on the Poll Book, and that at the close of the Poll on the Saturday night, being the last day on which the Election could be held according to law, the said Joseph Woods, one of your Petitioners, had a majority of votes, as was declared from the Hustings by the Returning Officer. That according to the law and practice of Elections in this Province, the said Joseph Woods should have been immediately declared as duly elected by the Returning Officer, and the necessary indentures should have been executed by certain Electors of the County, and your Petitioner the said Joseph Woods returned by the said Returning Officer as duly elected to serve for the said County of Kent in this Honorable House, but instead of the Returning Officer making such return, he illegally fraudulently, and improperly has refused to execute the necessary indentures, or to make such declaration or return, and has returned on the writ of Election, as your Petitioners have reason to believe, that the said Joseph Woods had a majority of votes, and that a scrutiny had been demanded by certain freeholders of the said County, claiming a majority of legal votes in favor of Mr. Harrison, to be proceeded in by the Returning Officer, and two other persons, one to be nominated by each of the said Candidates. That the said Joseph Woods, after the close of the said Poll, on the last day of the Election, refused, and has always since refused to enter into such scrutiny, conceiving that according to the law of this Province, that no scrutiny could be entered into to question de legality of votes, except before this House, or a Committee appointed by this House, and that any such proceedings before or by the Returning Officer would be as illegal as unusual, and that no such scrutiny has been proceeded in ; that the conduct of the said Returning Officer, in refusing to return the said Joseph Woods, and in making such return as above stated, was not only manifestly illegal and unjust, but was also on that and on several other occasions, during and after the said Election, partial and improper, and unworthy the trust and confidence reposed in him as such Returning Officer, and was utterly subversive of the rights and privileges of the great body of the Electors of the said County, and was and is destructive of the purity of Elections.

Kent Election.

Petitioners therefore humbly pray that this Honorable House would direct the said George Wade Foote, Esquire, the said Retruning Officer, to alter and amend his said return, and to return to this Honorable House that the said Joseph Woods, is duly elected by a majority of forty-three votes.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Ordered — That Mr. Aylwin have leave to bring in a Bill for better securing the independence and uprightness of the Judges.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Independence of Judges Bill read and ordered to be printed.

The hon. gentleman ((Mr. Aylwin)) commented... on the great advantages that were to be derived from the introduction of such a bill into what was lately Lower Canada, and trusted that he should not have to contend with the opposition of the house in his endeavours to obtain so great a boon.<sup>13</sup>

This called up the Attorney General Mr. Ogden, when some discussion arose as to the printing of the bill.<sup>14</sup>

Colonel Prince begged to assure the house that there was nothing in the bill calculated to alarm the sensitiveness of hon. members. It was a bill calculated to do a great deal of good. As to the printing of it, the hon. gentleman humorously remarked, if, as it had been said, we were in a state of bankruptcy, it was quite needless to add to our burdens an expense that might be avoided.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Hale argued in favour of the bill being printed ; in order that the house might more clearly understand what it meant to provide for.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Aylwin could not agree with the hon. gentleman. He assured the house that he had no covert design in introducing the bill which was simply and justly what it had been described by the hon. member Colonel Prince.<sup>17</sup>

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Saturday next.

Ordered — That one hundred copies of the said Bill be printed for the use of Members of this House.

Petition for Glass Works.

A Petition of John Decow and others of the county of Haldimand, in the District of Niagara, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, praying that an Act may be passed to establish a company, to be called "The Haldimand Glass Works "Company."

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition for Militia Law amendment.

A Petition of Jacob Gross and Daniel High, Ministers of the Menonist Church, and others, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, praying that the laws of 1836 in relation to Militia fines, may be restored and acted upon,

Ordered — That the said Petition to lie upon the table.

Petition for Money for Roads.

A Petition of Alexander Garner and others of the Township of Gainsborough, in the Niagara District, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, praying for a grant of fifty pounds to finish a certain road.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of John Cole for Pension.

A Petition of John Cole, of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, setting forth, that he has served as a British Soldier in several engagements in Upper Canada, during the late war with the United States, under command of Capt. Alexander Cameron, deceased; that he is now seventy years of age, helpless, nearly blind, decrepid, and very poor, and praying that his case may be taken into consideration, and a pension granted him.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

John Kalar, praying Relief from unjust Judgments.

A Petition of John Kalar, of the County of Lincoln, in the Niagara District, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, setting forth, that unjust Judgments have been awarded against him in the Court of requests and district Court, in said district, and praying relief in the premises.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition for Arrears Pension.

A petition of Adam Stull and Peter Lampman of the Township of Grantham, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt and the same was received and read, setting forth, that they receive a pension, each, of twenty pounds per annum, under the authority of an act of the Provincial Parliament of 1838, that they were deprived of their pension for two years after passing of said act, though the conditions demanded by the same have been complied with by petitioners, and praying that such remuneration may be afforded them as tried, faithful, and loyal subjects, they are entitled to,

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition for grant of money to complete Grimsby Harbour, or that it may be made a public work.

A Petition of the President and Directors of the Grimsby Harbor Company was presented to the House, by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, setting forth, that an act of incorporation was granted in 1835, for building a harbour at the mouth of the 40 mile Creek in the Township of Grimsby with a capital of £3000. That £1200 have been subscribed, and £417,19,5 paid in; that from the depressed state of the Country for years past, and in absence of available capital, Petitioners are unable to accomplish the work, and, therefore, pray for a grant of £1500 for that purpose, or that the work may be made a public work.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Bill — Freedom of Elections, read.

Ordered — That Mr. Baldwin have leave to bring in a Bill, the better to provide for the Freedom of Elections throughout this Province and for other purposes therein mentioned,

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Bill — Notaries in the District of Gaspé, read.

Ordered — That Mr. Hamilton have leave to bring in a Bill to amend a certain Ordinance passed in the third year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "an Ordinance to provide permanently for the want of "Notaries in the Inferior District of Gaspé, and to remove doubts "therein mentioned."

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Friday the eighteenth day of June instant.

Niagara contested Election

A Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, Electors of the Town of Niagara, was presented the House by Mr. Baldwin and the same was received, and read, setting forth :

That at the last Election of a Member to serve in this Present Parliament, for the said Town of Niagara, Henry John Boulton, Esquire, and Edward Clarke Campbell, Esquire, were Candidates to represent the said Town.

That a Poll being demanded, the same was granted, and proceeded on, and John L. Alma, Esquire acted thereat as Returning Officer.

That at and during the said Election, the said John L. Alma demeaned himself in an arbitrary, partial, violent, and illegal manner, greatly to the vexation of the Electors in the interest of the said Henry

John Boulton, and to the prejudice of the said Henry John Boulton, as such Candidate, and contrary to the duty of the said Returning Officer.

Niagara Election.

That the said Returning Officer frequently decided questions against the said Henry John Boulton, while under the influence of such violent passion and excitement, as to be incapable of exercising a sound and impartial judgment, after refusing to hear reasoning or agreement against the course he was pursuing, and with unbecoming heat and violent jesticulation, arbitrarily deciding questions against the right of Electors, to vote in favour of the said Henry John Boulton, where a due sense of Justice, and a calm and unbiassed consideration of the circumstances would have produced a contrary decision,

That the said John L. Alma, illegally, knowingly, and wilfully received colourable and fraudulent votes in favour of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, while he rejected votes, tendered by duly qualified Electors, in favour of the said Henry John Boulton, and that by these means a great many of fraudulent and colourable votes were recorded upon the Poll in favour of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, and many legal votes tendered in favour of the said Henry John Boulton were rejected,

That on closing the Poll on the fifth day of the said election, it was declared by the said Returning Officer, with the consent of the said Henry John Boulton and Edward Clarke Campbell, that the Poll should be finally closed on the following day (being the last day of the Election) at five o'clock, being the hour of adjournment on each day previously during the said Election, and that such agreement was made public by the said Returning Officer, and that his determination to close the Poll at that hour was frequently promulgated during the last day of the Election, and was fully understood by the Electors and Candidates.

That about three o'clock in the afternoon of the last day of the said Election, the said Returning Officer publicly announced his intention of polling his own vote at five minutes before five, the hour fixed for finally closing the Poll as aforesaid, and that as the hour approached, he the said Returning Officer held his watch in his hand, the said Henry John Boulton being then in a nominal minority, although when the hour of five arrived, he the said Henry John Boulton had polled the votes of a number of Electors, equal to the number of persons polled for the said Edward Clarke Campbell, whereupon the numbers being declared equal by the said Returning Officer at the said hour of five, he also declared "that he would not take any more votes, that the Poll was closed, that the numbers were equal, and that he would make no return"

That accordingly he did close the Poll, the Electors separating and going away, the Candidates and the Returning Officer departing from the Poll under the belief that the Poll was finally closed, nevertheless the said Returning Officer, having subsequently consulted in private with person in the interest of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, and in his presence, but in the absence of the said Henry John Boulton, determined about six o'clock to re-open the Poll,

That the arrangement so made by the Returning Officer, and agreed to by the said Candidates for closing Poll on Saturday, at five o'clock in the afternoon, was perfectly just to all parties, and afforded every elector in the Town a full opportunity of tendering his vote before that hour, as the voters had come in very slowly during Friday, and not more than ten persons polled during the whole of Saturday, and that if any elector had abstained from tendering his vote before five o'clock, when the Poll was closed, it was his own fault, as there were long intervals during the day when no elector appeared to vote, and therefore the Returning Officer was bound to close the Poll at the hour appointed, even had an elector tendered his vote after that hour,

That the said Returning Officer did nevertheless, in compliance with Petition against

the advice of the friends of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, illegally and improperly re-open the Poll without the knowledge or consent, and in the absence of the said Henry John Boulton, and did shortly afterwards admit, in favour of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, the votes of Robert Reid and Thomas Buggans, who notoriously had no right to vote, thereby giving a colourable majority to the said Edward Clarke Campbell, in violation of his duty as such Returning Officer, and to the manifest destruction of the purity of Electors.

That the said Edward Clarke Campbell, by himself, his agents, or managers, and by persons employed in his behalf, before, and at, and during the time of such election, was guilty of bribery and other corrupt practices, in order to procure some persons having no right to vote, and others having or claiming to have a right to vote at the said election to vote for him the said Edward Clarke Campbell, and to forbear to vote for the said Henry John Boulton, and in order to procure the said Edward Clarke Campbell to be returned to serve in this present Parliament.

That the said Edward Clarke Campbell, by himself, his agents, or workmen, erected and caused to be erected at his own expense, costs and charges, and after the teste of the said writ of election for this Town in and upon divers vacant plots of ground, in the said Town of Niagara, held, or pretended to be held by certain conveyances, divers small moveable buildings, intended to be represented as dwellinghouses, in order that the persons holding or pretending to hold, by virtue of such conveyances, the said plots of ground, wherever the same were placed, might vote at the Election, for the said Edward Clarke Campbell, under colour of such buildings being their dwelling houses, although in truth, and in fact such buildings were not dwelling houses, within the meaning of the several Acts of Parliament, in that behalf, in fraud of the elective franchise, and in violation of the purity of Election; that the foregoing, and many other circumstances, shewing the right to vote on such newly erected buildings, to have been merely colourable, were admitted before the Returning, Officer, at the Poll, by the persons so voting previous to such illegal votes being received; nevertheless, with a full knowledge of the facts, and circumstances rendering such votes colourable, the said Returning Officer admitted them to vote for the said Edward Clarke Campbell, contrary to his duty in that behalf. That by the foregoing, and divers other illegal, and undue means, a colourable majority of electors appears on the Poll, to have voted for the said Edward Clarke Campbell, whereas in truth, and in fact a majority of the bona fide Electors of the said Town, voted and tendered to vote in favor of the said Henry John Boulton.

Petitioners therefore humbly pray this Honorable House to take the premises into its consideration, and that the House will declare the return of the said Edward Clarke Campbell, to be illegal and void, and that the said Henry John Boulton, ought to have been returned, and that the return to the said writ of Election for said Town may be amended, and the said Henry John Boulton, declared to have been duly elected, and to be sitting member, for the said Town of Niagara, or that this Honorable House will grant such further relief, in the premises as to its wisdom may seem meet.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

From the obstructions by which the regularity of the house was continually interrupted in the absence of rules for its guidance, — it was moved by Mr. Hincks that the house do adjourn.<sup>18</sup>

This gave rise to some discussion in which Sir A. MacNab, Mr. Hincks, Mr. Hale, and Mr. Aylwin took part. The result was that pending the report of the committee upon the subject, the rules of Lower Canada should regulate the proceedings of the house.<sup>19</sup>

Lower Canada Rules acted upon, pending
Report of Committee.

(14)

On Motion of Mr. Hale, seconded by Mr. Cameron, Resolved—That, pending the Report of the Special Committee appointed to frame Rules and Regulations for the Government of this House, the Rules and Regulations of that part of this Province, late the Province of Lower Canada, be adopted and acted upon.

On motion of Sir Allan MacNab, — seconded by Mr. Strachan, Rules and Regulations.

Ordered—That Mr. Attorney General Ogden, and Mr. Attorney General Draper, be added to the Committee appointed to frame Rules and Regulations for the Government of the House,

Then, on motion of Mr. Cartwright,<sup>20</sup>

The House adjourned<sup>21</sup> until one o'clock P. M. tomorrow.

Appendix, 15 June 1841.

((Robert Baldwin's Explanation of his Resignation from Executive Council.))

Mr. Baldwin, upon the question for adjournment, rose and said, he had no intention of opposing the motion, but with the permission of the House, he would explain what might perhaps be considered an inconsistency in his (Mr. Baldwin's) conduct in not declaring, during the discussion of yesterday, the principles which should govern his political conduct. He would avail himself of this, the first opportunity he had had, of explaining why he had left his seat on that occasion. Having tendered his resignation of the situation which he had held under the Government, he had waited for the announcement of the acceptance of that resignation. He should not have made this announcement but for the apparent want of courtesy which might be attributed to him; or by some, perhaps, it might be considered that he was shrinking from the performance of a public duty. He thought it due to the House to explain why he had continued silent on that occasion; of course he could not speak to the question so long as he continued a member of the Government, without at the same time rendering the Government in some degree a participator in the sentiments which he might take occasion to deliver. He could only content himself with giving his vote, and that vote he had given according to his conscience; and although he would not further trespass upon the time of the House at the Present moment, yet when the proper time had arrived, he would be prepared to justify the course which he had taken (hear, hear, hear); he would be prepared to give to the house and country what the house and country had a right to require from him, namely a full explanation of his political views, and in the interim, he would appear to every hon. member of that house, both those who had done him the honour to place some degree of confidence in his political integrity, and also those to whom he had uniformly been opposed, to suspend their judgments, and before he sat down, he would beg permission to offer one word of advice to those gentlemen, both in that house and elsewhere, who had done him the honour to express their confidence in his political integrity, and he hoped they would view it in the same light as ((he)) himself did, as a matter of the utmost importance that they should always thenceforth be united, be firm, be moderate; and he believed if this advice should be followed, they would yet have the satisfaction of being instrumental in the regeneration of our country, and of placing the administration of the affairs of Government on a firm and sure basis — on a footing of equal justice to all. (Hear, hear, hear.)<sup>22</sup>

Wednesday, 16 June 1841.

On motion of Sir Allan MacNab, seconded by Mr. Prince,<sup>1</sup>

Sir A. MacNab moved for a new writ for Middlesex: Thomas Parke, Esq. having vacated his seat by accepting the Surveyor Generalship.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Durand said he did not rise for the purpose of opposing the motion of the hon. and learned gentleman, but before proceeding with the question, he would observe that it was his intention shortly, to bring in a bill for securing the freedom of Elections. He considered it absolutely necessary that such a bill should be passed before any new Election should take place. (Hear, hear, hear.) He would nevertheless support the present motion, with the understanding that no new application of a similar nature should be made previous to the introduction of the measure which he proposed to bring forward.<sup>3</sup>

Col. Prince said he was sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but he really thought it was altogether out of order to interrupt the passing of a measure of this description which was so intimately connected with the privileges of the house, and the rights and liberties of the subjects of this Province.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Hincks observed that the hon. and learned gentleman was mistaken in supposing that his hon. friend was out of order. The House of Assembly had in former instances, in order to secure the freedom of election, refused to allow an application of the kind, until a Bill had been passed providing for the security and freedom of the contemplated election. The hon. and learned and gallant Col. is himself perfectly aware, that there are several petitions to be brought into this House at its present session, complaining of undue returns, on the grounds of violence, and it was his (Mr. Hincks') firm conviction that there are many places in the Province, where it is impossible to hold election free from riot. He (Mr. Hincks) had no disposition to offer a facitious (sic) opposition (hear, hear.)<sup>5</sup>

Col. Prince remarked by way of explanation, that the present was a case entirely independent of Electioneering differences. It was simply this, an hon. gentleman had accepted office under the government, by which he vacated his seat in the house. An application had merely been made to the house, to issue a new writ to supply his place.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Morin said he would merely mention that in England the practice was in all cases in which it was considered necessary to move that the action of the house should be suspended until proper provision were made to meet the exigency of the case. But in this instance he (Mr. M.) really thought there was no necessity for such a course. He could see no impediment whatever to issuing the writ at once. But if those acts of violence which were spoken of had really occurred (sic), the House would not only be perfectly justified in withholding the issuing of a new writ until such a measure were passed, as the hon. gentleman had spoken of, but it would be their imperative duty so to do.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Hale said, it appeared to him that the hon. gentleman had overlooked a very material point. As to the necessity of passing such a law as would secure, if possible, the freedom of elections, there seemed to be no question. But he would ask the hon. members if they were disposed to allow the county of Middlesex to remain unrepresented during the passing of the law?<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Price said he rose not for the purpose of opposing the present motion, but for the purpose of stating that he was determined to oppose every application for the issuing of new writs until proper provision were made for securing the freedom of Elections, as long as he had the honor of a seat in that house — he to the full extent of his power would protect the freedom of Elections.<sup>9</sup> Mr. Price was determined to oppose all writs where violence had taken place; a resolution that was confirmed by the excesses that he had witnessed during his own Election.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Boswell said it was not at all surprising that there should be an universal cry for a law which should have for its object the securing to the Electors of this Province full protection in the exercise of this Elective franchise — a measure of that description was imperatively required.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Baldwin asserted, that unless a powerful barrier was opposed to the ruffianism exhibited in Electioneering struggles, there was no personal security for Electors. That in the present state of things, it was dangerous to exercise the franchise.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Cartwright pronounced such assertions to be a libel.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Baldwin concurred in the opinion, that the protection of the freedom of Elections was a measure which required their earnest attention. That riots of a most disgraceful character had occurred both in the Upper and Lower portions of the Province, was perfectly well known to all.

To such an alarming extent had the practice of violence and intimidation been carried, that even the members of the administration in one part of Canada at least, had been parties to them. (Hear, hear.) He wished it to be understood, however, that he was far from believing that the representative of a Constitutional Sovereign had taken part in any such proceeding; and he had hoped that His Excellency in his Speech from the Throne would have made some recommendation for the prevention of this recurrence. He thought the House would be fully justified in deferring the writs of Election in all future cases until a Bill should be passed. But, although, under the peculiar circumstances by which the seat for Middlesex had become vacant — it would appear that the House is bound to issue a new writ immediately; yet it does not necessarily follow that this House is bound to issue a new writ in all cases. Although the County of Middlesex was not on this occasion the scene of these riots, it was not many years ago the scene of a most disgraceful riot. (Hear, hear, hear.)

By voting for the present motion he did not intend to give any pledge for his vote on future application for the issuing of new writs of Election.<sup>14</sup>

Atty. Gen. Draper said that after the words which had fallen from the hon. and learned Gentleman, there could be no doubts of the right of this House to exercise its own discretion. He would not differ from that hon. Gentleman upon that point, all that he would say at the present moment was, that he did not think it necessary to defer the issuing of a writ merely, because there was a bare possibility that a protective measure might be required. His hon. friend had drawn very truly a distinction between cases of violence and the case of a seat having been vacated by the acceptance of office; and he, (Mr. Draper) thought that the latter was a case in which the House should take care that a constituency should not be for one moment unrepresented. With reference to the members of the administration having been parties to acts of violence, and undue interference in Elections, it is quite clear that if the administration is to be made answerable for the riotous proceedings which take place at Elections, it will be essentially and in fact a responsible administration. (Laughter,) so that the object so earnestly desired by that hon. Gentleman (Mr. Baldwin) has been already attained, (hear, hear,) and this might possibly, be the grounds for the hon. Gentleman's leaving us. (Hear, hear.)<sup>15</sup> He would add one other remark, that that hon. Gentleman was better acquainted than himself with all practical questions of Legislation.<sup>16</sup>

New Writ to issue
for Middlesex.

Ordered — That Mr. Speaker, do issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, to make out a new writ for the Election of one Knight of the shire, to serve in the present Parliament, for the County of Middlesex, in the room and place of Thomas Parke, Esquire, who, since his Election, hath accepted the office of Her Majesty's Surveyor General for this Province.

A Petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the County of Huron, Esquire, was presented to the House by Mr. Prince, and the same was received and read setting forth :

Petition against the Huron Election.

That at the last Election for the county of Huron, the Petitioner and James McGill Strachan, of the City of Toronto, Esquire, were the only Candidates for the representation of the said County, and that Henry Hyndman of the said County, Esquire, executed the office of Returning Officer at the said Election.

That a Poll being demanded for each Candidate, the same was granted and proceeded on from the twenty-second day of March, until the twenty-seventh day of the same month, when the said Returning Officer declared the majority to be in favor of the said James McGill Strachan; the number polled for the Petitioner being 149, and for the said James McGill Strachan, 159, and the said James McGill Strachan, was thereupon returned by the said Returning Officer as duly elected.

That at the said Election divers persons claiming to vote in respect of estates held by them under deeds of conveyance, were admitted to poll for the said James McGill Strachan, and counted on the poll in his favor, who were not intitled to vote at the said election, they not having been in actual possession, or in receipt of the rents and profits of the estates in respect of which they voted, by virtue of the said respective deeds of conveyance to them, for twelve calender months, next before the said election; nor the said deeds of conveyance, under which they claimed to hold the estates in respect of which they severally voted, having been registered twelve calender months, before the holding of the said election.

That also votes were polled and given in favor of the said James McGill Strachan by persons who had not in fact, at the time of the said election, any freehold in the lands in respect of which they voted, that also several persons voted at the said election in favor of the said James McGill Strachan, who were not at the full age of twenty-one years at the time of holding the said election.

That by the admission of persons to vote at the said election, who from the above, and other various legal disabilities, were incompetent to vote for any candidate at the said election, the said James McGill

Strachan obtained a colourable majority of ten votes, and was therefore returned to serve in this Honorable House for the said county of Huron, to the great prejudice of the Petitioner, who had, upon the said election, as he submits it will appear, upon a scrutiny of the poll, a majority of good and legal votes, and is therefore entitled to take his seat in this Honorable House, as the representative member of the said county.

Petitioner therefore humbly prays, that the said James McGill Strachan may be declared not duly elected, and that the Petitioner may be declared duly elected and may be substituted in the place of the said James McGill Strachan, to take his seat as knight to represent the said county in the present Provincial Parliament, and that this Honorable House will grant such further relief to Petitioner as the merits of the case may require.

Ordered—That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Upon an enquiry of Mr. Hincks, respecting the time for entering upon the trial of contested Elections, Col. Prince stated that according as the law stood, fourteen days were allowed to elapse before any action could be had upon any petition on contested Elections.<sup>17</sup>

A Petition of David Roblin, and others, freeholders of the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, in the Midland District, was presented to the House by Mr. Hincks, and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That the Petitioners are freeholders in the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, in the Midland District of the said Province, and as such are entitled to vote at the election of a member to represent the said incorporated counties in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province.

Petition against Lennox and Addington
Election.

That at the election of such member of the Legislative Assembly for the said incorporated counties, held at Bath, on Monday the fifteenth day of March last, Benjamin Ham, Esquire, and John Solomon Cartwright, Esquire, were respectively proposed as candidates to represent the said incorporated counties in such Legislative Assembly, and Allan McDonell, Esquire, the sheriff of the said Midland District acted as the Returning Officer and presided at the said election.

That the said John Solomon Cartwright, by means of bribes, treats, rewards, or favors, or promises of bribes, treats, rewards, or favors, paid, given, or offered, or promised to be paid or given by himself, or others, as his friends, agents, committee, or supporters, to divers freeholders and electors of the said counties, and by threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal acts, induced certain of such electors to tender their votes at the said election, for him the said John Solomon Cartwright, and the said Allan McDonell admitted the votes of such electors for the said John Solomon Cartwright.

That the said John Solomon Cartwright, by reason of such bribes, treats, or favors, or promises thereof, and by the said threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal conduct, became and was and is disqualified from sitting in this present Parliament as a member of the Legislative Assembly, and ought not to have been returned, as the member for the said counties at the late election.

That during the said election, the said Allan McDonell conducted himself as such Returning Officer, in an arbitrary, partial, illegal and overbearing manner, in order to intimidate the electors at the said election, and to favour the said John Solomon Cartwright, and that by reason thereof, freeholders, desirous of tendering and recording their votes in favor of the said Benjamin Ham, were prevented from so doing, and the said Allan McDonell, by the rejection of good votes tendered for the said Benjamin Ham, and also by his arbitrary, partial, illegal, and overbearing conduct, induced the said Benjamin Ham, to relinquish the contest, when many votes remained unpolled, and the said Allan McDonell, illegally and improperly returned the said John Solomon Cartwright, as dully elected, although the said John Solomon Cartwright, was and is disqualified, as above set forth, from sitting in the said Legislative Assembly; and the majority on the poll in favour of the said John Solomon Cartwright, was only collusive and colourable, and the said Benjamin Ham, was and is entitled to the majority of the good and legal votes.

Petitioners therefore humbly pray the House to enquire into the merits of the said election, and the conduct of the said John Solomon Cartwright, and Allan McDonell, in regard thereto, and to relieve the petitioners, either by requiring the said Allan McDonell, to amend the return made by him of the said John Solomon Cartwright, by inserting the name of the said Benjamin Ham, in such return, in place of that of the said John Solomon Cartwright, disqualified from sitting in the Legislative Assembly, by reason of the bribery and other corrupt and illegal acts, committed by him the said John Solomon Cartwright, as above mentioned, or cause a new writ to issue for the election of a fit and proper person to represent the said counties of Lennox and Addington, in place of the said John Solomon Cartwright. Petitioners crave permission to offer evidence in support of the allegations of their petition, before a Committee of this Honorable House, which may be appointed to try the merits of the said election.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of Benjamin Ham, of the township of Ernestown, was presented to the House by Mr. Hincks, and the same was received and read, setting forth : that at the election of a member to serve in the first Parliament to be holden in the united Province of Canada, for the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, which said election was held at the village of Bath, in the said incorporated counties, on Monday, the fifteenth day of March last, petitioner and John Solomon Cartwright, now the sitting member, were respectively proposed as candidates to represent the said incorporated counties in the Legislative Assembly of the said first Parliament, and Allan McDonell, Esquire, the Sheriff of the said Midland District, acted as the Returning Officer, and presided at he said election.

That the said John Solomon Cartwright, by means of bribes, treats, rewards, or favors, paid, given, or offered, or promised to be paid or given by himself or by others, as his friends, agents, committee, or supporters, to divers freeholders and electors of the said counties ; and by threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal acts, induced certain of such electors to tender their votes at the said election, for him the said John Solomon Cartwright, and the said Allan McDonell admitted the votes of such electors, for the said John Solomon Cartwright.

That the said John Solomon Cartwright, by reason of such bribes, treats, or favors, or promises thereof, and by the said threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal conduct, become, and was, and is disqualified from sitting in this present Parliament, as a member of the Legislative Assembly, and ought not to have been returned as the member for the said counties at the late election.

That during the said election, the said Allan McDonell conducted himself, as such Returning Officer, in an arbitrary, partial, illegal, and overbearing manner, in order to intimidate the electors at the election, and to favor the said John Solomon Cartwright, and that by reason thereof, freeholders desirous of tendering and recording their votes in favor of petitioner, were prevented from so doing ; and the said Allan McDonell, by the rejection of good votes tendered for petitioner, and also by his arbitrary, partial, illegal, and overbearing conduct, induced the Petitioner to relinquish the contest, when many votes remained unpoll, and the said Allan McDonell, illegally, and improperly returned the said John Solomon Cartwright, as duly elected, although the said John Solomon Cartwright, was and is disqualified, as above set forth, from sitting in the said Legislative Assembly, and the majority on the poll, in favor of the said John Solomon Cartwright, was only collusive and colourable, and that petitioner was and is entitled to the majority of the good and legal votes.

Petitioner therefore prays the House to inquire into the merits of the said election, and the conduct of the said John Solomon Cartwright, and Allan McDonell in regard thereto, and to relieve petitioner either by requiring the said Allan McDonell, to amend the return made by him of the said John Solomon Cartwright, by inserting the name of petitioner in such return in place of that of the said John Solomon Cartwright, disqualified from sitting in the said Legislative Assembly, by reason of the bribery and other corrupt and illegal acts committed by him the said John Solomon Cartwright, as above mentioned, or cause a new writ to issue for the election of a fit and proper person to represent the said counties of Lennox and Addington, in the place of the said John Solomon Cartwright.

Petitioner craves permission to offer evidence in support of the allegations of this petition, before the committee of this House, to be appointed to try the merits of said election.

Ordered—That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of divers freeholders residing in the district of Gore, was presented to the House by Mr. Durand, and the same was received and read, praying to be incorporated for the purpose of making a turnpike road up the mountain, east of Mr. Rees Tunis, of East Flamborough, in the district of Gore.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Cyprian Morgan for Naturalization.

A Petition of Cyprian Morgan, of the township of Yonge, in the district of Johnstown, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received and read, setting forth his desire to become possessed of the rights and privileges of a British Subject, and praying that a law may be passed conferring the same upon him.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of H. Clarke for Naturalization.

A Petition of Harvey Clarke, of the Township of Yonge, in the District of Johnstown, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received and read, setting forth same as last.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of R. J. Turner for authority to practice the Law.

A Petition of Robert J. Turner, of the Town of Kingston, was presented to the House by Mr. Price, and the same was received and read, setting forth : that petitioner is duly admitted a Solicitor and Attorney, and hath practised in the Courts of Chancery, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, in England, for a period of 18 years, and hath been engaged for some time as an Equity draftsman, in this Province, and being desirous to practice as a Solicitor in the Court of Chancery, and Attorney in the Queen's Bench, humbly prays that an act may be passed to authorise the Court of Chancery and Court of Queen's Bench of this Province, respectively, to admit him to practice therein as a Solicitor and Attorney.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Contested Election of county of Kent.

On motion of Sir Allan MacNab, — seconded by Mr. Aylwin.

Ordered — That Thomas Amiot, Esquire, Clerk of the Crown in chancery, do appear before this House, tomorrow, the seventeenth day of June instant, with the Return of the County of Kent, and that he do lay the same before this House.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Small said that this was not the proper way to proceed — the petition should lie upon the table, and be considered in its turn, after the customary notice.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Roblin suggested that it would be proper to appoint a select Committee to enquire into the conduct of the Returning Officer.<sup>20</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he thought the question with regard to contested Elections should be disposed of. He had had the honor of presenting a Petition complaining of the Election for the County of Kent, and he was prepared to show authorities to prove that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, might be instructed to order the Returning Officer to amend his return. If that Returning Officer had conducted himself in the manner it had been represented to him, it would be highly improper that he should be allowed to escape punishment. — (Hear, hear.)<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Small objected to this course of procedure, as not being in order.<sup>22</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) said Sir Allan was in order.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Thorburn observed, that the House ought to be in possession of facts, not assertions, before the Clerk in Chancery was called down to amend the Return.<sup>24</sup>

Col. Prince said it was not his intention to oppose the motion of the hon. and learned Gentleman, but as he (Col. Prince) had a knowledge of the particulars of the case, he could not sit still and allow a prejudice to be created against the Returning Officer, whilst they had nothing before the House upon which to form their judgments, except the bare assertion of the petitions, and upon looking at the petition itself, it would be found contradictory in itself. Charging the Returning Officer with fraud in not making a return, and in the very next sentence declaring that he returned Mr. Woods by a majority of Fifty-three. He would protest against any hon. Gentleman speaking warmly against the conduct of that Officer, upon so imperfect information as they were at present in possession of.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Morin considered the motion to be in order.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he thought it quite competent for the House to order the return to be amended.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Durand from the observations of hon. members, was led to understand that this was a special return.

Cries of question ! question !<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Boswell was desirous that previous to the question being put, the house should be in possession of the proper mode of proceeding.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Aylwin was surprised that so plain and intelligible a motion should have given rise to any misconception. It was simply calling upon the Clerk of the Crown Office to produce the writ returning the member for Kent. When in possession of this return the house could proceed to adopt any ulterior measures that it thought proper.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Johnston excited some little amusement by his peculiar mode of elucidating the question....<sup>31</sup>

Contested Election of the County of
Montreal

A petition of divers electors of the County of Montreal, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read, setting forth,

That an election was held on Monday the twenty-second day of March last, at the Village of St. Laurent, by E. M. Leprohon Esquire, Returning Officer, and for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the said County in the Assembly of the Province.

The candidates were A. M. Delisle and James Leslie, the latter having been declared to have the shew of hands in his favor, a Poll was demanded by the supporters of A. M. Delisle, which was opened by the Returning Officer, who continued to receive for about the space of an hour without interruption, the votes of the electors.

At this period the majority in favor of James Leslie, was rapidly increasing, when a most brutal attack was made upon his supporters by a number of hired bullies and other persons in the interest of the said A. M. Delisle, which resulted in the death of one person, and in grievous bodily injuries to many.

In consequence of the riot, the Returning Officer adjourned the Poll until the following day, for the purpose of obtaining, as he publicly declared, the assistance of the military in order to enable him to preserve order.

The Poll was re-opened next morning by the Returning Officer, although he had been refused military assistance, and was aware that the village was occupied by a large body of men brought from a distant county, in that part of the Province, formerly known as Upper Canada, together with an immense number of persons from town, partizans of the said A. M. Delisle, at whose head was a man who the evening before advised them to accompany him to the election with fire arms, to avenge the death of the bully, who was killed the previous day, and prevent the return of the said James Leslie.

By these men the electors residing in St. Laurent were driven from their homes, and those who had come from the adjoining parishes returned, rather than have recourse to violence, which must have terminated with bloodshed before they could have approached the Poll.

Notwithstanding these occurrences, and the protest of the other candidate the Returning Officer considered it his duty to return A. M. Delisle as duly elected.

Petitioners therefore pray that, in consequence of the violence used by the supporters of the said A. M. Delisle, to prevent the electors from peaceably recording their votes, this House will either declare that James Leslie, who at the time the riot commenced and the Poll was adjourned, was in the majority, should have been returned, or cause the election to be annulled, and afford an opportunity to the county, freely to elect the person of its choice.

In the latter case Petitioners pray that the House would adopt such measures as in its wisdom may seem meet to prevent the occurrence of similar scenes, otherwise they must cease to exercise their elective franchise, or go armed to resist, with effect, any attempt that may be made to interfere with them in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

Petitioners further impress upon the House the necessity of an immediate investigation into the disgraceful occurrences that have taken place at several of the elections in this district, in order to bring to condign punishment, the conspirators, who have dared, by the means of hired bands of armed ruffians, to murder and maltreat the electors, and impose upon them as their representatives, persons in whom they have no confidence.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Contested Election of the County of

A Petition of James Leslie, of the City of Montreal, Merchant, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That an election was held on Monday the twenty-second day of March last, at the village of St. Laurent by E. M. Leprohon, Esquire, Returning Officer, for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the county of Montreal in the Legislative Assembly in the Province.

That the Candidates were A. M. Delisle, Esquire, one of the Clerks of the Peace for the District, and the Petitioner, who having been declared to have the shew of hands in his favor, a poll was demanded by the supporters of the said A. M. Delisle, which was opened by the Returning Officer, who continued to received for about the space of an hour without interruption the votes of the electors.

That at this period the majority in favor of the petitioner was rapidly increasing, when a most brutal attack was made upon his supporters by a number of hired bullies, and other persons in the interest of the said A. M. Delisle, which resulted in the death of one person, and in grievous bodily injuries to many.

That in consequence of the riot, the Returning Officer adjourned the poll until the following day, for the purpose of obtaining, as he publicly declared, the assistance of the Military, in order to enable him to preserve order.

That the poll was re-opened next morning by the Returning Officer, although he had been refused Military assistance, and was aware that the village was occupied by a large body of men brought from a distant county, in that part of the Province formerly known as Upper Canada, together with an immense number of persons from town, partizans of the said A. M. Delisle, at whose head was a man who, the evening before, ordered them to accompany him to the election with fire arms, to avenge the death of the bully that was killed the previous day, to prevent the return of the Petitioner.

That by these men the electors residing in St. Laurent were driven from their homes, and those who had come from the adjoining parishes, returned rather than have recourse to violence, which must have terminated in bloodshed before they could have approached the poll.

That notwithstanding these occurrences and the protest of the Petitioner, the Returning Officer proclaimed A. M. Delisle, as duly elected. And Petitioner prays that, in consequence of the violence used by the supporters of the said A. M. Delisle, to prevent the electors from peaceably recording their votes, that the House will either declare that the Petitioner, who at the time the riot commenced and the poll was adjourned, was in the majority, should have been proclaimed as duly elected, or cause the election to be annulled, and afford an opportunity to the county freely to elect the person of its choice.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition in behalf of Timber Trade.

A Petition of William Walker, and other inhabitants of the City of Quebec, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That the export trade of this Province in Timber and Deals has grown to a great extent, under protecting duties established by the Imperial Parliament since 1810, and since maintained with one exception, namely, the imposition of a duty of 10s. per load on Canadian Timber, in 1821 : that the Inhabitants of the colonies have confided in the regulations made by acts of the Imperial Parliament in its wisdom unsolicited by them. That the supply of British Manufacture is chiefly obtained by means of this trade ; that the alarm has become general, fearing change in the protection heretofore given to the said trade, by recent proceedings in the Imperial Parliament ; and praying that such representations may be made to Her Majesty, as to the wisdom of the Assembly may seem meet and expedient.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition in behalf of Timber Trade.

Petition to be Printed

Ordered — That one hundred copies of the said Petition, be printed in the English and French languages, for the use of the members of this house.

Petition on subject of Dower.

A Petition of divers inhabitants of the Home District, was presented to the House by Mr. Small, and the same was received and read, setting forth — That doubt and anxiety have lately arisen respecting the law of dower. — That a very general practice prevails of taking deeds of conveyance, without reference to the law of dower — That a question has arisen, which is likely to cause much difficulty, and litigation, in absence of any defined law, in respect to rights of widows to improvements made on lands subsequent to conveyance made by their husbands, and praying for an act for remedy thereof.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition — Bank at St. Catharines.

A Petition of George Rykert, and others, inhabitants of the District of Niagara, was presented to the House by Mr. Merritt, and the same was received and read, setting forth — That they have addressed memorials to the Provincial Parliament, from year to year since 1834, praying for the establishment of a Bank at Saint Catharines — That a Bill has several times, passed the House of Assembly, to charter such Bank, but never received the Royal assent — That they have been refused privileges, granted to other portions of the province, and praying that the increased business on the Welland Canal, and in the district generally, may induce the House to grant them a charter with a capital of five hundred thousand pounds.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition for authority to loan money for improving roads.

A petition of John Grubb, Thomas Musson, and others, inhabitants of the Townships of Etobicoke, Vaughan, King, and other places in the Home District, was presented to the House by Mr. Price, and the same was received and read, setting forth — That the road leading from the Peacock Inn, on Dundas street, through said townships, is the only great thoroughfare to a rich, and fertile section of the Home District ; that it would conduce greatly to the prosperity of the inhabitants of said townships, and others, if said line of road, or a portion of it were planked, drained, and made straight ; that tolls might be collected to pay principal, and interest of £3,500 ; which sum would improve said road in manner desired for a distance of six miles — Petitioners, therefore, pray that a bill may be passed authorising the raising by loan the sum of £3,500, or such other sum, as to the wisdom of the House may seem meet for the accomplishment of said improvement.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Bill for Relief of Disabled and Infirm.

Ordered — That Mr. Merritt, have leave to bring in a bill for the relief of disabled, and infirm persons.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received, and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time on monday week,

Petition for authority to build a bridge across the Grand River.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Grand River Lands, in the county of Haldimand, in the District of Niagara, and of other adjacent places, in the District of Gore, was presented to the House by Mr. Thompson, and the same was received and read, setting forth, the necessity of the erection of a bridge across the Grand River, at the village of Caledonia, in the county of Haldimand — That Petitioners and others have already subscribed about £400 towards the erection of a bridge over the Grand River at said place, and that sufficient will speedily be obtained for the accomplishment of said object, if a law be passed authorising the same, and praying that an act may be passed, for the purpose, authorising the levying of tolls, or under such regulations as may seem meet to the House.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Newspapers to be subscribed for by Clerk.

On Motion of Mr. Black, seconded by the Hon. Mr. Moffatt.

Resolved — That the Clerk of this House be authorised to subscribe for the newspapers published in this province, for the purpose of being laid on the table of the library, and to complete the files already therein for the use of the members.

Bill for improvement of Administration of Justice.

Ordered — That Mr. Black, have leave to bring in a bill for improving the administration of criminal justice in this Province.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time upon this day fortnight.

Bill for Amending Laws — Larceny and other offences.

Ordered — That Mr. Black, have leave to bring in a bill for consolidating, and amending the laws in this province, relative to larceny and other offences connected therewith.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time upon this day fortnight.

Bill — Benefit of Clergy — Larceny,
Injuries to person,
&c. — repeal.

Ordered — That Mr. Black have leave to bring in a bill for repealing various statutes in this province, relative to the benefit of clergy, and to larceny, and other offences connected therewith, to malicious injuries to property, and to offences against the person.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received, and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time upon this day fortnight.

Bill — Offences against the person.

Ordered — That Mr. Black, have leave to bring in a bill for consolidating, and amending the laws in this province, relative to offences against the person.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time upon this day fortnight.

Bill — Malicious injuries to property.

Ordered — That Mr. Black, have leave to bring in a bill for consolidating and amending the laws in this province, relative to malicious injuries to property.

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time upon this day fortnight.

Petition of Ichabod
Wing for indemnity.

A Petition of Ichabod Wing, of Chautauque, in the State of New York, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received, and read, setting forth — That in the year 1813, petitioner was called upon to bear Arms, as a militia man ; but being a member, or associate of the society called Quakers or Friends, conscientiously refused ; that he was fined, and committed to the gaol of the district ; that while confined, as aforesaid, namely on the 7th day of February A. D. 1813, a party of Troops from the United States, under a Captain Forsyth, forcibly took possession of said gaol, and carried away the petitioner with many other British Subjects, as prisoners to Ogdensburg in the State of New York ; that he never bore arms against the British Government nor took the oath of allegiance to any foreign power, nor done any act contrary to his duty as a British Subject — That when taken prisoner, as aforesaid, he was the owner of four hundred acres of Land in the 5th and 6th concessions of Elizabethtown, which was forfeited and vested in the crown in consequence of his so leaving the province, which land has since been sold ; and praying for authority to traverse the inquisition by which his land became forfeited, or such other relief as may be thought meet.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition contested election, county of Terrebonne.

A Petition of A. Gigonell, Jean Bte. Constantin, and others, electors of the county of Terrebonne, was presented to the House by Mr. Aylwin and the same was received and read, setting forth,

That an election was held on Monday the twenty-second day of March last, at the place commonly called New Glasgow, in the said county, by John McKenzie, Esquire, Returning Officer, for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the said county of Terrebonne in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province.

That the candidates were Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, Esquire, Advocate, of the City of Montreal, and Dr. Michael McCulloch, Physician, of the same place, who both appeared on the Hustings ;

That after having gone through all the preliminary forms as prescribed by Law, the said Returning Officer did require the electors then and there present, to name the person of whom they were willing to make choice, as a member, to serve in the said Assembly, for the said county of Terrebonne, when the said Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, had the show of Hands in his favor, whereupon a poll was demanded by Dr. Michael McCulloch, or some of his supporters ; and that afterwards, amidst violence and blood shed which forced the said Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, to withdraw by protesting against the Returning Officer, the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, was by the said Returning Officer, illegally and unduly proclaimed member elect for the said county.

And petitioners now pray, that the said election and proclamation, so made by the said Returning Officer, of the said Michael McCulloch, as having been returned for the said county, be annulled and set aside for, among others, the following reasons, viz :

1st. Because the Hustings was not held at the place pointed out in the advertisements of the said Returning Officer.

2nd. Because the said Returning Officer, after having read the writ of election, at a certain place, determined upon taking the votes of the electors in a house situated at a more distant and other place, which to the knowledge and in the sight of the said Returning Officer, was then and there kept and surrounded with force and violence by several hundreds of men armed with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, the greatest number of whom were strangers to the said county and had no right to vote therein, all of which being done in the view and with an intent to prevent the electors from going to vote at the said election.

3rd. Because the said Returning Officer proceeded with the said election, in the presence of several hundreds of men armed with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, without, on his part, having taken any means to disperse or arrest them, or cause them to retire from the Hustings and without even having made any attempt to do so, representing or declaring himself then and there incapable of interposing his authority to maintain peace and order, and give the electors a free access to the Hustings.

4th. Because, previous to and during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer at the said election, in his sight and to his certain knowledge, several of the electors, whilst peaceably repairing to the place of the said election, were assailed and beaten with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, without the said Returning Officer having taken any means to protect them, then and there declaring himself incapable of maintaining peace and order at the said election.

5th. Because scenes of violence occurred during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, to prevent the peaceable electors from freely exercising their elective franchise, and that it was then and there evident, by the threats, and conduct of the great number of persons (sic), who then and there, during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, and in his presence, were then armed with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, that the peaceable electors, of the said county could not have approached the Poll to give their votes, without rendering other scenes of violence, that would have led to bloodshed and to the murder of a great number of persons inevitably.

6th. Because, during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, at the place of the said election, several persons were cruelly beaten and ill treated with clubs and staves, among whom was found a man named Toussaint Rose, of St. Martin, in the said county who afterwards died of wounds inflicted on him, with clubs, during the said election.

7th. Because in consequence of the acts of violence and intimidation above related, in order to avoid greater disturbances and a greater effusion of blood, no other means remained to the said Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, one of the candidates, and to the electors willing to give him their suffrages, but to withdraw from the place of election, and protest against the said election and the proceedings of the said Returning Officer.

8th. Because hired bands of men, strangers to the said county, armed with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, have been by the said supporters, of the said Michael McCulloch, brought from distant parts of the Province, to the place of the said election, in order to frighten, intimidate, beat, and even to murder the peaceable electors, at the said election.

9th. Because, at the costs and charge of the said Dr. Michael McCulloch as well by himself as by means of others in his interest or favor, houses of public entertainment have been opened and supported, or caused to be opened and supported before and during the said election, in the limits of the said county, the whole in contravention to the law.

All of which allegations petitioners are ready to prove.

Wherefore petitioners, pray the House to take their petition, into its serious consideration, and declare the above mentioned election null and illegal, as also the proclamation made by the said Returning officer, at the said election, of the person of the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, to represent the electors of the said county of Terrebonne in the Legislative Assembly of this province ; and that the House would adopt such measures, as in its wisdom may seem meet, to prevent the occurrence of similar scenes, otherwise they must cease to exercise their elective franchise, or go armed to resist with effect any attempt that may be made to interfere with them in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

Petitioners desire further earnestly, and solemnly to impress upon the House, the necessity of an immediate investigation into the disgraceful occurrences which have taken place at several of the elections in this district in order to bring to condign punishment the conspirators who have dared, by means of hired bands of armed ruffians, to murder and ill treat the electors, and impose upon them as their representatives, persons in whom they have no confidence.

Ordered— That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

The same.

A Petition of Louis H. Lafontaine, Esquire, of the City of Montreal, was presented to the House by Mr. Aylwin, and the same was received and read setting forth :

That an election was held on Monday, the twenty-second day of the month of March last, at the place commonly called New Glasgow in the county of Terrebonne, in the said Province, by John McKenzie, Esquire, Returning Officer, for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the said county of Terrebonne in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province.

That the candidates, at the said election, were Dr Michael McCulloch, Physician of the City of Montreal, and petitioner, and that they both appeared on the Hustings at the election.

That after having gone through all the preliminary forms as prescribed by law, the said Returning Officer did require the electors then and there present to name the person of whom they were willing to make choice, as a member to serve in the said Assembly for the said county of Terrebonne, when the said Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, had the show of hands in his favor, whereupon a Poll was demanded by the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, or some of his supporters, and that afterwards, amidst violence and bloodshed, which forced petitioner to withdraw by protesting against the Returning Officer, the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, was by the said Returning Officer illegally, and unduly proclaimed member elect of the said county.

Petitioner now prays that the said election, and proclamation so made by the said Returning Officer of the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, as having been returned for the said county, be annulled and set aside for, among others, the following reasons viz.

1st. Because the Hustings was not held at the place pointed out in the advertisements of the said Returning Officer.

3rd. Because previous to and during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, at the said election, in his sight and to his certain knowledge, several of the electors, whilst peaceably repairing to the place of the said election were assailed and beaten with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, without the said Returning Officer having taken any means to protect them, then and there declaring himself incapable of maintaining peace and order at the said election.

4th. Because, such scenes of violence occurred during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, as prevented the peaceable electors from freely exercising their elective franchise, and it was then and there evident by the threats and conduct of the great number of persons who, during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, and in his presence, were thus armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, that the peaceable electors of the said county could not have approached the Poll, to give in their votes, without rendering inevitable other scenes of violence that would have led to bloodshed, and to the murder of a great number of persons

5th. Because during the proceedings of the said Returning Officer, at the place of the said election, several persons were cruelly beaten and illtreated with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, among whom was an individual named Toussaint Rose of St. Martin, in the said county, who afterwards died of the wounds inflicted on him with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons during the said election.

6th. Because in consequence of the acts of violence and intimidation above related, no means of avoiding greater disturbance and preventing further effusion of blood, remained to the Petitioner, one of the said candidates, and to the electors willing to give him their suffrages, but to withdraw from the place of election, and protest against the said election and the proceedings of the said Returning Officer.

7th. Because hired bands of men, strangers to the said county, armed with clubs, staves and other offensive weapons, were by the supporters of the said Dr. Michael McCulloch, brought from distant parts of the province, to the place of the said election in order to frighten, intimidate, beat and even to murder the peaceable electors, at the said election.

All which allegations petitioner is ready to prove.

Wherefore petitioner prays the House, to take this his petition, into its serious consideration, and declare the above mentioned election null and illegal, as also the proclamation made by the said Returning Officer, at the said election of the person of the said Dr. Michael McCulloch to represent the electors of the said county of Terrebonne in the Legislative Assembly of this Province of Canada.

Ordered — That the petition do lie upon the table

Then on motion of Mr. Henry Smith, seconded by Mr. Hamilton. The House adjourned until tomorrow.

Appendix, 16 June 1841.

Mr. Morris presented and read the petition of George C. Kornor and Elizabeth his wife<sup>33</sup> ...residing in (sic) the Johnson district<sup>34</sup> ...praying for a divorce on the ground of incompatibility of temper.<sup>35</sup>

Sir A. MacNab opposed the petition; regarding a compliance with it, as calculated to loosen those ties, that society regards as sacred and inviolable; and giving encouragement to parties, perhaps upon some temporary disagreement, to pray for that relief, that they might regret having applied for thereafter.<sup>36</sup> A petition of that nature should not be entertained by the House. If they were to be called upon to sever the matrimonial band, merely on account of the ill temper of the parties they would have enough to do. — (Laughter.)<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Neilson suggested that it should be allowed to lie upon the table, without taking any immediate action upon the subject of the petition, that Members might have an opportunity of considering the subject. The Marriage is that essential bond of society which should not be lightly dealt with.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Viger concurred with the hon. Gentleman in saying that it was too serious and important a matter to be harshly interfered with.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Small said that however serious the subject of the petition might be, it was certainly a serious matter for that House to refuse to receive a Petition upon any subject, they were bound to receive all petitions which were respectfully worded.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Merritt coincided with the last speaking, in thinking it would be a dangerous precedent (sic) for that House to refuse to receive the petition.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Roblin was opposed to receiving the petition, they ought not to hold out an inducement for a man and his wife to quarrel. — (Laughter.)<sup>42</sup>

At the suggestion of Mr. Draper, the hon. gentleman ((Mr. Morris)) consented to withdraw the petition.<sup>43</sup>

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Mr. Durand gave notice, for Tuesday week, to name a Select Committee to enquire and report on the state of a reserved tract of land in the Wellington District, commonly called the Queen's Bush, and now being settled by a great number of squatters. For Monday next, to bring in a Bill to alter and amend the Registry Laws of Upper Canada. For Monday week, to bring in a Bill to alter and amend the law for the destruction of wolves in this Province.<sup>44</sup>

Captain Steele gave notice for Friday, for a Bill to amend the West Gwilliamsbury Road Act, by adding to the number of Commissioners provided by that Act.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Hincks gave notice for tomorrow for a Bill for the more equal distribution of the property of persons dying intestate in Upper Canada.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Price gave notice, for the 24th, for the appointment of a Committee to investigate the riot committed on Yonge Street, on the 15th of October, 1839.<sup>47</sup> with power to compel parties to attend.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Small gave notice, for Monday, of an Address to His Excellency for returns made by the Justices of the Peace in Upper Canada, of all fines and penalties by them imposed, as asked for by an Address of the late House of Assembly of Upper Canada.<sup>49</sup>

((Remarks on Procedure for Introducing Legislation.))

Mr. Boswell rose and said, that owing to the immense (sic) loss that had been suffered on account of the depreciation of the currency, in the upper section of the Province; it was his intention to introduce a bill into the house connected with the subject, but having listened to some remarks that fell from the learned Attorney General Mr. Ogden, during the present sitting of the house, he was at a loss how to proceed.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Ogden replied, that with regard to the allusion of the hon. member, he would take upon himself to say, that in conformity with the usual mode of proceeding, both himself and his colleagues in office, would be happy to answer any questions, after the Speech of His Excellency the Governor General had been duly entertained by the house.<sup>51</sup>

Mr. Boswell expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the explanation of the learned Attorney General. His only anxiety was, that seeing the rapidity with which bills were flowing in upon the house, a prolonged delay might accumulate such a heap in advance of him, as might swamp all his endeavours to get his own bill passed this session.<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Boswell also stated, that he hoped the members of Government would introduce the English practice of bringing in themselves all bills of leading importance, in order that such measures might be properly matured, and thereby prevent much of that crude legislation which had formerly disgraced the Statute Book.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Hincks hoped to see the English practice still further introduced, that members of the Government who held seats in that House might be prepared at once, instead of the roundabout method of an address, to state the intentions of the Government upon public measures.<sup>54</sup>

An hon. member suggested that twenty-four hours notice should always be given of the intention to apply for such information.<sup>55</sup>

((Petition re : Raising Lighthouse Keeper's Salary.))

Mr. Boswell having presented a petition praying for an increase of Salary for a Light House keeper, a discussion followed by which it appeared that according to the views of the Legislative Assembly of the late Province of Lower Canada, and which have been temporarily adopted by the House, no petition for a grant of money can be received by the House until it has received the sanction of His Excellency.<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Roblin applied to the house for information as to the proper mode of applying for sums of money.<sup>57</sup>

The Attorney General Mr. Ogden rose and said, that the proper course to pursue was in the first place to address an application to His Excellency the Governor General.<sup>58</sup>

((Question re : A. Manahan's Eligibility as M.P.P.))

Seeing Mr. Manahan in his place, Mr. Hincks took the opportunity to inquire of that gentleman, whether the report was true that he had accepted office.<sup>59</sup>

Mr. M. ((Manahan)) said that an offer had been submitted for his acceptance, but that he had not taken office.<sup>60</sup>

Recognizance,
Lennox and Addington
election.

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that David Roblin and Benjamin Ham had entered into the usual recognizance required by Law, on the subject matter of the contested election for the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington.

Petition of inhabitants of Rouville —
(Rouville election.)

A Petition of Divers electors of the county of Rouville, was presented to the House by Mr. Quesnel, and the same was received and read, setting forth —

That an election was held on Monday the eighth day of March last, at the village of Henrys ville in the said county of Rouville by Hiram Hitchcock, Returning Officer, for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the said county of Rouville in the Assembly of the Province. That the candidates were Timothé Franchère, Esquire, and M.A. De Salaberry, Esquire; the former having been declared to have the show of hands in his favor, a Poll was demanded by the supporters of the said M. A. De Salaberry which was opened by the Returning Officer, who continued to receive on that day, without interruption, the votes of the electors. — That on Tuesday the second day of the Poll, the majority in favor of Timothé Franchère, Esquire, was rapidly increasing, when a number of persons, supporters of M. A. De Salaberry, Esquire, were seen in the Poll House with bludgeons and other weapons in their hands, preventing by violent threats, the electors of Timothé Franchère, Esq., from exercising their constitutional rights. At the close of the Poll Mr. Franchère having then a majority of about one hundred and fifty votes, the supporters of his opponent made a violent and most brutal attack on the electors of Timothé Franchère, Esq., and compelled them to leave the place. — That on Wednesday morning several double sleighs came to the poll with eight or ten persons in each, all of whom were known to be M. A. De Salaberry's supporters, bearing flags, and having also, what they styled, shillelaghs in their hands. At the adjournment of the Poll, at one o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Franchère was still one hundred and twenty-one votes above his opponent. On returning to the Poll, at two o'clock, accompanied by about two hundred electors, a number of hired bullies rushed out of the Tavern occupied by Goodenough and immediately attacked with deadly weapons, Timothé Franchère, Esquire, and his voters, who were unarmed, which resulted in the death of one person, named Julien Choquet, and in grievous and serious bodily injuries to many others of the same party. These furious violaters of the law, yet unsatisfied with this perpetration, pursued, after the opening of the Poll, the inoffensive and unprotected electors who were desirous and anxious to inscribe their votes in favor of Timothé Franchère, Esquire, as far as the French Village, when being still full of the darkest malice committed a shameful Riot, by breaking open the doors and windows of the houses belonging to Messrs. Gariépy and Darche: — Moreover several of these men came in the Poll room with their blood stained weapons in the presence of the Returning Officer, and during the polling hours, still threatening the lives of the electors of Timothé Franchère, Esquire, and were not by him arrested nor reproved in any way, but on the contrary were allowed to remain undisturbed, and by that means, tacitly protected ; these persons having been pointed out by the said electors, who claimed his official intervention. In consequence of the aforesaid violence and entrance to the Poll being obstructed and that with force and arms, the only votes inscribed from that moment were in favor of M. A. De Salaberry Esquire.

By these means the electors residing in the village were driven from their homes and those who had come from the adjoining and distant parishes returned without voting, rather than have recourse to violence, which must have terminated with bloodshed before they could have approached the poll. Notwithstanding this Timothé Franchère, Esquire, had at the close of the Poll a majority of fifty-one votes — That among the many acts of corruption and violence, the petitioners would expose to the House that promises were made and gifts in money offered and allowed to several persons for their votes, and that taverns were open and expenses paid by M. A. De Salaberry's supporters and to his knowledge ; The whole contrary to Law — That notwithstanding these occurrences and the protest of Timothé Franchère, Esquire, the Returning Officer considered it his duty to continue the Poll, so as to give a majority to M.A. De Salaberry, Esq., and return him duly elected. Petitioners therefore pray that in consequence of the violence and other means of corruption used by the supporters of M. A. De Salaberry, Esq., to prevent the electors from freely and peaceably recording their votes, the House will either declare that Timothé Fran- chère, Esq., who at the adjournment of the Poll on Wednesday evening, was in the majority, should have been returned, or cause the election to be annulled and afford an opportunity to the county freely to elect the person of its choice.

In the latter case Petitioners pray that the House would adopt such measures as in its wisdom may seem fit, to prevent the occurrence of similar scenes ; otherwise they must cease to exercise their Elective Franchise or go armed to resist, with effect, any attempt that may be made to interfere with them in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of
T. Franchère
against return of
M. A. De Salaberry.

A petition of Timothé Franchère of the parish of St. Mathias in the district of Montreal, Merchant, was presented to the House by Mr. Quesnel, and the same was received and read setting forth. —

That an election was held on Monday, the eighth day of March last, at the village of Henrysville, in the county of Rouville, by Hiram Hitchcock, Returning Officer, duly appointed by Her Majesty's writ, for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the said county of Rouville, in the Assembly of the Province. That the candidates at the said election were M. A. De Salaberry, Esquire, of the parish of Chambly, in the said district, and the Petitioner. That after the preliminary forms being gone through, the Petitioner having in his favor a show of hands, a poll was demanded by the supporters of the said M. A. De Salaberry, which demand being then granted, the said Returning Officer began to take the votes of the electors, and continued so to do on that day without interruption. — That on Tuesday, the second day of the poll, the majority in favor of petitioner was rapidly increasing ; but that against the peace, and contrary to the writ of Her Majesty, a number of persons, supporters of the said M. A. De Salaberry, were seen in the poll-house, armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, preventing, by violent threats and menaces, the supporters of petitioner from giving their votes in his favour. That at the close of the poll the second day, petitioner's majority being then about one hundred and fifty votes, the supporters of his opponent, armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, made a violent and brutal attack upon petitioner's supporters, and compelled them to leave the place. That on Wednesday, the third day of the said poll, the supporters of the said M. A. De Salaberry were seen coming to the poll in double sleighs, eight or ten persons in each, bearing flags, and armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, and that at the adjournment of the poll at one o'clock in the afternoon, petitioner had yet a majority of one hundred and twenty-one votes. That on returning to the poll at two o'clock P.M. on Wednesday aforesaid, petitioner and the great number of electors accompanying him, unarmed and inoffensive, were violently attacked by a number of riotous individuals, armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, supporting the said M. A. De Salaberry, and that several of petitioner's supporters were grievously wounded, one of whom, an individual of the name of Julien Choquet, afterwards died of the wounds so received at the said election, and that these violators of the law, unsatisfied with this perpetration, pursued the electors supporting petitioner, and prevented them from coming near the poll and giving their votes in favor of petitioner. That several of these men, so armed with clubs, staves, and other offensive weapons, came into the poll-house, in the presence of the Returning Officer, and during the polling hours, threatening the lives of the electors supporting petitioner, and were neither arrested nor reproved in any way, but on the contrary, were allowed to remain undisturbed, and by those means tacitly protected, although pointed out by the said electors, claiming from the Returning Officer, his official intervention — That inasmuch as a large number of armed individuals prevented the electors from coming near the poll and giving their votes in favor of petitioner, and kept back, with all sorts of menaces and illtreatment, the supporters of petitioner, the said election was by no means free, but on the contrary, petitioner was thereby prevented from being duly elected as he ought to have been, and a false and unjust return was thereby illegally, violently, and corruptly secured in favor of the said M. A. De Salaberry, as member for the said county — That previous to and during the said election, large sums of money were expended by the partizans of the said M. A. De Salaberry, to defeat the liberty of the said election, to pay and feed the armed force and other riotous people above mentioned; and taverns were also kept open, and intoxicating liquors were distributed to such as would declare themselves partizans of the said M. A. De Salaberry — the whole contrary to law — That in law and in fact petitioner was duly elected to serve for the said county, and that the insertion in the return of the said Hiram Hitchcock of the name of the said M. A. De Salaberry was illegal, fraudulent, corrupt, and an act of open violence against the rights and liberties of the electors of the said county. Whereupon petitioner humbly prays the House will diligently inquire into the facts set forth in the present petition, and thereupon order that the pretended election of the said M. A. De Salaberry be declared null and void, and that petitioner's name be inserted in the said return of the said Hiram Hitchcock, instead of that of the said M. A. De Salaberry, and that petitioner be admitted to take his seat accordingly, and that the House will further ordain and decree in the matter as in law and justice it may appertain.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of
T. Franchère
against return of
M. A. De Salaberry.

A Petition of William Henderson Edwoods and divers others, people of colour, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Dunn, and the same was received and read, setting forth, that they have emigrated from the United States of America, and are now settled in the city of Toronto and its vicinity, and being desirous of holding lands, pray that a law may be passed for their naturalization.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of
W. H. Edwoods
and others.

Select Committee on Rules report.

Mr. Simpson, from the Special Committee appointed to frame Rules and Regulations for the Government of this House, presented to the House the Report of the said Committee, which was again read at the Clerk's table, as followeth : —

The Committee appointed to frame Rules and Regulations for the Government of the House, and to whom the Rules of the two former Houses of Upper and Lower Canada were referred for its guidance, have the honor to report —

That, in obedience to the instructions of the House, they have framed a Code of Rules and Regulations for the Government of the House, which they have annexed to this Report, and which they respectfully submit to the House for its consideration.

By order of the Committee,

JOHN SIMPSON, Chairman.

Petition of Jacob De Witt complaining of the undue return of T. W. Dunscombe, for the county of Beauharnois.

A Petition of Jacob Dewitt of the City of Montreal, Esquire, was presented to the House by Mr. Morin, and the same was received and read, setting forth :

That an election of a knight to serve in the present parliament, for the county of Beauharnois took place in the course of March last, according to Her Majesty's writ duly issued to that effect, and that the holding of the said election, and the opening of the Poll thereat, were held at Ormestown, in the said county of Beauharnois, on the eighth day of said March last, the said election to be thence continued, according to law. That petitioner, who had represented the said county of Beauharnois, for many years, in the late Assembly of Lower Canada, was invited by a large majority of freeholders, qualified to vote at the said election, to become a candidate for the high trust of representing the said county in the present parliament, and accordingly became a candidate, and was present as such, at the opening of the Poll, as aforesaid ; and, being duly qualified to be elected, was present at the said election to receive the votes of the freeholders as aforesaid — That, however, the writ of Her Majesty and the principles of the British constitution, which ought, of right and justice, to be attended to, were totally disregarded and violated at the said pretended election, as well on the part of the Returning Officer, William Bowron, Esquire, as on the part of a great number of riotous and armed individuals, the largest part of whom were strangers to the said county of Beauharnois, or had no vote therein, who, together with some few electors of the other candidate, J. William Dunscomb, Esquire, who were also armed and riotously arraigned against the faithful execution of Her Majesty's said writ, prevented, with open and constant violence, and with force and arms, and also with bribery and corruption, the free and inoffensive electors of the said county from giving their votes at the said election in favour of petitioner — That the said William Bowron acted, at the said election, with partiality and corrupt motives, and was actively and illegally employing himself during all the time, and long before the said election, as an active partizan of the said J. W. Dunscomb, and violently opposed to Petitioner and the known determination of the great majority of electors supporting Petitioner, and that the said William Bowron, being otherwise unacquainted with the language of a large portion of the said electors, and unable to conduct the said election properly, on that account, was in fact during the said election, an active and violent partizan of the said J. W. Dunscomb — That the said William Bowron, previously to his being appointed Returning Officer, as aforesaid, went round the said county, at different times, and was engaged in an extensive correspondence, to solicit the electors to support the said J. W. Dunscomb and oppose the petitioner, and that the said William Bowron, was even sent to Montreal with another individual, on the part of the partizans of the said J. W. Dunscomb, to invite him to present himself at the said election — That having been, in the meantime, appointed Returning Officer, the said William Bowron did not abandon his canvassing in favour of the Petitioner's opponent, but continued in the same course, and being a party in the violence which was then before hand prepared, and being one of those who were guilty of the said violence, had unlawfully arranged all matters to proclaim the said J. W. Dunscomb as being duly elected, notwithstanding the well known determination of the electors, and went even so far as to advise the keeper of a hotel in the vicinity of the Poll, before the election, not to make any great preparations for the reception of voters, as the election, under any circumstances, was not to last more than two days — That the said county contains over seven hundred square miles, thickly inhabited, and that at the last general election the polling lasted nearly three weeks, the said William Bowron being then, all the time, a candidate — That from the large number of armed individuals preventing the electors from coming near the Poll and giving their votes to petitioner, and keeping back the electors at a distance with all sorts of menace and illtreatment, the said election, was by no means free, but that the danger for the life and security of voters was such, that the said J. W. Dunscomb was returned as a member with an apparent majority of about one hundred and fifty votes, while the said county contained near four thousand voters, three fourths of whom were at a distance, and on their way to come and vote in favour of Petitioner, and actually coming to the said Poll for the purpose of voting, but were prevented with an armed force and all sorts of violence, and turned back by armed men, bearing the uniform of volunteers then in Her Majesty's service, and armed as such, and countenanced as well by their commanding officers, as, by the said William Bowron, and the said J. W. Dunscomb — That the said military force and other organized partizans from without the county, or having no votes therein, prevented the petitioner from being duly elected as he ought to have been, and illegally, violently, and corruptly, secured in favour of the said J. W. Dunscomb a false and unjust return as member for the said county — That previous to and during the said pretended election, large sums of money were expended by persons unknown to petitioner to defeat the liberty of the election, to pay and feed the armed force and other riotous people mentioned above, and that a large mill, and the miller's dwelling house, were converted into a tavern to distribute intoxicating liquor to such as would declare themselves partizans of the said J. W. Dunscomb; and that a tavern bar was specially erected for that purpose, before the election, in the above mentioned mill, and that the same was kept open during the election, and for some time after the closing hereof — That deadly weapons, clubs, and other offensive arms, were used at the said election by the military force and other armed partizans aforesaid, to prevent the electors from voting in favour of petitioner, whose voters were kept and forcibly turned back, their carriages and sleighs being turned out of the road, and some being even constrained to come and vote, against their opinion, for the said J. W. Dunscomb; and several electors favorable to petitioner, when repairing to the Poll, were beaten to death, and also several others grievously wounded, by the partizans of the said J. W. Dunscomb, while none of the partizans of the latter were in any way injured, but while the voters of your petitioner behaved all the time in the most quiet and peaceable manner, and were obedient to the laws and the true interests of Her Majesty's said writ — That threats of violence, to intimidate electors favorable to petitioner, had also been used a long time before the election, and all over the said county, by the said partizans, and even by persons holding the commission of magistrates, some of whom even menaced to kill the inhabitants if they came to vote — That on the second day of the said pretended election, a riot was excited near the Poll, by a violent assault on the part of the aforesaid partizans of the said J. W. Dunscomb, and that thereupon the said William Bowron publicly, and loudly gave notice that he did adjourn the Poll for one full hour, and that thereupon the voters of petitioner dispersed to come again within the limited time, but that as soon as they were at a distance, few minutes having not yet elapsed, the said Returning officer began again to take votes in favor of J. W. Dunscomb, whose partizans had knowingly kept their ground upon an understanding of what was to happen; and that since that time petitioner's voters never having been able to obtain access to the Poll, petitioner thought it his duty to resign, under protest, and appeal to this Honorable House — That in law and in fact Petitioner was duly elected at the said election to serve for the said county, and that the insertion in the return of the said William Bowron, of the name of the said J. W. Dunscomb, was illegal, fraudulent, corrupt, and an act of open violence against the rights and liberties of the electors of the said county — Whereupon petitioner humbly prays the House diligently to inquire into the facts thus set forth, and thereupon order that the pretended election of the said J. W. Dunscomb be declared null and void, and petitioner's name be inserted in the said return, instead of that of the said J. W. Dunscomb, and that petitioner be admitted to take his seat accordingly and that the House will further ordain and decree in the matter, as in law and justice it may appear.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition complaining of Vaudreuil election.

A Petition of divers Electors of the County of Vaudreuil was presented to the House by Mr. Morin and the same was received and read setting forth

That an Election was held on Monday the eighth day of March last past, at the village of Cedars, in the county of Vaudreuil by Michel Lefebvre, Esquire, Returning Officer, for the purpose of choosing a Member to represent the county in the Assembly of the Province.

The candidates were John Simpson, and André Jobin, Esquires; the latter having been declared returned, by show of hands in his favor, a Poll was demanded by the supporters of J. Simpson, which was opened by the Returning Officer, who continued to receive the votes of the electors till four o'clock, and then adjourned to the day after, the ninth of March; on which day the Returning Officer continued to record the votes till about half-past two o'clock without interruption, at which period the majority in favor of André Jobin was about sixty votes a head, and was rapidly increasing; when a most brutal attack was made upon A. Jobin's supporters by a number of hired bullies and other persons in the interest of J. Simpson; which resulted in grievous bodily injuries to many of A. Jobin's supporters, who were all driven from the Poll and prevented to return to it by a large mob of bullies and ruffians armed with sticks, axes, and other weapons, and by one Roe-buck, the step-son of the said J. Simpson; and from thence the supporters of A. Jobin were entirely prevented to approach the Poll: notwithstanding these occurrences and the protest of A. Jobin, the Returning Officer considered it his duty to return said J. Simpson, as duly elected.

Petitioners therefore pray that, in consequence of the violence used by said J. Simpson and his supporters, with his knowledge and consent, to prevent the electors from peaceably recording their votes, the House will either declare that A. Jobin, who, at the time the riot commenced, was in the majority, should have been returned, or cause the election to be cancelled, and afford an opportunity to the electors of the county freely to elect the person of their choice : in the latter case, Petitioners pray that the House would adopt such measures as to its wisdom may seem meet, to prevent the occurrence of singular scenes, otherwise they must cease to exercise their elective franchise, or go armed to resist, with effect, any attempt that may be made to interfere with them in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

Petitioners further earnestly and solemnly impress upon this Honorable House an immediate investigation into the disgraceful occurrences that have taken place, at several of the elections in the District of Montreal ; in order to bring to condign punishment the conspirators who have dared, by the means of hired bands of armed ruffians, to assault and murder the electors, and impose upon them, as their representatives, persons in whom they put no confidence.

Ordered — That the petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of André Jobin, Esquire, was presented to the House by Mr. Morin and the same was received and read setting forth —

That an election was held on Monday the eighth day of March last, at the village of les Cèdres, in the said county, by Michel Lefebvre, Esquire, Returning Officer for the purpose of choosing a member to represent the county in Assembly of this Province.

The candidates were John Simpson, Esquire, and Petitioner : the latter having been declared returned by shew of hands in his favour, a Poll was demanded by the supporters of John Simpson which was opened by the Returning Officer, who continued to receive the votes of the electors till four o'clock, on that day, and adjourned to the day after, on which day the votes of the electors continued to be taken until about half-past two o'clock, without interruption, at which period the majority in favour of petitioner was about sixty, and was rapidly increasing, when a most brutal attack was made upon Petitioner's supporters by a number of hired bullies and other persons in the interest of John Simpson, which resulted in grievous bodily injuries to many of petitioner's supporters who were immediately driven from the Poll and prevented to return to it by a large mob of bullies and ruffians armed with sticks and headed by one Roebuck, the step-son of said Simpson, who prevented the supporters and voters of Petitioner to approach the Poll.

Notwithstanding these occurrences, and the protest of Petitioner, the Returning Officer considered it his duty to return said J. Simpson, as duly elected.

Petitioner therefore pray that in consequence of the violence used by said J. Simpson and his supporters to prevent the electors from peaceably recording their votes, this House will declare null and void, as well the election of said J. Simpson, as the Proclamation of the Returning Officer, declaring him duly elected, as a Member to represent the county of Vaudreuil in the House of Assembly, of this Province ; and that this House will declare Petitioner duly elected, or cause a new election to be made.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the Table.

Ordered — That Mr. J. S. Macdonald have leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Heir and Devisee Act.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday next.

On the motion of Mr. Simpson seconded by Mr. Hamilton,

Ordered — That the Rules and regulations for the Government of this House, reported by the Special Committee, be referred to a Committee of the whole House this day, and that it be the second order of the day.

Sir A.N. MacNab addressed the speaker relative to his motion of yesterday, contending that as a question of privilege, it was imperative on the House to entertain it without delay.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Morin said that routine business ought to precede the orders of the day.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Hale begged to call the attention of the House to what had fallen from the Chair relative to the appointment of an Assistant Clerk to the House.<sup>3</sup>

Cries of order, order.<sup>4</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab ... considered it was not for them to sit Legislating in that House whilst there is a County of the Province unrepresented, particularly as the Member who was really entitled to take his seat was in attendance at the bar of the House, for the purpose of being sworn in and of taking his seat, and of assisting in these deliberations in which the House was engaged. He thought it was highly improper that they should continue to exclude a gentleman from his seat in that House. They had no right to proceed with any business until the country is properly represented.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Hincks arose amid cries of order. He did not wish to detain the house, but having been put down once, he would merely say, that if the time that Sir Allan had taken to explain himself had been granted to him, he would have put the house in possession of what he had to say without troubling them a second time.<sup>6</sup>

Sir A. MacNab considered that the house ought not to go on legislating while a gentleman entitled to a seat in it, was prevented from taking possession of it.<sup>7</sup>

Kent Election.

On the motion of Sir Allan MacNab, seconded by Mr. Hincks, Ordered — That leave be given to take up that item, on the Order of the day Book, relative to the Kent election.<sup>8</sup>

Return delivered in and referred to Committee of whole.

According to the order of the House, of yesterday, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery delivered in the return for the county of Kent.

On motion of Sir Allan MacNab, seconded by Mr. Morin,
Ordered — That the said return be now referred to a committee of the whole House.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Mr. Taschereau took the chair of the committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair —

Resolutions on Kent Election reported.

And Mr. Taschereau reported that the committee had come to several resolutions; which resolutions were again read at the Clerk's table and agreed to by the House, and are as followeth: —

Resolved — That it appears by the return of the Returning Officer, appointed to preside at the last election of a member for the county of Kent; that, at the close of said election, Joseph Woods, Esquire, one of the candidates, had a majority of votes, and that notwithstanding this, the said Returning Officer, George Wade Foote, Esquire, did not declare and return the said Joseph Woods, as duly elected.

Resolved — That the said Joseph Woods, Esquire, ought to have been returned, as knight representative, for the county of Kent, in this present parliament.

Resolved — That the said Joseph Woods has a right to take his seat in this House, as representative for the said county of Kent, saving, however, to all candidates and electors their right of contesting the said election, if they think proper, in such manner as may appertain in law and justice, and according to the usage of parliament.

Resolved — That the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery do, forthwith, appear before this House, and do amend the return for the said county of Kent, by stating that, at the said election the said Joseph Woods, was duly elected to represent the said county of Kent.

Return for county of Kent amended.

In conformity to the last of the above resolutions, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery did appear before the House and did amend the return of the said county of Kent, by stating that, at the election, the said Joseph Woods was duly elected to represent said county of Kent.

House in committee

Progress.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Durand reported that the committee had made some progress and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Ordered — That the said committee have leave to sit again to-morrow.

Mr. Woods takes his seat.

Joseph Woods, Esquire, member for the county of Kent, having previously taken the oath according to Law, and subscribed before the commissioners the roll containing the same, took his seat in the House.

Then, on motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Mr. Hamilton,
The House adjourned until to-morrow at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Mr. Moffatt gave notice that tomorrow he would move for a Committee of seven to prepare lists of the Members of this House to form Permanent Committees — 1st, of Privileges; 2d, of Grievances; 3d, of Courts of Justice; 4th, of Public Accounts; 5th, of Education and Schools; 6th, of Trade; 7th, of Agriculture; 8th, of Roads and Public Improvements; 9th, of Public Lands and Seigniorial Rights; 10th, of Private Bills; 11th, of Hospitals and Charitable Institutions; 12th, of Contingent Accounts and other matters relative to the interior departments of this House.<sup>12</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion re : Printing of House.))

Mr. Morris moved that Messrs. Hincks, Parent, Neilson and Steel (sic) do form a committee to superintend the printing of the House during the present Session.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Neilson objected to Members of the Press being on such a committee.<sup>14</sup>

After a brief discussion, the motion was withdrawn.<sup>15</sup>

Friday, 18 June 1841.

10 o'clock, A.M.

Mr. Christie takes his seat.

(34)

Robert Christie, Esquire, member for the county of Gaspè, having previously taken the oath according to Law, and subscribed before the Commissioners the roll containing the same, took his seat in the House.

Printing Committee.

On motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by the Honorable Mr. Dunn. —

Resolved — That a standing committee of five members be forthwith appointed to superintend the printing of this House, during the present session.

Ordered — That Mr. Morris, Mr. Boswell, Mr. Dunscombe, Mr. Neilson, and Mr. Parent, do compose the said committee.

Gwilliambury Road

Ordered — That Captain Steele have leave to bring in a bill to amend an act of that part of the province formerly called Upper Canada, intituled "An act to provide for the making and keeping in repair the West Gwilliambury road and bridge; and to authorize the erection of a toll gate thereon."

He accordingly presented the said bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Petition of William
King and others.

A petition of the Reverend William King, and others, settlers of the township of Bury and Lynwick, was presented to the House by Mr. Cartwright, and the same was received and read, setting forth the injury likely to accrue to society in general from the want of adequate schools for the rising generation — The utter impossibility of providing them by private contributions :

The impropriety of introducing into schools for the education of youth, extracts, only, from the word of God, and praying that the received translation of the bible be recognized as the class book to be universally taught in all public schools and seminaries throughout the province, where protestant children shall receive their education, in its unabridged state.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Verhoeff and others, praying to be naturalized.

A petition of G. Frederick Verhoeff, Lewis Davenport, Thomas M. Taylor and J. Babcock, was presented to the House by Mr. Prince, and the same was received and read, setting forth : that petitioners have lived, for a great many years past, in that part of this province, formerly called Upper Canada, and have expended large sums of money in making improvements therein — That petitioners are desirous of spending the remainder of their lives in Canada, and of becoming subjects of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, and humbly praying that a law may be passed to enable them to hold and dispose of real estate in this province and to entitle them to the rights and privileges of British subjects.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of inhabitants of Ristigouche on election.

A petition of divers freeholders and inhabitants, residing on the river Ristigouche, in the county of Bonaventure, was presented to the House by Mr. Christie, and the same was received and read setting forth :

That by law heretofore the elections of the representatives of this county were appointed to be held at New Carlisle and Carleton.

That at the late election, however, the law was dispensed with, and the election held at Carlisle only; the effect of which has been to disfranchise the great majority of electors in the county, who, owing to the distance of their residence, 50 to 120 miles from the Poll, were unable to attend thereat, and to express their sense in the choice of a representative for the county, which has therefore been taken by surprise and defrauded of its franchise, by act of the Executive government.

Petitioners pray this House to cause enquiry to be made into the matter whereof they complain and to adopt measures to prevent a recurrence of the injustice and electoral fraud above mentioned.

Petitioners further submit that it would be conducive to order, morality, and good government, if the Returning Officer for the county were, at future elections, authorised to open a Poll at each of the principal places in the county (a day or two at each place) that is to say, at the mission on the Ristigouche, at Carleton, at Richmond, at Bonaventure, at Carlisle and at Port Daniel, inverting the order at each successive election.

Petition from Shoolbred on election.

A petition of divers Inhabitants of Schoolbred, on the Ristigouche and other places, was presented to the House by Mr. Christie and the same was received and read setting forth —

(36)

Shoolbred on election.

That Petitioners have by the holding of the last election only at New Carlisle been prevented from fully expressing their sense in the choice of a representative of this county, and been thereby virtually disfranchised; the distance between the place of their residence and New Carlisle being upwards of sixty miles.

That by law the places of holding the elections for the county of Bonaventure invariably were New Carlisle and Carleton, (the latter place being but eight to twelve miles distant from Schoolbred) and believing that the same reasons, viz. the facility of the inhabitants, which induced the Legislature of Lower Canada to fix these polls at the settlements, would also incline the Executive to cause the same to be holden thereat, relied thereupon, and were taken by surprise on learning that the election was to be held at New Carlisle only, and thereby defeated of their rights.

Petitioners believe the abuse to have been with the intention to defeat the majority of the county in expressing their sense at the late election, as in fact it has, and that the same is an electoral fraud of the most palpable and daring character.

Petitioners therefore pray that effectual measures be adopted to prevent a recurrence of the abuse and fraud whereof they complain, and also beg respectfully to suggest that it would materially contribute to the public good, if the polls at all public elections for the county were held at the different chief settlements thereof, beginning at the mission on the Ristigouche and ending at Port Daniel.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from Bonaventure
complaining of the election of John
Robinson Hamilton.

A Petition of divers Freeholders and Inhabitants of the county of Bonaventure, was presented to the House by Mr. Christie and the same was received and read, setting forth —

That the late election of a representative for this county, to serve in this House, has been characterised by unprecedented violence and corruption, and the return of John Robinson Hamilton, to a seat in the same, carried by illegal and undue means, by bribery in several instances, by threats in others, and by opening houses of public entertainment in the neighbourhood of the hustings, and in several other places, in which ardent and intoxicating liquors were gratuitously given by the said John Robinson Hamilton, or others for him, and in his interests, for voting, and for procuring votes towards securing his election.

That independent of the above the by far greater mass of the electors of the county have been deprived of the opportunity of voting, at the said election and virtually disfranchised ; the place (New Carlisle) appointed for holding the said election being at one extremity and in the less populous part of the county, distant ten to thirty leagues from the denser and upper settlement of it.

That by law, the places of election heretofore for the said county were established at New Carlisle and at Carleton, settlements, forty-five miles a part ; but that on the late occasion the law was dispensed with and the election appointed to be at New Carlisle only, by which means the majority of the county have not been consulted in the choice of a representative but precluded from voting at the said election as if they had no concern or interest in it.

That although it is notorious to the public that the most flagrant and open corruption had been employed to procure the return of the said John Robinson Hamilton, the distance of the county from the seat of the Legislature will render it difficult to prove such bribery, corruption and undue influence on the part of the said John Robinson Hamilton, or of his friends, unless this Honorable Body can afford them an opportunity of examining, within the county, those residing therein, cognizant of the facts.

Petition from Bonaventure
complaining of the election of John
Robinson Hamilton.

Petitioners do not presume to point out the importance of an uncorrupt representation of the people in the assembly of the Province — That this House cannot but be duly sensible of this. But they complain that the late election has been carried by undue and corrupt influence — That the county of Bonaventure has not expressed itself, nor been permitted constitutionally to express itself. That John Robinson Hamilton is unduly returned as representative of the county, in contempt of the feelings and opinions of the majority of the electors excluded as aforesaid from their just right to participate in the said election, and by dint of bribery and corruption. And in conclusion they respectfully represent that they are ready to establish such to be the fact whensoever this Honorable House may be pleased to institute an inquiry and admit them to proof,

This drew forth from Mr. Aylwin comments upon the language of complaint contained in such petitions, it presenting the anomaly of members being justly withheld from indulging in personal declamation against each other but at the same time of being subject to listen to reflections bordering upon the extreme, under the form of petition.<sup>1</sup>

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Motion for appointing standing committees.

The Honorable Mr. Moffatt moved, seconded by Mr. Merritt, that a committee of seven members be now chosen, by ballot, to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, lists of members of this House, to compose standing committees.

First,	of PRIVILEGES.
Second,	" GRIEVANCES.
Third,	" COURTS OF JUSTICE.
Fourth,	" PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.
Fifth,	" EDUCATION AND SCHOOLS.
Sixth,	" TRADE.
Seventh,	" AGRICULTURE.

Eighth, " ROADS AND PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.
Ninth, on PUBLIC LANDS AND SEIGNORIAL RIGHTS.
Tenth, of EXPIRING LAWS AND ENGROSSED BILLS.
Eleventh, " PRIVATE BILLS.
Twelfth, for HOSPITALS AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS
Thirteenth, for THE CONTINGENT ACCOUNTS AND OTHER OBJECTS CONNECTED WITH THE INTERNAL DEPARTMENT OF THIS HOUSE.

Which Committees shall have power to report to the House, from time to time, their observations and opinions upon the subjects and matters which shall be referred to them by this House, by bill or otherwise, as belonging to that class of objects for which they are severally appointed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records — then

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Prince,

Ordered — That to-morrow, at the hour of 11 o' clock, A.M. this House do proceed to ballot for a committee to nominate the said standing committees.

Motion for Committee to consider and report on Kent election.

Mr. Henry Smith moved, seconded by Mr. Aylwin, that a select committee of five members be appointed to take into consideration the return made by George Wade Foote, Esquire, to the writ of election for the county of Kent, and also his conduct in relation thereto, with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and to report thereon.

Mr. Smith ... considered this a case demanding the severity of the house.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Aylwin followed on the same side, deprecating in strong terms any corrupt practices on the part of a Returning Officer.<sup>3</sup>

Colonel Prince entreated members of the house to suspend their judgment in the present instance until they had obtained more information upon the subject. He considered that it would be rather a harsh proceeding to summon Mr. Foote to the Bar of the House from a distance of 500 miles, upon the allegations of a petition.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Smith ... ((persisted)) to press his motion ....<sup>5</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion a division ensued and it passed in the negative.

The order of the day for the House in committee on the rules and regulations for the government of this House, reported by the special committee, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Mr. Durand took the Chair of the committee,

Committee of whole on Rules.

La chambre procède en comité sur les règles intérieures. L'une de ces règles, qui exige que tous ceux qui demanderont un bill leur conférant un privilège exclusif, déposent la somme de £20 entre les mains du greffier, suscite quelques débats, mais est à la fin adoptée à une grande majorité.

Les objections élevées contre cette règle sont en résumé que les habitants du Haut-Canada n'ont pas été accoutumés à cette condition, et qu'elle tendra à décourager l'esprit d'entreprise dans cette partie, où presque toutes les améliorations publiques se font par le moyen d'entreprises individuelles. On a été jusqu'à dire que si une pareille condition eût existé dans le Haut-Canada, la plupart des améliorations qu'on y voit n'auraient pas eu lieu. Cette règle fermait la porte au pauvre homme qui n'aurait pas la somme requise.

À cela il a été répondu que cette règle empruntée à la chambre des communes en Angleterre par l'assemblée du Bas-Canada, n'avait excité aucune plainte dans cette dernière province, et que le très grand nombre de cas prévus par cette règle, étant des entreprises coûteuses, qui demanderaient un grand capital, il serait bien étrange que les pétitionnaires ne pussent trouver facilement la modique somme demandée. Les Bills en question imposaient au pays une dépense considérable, à laquelle il était juste que les particuliers favorisés participassent. Autrement on imposait une taxe sur le public pour l'avantage de ces individus. D'ailleurs s'il se présentait des cas où cette règle opérât durement pour des individus, on en serait quitte pour demander à la chambre qu'elle les exemptât de l'opération de la règle. Enfin il fut remarqué par un membre du Haut-Canada, qu'une pareille règle était nécessaire pour arrêter les demandes inconsidérées. Il y avait dans le livre des statuts un grand nombre d'actes privés, qui n'avaient jamais eu de suite, et qui avaient coûté des somme considérables pour devenir loi.<sup>5</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

(38)

Committee of whole on Rules.

And Mr. Durand reported that the committee had passed the said rules and regulations which he was directed to report to the House whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same,

Ordered—That the Report be received to morrow.

Then on motion of Mr. Simpson, seconded by Mr. Cartwright,

The House adjourned until three o'clock P. M. this day.

3 o'clock P.M.

Committee of whole
on His Excellency's Speech at opening
of Session.

The order of the day for the House in committee on the speech of his Excellency the Governor General to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Mr. Morris took the chair of the committee,<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Cameron rose and said, he had now the honour to present a series of Resolutions, which it was his intention to submit to the consideration of the Committee for their adoption. He regretted much that the duty had not devolved upon abler hands, but he would explain them as fully as possible. At the present moment, he thought it would be better, without pressing their immediate adoption, were he only to read the series, and let them remain on the table for the perusal and consideration of the Members. The Hon. Member then read the Resolutions....<sup>8</sup>

1. Resolved — That this House do humbly thank his Excellency for his Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present session.

We duly appreciate the motives which have led your Excellency to assemble the Provincial Parliament at the earliest period which the circumstances of the province, and the duties imposed upon your Excellency by the Imperial act for the Union of the Canadas, under which the Legislature is constituted, have admitted; and we are grateful for your Excellency's expression of satisfaction in now meeting us, to deliberate on the great and important interests committed to the charge of the Provincial Parliament.

We learn with pleasure, that no time was lost by the Executive of the province, in remonstrating against the forcible detention of a subject of Her Majesty, and inhabitant of this province, in the neighboring States, under a charge of a pretended crime; that provision was made for securing to the individual the means of defence, pending the further action of her Majesty's Government, and that the Queen's representative at Washington has since been instructed to demand his release.

We receive, with feelings of the warmest gratitude, the assurance which your Excellency has given us, by the Queen's command, of her Majesty's fixed determination to protect her faithful subjects in Canada, with the whole weight of her power.

We are deeply sensible of the great advantages which the province has derived, and must derive, from the arrangements by which, under the directions of the Treasury, the rates of postage between all parts of the colony and the United Kingdom, have been greatly reduced, as well as from those which have been made by the Deputy Post Master General, under your Excellency's directions, for the more speedy and regular conveyance of letters between the different parts of this province; and we confidently anticipate, with your Excellency, that the result of the labors of the Commission your Excellency has been pleased to appoint to inquire into and report upon the whole Post Office system of British North America, will be the establishment of a plan securing improvements in the internal communication, by post, within the colony, equal to those which have already obtained in the communication with the mother country.

Our earliest and most serious attention shall be given to many subjects of deep importance to the future welfare of the province which demand it; and your Excellency may rest assured, that any measures which you may direct to be submitted to us, shall receive our prompt and willing consideration.

We feel that among the first importance of these subjects, is the adoption of measures for developing the resources of the province, by well considered and extensive public works ; and that the rapid settlement of the country, the value of every man's property within it, and the advancement of his future fortunes, are deeply affected by this question.

We concur with your Excellency in the opinion, that the improvement of the navigation from the shores of lake Erie and lake Huron to the ocean, is a work requiring a great outlay of money, but promising commensurate returns. We are aware of the difficulty which would have existed in undertaking this work, in the present financial condition of the province ; and we learn with gratitude and pleasure, that your Excellency has received the authority of her Majesty's Government to state, that they are prepared to call on the Imperial Parliament to afford their assistance towards this important undertaking ; and that, in the full belief that peace and tranquility will be happily established in the province, under the constitution settled by Parliament, and that nothing but a relief from its most pressing difficulties (sic) is wanting to its rapid advancement to prosperity, they will propose to Parliament, by affording the guarantee of the Imperial Treasury, for a loan to the extent of no less than a million and a half sterling, to aid the province, for the double purpose of diminishing the pressure of the interest on the public debt, and of enabling it to proceed with those great public undertakings whose progress during the last few years has been arrested by financial difficulties.

Our best consideration will be given to the measure which your Excellency intends to submit to us, embracing a plan for these important purposes, and we shall thankfully receive the extracts which may be laid before us, for our information and that of the people of Canada, from the despatches in which this gratifying assurance of the intentions of her Majesty's Government were communicated to your Excellency.

We cordially concur with your Excellency in the opinion, that emigration, and the disposal and settlement of the public lands, are subjects so intimately connected with the welfare of the province, that we cannot but take the most lively interest in all measures that may relate to them ; and that there exists within the province, no means so certain of producing a healthy flow of immigration from the mother country, and of ultimately establishing the immigrant as a settler and proprietor within the colony, as the power of affording sure employment for his labor, on his first arrival. The assistance of Parliament, for the public works, which may be undertaken here, will, in a great measure, provide for this. But we are happy to learn, that yet further assistance will be afforded us, in this great work ; and that, with a view further to aid immigration, your Excellency is authorised to declare to us, that her Majesty's Government are prepared to assist in facilitating the passage of the immigrant from the port at which he is landed, to the place where his labor may be made available ; and that a vote of money for this purpose, will be proposed to the Imperial Parliament. We shall be gratified by receiving any communication which your Excellency may have to make to us, on this subject ; and we shall not fail to give our best consideration to any scheme for the settlement and disposal of the public lands, which your Excellency may be pleased to lay before us.

Our earnest and most serious attention shall be given to any measure which your Excellency may submit to us, for the more extended application of the principles of local self-government, which already prevail to some extent, throughout that part of the province which was formerly Upper Canada, for enabling the people to exercise a greater degree of power over their own local affairs, and for the establishment of such a form of local self-government for those districts of the province which are unprovided with it, as may insure satisfaction to the people, while it preserves inviolate the prerogative of the Crown, and maintains the administration of justice pure from party and popular excitement.

Your Excellency may rest assured, that we hold the education of the people to be a subject of paramount importance, and that we sincerely regret that the want of due provision in this behalf, should have been so long felt in the province — we are aware of the difficulty of establishing an efficient system by which the blessings of instruction may be placed within the reach of all ; but we are aware also, of the overwhelming importance of the subject, and it shall be the object of our best attention, and our most anxious consideration. We humbly thank your Excellency for the promise of your co-operation in our labors, and we trust that, with that co-operation, we shall be able to obtain a measure which, if it should fail so to reconcile conflicting opinions as to meet the approbation of all, will at least serve as a step by which an advance to a more perfect system may be made, and the difficulty under which the people of the province now labor may be greatly diminished subject to such improvements hereafter as time and experience may point out.

We thank your Excellency for the assurance that the financial accounts of the province, and the estimates for the public service, shall be submitted to us with the least possible delay : and while we shall give our prompt and deliberate attention to the financial measures which your Excellency may lay before us, for rendering the proposed assistance from her Majesty's Government advantageous to the province ; we feel grateful to your Excellency for the assurance that, whatever they may appropriate for this purpose, will be economically employed and rendered effective.

We humbly thank your Excellency for the expression of your confidence in us, for the regulation of the different important matters which must necessarily come before us ; we will endeavor so to order our counsels as that Canada, united under a constitution which the Imperial Legislature has framed with an earnest desire for the welfare of this portion of the British empire, and subject to such modifications, as experience may hereafter require, cannot fail to prosper.

We gratefully receive as pledges of the sincerity with which the mother country desires to promote the prosperity of Canada, and assist in the well working of the new institutions which it has established ; the generous aid which your Excellency has announced to us — the determination which your Excellency has been empowered to state, on the part of the Government, to devote annually a large sum for the military defences of the province, and the fixed and settled determination which your Excellency has declared to us, in her Majesty's name, that her North American possessions shall be maintained at all hazards, as a part of her empire. We are aware, that the eyes of England are fixed anxiously on the result of the great experiment which is now to be tried in this province. We will use our best endeavors to insure its success, and humbly hope, that the aid of Parliament in our undertakings, the confidence of the British capitalists in the credit we may require of them, the security which the British people will feel in seeking our shores, and establishing themselves on our fertile soil, will carry the improvement of the province to an unexampled height. The rapid advance of trade and immigration, within the last eighteen months, afford ample evidence of the effect of tranquility in restoring confidence, and promoting prosperity. We pray fervently that no dissensions may mar the flattering prospect which is open before us — that our efforts may be steadily directed to the great practical improvements of which the province stands so much in need — and that, under the blessing of that Providence which has hitherto preserved this portion of the British dominions, our counsels may be so guided as to insure to the Queen, attached and loyal subjects, and to United Canada, a prosperous and contented people.*

In submitting them, Mr. C. ((Cameron)) remarked, that the House would perceive that there was nothing in them of a novel or objectionable character ; they responded in substance, in the same language as that of the Speech from the Throne ; yet still if Hon. Members would wish time for reflection, he would certainly offer no objection. The present was a most important crisis in the affairs of the Province, when a new and great experiment was about to be put into action and fully tried. Never had there been a period at which the Speech from the Throne was looked forward to with greater solicitude and anxiety by the country, than that just delivered ; none the operation of which involved more responsibility upon the head of the Executive and its advisers. The dry and parched soil did not thirst more for the refreshing dews of heaven or the coming shower, than this country look forward and panted for the establishment of a Government, on such a basis as would ensure peace, tranquillity, and harmony, and which must result in the extension of its trade, the increase of its means, and the stability of its institutions, with the happiness of all classes of Her Majesty's subjects. The Speech from the Throne must prove satisfactory to the country, if its various announcements were candidly examined. From the terms of that Speech, the House would perceive that the Government intended to submit for their consideration, certain measures in the shape of Bills, already maturely prepared, and, from the character of the Executive, those propositions would probably be found to be, in their nature, perfect and satisfactory. He regretted, however, to find that they were not prepared to come down to the House with a Bill on the very important and hitherto neglected subject of education ; but when they considered how much has been written and spoken on the subject in England and other countries, and the formidable and overwhelming difficulties everywhere experienced in maturing a perfect system, they would not wonder that they here stood in a predicament which might almost appear insurmountable. There was as great a diversity of opinion on that subject as on matters of religion. He was glad, however, that the subject had been noticed, and he had no doubt but that the labours of the Session would result in some amelioration of the existing state of education. It was made quite a hobby-horse among the candidates throughout all the elections ; every address to the elector for many years past contained some pledge on the subject, which it was time should be redeemed in a good and sufficient Bill. Passing from this subject, he must refer, with great satisfaction, to the opening sentence or announcement of the Speech, which related to the case of Mr. McLeod. He felt convinced, that if Hon. Members had but a spark of the patriotism of the ancient Romans in their composition, or one particle of the love of country manifested by the Highlander, they would advocate a still stronger and more decisive action, and at once lay aside all other differences of opinion, of religion or of origin, all ideas for or against Responsible Government, or other disputed questions, to unite in the expression of their opinion upon a matter the most serious, as involving the lives and liberties of their fellow-subjects. — (Cheers.) Should any evil result happen to McLeod, he hoped to find them all united, and acting under national pride, seeking for full reparation for injuries committed to one of themselves. It could not but be truly satisfactory to them as Canadians to know that the meanest of her subjects would be protected by Her Majesty from oppression by the whole weight of her influence and her power. The next subject in the Speech was perhaps regarded by some Members as being of less general importance; but for his part he must say there was a portion of the community to whom it was of extreme value. He alluded to the reformatory in the Post Office Department. To the numerous families scattered over the Province who have severed all the ties of relationship with home, the high rates of postage formerly charged had effectually cut off every approach at correspondence. He could tell them that a change from 3s or 5s to the sum of 1s 2d was hailed with joy and gratitude. He had seen the tears roll from the eyes of old settlers, when they found they could renew the correspondence with their friends abroad on such moderate terms. It would be useless for him to refer at any length to the great facilities which these changes in the postage system would have upon the interests of our commerce, and he hoped to find still further improvements made, by amending the post rates more immediately affecting internal correspondence. He knew well that some Members would sneeringly smile at any allusion to the public debt and the offers made through His Excellency to aid us; but he must say he rejoiced to find there was a chance through our restored credit of obtaining a million and a half to relieve us of our present burthens. He was glad to find that the unanimity which had recently prevailed in the Province, the loyalty and fidelity of the people, and the well-known resources of the country, had again obtained for us the confidence of the Mother Country. All that we now want is men, women, and money. It was because we had been disunited and had dissensions among us — it was because all our affairs had been troubled, that capital had been driven from us to other quarters; and when we could no longer obtain that capital, we truly became the girdled tree we had been called. No principle was abandoned; nothing sacrificed in this change. It was not so much for the mere money to be obtained that he rejoiced, as at the circumstances that it arose from the improved character of the country abroad, which promised its future security and stability. There seemed to him one other topic in the Speech which had caused some excitement and anxiety, but which he would not pretend to say he could sufficiently explain — he meant local self government. If by it he was given to understand a more general control given to the people in the several Townships of their own local matters, and the introduction of the machinery for regulating the expenditure of the statute labour, relieving the Magistracy of most irksome and onerous duties, it might prove very advantageous. The present system in Upper Canada was defective, though not alluded to in the Speech; and if a good Bill could be introduced to alter that system, he was confident that it would be hailed by the farmers throughout the Province as being of a great deal more importance to them, as affording them personally a power they had never before enjoyed, than all the abstract questions, which did not personally and sensibly affect them, arising out of responsible government. With these observations he would conclude by moving the first Resolution; after which he would ask the Committee to rise.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Neilson suggested that the resolutions should be printed.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Prince could (sic) not see what object would be obtained by printing the Resolutions, which contained a mere acquiescence in the principal sentiments of the Speech, which had been before th (sic) House and the country for several days. It was expressed in terms so clear, so positive, so forcible, in its views so conclusive and satisfactory — so easy to understand, and so incontrovertible in argument, that he could not see why an echo to it should be printed. It was their duty now to reply to that Speech as expeditiously as possible, and after it has been fairly discussed, let us tell His Excellency whether we applaud or differ from his sentiments. He had no doubt that all were prepared to give their opinion. Perhaps some Hon. Members had objections to offer, and were now prepared to differ; he would entreat of them, as they had decided upon this being the proper period for debate, to come forward manfully, and at once try whether the House approve or not, and record their votes. If the answer be ready and prompt, the country will regard their course as being approving; while every delay must be considered as a mark of disapprobation. They could easily come to a decision, as the Resolutions offered embodied an answer such as the Government had a right to expect. With these observations, he must seek for no further delay.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Ogden deemed the proper course would be merely to submit the Resolutions for the consideration of Members, and to move only that the Committee rise, report, and obtain leave to sit again tomorrow. He would state, on the part of the Administration Members, they were fully ready to proceed with the discussion, but he had no desire to force other Members, without preparation, and without printed copies of the Resolutions.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Hincks was sorry that any further delay should be sought. The correct custom of England was for the servants of the Crown to come down with an answer ready to submit to the House. The gentlemen opposite, on the Treasury benches, had failed in their duty — they ought, ere this, to have proposed their address — and when it was understood that this discussion was to be now proceeded upon, the Resolutions ought to have been submitted at the morning sitting, without obliging a further delay to to-morrow; but still since such seemed to be a prevalent opinion, time should be given for consideration, and no one taken by surprise.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Ogden intimated that the last Member was unquestionably right in regard to fact, as far as he had alluded to English custom, but wrong as to the particular course here to be adopted. He ought to remember, that at the suggestion of Hon. Members on this side of the House, the discussion had been postponed, in order to allow of the Speech being translated and printed in French; no man was more ready than himself to yield to those who sought delay for the sake of information, and he hoped the Hon. Member for Essex would not object to the delay now proposed, and would defer to the wishes of those who desired to inform themselves as to the precise terms of the Resolutions.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Buchanan then addressed himself... to the treasury benches with the view of obtaining a candid and explicit statement of the principles upon which the government was to be carried on. The question couched in the hon. member's own distinct and intelligible terms, was as follows: — "Do the members of the Executive acknowledge their responsibility to Canadian public opinion, as expressed by a majority of this House, for the advice which they give to the head of the government, so far as not to remain connected with an administration against which a vote of want of confidence has passed in the Assembly, unless in case of an immediate dissolution of Parliament? — Will the ministry in this province recognize the principle of retaining office when they cannot maintain a majority in the House of Assembly?" The hon. gentleman's sentiments with regard to McLeod are a counterpart of that high and indignant feeling that has been re-echoed from the mother country, and if we have not degenerated from the spirit of our forefathers, and would maintain the national honour unshaken and unsullied, in the words of the hon. member for Toronto — "it would be better that the British empire should be swamped at once, than the principle be allowed of inflicting with impunity an injury upon McLeod."<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Attorney General Draper said he was very happy to have an opportunity afforded him (the first, excepting an incidental allusion, since he had been a Member) of entering into an exposition of his own opinions on this important subject, since by those opinions he had been governed in entering the public service. He would, in the first place, declare, for the information both of those who act with him, and of those who opposed him, that so long only as he could feel that in sustaining the policy of the Head of the Government, he did not sacrifice those opinions he conscientiously entertained, would he continue to hold office. He desired further to be understood as explaining views in which every one of his colleagues in office entirely concurred. They had felt it was due to the House that their principles should be clearly expressed, and they had, therefore, discussed the question fully together — not seeking light from any extraneous quarter, but making up their minds upon a full and unreserved consultation among themselves. And he was authorized, in behalf of those with whom he was associated, to declare that they fully concurred in the opinions he was about to express. In the first place, he would refer to the office and duties of the Governor of this Province. He looked upon his office as one of a mixed character — first as the Representative of Royalty — secondly, as a Minister responsible alike to his Sovereign and to the Imperial Parliament for the faithful discharge of the duties of his station — liable to be impeached for misconduct before the highest tribunal of the Empire — a tribunal before which he could not discharge himself by declaring that the course for which he was accused had been followed under the advice of any man or any set of men — of the officers of his Government, or of his Executive Council. If this view be correct, it appeared to him (Mr. D.) to follow, as a necessary consequence, that where the responsibility attached, there the power must be vested. To give power without responsibility, was inconsistent with the principles of the Constitution — to enforce responsibility, when you gave no power, was to violate the principles of natural justice. The two were, in his opinion, inseparable, and he begged the attention of Hon. Members to this, as it was the basis of his opinions on the subject. He could not better fortify his own views than by quoting to the House from Lord Glenelg's despatch of the 5th Dec. 1835 — a despatch to which he gladly referred — a record to which he could appeal of the sentiments he was now expressing — “Without entering, on the one hand, unnecessarily into a discussion of those general principles to which my attention is thus invited, or digressing, on the other hand, into personal topics, it is enough for me to observe, on the present occasion, that experience would seem to prove that the administration of public affairs in Canada is by no means exempt from the control of a sufficient practical responsibility. To His Majesty and to Parliament the Governor of Upper Canada is at all times most fully responsible for his official acts. That this responsibility is not merely nominal, but that His Majesty feels the most lively interest in the welfare of his Canadian subjects, and is ever anxious to devote a patient and laborious attention to any representations which they may address to him, either through their Representatives, or as individuals, is proved not only by the whole tenor of the correspondence of my predecessors in office, but by the despatch which I am now addressing to you. That the Imperial Parliament is not disposed to receive with inattention the representations of their Canadian fellow-subjects, is attested by the labours of the Committees which have been appointed by the House of Commons, during the last few years, to enquire into matters relating to these Provinces. It is the duty of the Lieutenant Governor to vindicate to the King and to Parliament every act of his Administration. In the event of any representation being addressed to His Majesty upon your official conduct, you will have the highest possible claim to a favourable construction — but the presumption which may reasonably be formed in your behalf will never supersede a close examination, how far they coincide with the real facts of each particular case which may be brought under discussion. This responsibility to His Majesty and to Parliament is second to none which can be imposed on a public man, and it is one which it is in the power of the House of Assembly, at any time by address or petition, to bring into active operation.” In addition to the foregoing, he (Mr. D.) would only refer the Committee to Lord Sydenham's answer to an Address presented to him at Halifax, in which he has in a few but well-considered expressions embodied the substance of the foregoing remarks. The second branch of the subject involves the office and duties of Her Majesty's servants in this Colony, and particularly those who are Members of this House; and in entering into this question, he would again remind Honourable Members of what he had before laid down — that responsibility and power must go hand in hand, and that he who is responsible for the due exercise of power cannot and dare not (for he would be impeachable for the act) transfer that power into other hands. And here too he would further remark, that a confusion of idea has been not unfrequently occasioned in this matter, by attaching the same meaning to the use of the terms “Responsible Government” and “Responsible Executive Councillor.” It was one of the conditions of free institutions, that Governments should not be irresponsibly conducted: But the character of that responsibility varied with the character of the Constitution, namely, whether it is of the Colony or of the Mother Country that we are speaking. So long as the latter in a greater or less degree controlled the former, so long it was impossible that the whole responsibility could devolve upon those conducting affairs here, and if that control were put an end to, the connexion would exist but in name. He would not pursue this subject, because he should before concluding again refer to despatches for a full exposition of his views. In accepting office under the Government, he had taken upon himself the duty of giving his honest advice, to the best of his judgment, upon all subjects on which he should be consulted, and of advocating and sustaining in his place in this House those measures which the Head of the Government might think it his duty to recommend to the country, as calculated to promote its prosperity and improvement. It was his duty, so long as he held office, to follow this course, and when measures were determined on by the Head of the Government, who in that respect was to be regarded as the responsible Minister of the Crown, to which he (Mr. D.) could not give his support, honour and duty could point out but one path — and that was to resign. There are few men who have long acted in a public capacity who have not been made the objects of bitter animadversion and censure. The frequent occurrence, and almost equally frequent injustice of such attacks may and does create an indifference to them; but a man must be indeed hardened in sentiment and feeling who does not feel his responsibility to public opinion — not to that hasty expression of it which excitement or party feeling may give rise to, but to that which results from the conviction of a long course of time, and which affects public and private character. No one actuated by proper principles can be insensible to the force of this responsibility, which is second only to that tribunal before which the highest and the lowest alike must bow. He would trouble them with another passage from the same despatch he had before referred to : — "I further unreservedly acknowledge that the principle of effective responsibility should pervade every department of your Government, and for this reason, if for no other, I should hold that every public officer should depend on His Majesty's pleasure for the tenure of his office. If the head of any department should place himself in decided opposition to your policy, whether that opposition be avowed or latent, it will be his duty to resign his office into your hands, because the system of Government cannot proceed with safety on any other principle than that of the cordial co-operation of its various members in the same general plan of promoting the public good. Some of the members of the local Government will, also, occasionally be Representatives of the people in the Assembly, or will hold seats in the Legislative Council. As Members of the local Legislature, they will, of course, act with fidelity to the public, advocating and supporting no measure which, upon large view of the general interests, they shall not think it incumbent on them to advance. But if any such person shall find himself compelled, by his sense of duty, to counteract the policy pursued by you, as the Head of the Government, it must be distinctly understood that the immediate resignation of his office is expected of him, and that, failing such a resignation, he must, as a general rule, be suspended from it. Unless this course be pursued, it would be impossible to rescue the Head of the Government from the imputation of insincerity ; or to conduct the administration of public affairs with the necessary firmness and decision." To this he (Mr. D.) would desire to add one from Lord John Russell's despatch of the 14th October, 1839, in which, referring to the distinction between the Cabinet of the Imperial Government and the Council of the Colony, he says, "But if we seek to apply such a practice to a Colony, we shall at once find ourselves at fault. The power for which a Minister is responsible in England is not his own power but the power of the Crown, of which he is, for the time, the organ. It is obvious that the Executive Councilor of a Colony is in a situation totally different. The Governor under whom he serves receives his orders from the Crown of England — but can the Colonial Councilors be the advisers of the Crown of England ? Evidently not ; for the Crown has other advisers, for the same functions, and with superior authority. It may happen, therefore, that the Governor receives, at one and the same time, instructions from the Queen and advice from his Executive Council totally at variance with each other. If he is to obey his instructions from England, the parallel of constitutional responsibility entirely fails. If, on the other hand, he is to follow the advice of his Council, he is no longer a subordinate officer, but an independant Sovereign. It is now said that internal government is alone intended. But there are some cases of internal government in which the honour of the Crown, or the faith of Parliament, or the safety of the State, are so seriously involved, that it would not be possible for Her Majesty to delegate her authority to a Ministry in a Colony." And he (Mr. D.) would further call to the recollection of the Committee, the Resolution moved by Lord John Russell, and which was confirmed by the Houses both of Lords and Commons — "That while it is expedient to improve the composition of the Executive Council, it is inadvisable to subject it to the responsibility demanded by the majority of the House of Assembly." He would only add that to the foregoing principles, thus clearly laid down, he gave his unreserved assent. Upon them he had accepted office — and he would resign office whenever his tenure of it became inconsistent with their application. There remained only one point on which it was necessary to offer a few remarks — and that was as to the maintenance of harmony between the Executive and the Legislature. To preserve this harmony, His Excellency (sic) has on a former occasion declared that he had received Her Majesty's commands to administer the Government in accordance with the well understood wishes and interests of the people. In carrying out this pledge, it has been felt right, and a part of the duty which the Government owe to the people, to endeavour to anticipate the wants, and prepare such measures as will promote the prosperity of the Province. In pursuing this object, should discord arise, the restoration of harmony becomes the duty of the Head of the Government. For this, he is responsible. The Council are not to dictate to him. If he finds that he has been embarrassed by dishonest or incapable servants of the Crown, he can at once relieve himself of them, and by the appointment of more fitting officers, endeavour to restore the harmony which had been disturbed. It may, however, happen, that his plan may be defeated — his efforts to promote the public welfare thwarted by other causes. It is impossible to foresee in what shape such difficulties may arise — perhaps from an opposition to men rather than to measures — perhaps by means of such opposition the means of gaining some desired end to which Government is honestly opposed, and which the Mother Country could not accede to. In these, or other similar cases, an appeal may be made to the people by a dissolution. Circumstances may be imagined which would render it impossible for him to continue the administration of public affairs, with honour to himself, or advantage to the people. In some one or other of these modes, however, the effort to restore harmony, when interrupted, must be made. If so improbable, and he might add lamentable, a contingency should arrive, that every effort should prove unsuccessful, then a state of things would arise, on which, until it occurred, he felt it out of place to offer any observations. He had now endeavoured to express the views entertained by himself and his colleagues on this important subject. To the responsibility which resulted from these principles, and their honest application, they would be found ready at all times cheerfully to bow — but they were anxious to be understood as disavowing the assumption of any responsibility or power not legitimately flowing from these principles.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he had certainly listened to the speech of the Hon. gentleman with a great deal of attention, and with a good deal of pleasure; probably however that pleasure had not been altogether unalloyed. But he could discover from the speech of the Hon. and learned gentleman that a new principle has been applied with reference to the administration of affairs in which that Hon. and learned gentleman had borne so conspicuous a part. A great and important principle is involved in the subject of present discussion, one which has occupied the attention of the country for a number of years, and one on the faithful carrying out of which the continuation of the connexion with the Mother Country in a great measure depends — (hear, hear,) — the question should be clearly and distinctly understood, not only by those occupying the situation which the Hon. and learned gentleman does, but by the whole country. He (Mr. B.) would follow the Hon. and learned gentleman in the principal points of his speech, though he did not expect that the discussion would have been entered into today, and perhaps there might not be after all so much difference between the views of the Hon. and learned gentleman and himself, if indeed there were any at all, as would be at first supposed, (hear, hear.) He would begin with the view which the Hon. and learned gentleman had taken of the character and position of the head of the Government in this colony, which he (Mr. B.) agreed with him in calling a mixed character. The very nature of a colonial administration required, as one acquainted with the subject must perceive, that the head of that Government should be responsible to the Home Government, as he is the connecting link between the colony and the Parent State, it is his duty to be careful of the interests of the Sovereign whose servant he is, and careful to preserve the connexion between the colony and the Mother Country. And as for the principle of Responsible Government as he (Mr. B.) had always understood it, and advocated it, instead of lessening that responsibility whai (sic), he had advocated served to increase it, as the Hon. and learned gentleman had already remarked. He agreed with him therefore that the head of the Government is of a mixed character, and that he is responsible to the Home Government, for the proper administration of the Government in the colony. He would admit that in the administration of the Government, questions may arise, in which he may not be prepared to adopt the advice which may be tendered him. But if he (Mr. B.) understood the Hon. and learned gentleman right, that the Council, of His Excellency are to offer their advice only when it is demanded of them, and on all other occasions remain mere passive observers of the measures adopted by the Government, he would beg leave from such a system as this entirely to dissent — (hear, hear.) That all measures must necessarily receive the Governor's assent, he would readily admit, but that those gentlemen whom he calls to his Council are never to open their lips except when he particularly and expressly calls upon them to do so was what he could never acquiesce in or approve of; in fact such a Council as that would be no Council at all: to adopt such a course would be, in his opinion, acting in direct violation of the oath which as Executive Councillors they were called on to take. They are commanded to advise His Excellency on all matters connected with the public good. (Here Mr. Baldwin read the oath prescribed to be taken by the Executive Councillors.) In his (Mr. B.) understanding of this oath, a Councillor is necessarily bound to bring under the notice of the head of the Government those measures which in his estimation the country required. He would freely admit, that unless the representative of the Sovereign should acquiesce in those measures so recommended, there would be no means by which that advice could be made practically useful, but this consideration does not for a moment relieve the members of that Council from the fulfillment of an imperative duty. If that advice were accepted, well and good; if not, his course would be to tender his resignation. Now the Hon. and learned gentleman admits, that in the event of the Administration not retaining the confidence of Parliament, they should resign. — (Hear, hear.) If he had understood the Hon. gentlemen (sic) aright as intending to go to this extent, then it would seem that the difference between the views of that Hon. gentleman and his own amounted only to a difference in terms, and not to a difference in fact. But should those gentlemen (sic) be prepared, notwithstanding, a vote of want of confidence should be passed by that House, to retain their seats in the Council, then he must say that he entirely dissented from them. He believed, however, that he had understood the Hon. gentleman aright, and for this reason, that that was not the first time that a question of this kind had been agitated; and the principle had at length been pretty generally admitted, that both in this, and still more fully in some of the neighbouring Provinces, that unless the advisers of His Excellency possessed such an extent of public confidence, as to enable them to procure their returns to this House in the first place, and enjoyed also the confidence of the Representatives of the country at large, so as to be able to procure the passing of those measures which they might think proper to recommend, they could not consistently continue to be members of the Government. If the Hon. gentleman had intended to be understood as going this length, then he would perfectly concur with him; and if the practical application of this principle be admitted, then there would be found to be no difference in reality between the Hon. gentleman and himself. The Hon. and learned gentleman had referred to a despatch of Lord Glenelg, and it was somewhat remarkable, that as it announces the same principles upon which that Hon. Member now professes to act, that so long time should have been suffered to elapse since the publication of that despatch, without any practical application of those principles having been carried out. — (Hear, hear, hear.) It is remarkable that no approach to the carrying out of the principle of responsible government took place until the last session of the last Parliament of Upper Canada. Had he (Mr. B.) not supposed that it was the intention of His Excellency the Governor General to carry into effect the principles of responsible government as laid down in the despatch of Lord John Russell which had been referred to by the Hon. and learned gentleman, he (Mr. B.) would have been perfectly inexcusable for accepting office under the Government: but he had then believed, and still continued to believe, that it was practicable to carry out those principles in this Province. — (Hear, hear.) He believed from what had fallen from the Hon. gentleman, that the same construction would be put upon the principles laid down in that despatch that he had always put upon it, and in which he was supported, not only by many Hon. gentlemen around him, but also by some of the best friends of this country in England, and particularly by that staunch and well-tryed friend of this country, Mr. Hume, who he believed was now member for Kilkenny. — (Hear, hear.) That gentleman was better acquainted than he (Mr. B.) could be, and he had declared that the language of that despatch conceded the principle which the Parliaments of the two Provinces had for twenty years been calling upon the Mother Country to concede. That gentleman was too firm a friend of this country to be capable of endeavouring to mislead us — (hear, hear) — and to that gentleman he believed those Provinces were deeply indebted. — (Hear, hear, hear.) Now, Sir, believing that this is the true interpretation of that despatch, and that the Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Draper) has declared himself prepared to act upon it in the manner to which I have alluded, I am prepared to wait patiently and see whether his acts will agree with those professions, and whether he will be prepared when the time comes for giving a proof of his sincerity — to act in accordance with what he has this day declared. The Hon. gentleman from Toronto says "Yes." I have long had entire confidence in that gentleman, and I only wish I had equal confidence in others. (Hear, hear, hear.) He (Mr. B.) was, however, perfectly willing to wait patiently and see whether those gentlemen would act upon these principles. But one thing must be recollected, that the principle of responsible government is only a means to an end. If this responsibility is not to lead to the carrying out of what the country requires, it will be a mere dead letter. He believed, however, that this much having been conceded, they would be enabled to enforce upon both the Provincial and the Home Governments a due attention to the wants and wishes of the country. He would now conclude his observations by adding one remark; he could have wished that the Representative of Royalty in this Province had inserted in the Speech which had been delivered to the Legislative Council and Assembly, some reference to this matter, and not to have left it to the Hon. Member for Russell (Mr. Draper), in his place on the floor of the House merely, to announce so important a circumstance to the Representatives of the people. He thought it would have been a happy occasion for the announcement of so important a fact, to have introduced it in the Speech from the Throne. He trusted he had not misunderstood the Hon. gentleman, in the announcement which he had this day made to the House.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Attorney General Draper said he felt it necessary to protect himself from the possibility of a moment's mis-understanding, although he thought it impossible to draw from what he had said, any other deduction than what he had intended: he would therefore, read over again that part of Lord John Russell's despatch to which he had before referred.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Baldwin then said he found it necessary to put one question to the Hon. gentleman. In the event of such instructions coming from the Home Government, as he could not coincide with, in what manner would he then act? <sup>20</sup>

Mr. Draper replied that he would immediately resign.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Merritt. — I am both surprised and disappointed at the explanation offered by the hon. and learned Attorney General for the West. Why does he continue to mystify a question so simple and well understood, thereby creating doubt and suspicion, where none should exist. He refers to the despatch of Lord Glenelg, and leaves us to infer that the same system which existed before Lord Durham's Report made its appearance, is hereafter to be continued. It is true, he says the Executive Council is to resign when required by the Governor, or does not possess the confidence of the House of Assembly, but damps its effect by an allusion to an old despatch, which was applicable to a different subject, and when the government was conducted upon an entirely different principle. — Why not come out openly and boldly, and avow the change recommended, and satisfy the country. The policy of the Government is supposed to be set forth in this Review....<sup>22</sup>

Attorney General ((Mr. Draper)) said without authority.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Merriitt. It may be without authority, but I believe they represent the sentiments of Government : however, it says —

"The next guarantee for good government brings us to the second part of our demand for Responsible Government, namely, that our local affairs shall be managed by a kind of Provincial Ministry. This has been virtually admitted. All government business, which of course includes the chief part of the business of the country, will be managed in the Legislature by Government officers — heads of departments."

Again, "the resignation of the Government officers, or their change of policy, when in a settled minority in the Legislature, will follow as a matter of course, from the new position they sustain ; for they cannot keep it, unless they can command a majority."

Again, "the first step in this change, is to bring public officers before the bar of public opinion, and test their claims to public confidence, at the hustings. If a number sufficient to conduct the public business cannot command confidence there, they must give place to those who can ; and thus the system will soon resolve itself into that practical working of the British constitution which insures the harmony of the Executive with the representatives of the people."

Lord Durham says —

"The wisdom of adopting the true principles of representative government, by entrusting it to persons who have the confidence of the representative body, has never been recognized in the government of the North American colonies. The natural state of Government, in all those colonies, is that of collision between the Executive and the representative body."

"A Governor arriving in a colony in which he has had no acquaintance with the state of parties, or character of individuals, is compelled to throw himself almost entirely on those he finds placed in the position of his official advisers. Those official advisers are controlled by no responsibility, subject to no serious change, exercising over the whole government of the province an authority utterly independent of the people and their representatives, and possessing the only means of influencing the Government at home, or the colonial representative of the Crown."

Is not this true to the very letter, and are the people still to infer that they are to have no change from a system which nine-tenths of the population will never submit to again. The remedy proposed is equally simple and efficient.

"Every purpose of popular control might be combined with every advantage of vesting the immediate choice of advisers in the Crown, were the colonial Governor to be instructed to secure the co-operation of the Assembly in his policy, by entrusting its administration to such men as could command a majority ; and if he were given to understand that he need count on no aid from home, in any difference with the Assembly that would not directly involve the relations between the mother country and the colony."

Is not this precisely the policy advocated in the Review, in other words ? Again, it is stated that in Lord Sydenham's reply to an address in Halifax, he declared he would not surrender the power delegated to him by her Majesty, to any one. What says Lord Durham ? He would not impair a single prerogative of the Crown ; so that this expression which has been used to create distrust against his Excellency, is similar to that used by Lord Durham. For my own part, I have ever expressed my firm conviction, that it was the intention of the home Government to concede this principle — it had been carried into practical operation in Nova Scotia — the administration had openly avowed their adherence to it, and I cannot conceive why all doubts on the subject should not be removed at once, and allow Lord Sydenham the credit which will be due him. This policy will secure to the Provincial Legislature all we desire, "the practical management and control of our internal affairs," and every vote I give in this House, will be with the view of attaining that object ; and when we experience the working of this system, the country will owe a debt of gratitude to Lord Sydenham for bringing it into operation, second to no person except the originator, Lord Durham.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Cameron said he felt it necessary to express his opinion upon this subject, and, in doing so, he would not occupy a great deal of time. He felt with the Hon. gentleman who had spoken last, that however clear it might be to the Hon. and learned Member for Hastings, it was not so clear to him that the Members of Government had made any distinct avowal of the intention to act upon the principles of Responsible Government. — (Hear, hear.) If it were really their intention, it was very easily to declare it. He felt it to be an important point, because it was upon a conviction that such was to be the case, that he had taken his determination to support the Administration of Lord Sydenham. — (Hear, hear.) He (Mr. C.) was extremely sorry upon his arrival here, and meeting with his friends, to find those with whom he had expected to act, pursuing a totally different course. And he had been extremely sorry also at finding the Hon. and learned gentleman about withdrawing from the Government; and he had felt it his duty to state to that gentleman, that he (Mr. C.) would be precluded from acting with him, because it could not be expected that he would blindly follow any man, however highly distinguished. That he (Mr. C.) was content to support the Administration, until it should be clearly shewn that the Government had not the confidence of the country. He then reserved to himself the right of opposing that Administration as strenuously as he would now give them his support. — (Hear, hear.)<sup>25</sup>

Capt. Steele said that as he was the seconder of the resolutions he would explain the views which he entertained with regard to the course of policy to be pursued by the government. He (Capt. S.) had also come to that house with the determination to give support to the administration of the Governor General, provided he held to the professions which had been advanced as to responsible government; but he came to that house unshackled with pledges, free to act according to the dictates of his judgment, elected by a constituency which had imposed no conditions and laid down no rule for the guidance of his conduct, other than that broad principle which all the representatives of a free people should strive to obtain, the advancement of the interests of his constituents and of the country generally. He would acknowledge that the explanation which had been given was entirely to his satisfaction, and he would come frankly forward and support the administration of the Governor General as long as the conduct of the Executive correspond with the professions they had heard. But he would desire to see the administration supported by a frank and honest vote, founded upon conviction and in honesty, and not proceed by cabal and faction. He (Capt. S.) felt a serious responsibility resting upon him towards his constituents; they had confidence in him, and he in them; they were composed of plain honest men, the backwoodsmen of the country; they judge accurately of the motives of men, and are not to be deceived by those who are more conversant in the windings and intrigues of politicians. He would use a just discretion, and whenever the honorable gentlemen opposite brought forward any measure in which he (Capt S.) could concur — any measure which was calculated to secure the rights and liberties of the people, he would most cheerfully co-operate with them, he would never consent to give his support to a factious opposition. He was a man not of words, but of deeds; formerly engaged in Her Majesty's service fighting the battles of his country, and now ready to join heart and hand in all measures which are calculated to promote the prosperity and good government of the country. When the distinguished individual who stands at the head of the government was seen in this house delivering his speech with painful effort, owing to his declining health, was there a man present who did not say within himself, I will throw myself in the breach and prevent any faction from disturbing his nightly sleep? (Hear, hear.)<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said that although the discussion had been brought up rather prematurely, as the members of the Executive Government were now in their places, and as the question was not altogether new, they might be prepared, he thought, to give a plain answer, and that answer would do more than a hundred thousand bayonets would do at this moment, (hear, hear.) It would set at rest the anxiety which exists in the country; it would be the commencement of a new era in the history of Canada, which has become, as an honorable gentleman has observed, like a girdled tree, instead of being, as its natural advantages would seem to warrant, the most flourishing country upon the face of the earth. Look at the state of New Brunswick: a few years ago they were struggling as we have been for the same principle of responsible government, and they have now attained the accomplishment of their wishes. It was his intention not to impede the government, but to assist it in every respect in which he could possibly do so, and he hoped, therefore, the honorable gentlemen on the treasury benches would feel it their duty at once to declare that it is their full determination to be friends to the country. The news would be hailed with delight; it would fly with the rapidity of lightning from one end of the province to the other; there would be bonfires and rejoicings every where. (Hear, hear.) He, (Mr. T.) came to that house under no restraint as to his course of proceeding, and he was determined to be under none except to his creator and his sovereign. He had earnestly desired his constituents to await patiently and allow Lord Sydenham's administration to proceed. They had true confidence in him whom they had chosen as their representative, and they were determined to extend that confidence to His Excellency the Governor General; why, then, will not His Excellency's advisers frankly avow to this house their determination to comply with the wishes of the country? <sup>27</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he hoped before the committee should rise, those honorable gentlemen belonging to His Excellency's Council would be fully prepared to answer this important question in a categorical manner, for they might depend upon it the eyes of the country are upon them. He had not risen with an intention of entering into the discussion of the question of responsible government. Upon that question his opinion had been long ago made public. He was fully convinced that the government of this colony could only be carried on if conducted upon those principles which would produce harmony and good will. He merely rose, however, at the present moment, to suggest to the committee, that if those gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches were not prepared to give an explicit reply to the question which had been put to them, at the present moment, the question might be deferred. <sup>28</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said as it seemed to be considered that he had been too easily satisfied with the declaration of the Hon. Gentleman, he wished to be clearly understood, that it was because he believed the principle of responsible government was to be duly carried out, and therefore it was that he had no reason to assume that the views of the Hon. Member for Russell (Mr. Draper) were different from the recognized principles. He would further observe that he deemed it altogether absurd to suppose that any one within the walls of that house would maintain for a moment that the people of the colony were to be treated with less regard than the people of our sister province Nova-Scotia, to whom the principle for which they were contending had been cheerfully conceded. <sup>29</sup>

Mr. Draper said that the question having been put to him, as to what course the advisers of His Excellency would take in the event of the majority of the House of Assembly opposing those measures which might be proposed by the government; he desired no mystification, the Hon. Gentleman who had used the term had found mystification to exist only in his own imagination, after expressing what his views were of the character and degree of responsibility resting upon the different branches of the government, he had stated that there was an absolute necessity for the preservation of harmony between the government and the people; and he had pointed out several causes, on the occurrence of which, he would not resign, but appeal to the country, and ascertain whether he would not be sustained by the people — (hear, hear.) — The responsibility in such cases, as he had before stated, would rest with the governor himself. If he ((should)) find that he cannot act with his council, he may call upon them to resign. (Hear, hear, hear.) <sup>30</sup>

((Mr. Hincks :)) It matters little who are responsible here, if we are constantly to have our laws which we have passed at great trouble and expense set at nought, and sent back to us null and void. <sup>31</sup>

Mr. Boswell desired to be informed, if he had rightly understood the Honourable gentleman to mean, that he would be contented to remain a Minister of the Government as long as the Governor desired him to do so whether a majority of the House of Assembly were with him or not. <sup>32</sup>

Mr. Draper replied, that he had said, so long as harmony existed between the Representatives of the people and the Government — but could it be considered that harmony existed as long as there was continual opposition maintained from different sides of the House? The distinction which he wished to be understood as having drawn was, that the responsibility rests entirely with the Head of the Government. <sup>33</sup>

Mr. Boswell — The Honourable gentleman has said, that he would not resign, unless required to do so by the Head of the Government. He has not said that he entertained the slightest respect for the opinion of the Representatives of the people. He desires harmony, but he wishes the whole responsibility to be thrown upon the shoulders of His Excellency. He (Mr. Boswell) could put no other interpretation upon his language. <sup>34</sup>

Mr. Hincks said, it was very much to be regretted, that this important subject should have been so much mystified ; at the same time, he thought there should be great allowance made for the Hon. and learned gentleman. He, no doubt, felt himself in a very awkward situation. He had come down to the House, and avowed principles, upon which, a few years ago, he said he would make "war to the knife."<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Draper said, that what the Hon. gentleman had stated was unfounded in fact. The Hon. gentleman was here called to order ....<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Hincks proceeded. He was extremely happy, he said, to be corrected, if he had fallen into error.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Draper again requested permission to explain, which having been granted, he proceeded to observe, that he was quite unwilling to remain under an unjust imputation which might with a few words be entirely removed, however painful it might be to enter into an explanation which might wound the feelings of those for whom he entertained a high respect. He recollected in 1836 having made a speech at an election meeting after dinner — (hear, hear) — in the course of which he said that there were those filling prominent stations in the community who advocated principles of a dangerous tendency, and with a full knowledge that they were dangerous and injurious to the interests of the Colony. He had also said, that there were then in the ranks of the Reformers many individuals for whom he had a personal friendship ; but that there were others against whom he would make war to the knife : and in the following year he had amply redeemed his pledge. — (Hear, hear.) There was one other remark which he would make ; there were those in the House who could do him the justice to say, that long before this discussion was contemplated, he had drawn a distinction between those who were discontented, and those who were disaffected. The complaints of the former might be remedied ; but as for the others, he cared not how soon they sought any country more congenial to their feelings.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he was happy to hear the explanation of the Hon. gentleman. It appeared that it was not the principle advocated by the majority of the House of Assembly, but the opinions of certain individuals against which he would make war to the knife. The principles which were then advocated by a majority of the House of Assembly, were the same as those which he at present advocated, the principles of responsible Government — principles which would be found laid down in Lord Durham's Report. Every Hon. Member of that House must be fully aware, that the great mass of the country had been convinced, that the Head of the Government had intended this to be the principle upon which the Government should be conducted. The Despatch of Lord John Russell appeared to him to be inconsistent with itself. The first part from which the learned Attorney General quoted was altogether at variance with the latter, which he (Mr. H.) was well assured was far more satisfactory. It recommends "non-interference on the part of the Crown in our internal affairs, except where the interest of the Empire and the honour of the Crown are deeply concerned". He (Mr. H.) agreed with his Hon. friend from Haldimand (Mr. Merritt), that it is time this House and the country should know distinctly whether this system of interference in our internal government is to be persevered in by the Home Government. It matters little who are responsible here if we are constantly to have our laws which we have passed at great trouble and expense, set at nought and sent back to us annulled and void. — (Hear, hear.) The Hon. and learned gentleman, in order to point out the degree of responsibility under which he considered the Government as standing, had quoted from documents which had been always held and acknowledged by these gentlemen, with whom he acts, as going entirely against the principle for which we are contending. What the country wishes to know is, whether the Provincial Government is to be conducted according to the principles of the British Constitution. These are the principles to which a majority of the people of this province are attached.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Boswell said, the Hon. and learned gentleman must excuse him for again pressing the question, because it was of very great importance to him that the question should be distinctly answered, as upon that answer would depend his future course of conduct within that House, and he would put it in such a shape as that it might be replied to by a single affirmative or negative. Does the Hon. gentleman mean to say that if the Government cannot command a majority of this House, so that its measure may be carried on harmoniously, if they do not find by whole proceedings of the House, that they have the confidence of a majority of its Members, that then a dissolution of the House shall follow, or that they will resign ?<sup>40</sup>

"Yes, yes," from Mr. Draper.<sup>41</sup>

Then I ((Mr. Boswell)) am satisfied. And he ((Mr. Boswell)) could only say, that this being the case, it was an unfortunate circumstance that the Hon. gentlemen could not have stated it explicitly to the House at present, and have prevented the necessity for so long a discussion.<sup>42</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Morris reported that the committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Progress reported.

Ordered — That the said committee have leave to sit again to-morrow, in the afternoon sitting.

Committee to sit again tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker communicated to the House the following letter.

Kingston, 18th June, 1841.

SIR,

Letter from
A. Manahan, Esq.
vacating his seat.

Having accepted the appointment to the office of Collector of Customs for the port of Toronto, by which I vacate my seat in the Legislative Assembly over which you preside — I take leave to give you this immediate intimation of the fact, that the town of Kingston, which I had the honor to represent, may be speedily represented in my place.

I have the honor to be Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

Signed, A. MANAHAN.

The Honorable the Speaker, of the Legislative Assembly.

New Writ of election to issue for Kingston.

On motion of the Honorable Mr. Daly, seconded by the Honorable Mr. Dunn,

Ordered — That Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, to make out a new writ for the electing a member to serve in the present Provincial Parliament for the Town of Kingston, in the room of Anthony Manahan, Esquire, resigned.

Bill to provide For Notaries
in Gaspé, read

A Bill to amend a certain Ordinance passed in the third year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled "An ordinance to provide permanently for the want of Notaries in the inferior district of Gaspé, and to remove doubts therein mentioned" was according to order, read a second time,

Bill referred to Committee.

Resolved — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of five members, to report thereon with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Black, Mr. Christie, Mr. Morin, and the Honorable Mr. Viger, do compose the said committee.

Then on motion of Mr. Aylwin seconded by Mr. Tuschereau,

House adjourns.

The House, adjourned, until to-morrow, at eleven o'clock A. M.

Appendix, 18 June 1841.

((Withdrawn Motion re : Pre-Union Contingencies.))

Mr. Thorburn directed the attention of the house to the contingencies of the late session of the Province, but upon suggestion withdrew his motion.<sup>43</sup> contested election.

Petition for the condemnation of a certain road in Elizabethtown.

Petition that inhabitants of Rawdon, Kilkenny, and Kildare, may have greater liberty in the elective franchise, and may not be included in certain municipal districts.

Petition of
E. O. Tyler for naturalization.

Petition of Donald Calder, that a certain road may be granted to him as compensa-

(39)

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that Charles Willard and John R. Forsyth had entered into the usual recognizance required by law, on the subject matter of the contested election for the county of Hastings.

Mr. Speaker also acquainted the House that James Simpson and Joseph Bruce, had entered into the usual recognizance required by law on the subject matter of the contested election for the county of Huron.

A Petition of divers inhabitants of Elizabethtown was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received and read setting forth : that the allowance for road between lots No. thirty and thirty-one, in the eighth concession of Elizabethtown passes through a large swamp and over a high ledge of rocks, and has been legally adjudged unfit for the purposes of a road. That certain individuals are endeavouring to open the said allowance and to expend upon it part of the statute labour, to the great annoyance of petitioners and inconvenience of travellers, as all the statute labour is too little to render passable the commonly travelled roads — that it would be to the advantage of the community if the said road were sold and the avails expended on the travelled roads — and praying the House to confirm the condemnation of said road — or do such things in the premises as may, in its wisdom, appear best,

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of the freeholders of the townships of Rawdon, Kilkenny, and Kildare, was presented to the House by Mr. Holmes, and the same was received and read, setting forth — That the county of Leinster formerly sent four members to parliament, but under the late act uniting the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, said county is restricted to one representative — That in consequence, petitioners, who are far less numerous than the inhabitants of the Seignories lying within the said county, who are of French origin, are deprived of the power of choosing their representative — and praying that the said townships of Rawdon, Kilkenny, and Kildare, together with the unsurveyed townships in the rear of them, may be allowed to send a representative to parliament, and that they may not be erected into municipal districts with the inhabitants of the Seignories,

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

A petition of Emery Osgood Tyler was presented to the House by Mr. Roblin, and the same was received and read, setting forth — That petitioner is a native of the United States — That he emigrated into this Province prior to the Rebellion and took the oath of allegiance in 1836 — That he has purchased land in the Province, and prays to be enabled to enjoy the rights and privileges of a British subject.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of Donald Calder and divers others, of the Township of Thorah, in the county of Simcoe, was presented to the House by Captain Steele, and the same was received and read, setting forth : — That in tion for a road through his land.

(40)

1839 a certain road was laid out, leading from Talbot river to what is commonly termed the Brock road, near to mills belonging to said Calder, in the township of Thorah. That said Calder, was persuaded by the Surveyor of Roads, Arad Smalley, Esquire, to allow said road to pass through his land, as a cheaper and more eligible site for a bridge could be found above the mills than on the concession line — informing him that he would be entitled to the allowance for road, thus departed from. That petitioner, living at a distance of about seventy miles, did not apply for the same until after the expiration of six months, when he was told that he had been too late in making his application; and praying that an act may be passed authorising the conveying to him said parcel of road in lieu of that given by him as aforesaid,

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Order of the day for balloting of committee to nominate standing committees postponed.
Rules and Regulations
reported.

The order of the day for the House to proceed to the ballot of members for a committee to nominate the standing committees of this House being read —

Mr. Attorney General Ogden moved, seconded by Mr. Attorney General Draper, that the said order of the day be postponed until Wednesday the twenty-third instant.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Aylwin opposed the motion. He insinuated that all the members of the house had not the advantages of a Government salary to support them at a distance from home, in the discharge of that duty which they had voluntarily undertaken. Time was therefore of consequence to them.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Quesnel supported the motion as a reasonable one.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Black was of opinion that common courtesy demanded an acquiescence in it; besides it could not be objected against it that it involved any principle.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Moffatt did not rise to express his dissent, but it was rather extraordinary that when he gave notice of his motion for this day, it has elicited nothing from ministers! but now they come forward and move the postponement of it.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Simpson said that as they were now legislating under new auspices they should not permit themselves to be shackled by any allusion to what has been.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Neilson had no objection that time should be granted, but he (sic) understood very well the plea that was urged — your responsible government! — he knew it all very well.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Attorney General Draper explained on behalf of his colleague. The power of nominating the committees was not for a moment assumed by ministers; all they required, as it was a measure of great importance was, time to deliberate upon it, and ascertain how far it assimilated to British practice.<sup>8</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued and it was carried in the affirmative and Ordered accordingly.

Rules and Regulations reported.

Mr. Durand from the committee of the whole House on the rules and regulations for the Government of this House reported, according to order, the said rules and regulations; which rules and regulations were again read at the Clerk's table and are as followeth:

RULES AND REGULATIONS

For the Government of the Legislative Assembly.

MEETING AND ADJOURNMENTS OF THE HOUSE.

1st. Resolved — That this House do meet at two o'clock in the afternoon: and if at two o'clock there is not a QUORUM, Mr. Speaker may take the Chair and adjourn.

2d. That when the House adjourns, the Members shall keep their seats until the Speaker leave the chair.

3rd. That whenever the Speaker is obliged to adjourn the House for want of a QUORUM, the hour at which such adjournment is made, and the names of the Members then present, shall be inserted in the Journals.

QUORUM.

4th. That upon the appearance of a QUORUM the Speaker shall take the Chair and the members be called to order.

5th. That the Speaker shall always take the Chair when Black Rod is at the door, whatever the number of Members then present may be.

MINUTES.

6. That immediately after the Speaker shall have taken the Chair, the Minutes of the preceding day shall be read by the Clerk ; to the end that any mistake therein may be corrected by the House.

SPEAKER.

7. That the Speaker shall preserve Order and Decorum, and shall decide Questions of Order, subject to an appeal to the House.

(41)

8. That the Speaker shall not take part in any debate or vote in any case, unless the House shall be equally divided. — He may give his reasons for so voting. He shall stand uncovered when addressing the House.

9. That when the Speaker is called upon to explain a point of order or practice, he is to state the rule applicable to the case without argument or comment.

MEMBERS.

10. That every Member, previous to his speaking, shall rise from his seat, uncovered, and address himself to the Speaker.

11. That when two or more Members rise at once, the Speaker shall name the Member who is first to speak ; and the other or others may appeal to the House if dissatisfied with the Speaker's decision, by the Question, "Which Member was first up ?"

12. That every Member who shall be present when a question is put, shall vote thereon, unless the House shall excuse him, or unless he shall be personally interested in the question ; provided such interest be resolvable into a personal pecuniary profit, or such as is peculiar to the Member and not in common with the interest of the subject at large, in which case he shall not vote.

13. That when the Speaker is putting a question, no Member shall walk out of, or across the House ; nor when a Member is speaking shall any Member hold discourse to interrupt him, except to order, nor pass between him and the Chair.

14. That a Member called to order shall sit down unless permitted to explain ; and the House, if appealed to, shall decide on the case, but without debate ; if there be no appeal, the decision of the Chair shall be submitted to.

15. That no Member shall speak disrespectfully of the Queen or any of the Royal Family, or Person administering the Government of this Province ; nor shall he use unmannerly or indecent language against the proceedings of this House, or against particular Members ; nor shall he speak beside the question in debate.

16. That each Member may, of right, require the question or motion in discussion to be read for his information at any time of the debate, but not so as to interrupt a Member speaking.

17. That no Member shall speak more than once on the same question, without leave of the House, except in explanation of a material part of his speech, which may have been misconceived; but then he is not to introduce new matter.

18. That no Member shall speak more than once, without leave of the House, upon a previous Question.

19. That any Member may, at any time, desire the House to be cleared of strangers; and the Speaker shall immediately give directions to the Sergeant at Arms to execute the order, without debate.

20. That it be recommended to every Member wishing to go out during the sittings to inform the Sergeant at Arms of the place where he may be found, if wanted.

21. That no Member, during the Session, shall absent himself for more than one sitting at a time, without an express leave of absence from the House.

22. That this House will not grant leave of absence to any Member, (unless that there are forty-three Members present in town,) but on the most urgent and accidental business, specially stated to this House.

Rules and Regulations
of House.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

23. That the master in Chancery attending the Legislative Council be received as their Messenger at the Clerk's Table, the Members sitting, where he shall deliver such message as he is charged with from the Legislative Council.

24. That all Messages, from this House to the Honorable the Legislative Council be sent by one Member of this House.

25. That when this House shall judge it necessary to request a conference with the Legislative Council, the reasons to be given by this House upon the subject of the conference, shall be prepared and agreed to by the House, before a Messenger shall be appointed to make the said request.

26. That Messages, from the Honorable the Legislative Council, shall be received into this House as soon as announced by the Sergeant at Arms.

27. That Legislative Councillors, desirous of hearing the debates, may have seats without the Bar, in a space to be set apart for that purpose; withdrawing when the House is cleared.

STRANGERS

28. That Strangers admitted into the House during its sittings, who make a noise or behave irregularly, shall be committed to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms, to await the judgment of the House.

JOURNALS, &c.

29. That copies of the Journals, translated into the French Language, be laid on the table daily, for the use of the Members; and also copies of Speeches from the Throne, Addresses, Messages, and Entries of other transactions and deliberations of the House, when asked for by any two Members.

30. That a copy of the Journals of this House be delivered to His Excellency the Governor, every morning of the day after the same has been read and approved of by the House, certified by the Clerk.

31. That the Clerk do immediately make an Index to the Journals of the House, referring to the several matters therein contained, and that at the end of each Session of Parliament, he do make a like Index to the Journals.

32. That until this House shall adopt the measure of having its proceedings printed daily, this House doth consent that the Legislative Council may cause the Journals of this House to be searched in like manner as this House may, according to Parliamentary usage, search the Journals of the Legislative Council.

RULES OF THE HOUSE.

33. That the Rules of the House shall be observed in a Committee of the whole House, so far as they may be applicable, except the Rule limiting the number of times of speaking.

34. That, in all unprovided cases, resort shall be had to the Rules, Usages and Forms of Parliament, which shall be followed, until this House shall think fit to make a Rule applicable to such unprovided cases.

DIVISION OF THE HOUSE.

35. That upon a division in the House, the names of those who vote for, and of those who vote against the question, shall be entered upon the Minutes, if two Members require it.

Rules and Regulations
of House.

MOTIONS AND QUESTIONS.

36. That a motion to adjourn shall always be in order.

37. That a motion that the Chairman leave the Chair, shall always be in order, and shall take place of any other motion.

38. That no motion shall be debated or put, unless the same be in writing and seconded. When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French by the Speaker, if he is master of the two languages; if not, the Speaker shall read in either of the two languages most familiar to him; and the reading in the other language shall be at the table by the Clerk or his Deputy, before debate.

39. That after a motion is read by the Speaker, it shall be deemed to be in possession of the House; but may be withdrawn at any time before decision or amendment, with permission of the House.

40. That when a question is under debate, no motion shall be received unless to amend it, or commit it, or to postpone it to a certain day, or for the previous question, or for adjournment.

41. That the Previous Question, until it is decided, shall preclude all amendment and debate of the main question; and shall be in the following words: "Shall the main Question be now put?"

42. That a motion for commitment, until it is decided, shall preclude all amendment of the main question.

43. That all Questions, whether in Committee or in the House, shall be put in the order they are moved.

44. That no motion prefaced by any preamble, shall be admitted in this House.

45. That every motion when seconded, ought to be received and read by the Speaker, except in the cases provided for by the Rules of this House.

46. That it shall be the duty of the Speaker, whenever he shall conceive that a motion which he has received and read, may be contrary to the Rules or Privileges of this House, to apprize the House thereof immediately, before the question on such motion is put, and to cite the Rule which is applicable to the case.

AID AND SUPPLY.

47. That if any motion be made in the House for any Public Aid, Subsidy Duty, or Charge upon the people, the consideration and debate thereof shall not presently be entered upon, but adjourned till such further day as the House shall think fit to appoint; and then it shall be referred to a Committee of the whole House, and their opinion to be reported before any Resolution or Vote of the House do pass thereupon.

48. That all Aids and Supplies granted to Her Majesty by the Legislature of Canada, are the sole gift of the Assembly of this Province, and all Bills for granting such Aids and Supplies ought to begin with the Assembly, as it is the undoubted right of the Assembly to direct, limit, and appoint, in all such Bills, the ends, purposes, considerations, conditions, limitations and qualifications of such Grants, which are not alterable by the Legislative Council.

49. That in order to expedite the business of the Legislature, the House should not insist on the privilege claimed and exercised by them, of laying-aside Bills sent from the Legislative Council, because they impose pecuniary penalties; nor of laying aside amendments made by the Legislative Council, because they introduce into or alter pecuniary of the House.

penalties in Bills sent to them by this House; provided that all such penalties thereby imposed, are only to punish or prevent crimes and offences, and do not tend to lay a burthen on the subject, either as Aid and Supply to Her Majesty, or for any general or special purposes, by Rates, Tolls, Assessments or otherwise.

PUBLIC BILLS.

50. That every Public Bill shall be introduced by a motion for leave, specifying the title of the Bill, or by a motion to appoint a Committee to prepare and bring it in, or by an Order of the House on the Report of a Committee.

51. That no Bill shall be committed or amended until it shall have been twice read.

52. That all amendments shall be reported to the House by the Chairman, standing in his place. After report, the Bill shall be subjected to debate and amendment in the House, before the question to engross it, shall be put.

53. That every Bill shall receive three several readings, each on different days, previous to its being passed, except in urgent and extraordinary occasions, when it may be read twice or thrice in one day.

54. That when a Bill is read in the House, the Clerk shall certify the readings and the time on the back.

55. That Bills committed to a Committee of the whole House, shall first be read throughout by the Clerk, and then read by the Chairman and debated by clauses, leaving the Preamble and Title to be last considered.

56. That when a Bill passes the House, the Clerk shall certify the same, with the date thereof, at the foot of the Bill.

57. That a similar mode of proceeding shall be observed with Bills which have originated in and passed the Legislative Council, as with Bills originating in this House.

58. That it shall be the duty of the Law-Clerk of this House, after the present Session, to revise all Public Bills after the first reading, and that after such revision, he do mark his initials and certify on the endorsement of the said Bills, in red ink, that the same are correct; and that the said Law-Clerk be held responsible for the due performance of such duty, in obedience to this Resolution; and in order that he may be regularly apprized of the Bills that shall have been read for the first time, it shall be the duty of the senior Clerk of the Committees of this House, to provide him daily during the Session, with a List of the Bills that shall have been read for the first time, and of the day on which they shall be fixed for the second reading; and that in every succeeding stage of such Bills, the said Law-Clerk shall be also held responsible for the correctness of the said Bills, should amendments be made thereto, and he shall make a Breviat of every such Bill previous to the second reading thereof.

59. That all Bills, Public and Private, and Breviats and Abridgements thereof, be printed before the second reading, for the use of the Members of the Legislature, unless the House in certain cases dispense with such printing, with the exception nevertheless of certain Bills to continue the Acts or Bills of Reimbursements or other short Bills, not introducing any important innovation, with the printing whereof the Speaker may dispense.

PRIVATE BILLS.

60. That Bills of a private nature shall be introduced by a Petition to be presented by a Member and seconded.

61. That no Bill be ordered or permitted to be brought in, or any Petition for any work proposed to be carried on by tolls or duties to be levied, by subjecting of particular places to the same, until such Petition has been referred to a Committee, and they have examined the matter thereof and reported the same to the House.

62. That whenever any Petition or Bill presented to the House, shall have been referred to a Committee to examine the matter thereof and report the same as it shall appear to them to the House, the House will not admit any Petitioners to be heard by themselves or Counsel, against such Petition or Bill, until the matter thereof shall have been first reported to the House.

63. That the Chairman of the Committee for any private Bill do not sit thereupon, without giving a week's notice thereof, set up in the lobby.

64. That all persons whose interest or property may be affected by any private Bill, shall appear in person before the Committee to give their consent, and if they cannot personally appear, they may send their consent in writing, which shall be proved before the Committee by one or more witnesses.

65. That when any Bill shall be brought into the House for confirming Letters Patent, there shall be a true copy of such Letters Patent annexed to the Bill.

66. That before any Petition is presented to this House, for leave to bring in a private Bill, whether for the erection of a Bridge or Bridges, for the regulation of a Common, for the making of any Turnpike Road, or for granting to any individual or individuals any exclusive rights or privileges whatsoever, or for the alteration or renewing of any Act of the Provincial Parliament, for the like purpose; notice of such application shall be given in one of the newspapers of the District, published in the English, and one in the French language, if any is published therein; and also by a notice affixed on the Church-doors of the Parishes or Townships that such application may effect, or in the most public place where there is no Church, during two months at least before such Petition is presented.

67. That hereafter this House will not receive any Petitions for private Bills, after the first fifteen days of each session.

Mr. Merritt moved that the said rule be expunged inasmuch as it imposes an unnecessary restriction, and may deter individuals from applying for an incorporation for the improvement of the country by canals, rail roads, &c., and withhold the introduction and concentration of capital for other public uses. The House divided and the amendment was lost, 24 to 34.*

68. That this House will not receive any private Bills except in the first twenty-four days of each session.

69. That this House will not receive any Report of a Special Committee upon any such Private Bills, except within the first forty days of each Session.

70. That before any Petition praying leave to bring in a private Bill for the erection of a Toll Bridge, is presented to this House, the person or persons purposing to Petition for such Bill, shall, upon giving the notice prescribed by the sixty-sixth Rule, also, at same time, and in the same manner, give a Notice, stating the rates which they intend to ask, the extent of the privilege, the height of the Arches, the interval between the abutments or piers for the passage of rafts and vessels, and mentioning whether they purpose to erect a Draw-Bridge or not, and the dimensions of such Draw-Bridge.

71. That all the expenses and costs attending on private Bills, giving any exclusive privilege or advantage, and the relative proceedings in this House thereon, ought not to fall upon the Public, and that it is just and reasonable that part of such expenses and costs should be supported by those who apply for the said Bills; and that a sum not less than £20 be deposited in the hands of the Clerk of this House by the Petitioners before the Petition be received.

of House.

72. That the Clerk of this House be held, immediately after the issuing of the Proclamation, convoking the Provincial Parliament for the dispatch of business, to announce in the Quebec Gazette and other Newspapers published in this Province, until the opening of Parliament, the day on which the time limited for receiving Petitions for Private Bills will expire according to the Rules of this House, and that the said Clerk be also held to announce, by notice set up in the Special Committee Rooms, and in the Lobby of this House, by the first day of every Session, the days on which, according to the Rules of this House, the time for receiving Petitions for private Bills, Reports on those Petitions, and Reports on the Bills upon those Petitions, are to expire.

PETITIONS, &C.

73. That the Petitions, Memorials and other papers addressed to the House, shall be presented by a Member in his place, who shall be answerable to this House that they do not contain improper or impertinent matter.

74. That whenever a Petition tending to incorporate any number of persons to carry on any commerce or trade, is presented to this House, such of the Members of this House who are to become incorporated in consequence of such Petition to carry on such commerce or trade, are personally interested in all questions that may arise upon such Petition, and in any after proceedings that may take place upon it.

See also BILLS PRIVATE, Rule 63, 66, 67, 68, 69.

PAPERS LAID BEFORE THE HOUSE.

Form of Reading.

75. That papers laid before this House, or referred to a Committee for their consideration, are of right to be read once by the Clerk or Chairman at the table, but when once read to the House or Committee, they are then, like every other Paper that belongs to the House, to be moved for to be read, and if objected to, to be decided by taking the sense of the House or Committee,

COMMITTEES.

76. That in forming a Committee of the whole House, the Speaker shall leave the Chair, and shall before leaving the same appoint a Chairman to preside, who shall have the same authority in the Chair of the Committee as the Speaker in the Chair of the House, and in other Committees the Chairman shall have the same authority.

77. That the mode of appointing a Special Committee, shall be first to determine the number it shall consist of, then each Member naming one, which shall be written down by the Clerk; those who have most voices shall be taken successively, until that the number is completed; and if any difficulty should arise by two or more having on equal number of voices, the sense of the House shall be taken as to the preference; but it shall be always understood, that no Member who declares himself or divides against the body or substance of the Bill, motion or matter to be committed, upon any of the Readings thereof, can be nominated to be of a Committee upon such Bill, motion or matter.

78. That every Member who shall introduce a Bill, Petition, or Motion upon any object which may be referred to a Committee, shall be one of the Committee without being named by the House.

79. That of the number of Members appointed to compose a Committee, such number thereof as shall be equal to a majority of the whole number chosen, shall be a Quorum competent to proceed to business in all cases, where the number to form such Quorum shall not be specially fixed in the motion of appointment.

Rules and Regulations
of House.

MESSENGERS.

80. That the Speaker of this House shall appoint all Messengers ; but it shall be always understood, that the Member who moves for the Message shall of right be one of the number of Messengers, and that any Member who shall declare himself, or divides against the said Message, or against the subject thereof, cannot be appointed to be one of the Messengers.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

81. That the Order of the Day shall have preference to any motion before the House.

82. That it be a standing Rule of this House, that when any order or Orders of the Day shall be lost by a Committee of the whole House breaking up for want of a Quorum, or by the House adjourning for want of a Quorum, the Order or Orders so lost, shall be taken up in succession, as the first business to be proceeded on, at the next meeting of the House.

PRIVILEGES.

83. That whenever any matter of privilege arises, it shall be immediately taken into consideration.

LIBRARY.

84. That a Catalogue of the titles, editions, classes, cost and charges of the Books, be kept by the Clerk of the House, in whom the custody and responsibility thereof shall be vested.

85. That the Library be deposited in the Committee Room, or Clerk's Office, or such other part of this House as may hereafter appear to Mr. Speaker to be most convenient.

86. That no person whatsoever shall be entitled to resort to the Books except the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government, the Members of the Executive and Legislative Councils and House of Assembly, and the Officers of the two Houses for the time being ; that access may be had to the books at all hours during the sitting of the Legislature, and on every Tuesday of each week, from the hour of ten in the morning to three in the afternoon, during the prorogations ; but on no pretence whatever ought any person, the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government excepted, to be permitted to carry any of them out of the building.

87. That the Clerk shall report regularly to the House, through Mr. Speaker, at the opening of each Session, the actual state of the Library.

88. That the Clerk of this House be authorized to import annually the continuation of the Periodical Works in the Library of this House.

OFFICE HOURS.

89. That the hours of attendance of the respective Officers of this House and the Extra Clerks employed during the Session, be from nine in the forenoon until noon, and from one in the afternoon until eight o'clock, and from thence until the business of the day be completed.

VACANCIES IN THE OFFICES.

90. That before filling any vacancy in the Offices of this House, enquiry be made touching the necessity of such Office, the amount of the salary and emoluments thereunto annexed, and the fixing such salary de novo at every change.

91. That the Clerk of this House do lay before this House in the course of each Session, a general table of the Imports and Exports of this Province, taken from the Returns which may be laid before this House by order of His Excellency the Governor in Chief; that the said Clerk do also lay before this House next Session a similar table for the seven last years, and that he do cause the said table to be printed, in order that the same be added to the Appendix to the Journals of next year, and that in each succeeding year he do cause to be printed a similar table, to be in like manner inserted in the Appendix to the Journals of those periods.

Question of concurrence.

Ordered — That the question of Concurrence, be now separately put upon each of the said Rules and Regulations: —

And the first to the seventieth inclusive of the said Rules and Regulations being again severally read, and the question of concurrence being separately put upon each, they were agreed to unanimously.

Motion for expunging 71st. Rule.

The seventy-first of the said Rules and Regulations, being again read, Mr. Merritt moved, seconded by Mr. Thompson, that the said Rule be expunged, in as much as it imposes an unnecessary restriction, and may deter individuals from applying for an incorporation for the improvement of the Country, by Canals, RailRoads, &c. and with-hold the introduction and concentration of capital for other public uses.

The question having been put upon the said motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth; —

71st. Rule adopted.

The question being then put on the said seventy first Rule, it was agreed by the House.

The residue of the said Rules and Regulations being again severally read and the question of concurrence being separately put upon each, they were agreed to unanimously, and —

Resolved — That this House doth concur with the Committee in the said Rules and Regulations.

Rules and regulations concurred in, and to be communicated to Leg. Coun.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Taschereau,

Resolved — That a Copy of the said Rules and Regulations be communicated by Message to the Legislative Council.

Ordered — That Mr. Neilson do carry the said Message to the Legislative Council.

Rules to be printed.

Ordered — That three hundred copies in English, and two hundred copies in French, of the said Rules and Regulations, be printed for the use of the Members of this House.

Order of day on Judges independence bill, postponed.

The Order of the day, for the second reading of the Bill for better securing the independence and uprightness of the Judges, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Monday next.

Gwillimbury Road and Bridge Bill to be read second time on Friday.

Ordered — That the Bill to amend an Act of that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada, intituled "An Act to provide for the making and keeping in repair the West Gwillimbury Road and Bridge, and to authorize the erection of a Toll Gate thereon," be read a second time on Friday next.

Petition of J. A. Tailhades praying to be admitted as an advocate.

A Petition of Jacques Alexander Tailhades, Gentleman, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner, a gentleman, and an advocate of France, has domiciled in this Province, and resided in the City of Montreal for several years — That he has followed a course of clerkship nearly four years — and solicits that in consideration of his having followed a regular course of study in France, and having been already received as an advocate by the University, he may be permitted to present himself for examination at the expiration of the fourth year of his clerkship, as those who have passed a regular course of study.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Ordered — That when this House doth adjourn, it will adjourn until three o'clock P. M. this day.

Then, on motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Cameron,
The House adjourned.

3 o'clock, P.M.

The order of the day for the House in Committee on the Speech of His Excellency, the Governor General, to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Morris took the chair of the Committee.<sup>10</sup>

Committee of whole on speech of His Exy. the Gov. General, at opening of Session.

Mr. Cameron ... moved the first Resolution....<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Neilson rose and stated that he had an amendment to propose. He believed the course he intended to pursue was quite Parliamentary, and that it was usual, after discussing the Speech, to go into the general state of the country and the policy of the Government. He, therefore, moved that all after the word "Resolved," be struck out, and that there be substituted, "That this House do now take into consideration the draft of the following Address," &c. He then read the draft....<sup>12</sup>

We, Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, most humbly thank your Excellency for the Speech delivered from the Throne at the opening of the present Session.

We receive with respect your Excellency's declaration that you have assembled us at the earliest period which the circumstances of the Province and the duties imposed upon you by the Imperial Act for the Union of the Canadas, have permitted.

It is with deep concern that we have learnt from your Excellency, that a subject of her Majesty, an inhabitant of this Province, has been forcibly detained in the neighbouring States, & we acknowledge with gratitude the assurance which your Excellency has been authorized to make, that it is her Majesty's fixed determination to afford her powerful protection to her subjects in this Province.

We feel grateful for the arrangements which your Excellency communicates, by which her Majesty's Government has reduced the rates of Postage between this Colony and the United Kingdom, and that a more speedy and regular conveyance of letters within the Province has been effected under your Excellency's direction. And we shall hail with satisfaction any improvements in the Department of the Post Office which will put us in a condition, in that respect, equal to that which exists in the mother country.

We beg leave to assure your Excellency that any message from your Excellency, on matters which may be of deep importance to the future welfare of the province, will receive our most serious attention.

The improvement of the Navigation and establishment of internal communications are objects essential to the general prosperity; and we feel grateful for the information which your Excellency has communicated, that her Majesty's Government is disposed to assist in promoting them. When your Excellency shall be pleased to lay before us the despatches which convey this assurance, the whole of these subjects will receive our most respectful consideration.

We will also give our earnest consideration to the subject of Emigration, and the disposal and settlement of the Public Lands, as connected with the outlay of capital upon public works, — and we derive great satisfaction from the information communicated by your Excellency, that her Majesty's Government is disposed to assist emigrants in proceeding to those parts of the province, where their labour may be made available. Any judicious measure which may seem calculated to alleviate the sufferings of our fellow subjects in the United Kingdom, who leave their home with a view of bettering their condition in this Province, will be readily concurred in by us.

We particularly thank your Excellency for your expressions in favor of local self-government, & that the people should exercise a greater degree of power over their local affairs. When the measure may come under our consideration, we shall not fail to respect the prerogative of the Crown, while we endeavour to secure independent and impartial administration of Justice.

We concur entirely with your Excellency in the importance of affording every facility for a general education of the people. While we are ever ready to respect the rights of all to the equal enjoyment of the blessings of instruction, we trust that our labors, for the ends for which we have your Excellency's proffered co-operation, will eventually prove successful.

It is our particular duty to bestow the most serious attention on the public accounts, and the estimates for the public service to be submitted to us by your Excellency, and also on any financial measures which your excellency may lay before us affecting the revenue levied in this province, or which may in any way tend to impose burthens on our constituents.

Your Excellency may be assured that in the discharge of our duties to her Majesty and our constituents, it will be our constant endeavour that all our proceedings should be characterized by wisdom and prudence. In conformity to our obligations as subjects of the British Crown, and bound to fidelity by the most sacred ties, we have assembled in obedience to an Act of the Imperial Parliament and Her Majesty's writs, to advise and consent to such laws as may be deemed necessary for the peace welfare, and good government of Canada: although we cannot but regret that the most populous portion of the province, heretofore constituted under the Act of Parliament of 1791, as the Province of Lower Canada, has not been consulted on the Constitution of the Government which is now substituted for that which prevailed under the said act, and that there are features in the act now constituting the government of Canada, which are inconsistent with justice, and the common rights of British subjects.

We shall nevertheless, endeavour to discharge the duties which we are now called to perform, in the true spirit of British freemen, in the hope that justice may finally prevail, & restore that confidence and prosperity which your Excellency desires, and in which we, as well as our posterity, are so deeply interested.<sup>13</sup>

((Mr. Neilson)) hoped the House would postpone the discussion of any Address until he had an opportunity of getting the one printed which he had proposed.<sup>14</sup>

To a question from the Attorney General, Ogden, Mr. Neilson explained that when one series of resolutions were considered, the house would consider both series.<sup>15</sup>

Several Members opposed the delay, as Mr. N. ((Neilson)) and his friends had had abundant time to prepare. Among others, Mr. Johnston, the Member for Carleton, amused the House a good deal, by saying, that he saw very little difference in the two Addresses proposed; for his part, he could safely vote for both of them.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. J.S. Macdonald opposed the postponement of the debate: proposing that when the original resolutions were under consideration, the objections or amendments embodied in Mr. Neilson's series of resolutions might be brought forward each upon each.<sup>17</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

Progress.

And Mr. Morris reported that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.Ordered — That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Monday next.Then, on motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Mr. Attorney General Ogden,The House adjourned until Monday next.

Appendix, 19 June 1841.

((Notice of proposed motions.))

Mr. Christie gave notice that he would, this day week, move, that the House go into Committee of the whole upon the Administration of Justice in the Inferior District of Gaspé.<sup>18</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion re : House Printing))

Mr. Morin moved, seconded by Mr. Berthelot, that 200 copies, in English and French, of the Address proposed by Mr. Neilson, be printed.<sup>19</sup>Mr. Moffatt stated, as the Address mentioned was not yet before the House, the motion was irregular.<sup>20</sup>The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) decided to the same effect....<sup>21</sup>The motion was withdrawn — Mr. Neilson stating that he would assume the "responsibility" of getting his draft printed. It was understood that the House would eventually pay for the printing.<sup>22</sup>

Clerk Assistant to be appointed.

On motion of Mr. Simpson, seconded by Captain Steele,

Ordered — That the Clerk of this House do appoint an Assistant Clerk.

A petition of divers Lumber merchants &c. praying for a law appointing cullers and measurers.

A Petition of divers Lumber Merchants and others, was presented to the House by Mr. Cameron, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That from 1000 to 1200 Vessels are annually loaded at the port of Quebec with timber — and that no law exists for the measuring or culling of the same — That the purchasers generally employ their own servants as Cullers and Measurers — persons in whom petitioners can have no confidence — to which proceeding petitioners must assent or contend with the wealthy merchant of Quebec at law, which would be ruinous to them; and praying that a law may be passed putting the trade on a just and equitable footing, into the hands of men unconnected with the buyer or seller.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of John C. Moulton praying to be naturalized.

A Petition of John Clough Moulton, of the Township of York, was presented to the House by Mr. Price, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner came from the United States in 1830, and has resided in this Province since that period.

That, between the years 1835 and 1840, Petitioner taught a common school in the Home District and participated in the public grant — from which latter period it was withheld in consequence of his not being a British subject.

That Petitioner is desirous of remaining in the province and of following the calling of a Schoolmaster, and therefore prays to be naturalized.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition, divers Inhabitants of Home district referred to sel. Committee.

Resolved — That the Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Home District be referred to a special Committee of three members, to report thereon with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Small, Mr. Cartwright and Mr. Boswell, do compose the said committee.

Petition from the Montreal board of Trade praying for a partial repeal of the usury laws and the passing of an Act making it lawful to demand interest on bills and accounts from the period they become due.

A Petition of the Board of Trade of Montreal, respecting usury, was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That there exists in Canada a law regulating the rate of interest which shall be taken for the forbearance of the payment of money, fixing the said rate at not more than six per cent, but allowing less to be taken, and also annexing heavy penalties in case of the infraction of the law; calling such infraction usury — That it appears to petitioners as fallacious to affix a value for the use of money, as it would be to affix a price for a barrel of flour or a yard of cloth — money being at one time worth more than at another — and a limit to the price causes, when scarce, a withdrawal from the market, and consequent ruin to many — That the law is every day evaded in every possible mode; persons so evading the law, who may be borrowers, not only having to pay the extra rate of interest; but also towards recompensing the lender for the risk he runs — From this cause the most wealthy class of money lenders are often unwilling to lend on any terms — That the law first enacted at a period when such matters were but little understood, and when a superstitious feeling existed against any interest being received — and that such causes no longer existing there is no occasion for the law being continued.

That although it is just and right that a rate should be affixed where no specific agreement exists — and that the present rate is just — still, that parties ought to be allowed to make what agreement they please.

That in the United Kingdom the usury laws have been partially repealed, to the great benefit of trade, and that, owing to the great scarcity of money, and the facility of using it to profit in this province, the necessity for such repeal is much more obvious than in the said United Kingdom.

That a law existed in the late province of Upper Canada annexing interest to all accounts or bills from the day they became due, whether protested or not, but not in Lower Canada; and that it appears just that such law should exist and be general — and praying for a repeal of the usury law so far as respects the penalty in case of receiving more than six per cent, and making general the said law of the late province of Upper Canada allowing interest on all bills and accounts when they become due.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from Board of Trade of Montreal praying for amendment of Inspection laws.

A Petition of the Board of Trade of Montreal respecting the Inspection of Pork, Beef, Flour, Ashes, &c., was presented to the House by the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That there exist in Canada certain Laws and Ordinances, ordering that the following articles, viz: Flour and Meat, Pork and Beef and Pot and Pearl ashes, be inspected by legal Inspectors previous to exportation — and affixing a penalty for exporting the said articles without such inspection.

That this law has been productive of great good to the Province while the putting up of these articles was imperfect, and when the export was too small for any one person's manufacture to obtain a character in the markets.

That, from the formation of large and highly respectable establishments in the manufacture and preparation of the articles before named, there is in many cases no necessity for such inspection — although ordinary parcels of goods will always require it — so that the office and its duties will have to be continued; but as applicable to the merchandize prepared by the large establishments before mentioned, whose brand is well known, its interference is not only needless but injurious in effect — in as much as it produces mediocrity, by not affixing a superior brand to an article however superior in quality — such goods, if sold only by the manufacturer's or packer's brand, would be estimated by the general quality, and in consequence, such manufacturers or packers would have direct interest, not in making or packing an article just to pass inspection, but to give the greatest possible satisfaction.

That nothing but the necessity of inspection, together with the expense and time lost in inspecting, cooping, loading and unloading, prevents very large quantities of produce being sent from one part of the adjacent states of America to another part thereof, through the Province of Canada, thereby giving employment to barges and labourers and adding greatly to the tolls of the various canals and other public works; and petitioners pray that sanction be given to a bill repealing the clauses in the several Acts or Ordinances providing for the inspection of Flour and Indian Meal, for the inspecting, packing and curing of Beef and Pork, and for the inspection of Pot and Pearl Ashes, which affix a penalty in case of a non-compliance with the provisions thereof, provided that in all cases, the manufacturer or packer annex to all articles put up by him, his name and address, quality and tare of package, as well as the weight, in such cases as are required by the present Acts or Ordinances, so to be marked by the inspector, leaving the rest of those Acts or Ordinances in full force.

Ordered—That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from board of Trade of Montreal on the subject of currency.

A petition of the Board of Trade of Montreal respecting the Currency was presented to the House, by the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read; setting forth:—That owing to measures having been taken in the late Province of Upper Canada, affecting the currency, similar measures not being carried into effect in Lower Canada, there exists a difference in the currencies of the former two Provinces, extremely embarrassing to trade; and now that those Provinces are united, as bad in principle as anomalous in effect.

That the currency of the late Province of Upper Canada, has been very greatly depreciated, a mere token or bank note, in silver, as it has been called, namely the English shilling, and six pence, being substituted at rates far above their value for the dollar of the American continent.

That in the late Province of Lower Canada, certain coins called écus, or French half crowns, have been circulated at rates far above their value, but, their quantity being limited, the evil arising from them is so likewise.

That the pound currency is quite imaginary, and the calculation of its value in sterling money founded in error, inconvenient in practice, and giving the most incorrect ideas of its value to persons at a distance.

That it is highly essential that the whole of the British North American Provinces, should have one currency, and that currency, if possible, the same as that of the United Kingdom.

That one of the modes suggested formerly by the board of trade, namely, making the dollar and half dollar of the American continent, the only legal tender, has such objections, arising in part since the report was made, namely, the high value put upon gold, in the United States, and the often suspension of the Banks there, whence alone dollars and half dollars can be procured, that the board see insuperable difficulties to its adoption, were even the expense of calling in the over valued coins not too great to be afforded by the province.

That a Provincial coinage would not only be expensive but liable to be at one time too scarce and at another too plentiful, from the limited quantity wanted, and the fluctuations in supply and demand.

That the quantity of the gold coin called the sovereign, brought out by the Emigrants, is alone not only sufficient to form and keep up a good metallic circulation, but also to leave enough surplus for export.

That it is highly important that the Emigrant should find the currency the same in his adopted, as in his natal land, enabling him at once to understand its merits, and to use the coin he brings with him, as well as to explain to his friends the value of property, produce, wages, and expenses of living.

That the only difficulty would be the regulation of existing contracts and engagements, first on an equitable basis; secondly, not to lose too much when calling in the present overvalued coins, and, thirdly, to avoid intricate calculations.

That there seems only one mode, namely, to affix to the sovereign, which in case of the adoption of sterling would be the only legal tender, a value in the present currency, not so low as to lose by calling in the present coins, nor so high as to be unfair in principle, — from these causes the value of the sovereign would be, at the lowest, twenty-four shillings and six pence, currency — at the highest, twenty-five shillings; the advantage of the latter rate being that there would be no loss to the Province, and no fractional parts to calculate.

Wherefore petitioners pray that the House will give sanction to a bill altering the money of accounts of Canada, to sterling, the same as in the United Kingdom, making the British Gold Sovereign the only legal tender — British Silver to be change only to a limited amount, and affixing the value of such sovereign, in the adjusting of present accounts, at from twenty-four shillings and sixpence to twenty-five shillings, currency.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Second reading Gaspe fishery bill postponed.

The order of the day for the second reading of Bill to regulate the fisheries in the District of Gaspé, being read.

Ordered — That the said order of the day, be postponed until tomorrow.

House in Committee of whole on His Ex. the Gov. Gen. speech at opening of Session.

The order of the day for the House in Committee on the Speech of His Excellency the Governor General, to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature, being read —

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Morris took the chair of the Committee.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Baldwin rose and said, he would take the opportunity which was now afforded him, of recurring to the subject of the communication which he had stated it was his intention to make to the House, regarding the reasons which had led to his resignation of the office of Solicitor General, and of his seat in the Executive Council. It would be recollected by hon. members that he had said he had tendered his resignation, and that that resignation had been accepted, and that therefore he was no longer a member of the administration in this Province. He had also stated that he was not then prepared, because he did not feel himself at liberty, to explain his reasons for the step, but having since applied to the proper quarter, he now felt himself at liberty to state those reasons.<sup>2</sup>

Attorney General Ogden here apologized for interrupting the hon. and learned gentlemen, but he thought the business ought not to be interrupted. He thought it was highly indecorous in that House still to persist in deferring the passing of the Address. They had been already a number of days in session, and he really thought that no more time should be wasted.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said that nothing could be further from his intention than to impede for a moment the business of the Session.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Neilson then rose and said, perhaps it might be expected that he would explain the grounds upon which he had thought it necessary to move an amendment to the Address which had been originally proposed. It would have given him great pleasure if that Address had been such an one as he could conscientiously vote for, because he did not wish for a moment to take the matter out of the hands of the hon. mover of that address. But entering as they were at the present moment on a new career, and having been very properly recommended by His Excellency the Governor General to proceed with prudence and wisdom, he could not conscientiously give his support to the address of the hon. gentleman; tending, as it did, to pledge that House to a particular course with reference (sic) to matters which were to be brought under the consideration of the House. He (Mr. Neilson) had not the least objection to echo the Speech, but it was not right to prejudge matters which were to come before them, in the course of the Session, under the recommendation of His Excellency; all that was necessary to be said, was that they would take those subjects into their serious and respectful consideration. It was upon this ground that he had thought it is his duty to propose a substitute for the address which had been moved by the hon. gentleman. The House was now in possession of both documents, and hon. members could decide which they would adopt. He had alluded to the course upon which we are entering; he would, however, refrain from touching upon that subject further than to say that it cannot be denied that the affairs of this Province had been managed in such a way as in no respect to correspond with the language of the Governor General at the conclusion of his Speech, — that the people of this country are prosperous and contented. On the contrary, it was perfectly well known to every one at all conversant with the affairs of this Colony, that those affairs have been badly managed, and the people have never been prosperous and contented. He hoped, however, that means would be taken to produce peace, prosperity, and contentment throughout the country. And he (Mr. Neilson) for one would go the full length that any hon. gentleman in that house would go in promoting so desirable an end (hear, hear.) — But there might be a great difference of opinion between some hon. gentlemen and himself as to the mode by which they were to arrive at that object. He would not at the present moment recur to all that had been said upon this topic. They had talked about a remedy for existing evils, and that remedy, it was said, would be found in responsible government. He (Mr. Neilson) wished with all his heart that we had responsible government, but it must be very different from that which they had had up to the present time. He was well aware what responsible government should be, and he was well aware also that it was more easily talked of than obtained. Of all things the most fatal to any people is delusion, to imagine they have got that which they have not got, for they will assuredly find themselves at the last worse than at the beginning. He did not think it necessary to enter fully into the details of his views of the means which seemed to him to be necessary to produce a more prosperous and flourishing condition in the state of the Province. In the course of the discussion he might probably be induced to enter more widely into the subject.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Duggan said perhaps it might not be inappropriate on the present occasion to state the opinions which he held, and upon the faith of which he had been returned to Parliament. He (Mr. Duggan) was resolved to avoid every thing that would tend to keep up excitement, to bury the past oblivion, and look only to the future. He considered the speech of His Excellency as a most important document, as offering to this Province greater promises of good than had been ever before offered. They had the promise of that illustrious personage Lord Sydenham. — nay they had more, he had not contented himself with mere promises — they had his acts, which were better than words; they saw him actively taking up the subject which for so long a time and agitated and divided the public mind, and they also found that through his influence upon opinion, was about to be established what had been long sought for, namely, responsible government. — (Hear, hear.) Or in other words, that sort of government (sic) which was calculated to harmonize with the wishes and feelings of the people. This is, and has ever been, the great desideratum in government, because it matters not how well administered the affairs of the Government may be, if the people are unhappy and discontented. He (Mr. Duggan) had hoped that the debate would have terminated before, because he really thought ample time had been afforded for hon. gentlemen to have examined the original resolutions, and as time was exceedingly valuable, he trusted that hon. gentlemen would at once decide the question by their adoption. His own time was peculiarly precious, but he nevertheless would not shrink from the fulfillment of his duty to his constituents; that he would faithfully discharge, though he were obliged to continue for the whole term of the existence of Parliament to neglect his own individual interests (hear, hear, hear). He had hoped that the hon. member (Mr. Neilson) would have stated some good and valid reasons why they should adopt the resolutions which he had drawn up in preference to those which had been previously proposed. He should, at least, have stated wherein the difference between them consisted, that the committee might have had the benefit of the information. But the hon. gentleman had seemed to consider all explanation unnecessary. Mr. Duggan here proceeded to compare the two series of resolutions, and observed that the former were infinitely preferable. His Excellency has declared that it is with sincere satisfaction that he meets us to transact the affairs of the country, and he (Mr. Duggan) would recommend to hon. members of that house the propriety of meeting His Excellency in a like spirit, not with cold indifference, but with an earnestness for the public good (Hear, hear, hear.) He (Mr. Duggan) had sufficient confidence in His Excellency to believe that he was ready fully to co-operate with that house in giving to the people those equal rights and privileges which they have so long demanded. He believed the force of public opinion was now so strong that it could not be successfully resisted. — Does the conduct of His Excellency, or does Her Majesty's Government shew any disposition to continue to resist those demands? Far from it. On the contrary, they had reason to believe that the earnest endeavor of Lord Sydenham would be to render this Province happy and prosperous (Hear, hear).<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said the position in which that House stood, and in which the country was placed, was one of exceeding interest. They were about adopting measures which would affect the interests of posterity in a very high degree, but he did not think that, as stated in the speech, the eyes of all England were upon them. He believed there was too much indifference shown in England towards this Colony. (No, no.) It was certain, however, that the eyes of our fellow-colonists were upon us, and that the members of that House were responsible to their constituents, and to their God, for the course of conduct which they would pursue upon this occasion. He regarded the speech from the Throne as a most important document, and he sincerely wished it had been one to which he could respond. When he considered what ought to be the language of the address of His Excellency to that House at the opening of the first session under the Union Bill, he could not but express his extreme dissatisfaction, that so far from being what he conceived to be proper, it had been exactly the reverse. There were features also in the Union Bill which it was impossible for any member of that House to approve of. He would refer to the latter part of that act commencing with the fifteenth clause. The Parliament of Great Britain had undertaken to make provision with respect to the appropriation of monies levied upon this Colony, a proceeding which is at variance with the course pursued with regard to all other colonies, except, perhaps, to some in Africa. That this should be the only Colony which should be deprived of the disposal of its revenues, be (sic) considered to be a token of the utmost contempt toward this important branch of the empire. That we only, among all the colonies of Her Majesty are degraded to the lowest depth of degradation, a degradation which is unexampled in the history of colonial government. His objection to the speech was that His Excellency so far from noticing this broad distinction, has affected an entire silence upon the subject. And again there was another point to which it was his duty to direct the attention of the house, that no reference whatever had been made to the important question of responsible government. The learned Attorney General for the West has felt the importance of this question, and had entered into a long vindication of the opinions and views upon which himself and colleagues had acted, and although he seemed to have convinced the house that the principle was recognized by the Government, yet he (Mr. Aylwin) for one must express his dissatisfaction with the explanation which had been given by that hon. and learned gentleman, and in doing so he would be unjust towards himself, were he not to say, that in all the observations which he offered to that house, he wished it to be understood that he desired to speak with the utmost deference of those gentlemen who occupied the Treasury Benches, whose conduct had on all occasions been such as to merit the warmest respect. His object was to attack not men, but measures. It would have been highly satisfactory to have heard from those hon. gentlemen that we are to have affairs conducted upon such principles as were so earnestly called for by the country at large. But, notwithstanding all that had been declared to that house, they were precisely in the same condition in which they were before. What was the origin of all those evils and difficulties under which the Province had laboured? It was the composition of the two Councils, and a great and unfortunate man — unfortunate as regards himself as well as the country, in endeavouring to modify those evils instead of attacking the defective composition of the Executive Council, was so far misled as to attack that of the Legislative Council. (Hear, hear.) He felt himself bound to enter at some length into the subject: he desired however not to meddle with the affairs of Upper Canada, he did not profess to know any thing of that matter. If he was giving his own opinion — if he was venturing to give his own exposition of the law with regard to the composition of the Council, he would do so with that deference which was due to that Committee. But he had the authority of a gentleman who stood higher in the estimation of all as a man of very superior ability, and who was not less distinguished for his literary attainments — he referred to the late lamented predecessor in office of the hon. gentleman opposite, (Attorney General Ogden.) He (Mr. Aylwin) could have desired that at this day he could have seen upon those benches, either on one side or the other, that venerated head, to have heard those noble sentiments which could never have issued from any other than those lips: that gentlemen was now low in the dust — his country had recently lamented his loss, and he (Mr. Aylwin) for one would always lament that the opening of this the first session of the Parliament of United Canada should have taken place under such circumstances without the presence of Andrew Stuart, (hear, hear.) Armed with this authority he feared no opposition. He would read Stuart's own words, from the last work which he had ever published, entitled a "Review of the proceedings of the Legislature of Lower Canada." He hoped he would meet the ready excuse of the House for reading four or five pages written by that eminent man, professedly touching upon the points referred to by the hon. and learned Attorney General for Upper Canada. (Here the hon. gentleman read from the work referred to.) His first objection to the exposition of the powers and duties of the colonial Governor, as expressed by the hon. and learned Attorney General for Upper Canada was this, that that hon. gentleman had supposed that those powers were powers which might be exercised alone, and that that responsibility was a responsibility which was to be borne by himself alone, and that the responsibility of his advisers is local, whereas that responsibility extends also to the mother country. Baron Mazeres, who had filled the office of Attorney General in Lower Canada, had also given to the world his opinions. His book deserved to be in the hand of every one; it should be a necessarium carmen. The "Canadian Freeholder" is written in the form of a dialogue between an Englishman and a Canadian. With reference to the question of responsible government, it must be observed we must have not only the theory, but the practice also. He must say he had read with much interest the proceedings of the last session of the Parliament of Upper Canada, and he had hoped that we should have reform in those things in which reform is most needed, and especially in the formation of the Executive Council; but he had found that he was mistaken. If the old colonies of Great Britain had enjoyed the privilege of being governed by councils which were responsible, should we at this period be satisfied with a less degree of liberty? (hear, hear.) He could wish that the instructions which had been sent out to the Governor General should be laid before the house: upon examining the Union bill, however, he discovered that the powers of the Governor and Council were to be the same as they were in 1791. But there was another circumstance which struck his notice in the exposition of the doctrines of responsible government as laid down by the hon. and learned gentleman, and it was fortunate for us that we have an example before us of the full and successful carrying out of the principle in the province of Nova Scotia; not as it had been done here — no, quite the reverse. Here we see the same confidential servants of the crown occupying the treasury benches in this house, who were the confidential servants of the crown during the old administration. In what was responsible government carried out in Nova Scotia? was it in this way? No, the Governor consulted with those who had the confidence of the country. There were no persons for whom he entertained a more profound respect individually than he did for those gentlemen who composed the council, but it had been well remarked, and nothing could be more true than the observation that the Executive Council of Canada had no character at all; and it was for this reason, he had no doubt, that his hon. and learned friend from Hastings had separated from them — (hear, hear); — it was nothing more or less than from the circumstance of their being in the position of that ministry which was so admirably ridiculed by Mr. Burke. The members of the same council did not even know each other, much less did they know the political opinions of each other. He could imagine the Attorney General for Upper Canada, with all that suavity so peculiar to him, endeavoring to find out the Attorney General of Lower Canada. Who ought the colonial ministers to be? Ought they to be ministers because they hold official situations? Ought they not rather to be those with whom the people of Canada go hand in hand? Such were the grounds upon which he (Mr. Aylwin) was dissatisfied with the exposition of the hon. and learned Attorney General for Upper Canada, as they had heard it from the mouth of that gentleman. The law of man says there should be no responsible government but the law of God says there shall be responsible government. The honor of the Governor General required that he should have introduced this matter into his speech from the throne. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Draper) gave his exposition of the principles of responsible government, it appeared to him (Mr. Aylwin) that he did it not with that freedom with which he would have done if he had been impressed with the correctness of the views which he had taken. Instead of coming out spontaneously and stating the matter in the broadest possible terms, it had been drawn from him as it were reluctantly, and his (Mr. Aylwin's) belief was that between the ministers and the Gubernatorial chair there was a great gulph fixed which could only be passed over by some of their proconsular friends. He would go farther and ask the hon. gentleman whether the speech is one which proceeds from their pens? If he were told that it did not, he should then consider that it proceeded from some of those proconsular friends whose advice, if it had continued to be taken, might have the tendency to compel those honorable gentlemen, after undergoing innumerable difficulties, however desirous they might be of continuing in the public service, to resign. He should now dismiss this subject with observing that he considered it the imperative duty of His Excellency in addressing the first parliament of the united legislature to have noticed this subject, and his reason for voting against this address was its silence in regard to this important question. But there were other grounds on which he felt it to be his duty to oppose the address. The Governor General should have considered the importance of the situation which he and which this house holds. They were the largest Representative Assembly in the British dependencies. Why then should the Province of Canada be curtailed of its fair proportions, and condemned to that state, which he could not characterise otherwise than one of degradation? Why was it that ministers had not advised His Excellency to adopt a better course? If they had done so, notwithstanding all their past conduct, they would amply have redeemed their fair fame. Another reason why it was impossible for him to vote in favour of the address; it was well known that since the opening of parliament eight or ten petitions had been presented to that house complaining of violence having occurred at Elections, and as for bribery and corruption it had been stated loudly and openly to have taken place throughout the length and breadth of the land. And he was sorry to find that the official advisers of His Excellency were in some degree implicated in these charges. Should His Excellency not have declared there is no truth in these rumors, I disclaim any connexion with such conduct. There was another subject — he proposed alterations in the timber duties. Touching a man's pocket is touching a very sensitive point, and being true of an individual it was so of a nation also. It was a measure which if it did not ruin the country would at least do an irreparable injury, so that if they should obtain a loan, not only of a million and a half, but one of fifty millions it would not retrieve the country from its embarrassment. The provincial administration must be aware it is a point of the highest importance to us. For this reason he (Mr. Aylwin) could not do otherwise than vote against the address, in the shape in which it had been prepared. He would now take up the address itself and what were its contents. It treats de omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis. He certainly must accuse his hon. friend of bad taste in the drawing up of that address. What had that house to do with the affair of McLeod's imprisonment? it certainly looked like a desire to rouse our patriotism — to induce us all to prepare for an expedition across the river to take, burn, sink and destroy all whom we might meet, until McLeod should be released. Was it not in the power of Great Britain to secure this object without the interference of that house? He for one was not disposed to consent that his attention should be diverted from those objects which would require their consideration. Another prominent topic contained in the address was the subject of a loan of a million and a half sterling. He (Mr. Aylwin) would be as ready as any one if they had the money that it should be judiciously expended for the purposes alluded to, always provided we had it at present; but when he considered that it all depends on the ministry at house, it amounts to a mere promise of influence, such a promise as every man in power gives to every courtier; and even suppose the money to have been obtained, they had already seen the fruits of mismanagement of public monies in the Province of Canada, that Province having fallen into debt to an amount which induced him to believe that the men who had the management of affairs were not honest men. (Hear, hear.) But perhaps the object is to borrow a million and a half to pay up the debts which have been already incurred! These were the reasons why he felt it his duty to vote against the address. He would now conclude by begging pardon of the house if he had spoken at too great length. He hoped his observations would not be considered as having been made in a narrow and sectional view: he had endeavored to view the whole subject upon the broad grounds of national benefit; and in this light he still thought that if instead of obtaining a loan of a million and a half they were freely offered the whole treasury of England, with the national debt added to it, in order to induce them to assume the Union Bill in its present form, he at least for one would spurn the offer — (hear, hear.) The old and true liberties of Englishmen are not to be bartered away. In conclusion he would say that no member would be more disposed than himself to afford a fair trial to the operation of the Union bill, and to enter into all feasible plans for local improvement, but at the same time no one could convince him (Mr. Aylwin) that any one man alone could govern this large Province in the way in which it ought to be governed, unassisted by a responsible Executive Council.

Mr. Baldwin said he would not have trespassed upon the time of the committee had it not been that he had been alluded to in the course of the debate by an hon. member. It might be of importance that he should proceed with those explanations which he had promised that house. It was perfectly well known that he had accepted office at a period when the government was administered by the present Governor General. The views which were entertained upon the subject of responsible government by the Governor General, views which were contained in the despatch to which the hon. gentleman had alluded, and which were also expressed in Lord Durham's report to which that despatch alludes: those views were in practical application from the time of his taking office up to the commencement of the present session. It would be also right to state that of which the public were aware that having accepted office he had formed no condition with those gentlemen who then composed the council of His Excellency; he had always acted with a party which was entirely opposed to them. When the union of the provinces having been declared he was called on to take his seat in the Executive Council, he had reiterated to those gentlemen his express reservation of his original opinions, and that he had not changed his position which he held in respect to them. At the time there was no parliament of Canada which might give expression to the confidence of the people; but when the result of the elections became known, when it was ascertained of what materials the House of Assembly was composed, it then became his duty to inform the head of the government that the administration would not possess the confidence of the House of Assembly, and to tender to the representative of his sovereign the resignation of the office which he held, having first, as according to the duties of his office he was bound to do, offered his advice to His Excellency that the administration of the country should be reconstructed. This advice not having been adopted, my resignation followed, which was accepted. Sir, you saw a gentleman proposed to fill the Speaker's chair whose opinions with respect to the administration you heard denounced because he had no confidence in the administration, but the administration dared not propose another. Hon. gentlemen might look upon this as a trifling matter, but he (Mr. Baldwin) considered it very differently. Having given this explanation he would not trespass farther on the time of the house, he would thank them for having heard him with attention.<sup>8</sup>

Col. Prince said, the debate had taken a very extraordinary turn. The remarks of the learned gentleman from Hastings were altogether foreign to the subject before the Committee. The speech of the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf had been delivered in the most gentlemanly tone and manner, and in replying to that gentleman he hoped he should be guided by the same spirit. But with regard to the learned Ex-Solicitor, it was really extraordinary that the committee should have been interrupted for half an hour with an explanation of the reasons for his resignation. The hon. and learned gentleman should have produced the correspondence, if any existed, upon the subject of his resignation, if he considered it of so much consequence; but he (Col. Prince) would not admit that the resignation of that hon. and learned gentleman could have been of so much consequence to the country as he seemed to imagine. With regard to the speech of His Excellency, he for one approved of it; and there was one part of the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Aylwin's) address to the committee which he approved of, and that was, that the speech was a momentous one; for never since Canada has had a Constitution, was there delivered so powerful a speech from the throne; and we have only to look with the eyes of one who wishes well to his country, to be convinced that it is the earnest desire of His Excellency the Governor General, to put in practice those useful measures to which he has in his speech referred. He (Col. Prince) hoped that they would obtain the million and a half sterling, as a loan; he would not ask for it as a gift — if they did, it would be in vain. The people of England are not such fools (a laugh) until they could establish a confidence in the credit of this country. We should remain in the same impoverished state in which we were at present. There was one observation which had been made by the hon. and learned gentleman from Port Neuf, which was really extraordinary, that gentleman is possessed of aristocratic feelings — nature has given him those feelings — education has given him those feelings — and he feels as every one of us must feel, that the honor of England has been tarnished by permitting the imprisonment of McLeod, by their not insisting on his immediate release. But we are told in the Speech from the Throne, that England will maintain her colonies at all hazards. He was astonished that the hon. and learned gentleman has also stated, that he doubts whether England does really entertain any desire for the preservation of this country. He (Col. Prince) would ask, does it show indifference, when we see England sending her fleets and armies to protect this country from an invading foe? That she has spent her resources and continues to spend them, to preserve these Colonies; and although they may not be profitable to her, she knows that it is her duty towards who have confided in her — who have shown their allegiance. She has gone to an extent which was unparalleled; and therefore the hon. gentleman is extremely wrong, when he believes that England is indifferent to our welfare; no such thing. But the hon. gentleman says, that the speech of his Excellency is full of objection — and for that reason he opposes the address. — It is extremely uncourteous towards His Excellency to move counter resolution in preference to resolutions originally introduced; it was not according to Parliamentary practice. The hon. gentleman with that suaviter in modo so peculiar to himself, would have you to believe that the instructions which were sent out eighty years ago to the Governor of Georgia were such as we should now follow. No, sir, the instructions to be looked at are those sent out to the Governor General. The hon. gentleman shakes his head, but I have not yet heard him shake out one sound argument to prove that the instructions to the Governor of Georgia are applicable here at the present day. One objection to the speech was stated to be want of reference to the subject of responsible government. It certainly would have been very singular if his Excellency had alluded to it. It is thoroughly understood, and by no one is it better understood than by the hon. gentleman himself. He says also that the election riots should have been noticed; but how is His Excellency to know that riots have occurred? They always have happened, and they always will happen as long as the freedom of elections exists. Besides the common law furnishes ample means for punishing outrages of that kind, without the interference of the Executive. Such are the principal objections raised by that hon. gentleman to the speech. Whether those objections would have any weight with that committee it was not for him to say; but he did think that the committee would upon reflection discover that we cannot do better than to agree to the resolutions. He thought the committee would discover that there was much to be hoped for of those matters contained in the speech, and that His Excellency had pledged himself to do more for this colony than was ever done before, and pledged himself upon such terms, too, that he believed he would carry out what he had promised. And as he had said before, it was due to the Executive that the answer to the speech should be carried forthwith, and it was due to the country that there should be no dissensions among them. The vote upon this question would doubtless be a trial of strength, but he firmly believed the original address would be carried by a large majority, and that by doing so they would give satisfaction to the country.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he should not have addressed the Committee at this stage of the debate, had it not been for some observations which fell from the hon. member from Port Neuf. He really did think that hon. gentleman, had attempt to mystify still more on the subject of responsible government, than the learned, Atty. General himself. He thought it of the highest possible importance that no dissensions (sic) should take place. He believed there could be no difference of opinion in that house, with regard to responsible government. (Hear, hear.) This was his belief, and he regretted exceedingly that the learned Atty General had not stated his views in such a manner as would have admitted of no misconstruction. He (Mr. Hincks) would by reading a few extracts from public documents show equally to the house and the country the difference between the principles as it is now received, and that which was advocated during the administration of Sir Francis Bond Head some years ago. The true principles of responsible government have never been carried into effect in either Province, and if as one hon. gentleman had stated, it be no new principle, it is decidedly an improvement in practice. He presumed the hon. gentlemen who were members of the government were prepared to act in accordance with the admissions they had made. He (Mr. Hincks) was perfectly satisfied with those admissions. He was sorry that the hon. gentleman from Essex, (Col. Prince) had thought it necessary to make the remarks he had with regard to the learned gentleman from Hastings. The necessity of making the explanation he had made, was imposed upon that hon. gentleman by some observations of the learned gentleman from Port Neuf. He (Mr. Hincks) believed that the learned gentleman from Hastings is fully convinced that responsible government is fully conceded; the difference between himself and his colleagues is in the application of that principle. He would now revert to that which was more particularly the subject of the present debate. He had no desire to offer any thing like a factious opposition, but he would take occasion to say, that he objected to the speech not on account of any thing contained in it, but for omission. He found no fault with the speech for alluding to the subject of McLeod's imprisonment, for he felt that it was important. He concurred with the hon. and learned member for Essex, in thinking it was not improper for the executive to assure the people of this country, of her Majesty's protection. But he would connect the speech with another document — the Union Bill, and when he found language, such as that contained in the speech from the head of the government, he thought his duty to take care that he did not sanction with his vote the details of the bill. He would keep himself unfettered upon that point. — He was convinced that a majority of that house were opposed to the Union Bill, and it is a matter of notoriety that the opinions of the people of Lower Canada were not taken upon the subject (hear, hear.) The next subject to which he would briefly advert is the subject of the civil list. No reformer can think of voting for it as it stands at present, while it admits the right of the Imperial Legislature to take our money without our consent. This was a principle which no one would have the presumption to stand upon the floor of the house and attempt to justify. But the civil list is presented to be justified by the resolutions of the last House of Assembly in Upper Canada. Nor would he consent that pensions should be granted without the consent of Parliament. An individual who had recently come to this province, and who had been amply paid for all the services which he had rendered, had nevertheless as he (Mr. Hincks) was informed, a pension of £200 a year granted to him: he certainly did not think that this was a case which justified the grant, and at all events he would not be disposed to place the power of granting pensions in the hands of the Executive under any circumstances. He could not find that such a system had been adopted in any other colony. He stood there as a Canadian, as the representative of Canadians, and he could see no reason why he should stand in an inferior situation to that of his fellow subjects inhabiting other colonies. (Hear.) He was desirous of supporting the Union Bill as far as he possibly could, but he was against pledging himself to support the details of the Union Bill.<sup>10</sup>

Capt. Steele desired to say a few words with regard to the alledged interference of the Executive in the elections. Armed soldiers it is true were present in some cases, and many voters came to the polls under the assurance of their protection who would not have dared otherwise to have voted (Hear, hear.) Here we behold the British soldier the protector of that freedom which is so precious to us all; and yet it is endeavoured to throw discredit on the government for that which should rather meet our approach.<sup>11</sup>

Solicitor General Day said that he should deem it his duty at this late hour to confine his remarks to as limited a space as possible. And he could not enter into the great business of the debate without expressing his sense of the manner in which the learned gentleman from Port Neuf had treated the subject of the debate, putting it upon that footing and giving it that tone which it is so particularly desirable it should assume. And that hon. gentleman would find him (Mr. Day) at all times desirous of the same interchange of courtesies which had characterized the speech of the hon. and learned gentleman. It would be proper before entering into the immediate subject of the debate to allude briefly to the explanations of the hon. and learned member for Hastings. That gentleman had failed to explain upon what grounds it was that he accepted office, and afterwards abandoned that office. He would assure that hon. gentleman that he desired to continue those courtesies which were due towards him ; but at the same time upon entering into the circumstances connected with his acceptance and resignation of office, he must deal plainly with the subject, and he hoped he would be acquitted if he uttered a single expression which might sound harshly in his ears. — He who leaves the safe and obscure path of private life, who deems himself capable of taking the reigns (sic) of government into his hands, must consent that his actions shall be critically judged. (Hear.) He would now proceed to give a sketch as rapidly as possible of that gentleman's political career, so far as he (Mr. Day) had been connected with it. The office which I now hold, was conferred upon me by the present Governor General, in May of 1840. Long before that period I had received a requisition from the county which I represent, to become a candidate for that county. I came out with an address which I intended should contain an expression of my political sentiments ; I mention this to show that the hon. gentleman must have been aware what those sentiments were. On the fifteenth of February following, when the Governor General communicated to the hon. gentleman his intention of calling him to his Executive Council, that hon. gentleman declared that with regard to those who held office at that time — myself and three others, he could have no confidence in them (hear, hear,) that this is the first step of inconsistency, with which it appears to me the conduct of the hon. gentleman was marked. — When the offer of so a (sic) high an honor as the office of Solicitor Genl. as well as Executive Councillor, was offered him it was his duty to ascertain who were his colleagues and whether he had confidence in them or not ; if he had not, then I say as a public man he had no right to accept office with them. (Hear, hear.) If I had acted on the principles which the hon. gentleman seems to have adopted, and formed my judgment of his character from the public prints, I would sooner have cut off this right hand than to have held office with him. But I would not rest my judgement of his character upon those grounds ; had I done so I never would have been his colleague ; and the straightforward and manly course would have been for that gentleman to have refused to accept office with those in whom he professed to have no confidence. (Hear, hear.) His colleagues afterwards went before the people, they went before respectable constituencies, notwithstanding what had been said by the hon. gentleman form Port Neuf, constituencies perfectly capable of judging in whom their confidence could be safely placed. They were returned to Parliament with the sin of being government officers upon their heads — (hear, hear) — that was the first step towards responsible government. I had the satisfaction of meeting the hon. gentleman in Montreal on business, but not a word was said by him respecting political opinions, not a step was taken towards discovering the views of his colleagues in office. The Parliament was called together under extraordinary circumstances — entering as we did upon a new era, which will be the commencement of a chain of events the nature of which will materially depend upon the first steps which are taken. Under these circumstances, this man who had accepted office, and who had no reason to trust his colleagues when he did accept it, then told his Excellency that he must break up his administration. (Hear, hear.) Two days before the meeting of Parliament a communication is made to the Governor General that he would retire from office, in consequence of what ? not that he had discovered a difference of opinion between himself and his colleagues, for he had not taken the trouble to ascertain their opinions — (hear, hear) — no ; but because he had found by secret enquiry, by attending secret meetings, that he could form a party to overturn the government. (Hear, hear, hear.) Instead of bringing his party to the support of that government whose servant he was, he endeavours to make it the instrument of his own purposes. And I would put it to the heart and understanding of every member of this House, whether he had not placed himself in a predicament — upon the horns of dilemma. I would ask, whether the mere facts themselves would not justify the supposition, that he had entered the administration with the intention of committing a deliberate act of perfidy ! (Hear, hear, hear.) Let it not be supposed that I desire that this inference should rest upon the hon. gentleman. I do not believe he would have been actuated by a dishonorable motive ; but the justifications of public men must rest on the broad face of facts. After his acceptance of office, the most remarkable circumstance of inconsistency is, his continuing to hold office without making any effort to discover what were the political views of his colleagues. The worst feature of all is, that having led the Governor General and his colleagues in office by his silence, up to the time of the meeting of Parliament, to believe that he would act in concert with the administration of the Government, after having consulted with his party, and having found that he could embarrass the administration, he then resigned his office. No explanation which he has given, or can give, will alter my opinion that his conduct was an outrage upon the representatives of the Province. It was a gross injustice also to his colleagues. I will take upon my self to say, that my opinions are as liberal as his own. (Hear, hear.) I do not believe that this Colony will be secure to the British Crown unless we go on extending those liberal plans of Government which are so anxiously desired. The opinions which I have formed have not been drawn from old books or journals, neither from the report of Lord Durham, nor from the messages to the Assembly of Nova Scotia — but they are conclusions at which I have arrived by the exercise of reason and reflection. Although those opinions do correspond with the documents I have referred to, they are not based upon them. (Hear, hear.) I shall now take the liberty of offering a few remarks upon the immediate subject of the debate, namely — the amendments which the hon. gentleman from Quebec has proposed to the answer to the address. For my own part, after carefully examining the contents of that address, I can find nothing in it which should excite in this House any other than respectful attention to that subject on which it treats — nothing which can in any way intrench on the rights of this House. I find in it nothing at variance with that spirit of harmony which ought by every man to be promoted in this House and in the country. I find no particular defect on the face of the address. I must say that it is utterly impossible in an address of this kind to meet the precise wishes of every individual member ; but I will put it to this House, whether that address is not marked with a spirit of conciliation ; and he hoped and believed it would be met in a similar spirit — and I do entreat this House not to travel beyond the matter (sic) which is now before us. A good deal has been said about the operation of the Union bill. I do not stand here to defend the bill ; it is not my act ; it is not the act of this house ; it is that law which has been sent us in order to restore this country to that state of peace and tranquillity the absence of which has been so deplorable in its effects ; and I do entreat that hon. members will cast their eyes back and reflect for one moment upon the occurrences of the past before they reject that address.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Durand said that with regard to the hon. and learned member for Hastings, nothing which had been said or which could be said would have sufficient weight to injure the character of that gentleman. He was held in too high estimation both in this country and in England, (hear, hear.) He had long been known in this country as the champion of liberal principles of government, and he (Mr. Durand) fully believed that he could have been returned for any county in the Province, (no, no.) He believed that that gentleman deserved well of the country for having made the attempt to heal the dissensions which exist, and one who would not for the sake of office abandon his principles, (hear, hear.)<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Merritt. — I fully concur in the sentiment expressed by the hon. and learned Solicitor General for Lower Canada, that we should conciliate and cultivate good feeling, but wholly dissent from the censure he has cast on the learned and hon. member for Hastings. The announcement of the resignation of that hon. and learned member will be received throughout the Province with feelings of deep regret, from his fixed and determined adherence to the principles we advocate, he has gained the confidence of the great body of the reformers who place reliance on his judgement. As a proof, when his Excellency the Governor General arrived in Toronto, although he was well known to have been the advocate of liberal principles in England ; great doubts existed as to his sincerity in carrying into operation the new colonial system of government recommended by Lord Durham — arising, be it known, not from those principles, but from his open opponents, and his pretended friends, who openly and publicly maintained that he never intended, notwithstanding the declarations made from time to time, to adhere to their proper spirit and meaning. The appointment of the learned gentleman was an evidence of his sincerity, and gave a confidence to his administration, which no other man in Canada could at that moment have ensured, to an equal extent. The result of the Elections is the best evidence of the extent of that feeling in Upper Canada. Had the resignation of the hon. and learned gentleman taken place at any other period, it would have materially weakened that confidence — but sir, I am one of those who never feel disposed to look at the dark side of any event, be it what it may. It is our duty to avert what we suppose an evil, but when it arises, it is equally our duty to take the most favorable view of it, and turn it to the best account — at first I confess, I apprehend the most disastrous consequences from the resignation of the hon. and learned member — but on mature reflection, I believe it will tend more than any other measure, to establish the principle without his being subject to any imputation whatever. The hon. gentleman avows on all occasions his firm belief that his Excellency Sydenham, ever has, and still does, intend to carry this main, this vital principle into practical operation — and it is not his intention to embarrass the proceedings of government as at present constituted or offer them any factious opposition ; and I feel assured this course will entitle him to the continued confidence of the people of United Canada. The hon. gentleman is no more liable for censure, in taking office than the present administration for acts of which they have no knowledge. He is now left to pursue his own course without embarrassment. We will judge him hereafter by his acts, and if he originates, matures and proposes measures which tend to promote the best interests of the country, he will retain our confidence, if not ; he will not deserve it ; and cannot expect it.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Buchanan thought that when the exact position of parties is kept in view, the retirement from office of Mr. Baldwin will be seen to be a much more important circumstance in the discussion of the address than some hon. members seem willing to allow. It could not be pretended that the address, or indeed any future measure of government, could pass this House without the assistance of the liberal members from Upper Canada. That large portion of the House, whatever might be their various views as to the propriety, under the circumstances, of Mr. Baldwin's resignation, still retain full confidence in Mr. Baldwin's political integrity, and still continue to hold that it was only on liberal principles that Colonial government can hope to succeed. Mr. Baldwin and the other liberal members from the western part of the Province carried their elections because they declared themselves supporters of the Union and in favor of the politics of the Governor General ; and now that responsible government is granted, there is surely a still stronger obligation imposed on them to view with a friendly eye the acts of the Executive. But he (Mr. Buchanan) did not consider it at all necessary to their giving an independent support to Lord Sydenham, that they must condemn or not continue to countenance the ex-Solicitor General. That hon. and learned member's taking office at first was of infinite service to government, as securing for Lord Sydenham an opportunity of developing his policy ; and he (Mr. Buchanan) believed that in Mr. Baldwin's retirement from office that gentleman had done what he could to avoid any demonstration of opposition to the head of the government. — There could be no doubt that Mr. Baldwin's resignation was mainly instrumental in bringing the present Executive Council to declare themselves as they had on what is called responsible government. In this new position of men and parties he has already seen a fresh argument in favor of allowing Canadian public opinion, as represented by the majority of the House, to have a direct control over our local legislation, for we see that even an Executive composed of men whose past career would not command for them majorities of the Assembly as constituted, may retain office by framing their measures to suit the majority, and can retain office in no other way. Under the new system the principles of the majority become the rule of Government as far as legislation is concerned ; and in fact the majority are in power even if not in place.<sup>15</sup>

The speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) said, that before this discussion went any farther, he could not forbear from explaining the to (sic) House, with reference to what had fallen from the Hon. Member for Hastings, (Baldwin) in the course of his remarks. He would say that he had made use of no expression, that would lead him to a connection with any party whatever.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said, that after the disclaimer on the part of the hon. and learned gentleman from Ottawa, (Mr. Day,) of any desire to wound his (Mr. B's) feelings, he was bound to believe that the hon. and learned member had no such intention, and he should therefore treat those terms which that hon. and learned member had thought proper to apply to him, in their restricted and Parliamentary sense, and not as designed to be personally offensive.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Sol. General Day, across the table, assured the hon. and learned member that he had meant to speak of him in no other terms than those of personal respect.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Baldwin was satisfied on that head, and he should proceed to remark upon the grounds taken by the hon. and learned member, in objecting to his public conduct, for which he readily admitted, with the hon. and learned member, he was answerable at the bar of public opinion. The hon. and learned gentleman had, in the first place, arraigned the course which he (Mr. B.) had taken, in accepting office on the proclamation of the Union. The hon. and learned gentleman had, however, forgotten that he (Mr. B.) was not, at the time to which the hon. and learned gentleman referred, in the position of one out of the administration, and then for the first time invited to join it. The Head of the Government, the heads of departments in both provinces, and the country itself, were in a position altogether anomalous. That of the Head of the Government was one of great difficulty and embarrassment, and while he had felt bound to protect himself against misapprehension as to his views and opinions, he had also felt bound to avoid (sic), as far as possible, throwing any difficulties in the way of the noble Lord who held that distinguished situation. It would be remembered, that at the time he was called to a seat in the Executive Council, he was already one of those public servants, the political character newly applied to whose offices made it necessary for them to hold seats in that Council. Had he then, at the very moment of being called upon to take that seat, (which was not so much a new step in the administration, as a mere adjunct, which the new system to be applied to the working of the Provincial Government had engrafted on the office which he already held,) refused to accept it, he must, of course, have left office altogether, or have been open to the imputation of objecting to an arrangement for the conduct of public affairs which had always met with his most decided approbation. And in either case, what a position he would have been placed in ! How readily and triumphantly would the hon. and learned gentleman, and all those who now condemned him for having accepted that seat, have then denounced him, as one utterly impracticable if not absolutely factious. Then would have been pointed out, in glowing colors, the peculiarly difficult position of the Head of the Government, and the obstinacy and precipitancy of one who, at such a moment, on the eve of a general election, and that too the first election for the United Province, when there were no means of ascertaining the point towards which popular confidence might be directed, had refused to accept the seat which, according to his own views, belonged to the office which he already filled, and, as would be the necessary consequence, withdraw from the administration altogether. What, he would ask, would have been the effect of such a course, at such a time ? What the misconceptions to which it would necessarily have given rise — what the doubts and fears which it would necessarily have raised, in the minds of all, upon the great question of Responsible Government, with which his name had been so much connected, and upon which, public opinion throughout the whole country, was so concentrated. He (Mr. B.) would not hesitate to say, without assuming any importance other than such as the connexion of his humble name with that great principle, had in the public eye attributed to him, that no step that could have been taken, would have been more calculated to produce distrust and alarm. It was under a deep sense of the responsibility which he would incur in taking such a step, that he had come to the conclusion, that his course was to accept the seat to which the Head of the Government had called him ; and he would contend, that in the peculiar position in which he was placed, coupled with his well known political opinions, had he done so, without another word with respect to those opinions, either of men or measures, neither the Head of the Government nor those hon. gentlemen of the Council who now condemned him, would have any just ground of complaint against him. He had taken office originally with a full avowal of his principles, an of his want of political confidence in certain hon. gentlemen. This was before the public, and those hon. and learned gentlemen form Lower Canada who, after the Union, had been called to seats in the Executive Council of the United Province, were at least equally bound to take notice of them, as he had been held to be of the political views of the hon. and learned member himself, and in the absence of any express change in those opinions, he was entitled to be considered by all of those hon. gentlemen and by the public, as still holding them. But he had not rested satisfied with that, but had, on the contrary, in order to prevent any possible misconception, explicitly declared those opinions, both to the Head of the Government and to those hon. gentlemen, previous to his acceptance of a seat in the Executive Council. And he would take the liberty of trespassing so far as to read form the correspondence, which he of course now considered open for reference, though he did not deem it necessary to read the whole of it, the note announcing his having been named to the Executive Council, and the letter which he had addressed to the Head of the Government, in reply to that note. (Mr. Baldwin here read the following note : — )

(PRIVATE.)

13th February, 1841.”

“My dear Sir — I am called upon to name an Executive Council for this province without delay, which at present will be composed exclusively of the chief officers of the Government ; and I have, therefore, inserted your name in the list.

“It will be necessary that you should take the oaths here ; but there will be no necessity for this being done immediately, and it may be most convenient for you to come down when the other Upper Canada officers get back.

Believe me, &c.
Sydenham.

(Signed.)

“The Solicitor General of U.C. Toronto”

Mr. Baldwin would here ask any hon. gentleman whether from that note itself, in which the Head of the Government speaks expressly of those of whom the Council was to be “at present” composed, he had not just ground of supposing, that his Excellency himself looked forward to such changes as the calls of public opinion might afterwards demand ; more particularly when attention to such calls formed the very basis of the new principle to which allusion has been so often made. To that note, however, he (Mr. Baldwin) had replied under date of the 18th or 19th of the same month, as follows : —

(Private.)

"Mr. Robert Baldwin has to acknowledge the receipt of the Governor-General's note, informing him of his Excellency having done him the honor of calling him to the Executive Council of the United Province. The names of the other gentlemen, appointed to the Council not having been communicated, Mr. Baldwin is, of course, ignorant, except from rumor, who they may be, and with no other authoritative guide than the intimation that they are "the chief officers of the Government," Mr. Baldwin would have probably waited the official announcement, if he did not feel that, in all matters of this kind, not only candor but promptness, as far as consistent with due deliberation, is the surest means of avoiding ultimate misunderstanding. Mr. Baldwin, then, assuming that the gentlemen to whom rumor has assigned seats in the new Council, are those whom his Excellency has felt it necessary should "at present" compose it, deems it a duty which he owes to the Governor-General, at once to communicate his opinion, that such arrangement of the administration will not command the support of Parliament. That with respect to those gentlemen, Mr. Baldwin has himself an entire want of political confidence in all of them, except Mr. Dunn, Mr. Harrison and Mr. Daly, and that, had he reason to suppose that the generally understood political principles and views of the other gentlemen of the Council were those upon which the government was to be administered, he conceives it would be his duty respectfully to decline continuing to hold office under it. Mr. Baldwin has, however, no desire to risk embarrassment to the Government, and at the present critical moment, taking into consideration the difficulties with which the Governor-General has to contend, he does not feel that he would be justified in doing so, by declining, on these grounds, altogether to accept the place to which his Excellency has thus appointed him. But he fears that, notwithstanding his well known political principles, his silent acceptance of the seat, even under existing circumstances, and his peculiar individual position, might be misinterpreted by the gentlemen to whom he has referred, as a tacit admission of his confidence in them, as well as in the gentlemen above named. To prevent, therefore, the possibility of any misapprehension on their parts, Mr. Baldwin will feel bound candidly and explicitly to communicate to the former, his sentiments in regard to them, politically, and he takes it for granted, that there can be no objection to his doing so, on the present occasion, any more than there was to his adopting a similar course, with respect to Mr. Draper and others, on his acceptance of the office of Solicitor-General of Upper Canada."

And in pursuance of what he had there stated to the Head of the Government, he did address letters to those hon. gentlemen, explicitly informing them "of his entire want of political confidence in them, and that had he reason to suppose that their generally understood principles and views were those upon which the government was to be administered, he would not continue to hold office under it." He (Mr. B.) would now appeal to hon. gentlemen, whether he could have done more to put all parties in possession of his views and opinions, and to prevent the occurrence of any misapprehension as to the position in which he felt himself placed. He might have taken the course of retiring from the Government, at the period referred to ; but so might the hon. gentlemen. In not taking that course, he (Mr. B.) had acted from a sense of public duty, and he felt bound to give credit to the hon. gentlemen for having done the same, in the course which they had pursued. He had felt, as he takes it for granted they had done, that the verdict of the country was to decide whether the political views of those hon. gentlemen, or his, were most in accordance with the wishes and interests of the people.

The next charge made against him, by the hon. and learned gentlemen, was his not having interchanged those communications with the hon. and learned gentlemen and the other hon. gentlemen alluded to, which might have led to a correct estimate of the respective political opinions of each. But the hon. and learned gentleman forgot that this was no charge at all, except upon the supposition that he (Mr. B.) had entered into a coalition with those hon. gentlemen. Without that pedestal to rest upon, it amounted but to this — that he had not acted inconsistently with his already avowed political opinion of those hon. gentlemen, and misled them by a show of confidence, into a belief that his previously expressed opinions with respect to them, had been modified ; or it resolved itself into a repetition of a new shape of the first charge of accepting the office of Executive Councillor at all, to which he had, he thought, given a sufficiently satisfactory answer. As far as regarded those hon. gentlemen, he contended that he had, by the course objected to, done more than maintain the position which he had already assumed, with respect to them. But with respect to those hon. gentlemen of the administration, in whom he had felt and avowed political confidence — the hon. member for Toronto, the hon. member for Megantic, (Mr. Daly,) whom he had the pleasure of meeting for the first time, on the occasion of the visit to Montreal to which the hon. and learned member had alluded, the hon. member for London, and he might add the hon. Secretary, who had not yet a seat in that House — to one and all those gentlemen he would boldly appeal, whether he had not communicated with them, in the fullest and frankest manner, upon every topic connected with the state of the country, and upon none more fully than that involved in the subject of the present discussion (sic).

The third charge made against him by the hon. and learned gentleman, was, that he had not, at an earlier period, tendered that advice, upon the rejection of which he had felt himself called upon to resign. It was somewhat hard that he was, on the one hand, accused of precipitancy, and on the other, of delay. But when the circumstances in which he was placed, were fairly considered; when it was remembered, that from the time of his appointment to the time of his proceeding to Montreal, he had been actively engaged, first with the Upper Canada elections, and more particularly the contest for Hastings and the city of Toronto, and afterwards with attending to the duties of his office of Solicitor General, as public prosecutor in the Home Circuit, part of which he had been unable to attend to, and had been obliged to request his hon. and learned friend from the East riding of the county of York, to attend to for him, and which were not completed when he received the signification of his Excellency's pleasure that he should proceed to Montreal. That he had not only expressly communicated to the Head of the Government, at the time of accepting the seat in the Executive Council, his expectations of the result of the then approaching elections, but had never concealed his opinion, that those anticipations had been realized. That he had, when in L. Canada, had the advantage of seeing only a portion of the Reform members returned to the United Parliament; and that until he had an opportunity of communicating with the great body of them, and of ascertaining how far it was possible that the Reformers of both sections of the province were prepared to act together — a course on their parts which he (Mr. B.) had always deemed of the most vital importance to the best interests of his country, as he had frequently and candidly stated, both publicly at the hustings, and privately to those hon. gentlemen of the administration with whom he was prepared to act politically. When these circumstances were considered, he felt convinced that, to the dispassionate, at all events, he would not appear to have been to blame, in this respect at least.

And this brought him to the fourth charge of the hon. and learned gentleman — that of caballing — as he was pleased to term it; though, after the hon. and learned member's assurance, he (Mr. B.) would not assume that the term was applied in an offensive sense — in secret meetings to overthrow the administration, of which he was a member. If he (Mr. B.) understood the principle which was now to be applied to the working of the Provincial Government, it was this: that those only who possessed the confidence of Parliament were to be retained by the Crown. If he was correct in this view, he would be glad to be informed by the hon. and learned gentleman, or by any other hon. member, how he or any other man was to ascertain, whether individually or in conjunction with others, he, or the administration under which he held office, enjoyed the public confidence, except by means of those very communications with those whom the people of the province had sent to represent them, which the hon. and learned member had been pleased to designate as "midnight meetings and secret cabals." For his part, he had not only felt at liberty to communicate frankly with the hon. members of that House, with a view to ascertain their sentiments upon this, as well as other subjects, but he had felt it to be his duty to do so. (Hear, hear.) And he did not, for his part, see how the system of Responsible Government was to be worked, without such communications. He had always avowedly been a party man, and he should continue such. Parties were incident to all popular governments, and it was only through the instrumentality of party, that such governments could be successfully worked. When he said this, however, he must not be misunderstood; for while with these views, he felt bound to connect himself with a party, he felt equally bound to satisfy himself that the principles and objects of the party with which he had connected himself, were such as he could approve, and such he conscientiously believed of that party with whom he had the pleasure of acting. But neither to that party nor to any other; neither to that House, no, nor the whole body of the people, on the one hand, nor to the Crown or its representative on the other, would he sacrifice even one particle of principle. (Hear.) But to shew how little justice there was in the imputation of the hon. and learned member, that he had been plotting measures for the overthrow of the administration, he would take the liberty of reading a letter which he had addressed to his hon. and learned friend from Nicolet, (Mr. Morin,) with reference to a meeting of the Reform members of that House, held on the first day of the present session. Mr. Baldwin here read the following letter to Mr. Morin: —

"My Dear Sir — So long as the question respecting the Speakership was confined to the consideration of who should be the gentleman upon whom the choice of the united Reform party, to which I belong, should fall, I, of course, felt not only justified but bound to be present, that I might be prepared, in another capacity, to place such gentleman, whoever he might be, in the position of the administration candidate, and thereby prevent defeat of the administration: but having been given to understand, that it is proposed this morning to consider the means of making the question of Speakership, a question to test the strength of the administration, as at present constituted, my friends will, of course, at once see that I cannot, while I continue to hold office, be present at a meeting where such a course is intended to be discussed. You will, therefore, do me the kindness to explain to my friends, the reason of my absents myself this morning.

"Believe me, my dear Sir, faithfully yours,

(Signed.)

Robert Baldwin.

"A.N. Morin, Esq. M.P.

(Hear, hear, hear.) Hon. gentlemen would now see, even if the characters of the hon. gentlemen with whom these communications were held, did not itself afford a sufficient guarantee, that nothing objectionable or inconsistent with a high sense of honor, could have possibly transpired in the course of them; that he (Mr. B.) had not sought in those meetings, the means of gratifying personal ambition; but that political information, as to the standing of the administration in the confidence of the members of that House, had been his sole object — information which he unhesitatingly alleged to have been not only his right, but his duty to acquire, and to have done so by the very means he had made use of; indeed, there could be no other. Upon such information had been based the advice which he had tendered to the representative of his Sovereign, (hear, hear, hear,) and he would, now that there might be no possible mistake as to the nature and scope of that advice, so far trespass upon their patience as to read one extract from his letter to the Head of the Government, in which that advice had been tendered. (Mr. Baldwin here read the following extract from a letter from himself to the Governor-General, dated June 12, 1841.)

"Mr. Robert Baldwin has the honor of informing the Governor-General, that the union of the Reformers of the Eastern and those of the Western sections of the province, into one united party, has taken place. That of that united party Mr. Baldwin is a member; and that with that party, while he can do so consistently with the principles he has ever held, he is prepared to act. That that party, in Mr. Baldwin's opinion, represents the political views of the vast majority of the people of this province. That the members of that party, with scarcely a single exception, as far as Mr. Baldwin has an opportunity of learning, profess to have no confidence in the administration, as at present constituted — the want of confidence, however, expressly not extending to the Head of the Government. That Mr. Baldwin, therefore, feels himself bound to declare to his Excellency, that he conceives the administration as at present constituted, does not possess the confidence of Parliament of the country. That to place it upon a footing to obtain such confidence, it will be expedient, in Mr. Baldwin's opinion, that Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Ogden, Mr. Draper and Mr. Day should no longer form a part of it; and that some gentlemen from among the Reformers of Lower Canada should be introduced into the administration, whose accession to office would bring with them the support of the Lower Canada section of Reformers, and with that the confidence of the whole Reform party of the United Province.

"But he repeats, that he looks upon the accession of the Lower Canada Reformers who will bring with them the confidence of their friends, as absolutely essential to the arrangement. The Governor-General will remember, that Mr. Baldwin's individual want of political confidence in those of the gentlemen above named, who then held office under the government of Upper Canada, was candidly declared to his Excellency when he did Mr. Baldwin the honor of offering him the Solicitor Generalship of that province — that it was explained to those gentlemen, then; that it was reiterated to them, and a similar want of political confidence in the other two gentlemen, was declared both to his Excellency and those gentlemen themselves, in Feb. last, prior to Mr. Baldwin's acceptance of a seat in the Executive Council. The Governor-General will also recollect, that Mr. Baldwin at that time anticipated, that the result of the then approaching elections would demonstrate, that the administration as arranged, would not obtain the support of Parliament. Mr. Baldwin, therefore, in the faithful discharge of the sacred duty imposed upon him by his oath of office, feels bound respectfully to tender to his Excellency the Governor-General his humble advice, that the reconstruction of the administration upon the

(Hear, hear.) Such had been his course, from first to last, and such the advice which he had felt himself called upon to tender. Much had been said of the difficulty of the position in which the Head of the Government and the hon. gentlemen opposite were placed; but surely candor would have suggested, that the difficulty was not all on one side. He (Mr. B.) had had a difficult and most responsible position to sustain; he had endeavored to maintain it with honor to himself, with as little embarrassment as possible to the representative of his Sovereign, and those whom he retained in his confidence, and with advantage to his country. As to how far he had been successful in these latter objects, there might be a difference of opinion among the members; but he was at a loss to conceive what course he could have taken, more open, candid and straightforward towards all concerned, than that which he had pursued; and he professed himself wholly unable to discover in it that injustice, either to the Head of the Government or the home Government, which had called for the heavy condemnation of the hon. and learned member, (Hear, hear.) At all events, he would no longer occupy their time; he would throw himself upon the judgment of that House, and the country, and by their verdict he was perfectly willing to abide. (Hear, hear, hear.)<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Bcswell spoke disapprovingly of the Union Bill, which he would not mix up with the timber trade, and coincided earnestly with Mr. Solicitor General Day, in the great benefits to result from harmony on this important occasion.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Hale observed that the business before them should be proceeded with. Their constituents had not sent them to that House merely that they might eat, drink, and be merry.<sup>21</sup>

When Mr. Johnston rose and drawing out his watch humorously directed the attention of the house to the small duration of five minutes for which he craved their indulgence. The hon. member... censured the house for wasting those valuable hours on the personal squabbles of an individual, when the country had so important a claim on them.<sup>22</sup> The Reporters would then have less to do, and the business of the country would be facilitated.<sup>23</sup> But this unpalatable truth not being relished, the hon. gentleman was obliged to sit down with a minute to spare out of the five. Some attempt having been made to affect the neutrality of the Hon. Speaker, that gentleman arose with much dignity and said, he would not express any opinion that might compromise him.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Viger spoke, but too low to be heard.<sup>25</sup>

The evening being far advanced without anything having been done, the propriety of adjournment was at length listened to, and the debate was to be resumed to-morrow, to progress probably as speedily as Mr. Cameron took occasion to remark, it had hitherto done.<sup>26</sup>

and, after some time spent therein,

Progress reported.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Morris reported that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Ordered—That the said Committee have leave to sit again to-morrow.

Second reading Judges Independency bill
postponed.

The Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill for better securing the independence and uprightness of the judges, being read—

Ordered—That the said order of the day be postponed until to-morrow.

Then on motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Mr. Hamilton,
The House adjourned until to-morrow at ten o'clock, A. M.

Letter from Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. Speaker communicated to the House the following letter : —

10 o'clock, A. M.

Kingston, 22nd June, 1841.

SIR, —

From the circumstances of my having received the appointment of Sergeant at Arms only a few days before the meeting of Parliament, I was obliged to leave my private affairs, in an unsettled state, and being anxious to return for a time, may I request the favor of your making application to the House of Assembly for permission to have the duties of Sergeant at Arms done by Deputy.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient, humble servant,

(Signed)

GEO. K. CHISHOLM,
Sergeant at Arms.

To the Honorable the Speaker }
of the House of Assembly, }

Petition of certain inhabitants of County of Leeds praying for amount of damages sustained from the Victoria
macadamized road.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the county of Leeds, in the Johnstown District, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That the Victoria Macadamized road, commencing near to the town of Brockville, passes through petitioners' lands — that most of the materials required to build the said road were taken off their premises, and, in many places, stones have been quarried and earth taken for the formation of said road, leaving the land perfectly useless for agricultural purposes — That many of their fields were thrown into commons, and some of their crops greatly injured — That they have been put to great expenses in enclosing their fields, so cut to pieces — That in one case 32 fruit trees were destroyed by the road passing through an orchard — That petitioners have received no compensation though the said damages was sustained in 1838 ; and praying for relief.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition for divers inhabitants of Innisfil, praying for protection to agriculturists.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Township of Innisfil, was presented to the House by Captain Steele, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That for want of laws for the protection of the agriculturist, the staple commodity of the province (wheat) has failed to bring a remunerating price in market ; and praying that the wisdom of the House may devise means for remedy thereof.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from people stiled "Bible Christians," praying for authority to hold land.

A Petition of the people denominated "Bible Christians," was presented to the House by Mr. Williams, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That Petitioners experience difficulty in securing titles to lands requisite for sites of chapels and Burying-grounds, for want of a corporate capacity to hold lands in perpetual succession ; and praying to be relieved from such disability.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Usury laws.

Resolved — That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the propriety of amending the usury Laws of this Province.

British America Fire & Life Assurance Company to furnish statement of its affairs.

Resolved — That the British America Fire and Life Assurance Company be required to furnish the Legislature with a full statement of its affairs; shewing the amount of Insurance charged upon the several kinds of property; the amount insured at each rate of per centage; the amount insured in each of the principal Cities and Towns in Upper Canada, and in each district, exclusive of those towns — also a statement of the transactions of the last year, shewing the amount of premiums charged and losses incurred, and also the contingent expenses of the company.

Petition of James W. Sharrard & Thomas Henry referred to select committee.

Resolved — That the Petition of James W. Sharrard and Thomas Henry, Christian Ministers, of the Home District, be referred to a select Committee, of five Members, to report thereon with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Small, Mr. Williams, Mr. Price, Mr. Hincks and Mr. Roblin, do compose the said Committee.

Ordered — That the Petition of the people denominated "Bible Christians" be referred to the said Committee.

Bill to enable members to vacate their seats.

Ordered — That Mr. Small have leave to bring in a Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats, in certain cases, and for other purposes.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read, for the first time;

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time, on monday next.

Petition of Israel Williams and others to be naturalized.

A petition of Israel Williams, and others, of the Town of Hamilton, was presented to the House by Mr. Harmanus Smith, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That petitioners have long resided in the Province, and are desirous of becoming subjects of Her Majesty; and praying that a law may be passed authorising them to become subjects, by taking the oath prescribed by law.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of divers inhabitants of Gore District praying for amendment in macadamized road Acts.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Gore District was presented to the House by Mr. Harmanus Smith, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That by the Laws regulating macadamized roads, persons residing on either side, within half a mile of the road, liable to perform statute labour, are compelled to commute the same, at the rate of two shillings and six-pence per day — the money so obtained to be expended by the Commissioners in maintaining and keeping in repair said road.

That no portion of the money so raised being allowed to be expended on the roads, leading to said macadamized roads, lying within the said half-mile, which would otherwise be repaired by statute labour, said roads are become quite impassible; and praying for such amendments in the Laws as will compel the said commissioners to keep in repair, out of such moneys as thus come into their hands, the said roads lying within half a mile of the macadamized road, and leading into the same.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of divers inhabitants of the township of Oakland, praying that said township may be attached to the District of Talbot.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Township of Oakland, was presented to the House by Mr. Powell, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That the said township consists of a triangular piece of land, in front of the township of Townsend, and is annexed to the county of Oxford.

That the said county of Oxford is erected into a separate district, and Petitioners have much further to travel in attending Courts of Justice than they would have to do were they annexed to the district of Talbot, formed from the county of Norfolk; to which last mentioned county the said township was formerly annexed — and praying that, as the Act of the Union of the two Provinces does not prohibit it, the said township of Oakland may be attached to and form part of the district of Talbot.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of divers inhabitants of County of Portneuf, complaining of certain Ordinances passed by the late Special Council.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the County of Portneuf, was presented to the House by Mr. Aylwin, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Petitioners were not represented in the Special Council of the late Province of Lower Canada, in which laws were passed imposing burthens on them — That among other Ordinances passed were those For amending the Judicature of said Province — For establishing and maintaining a Police in the Cities of Quebec and Montreal — For extending the provisions of the last Ordinance — For the improvement of the Queen's Highway — For introducing more suitable Vehicles on the Winter Roads — For establishing District Councils — For establishing Registry Offices — and For establishing District Courts and Gaols — which Ordinances, not receiving their consent, and being vexatious and otherwise burthensome to Petitioners, they pray the same may be repealed, and no longer serve as a precedent for such dangerous and unconstitutional Legislation.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Simon M'Kenzie and others praying remuneration for loss of land by erroneous survey.

A Petition of Simon McKenzie, Thomas G. Chapman, Donald McKenzie, Alex. Fraser & John D. McKenzie, of the District of Gore, was presented to the House, by Mr. Durand; and the same was received and read; setting forth: —

That Petitioners are owners of certain broken lots in the township of Beverly, in the Gore District — That owing to the survey of said township being erroneous, the Boundary line Commissioners, in regulating the lines of said township, have caused large deficiencies in Petitioners lands — That the said Commissioners, in making their award, have expressed themselves in the following language: — "And it is the opinion of this Board of Commissioners that the unfortunate situation of the several claimants under the grant from the Crown to the late John Clement, for the broken lots F. G. & J. in the sixth, seventh and ninth concessions of the said township of Beverly, is such, that, as the quantity of land is not to be found, unless the Government afford them such remuneration as in its wisdom may seem meet, there is no source, within the knowledge of the Board of Commissioners, from which they can be compensated for their loss." — That the quantity of land deficient is upwards of six hundred acres — That petitioners' loss is, according to the valuation of said Commissioners, to the amount as followeth: viz.: — Simon M'Kenzie, £78 — Donald J. M'Kenzie, £405 — Alexander Fraser, £278 — Thomas G. Chapman, £413 5s. — and John D. M'Kenzie, £688 — That no other persons in the said township are sufferers — and petitioners therefore pray that the House will consider their case and afford such remuneration as shall appear reasonable.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

House in Committee
on His Excellency's Speech at opening
of Session.

The Order of the day for the House in committee on the Speech of His Excellency, the Governor General, to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Morris took the chair of the said Committee ;<sup>1</sup>

Dr. Kimber's remarks were chiefly directed against the Union Bill, which he regarded as against the wishes and interests of the people of the Lower Province — another objectionable feature was, the nominations to the Legislative Council, of some of which he entirely disapproved.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Quesnel — would wait the result of a fair trial of the experiment, it was time when it failed to produce that good that was anticipated, to stand forth, and in the wisdom of Legislation to correct the error.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Turcotte indulged in the violence of his own feelings, in his attacks upon the bill. The hon. member's remarks were merely a repetition of what had fallen from others, expressed in a tone congenial to his own taste.<sup>4</sup> This gentleman is accused of having said at the hustings there, that he would desire to wade knee deep in British blood. He denied ever having made use of such language ; and said, that so far from wishing to wade in human blood, he could not bear to see spilled even the blood of a wild pidgeon.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Viger ... was prominent in his hostility to this measure.<sup>6</sup>

Dr. Christie's disapproval of the Union Bill, furnished (sic) nothing new ; the riots in the late elections be attributed to the exercise of an influence that ought not to have been used.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Simpson in the warmth of his imagination, at the appearance of ladies in the house, enlivened the dull hours, by the inspiration of a most brilliant idea which he generously let off. — He likened them to a gentleman with an embarrassed estate — Mr. Upper Canada : — contiguous to that of a lady unencumbered Miss Lower Canada. To better himself, he forced her, through the power of her guardians, to marry him against her will ; and, as may be anticipated from the unhappy fate of similar unfortunates, the lady will be harrassed by ill-treatment with a broken heart into an untimely grave.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Moffatt had heard a great deal about responsible government. In his opinion we were not in a position to be benefitted by that point being conceded in the extravagant proportion contended for by some honourable gentlemen.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Neilson would rather vote for his own address, or upon such a modification of the resolutions brought before the house by the hon. member for Lanark, as he thought consistent.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Attorney-General Ogden spoke to the Resolutions, and contributed not a little to the impaling of that unfortunate gentleman, Mr. Baldwin. Mr. Ogden alluded to the letter which the Member for Hastings had thought fit to send to him as well as to his colleagues, stating that he had no confidence in him, although at that time he could not have known him. If Mr. Baldwin had derived his opinion of him from the newspapers, Mr. Ogden would only say, that had he formed an opinion of that Hon. gentleman from the public prints or public rumour, he believed that that Hon. gentleman would have deserved long ago to have been led out to public execution. Mr. Ogden alluded to the debate which had taken place on the first day of the session, respecting the right of the House to adjourn, and stated that he could allude to an instance, where the Assembly had adjourned without meeting the other branches of Parliament. He referred to the House of Assembly in L. Canada when, in 1834, Lord Aylmer sent down a message by Col. Glegg to the Clerk of the House, that he was so unwell that he could not meet them — whereupon the House adjourned. The Hon. Member for Richelieu (Viger), and a certain "great man" of whom they had heard on Monday, were then active in advising the Executive, and he presumed that they would have never allowed a proceeding which was not Parliamentary. Mr. O. alluded to that part of the Speech, relating to McLeod, which the Hon. Member for Portneuf (Aylwin) had unworthily designated as "clap trap." He believed that the Government would have deserved to have been censured, had they omitted an allusion to a Canadian subject unjustly deprived of his rights. He thought the manner in which the American authorities had treated that unfortunate man was a disgrace to a land that boasted of its freedom. When he had applied for a writ of habeas corpus — a measure which in England would have been determined upon instantly, the American Judges took six weeks to deliberate.<sup>11</sup>

Sir A. MacNab from the manner in which he had heard responsible government defined in that house, could gather nothing different from the principles laid down by Sir Francis Head. — If they had power to carry it out — now was the time or never.<sup>12</sup>

In the speech made by Mr. Draper, he also exposed, with cutting irony, the “predicament” of Mr. Baldwin. He said that that gentlemen (sic) had expressed a wish that the past might be buried in oblivion. That gentlemen might have good reasons to bury the past in oblivion, but he had none : he had done no act that he desired to be forgotten (sic).<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Sherwood concurred with the hon. member from Montreal in his views of responsible government.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Merritt was of opinion, that having succeeded in passing the act of union, we ought now to unite in support of it. The struggle which had so long been made by reformers to obtain good government, he hoped under the guarantee of Lord Sydenham, was now at an end. If the house was to go on conflicting in opinion of supporting this address, modifying that amendment and these unceasing jars ; it was in vain to hope for that unanimity of sentiment upon which the vital interests of the country depended.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Neilson withdrew his amended address, and it was understood that the amendments would be withdrawn by the mover himself, as the votes were taken.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Baldwin proposed one amendment, which denied that the people of either province were consulted on the Union.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Baldwin’s amendment was lost.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Merritt then proposed an amendment to the effect, that the House admitted that some modifications might be required in the Union Bill.<sup>19</sup>

On this, a discussion arose. The officers of Government strongly opposed the amendment....<sup>20</sup>

It was carried against them by a vote of 44 to 26.<sup>21</sup>

At half-past 8 o’clock, Mr. Aylwin moved, seconded by Col. Prince, that the house do adjourn till 10 o’clock to-morrow.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Johnston opposed the motion alleging that he had been in attendance the whole day and had listened with pain to the profitless cavilling and bickerings of hon. members ; — reflecting upon their mutual inconsistency, and altogether irrelevant to the matter before the house. For his part, in accordance with the solemn oath that he had taken, he could not conscientiously refrain from opposing an adjournment. If the question under discussion did not come to a decision that evening, he was convinced that another day would again be trifled away, to the great detriment of the public good, and, though he were obliged to sit there till 4 o’clock in the morning, it were better that it should be so, than that the house should break up without coming to a decision.<sup>23</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair ;

And Mr. Morris reported that the Committee had come to several Resolutions ; which Resolutions were again read, at the Clerk’s table, and agreed to by the House, and are as followeth : —

Resolved — That this House do humbly thank His Excellency for his Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present Session.

Resolved — That this House duly appreciates the motives which have led His Excellency to assemble the Provincial Parliament at the earliest period which the circumstances of the Province, and the duties imposed upon him by the Imperial Act for the Union of the Canadas, under which the Legislature is Constituted, have admitted; and it is grateful to His Excellency for the expression of his satisfaction in now meeting this House, to deliberate on the great and important interests committed to the charge of the Provincial Parliament.

Resolved—That this House learns with pleasure that no time was lost, by the Executive of the Province, in remonstrating against the forcible detention of a subject of Her Majesty, an inhabitant of this Province, in the neighbouring States, under a charge of a pretended crime; that provision was made for securing to the individual the means of defence, pending the further action of Her Majesty's Government, and that the Queen's Representative at Washington has since been instructed to demand his release.

Resolved—That this House receives, with feelings of the warmest gratitude, the assurances which His Excellency has given to us by the Queen's command, of Her Majesty's fixed determination to protect her faithful subjects, in Canada, with the whole weight of her power.

Resolved—That this House is deeply sensible of the great advantages which the Province has derived, and must derive, from the arrangements by which, under the directions of the Treasury, the rates of postage between all parts of the Colony and the United Kingdom have been greatly reduced, as well as from those which have been made by the Deputy Post Master General, under His Excellency's directions, for the more speedy and regular conveyance of letters between the different parts of this Province; and it confidently anticipates, with His Excellency, that the result of the labours of the Commission, he has been pleased to appoint, to enquire into and report upon the whole Post Office System of British North America, will be the better establishment of a plan securing improvements in the internal communication, by post, within the Colony, equal to those which we have already obtained, in the communication with the Mother Country.

Resolved—That the earliest and most serious attention shall be given by this House to the many subjects of deep importance to the future welfare of the Province which demand it; and His Excellency may rest assured that any Measures which His Excellency may direct to be submitted to us, shall receive our prompt and willing consideration.

Resolved—That this House feels that among the first of these subjects, in importance, is the adoption of measures for developing the resources of the Province, by well considered and extensive Public Works; and that the rapid settlement of the Country, the value of every man's property within it, and the advancement of his future fortunes, are deeply affected by this question.

Resolved—That this House concurs with His Excellency in the opinion that the improvement of the navigation from the shores of the Lake Erie and Lake Huron to the Ocean, are works requiring a great outlay of money, but promising commensurate returns. We are aware of the difficulty which would have existed in undertaking these works in the present financial condition of the Province, and we learn with gratitude and pleasure that His Excellency has received the authority of Her Majesty's Government to state that they are prepared to call on the Imperial Parliament to afford their assistance towards these important undertakings; and that, in the full belief that peace and tranquillity will be happily established in the Province, under the Constitution settled by Parliament, and that nothing but a relief from its most pressing difficulties is wanting to its rapid advancement to prosperity, they will propose to Parliament, by affording the guarantee of the Imperial Treasury for a Loan to the extent of no less than a million and a half, to aid the Province, for the double purpose of diminishing the pressure of the Interest on the Public Debt, and of enabling it to proceed with those great public undertakings, whose progress during the last few years has been arrested by financial difficulties; and that the best consideration of this House will be given to the reason which His Excellency intends to submit to us embracing a plan for those important purposes, and we shall thankfully receive the Extracts which may be laid before us for our information and that of the people of Canada, from the despatches in which this gratifying assurance of the intentions of Her Majesty's Government were communicated to His Excellency.

Resolved — That Emigration, and the disposal and settlement of the Public Lands, are subjects so intimately connected with the welfare of the Province, that this House cannot but take the most lively interest in all measures that may relate to them. This House cordially concurs with His Excellency, in believing that there exist within the Province no means so certain of producing a healthy flow of Emigration from the Mother Country, and of ultimately establishing the Emigrant as a Settler and proprietor within the Colony, as the power of affording sure employment for his labour on his first arrival; and that the assistance of Parliament for the Public Works which may be undertaken here, will, in a great measure, provide for this. But we are happy to learn that yet further assistance will be afforded us in this great work, and that, with a view further to aid Emigration, His Excellency is authorized to declare to us that Her Majesty's Government are prepared to assist in facilitating the passage of the Emigrant from the Port at which he is landed, to the place where his labour may be made available, and that a vote of money for this purpose will be proposed to the Imperial Parliament. We shall be gratified by receiving any communication which His Excellency may have to make us on this subject; and we shall not fail to give our best consideration to any scheme for the settlement and disposal of the Public Lands, which His Excellency may be pleased to lay before us.

Resolved — That the earnest attention of this House shall be given to any measure which His Excellency may submit to it for the more extended application of the principles of local self Government, which already prevail to some extent throughout that part of the Province which was formerly Upper Canada, for enabling the people to exercise a greater degree of power over their own local affairs, and for the establishment of such a form of local self Government for those Districts of the Province which are unprovided with it, as may ensure satisfaction to the people while it preserves inviolate the prerogative of the Crown, and maintains the administration of Justice pure from party and popular excitement.

Resolved — That His Excellency do rest assured that this House holds the Education of the people to be a subject of paramount importance, and that they sincerely regret that the want of due provision in this behalf should have been so long felt in the Province — they are aware of the difficulty of establishing an efficient system by which the blessings of instruction may be placed within the reach of all; but they are aware also of the overwhelming importance of the subject, and it shall be the object of their best attention, and their most anxious consideration. They humbly thank His Excellency for the promise of His co-operation in their labours, and they trust that with that co-operation they shall be able to obtain a measure which, if it should fail so to reconcile conflicting opinions as to meet the approbation of all, will at least serve as a step by which an advance to a more perfect system may be made, and the difficulty under which the people of the Province now labour may be greatly diminished, subject to such improvements hereafter as time and experience may point out.

Resolved — That this House thanks His Excellency for having directed that the financial accounts of the Province, and the estimates for the public service, shall be submitted to them with the least possible delay. And this House will give its prompt and deliberate attention to the financial measures which His Excellency may lay before them for rendering the proposed assistance from Her Majesty's Government advantageous to the Province, and this House feel grateful to His Excellency for his assurance that whatever may be appropriated for this purpose will be economically employed and rendered effective.

Resolved — That this House humbly thanks His Excellency for the expression of his confidence in them, for the regulation of the different important matters which must necessarily come before them; they will endeavour so to order their counsels as that Canada, — united under a Constitution which, although it may hereafter require some modification, this House is satisfied the Imperial Legislature has framed with an earnest desire for the welfare of this portion of the British Empire, — cannot fail to prosper.

Resolutions in answer to Speech at Opening
of Session.

Resolved — That this House gratefully receives as pledges of the sincerity with which the Mother Country desires to promote the prosperity of Canada, and assist in the well working of the new Institutions which it has established, the generous aid which His Excellency has announced to them; the determination which His Excellency has been empowered to state on the part of the Government, to devote annually a large sum for the military defences of the Province, — and the fixed and settled determination which His Excellency has declared to them, in Her Majesty's name, that Her North American possessions shall be maintained at all hazards, as a part of Her Empire. They are aware that the eyes of England are fixed anxiously on the result of the great experiment which is now to be tried in this Province. They will use their best endeavours to ensure its success, and humbly hope that the aid of Parliament in their undertakings; the confidence of the British Capitalists in the credit they may require of them; the security which the British people will feel in seeking their shores, and establishing themselves on their fertile soil, may carry the improvement of the Province to an unexampled height. The rapid advance of Trade and Emigration, within the last eighteen months, afford ample evidence of the effect of tranquillity in restoring confidence, and promoting prosperity. — They pray fervently that no dissensions may mar the flattering prospect which is open before them; that their efforts may be steadily directed to the great practical improvement of which the Province stands so much in need; and that, under the blessing of that Providence which has hitherto preserved this portion of the British dominions, their Counsels may be so guided as to ensure to the Queen, attached and loyal subjects, and, to United Canada, a prosperous and contented people.

Resolved — That the said Resolutions be referred to a special Committee, of five members, to prepare and report the draft of an Address, in answer to the speech of His Excellency, the Governor General, to both Houses, at the opening of the present Session of the Provincial Parliament.

Committee to draft Address.

Ordered — That Mr. Cameron, Mr. Black, Mr. Dunscomb, Mr. Merritt, and the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, do compose the said Committee.

Order of the day
for second reading
bill, Gaspé Fisheries, postponed.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to regulate the Fisheries in the District of Gaspé, being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until tomorrow.

As also bill for Independence of Judges.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill for better securing the Independence and uprightness of the Judges, being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until tomorrow.

Then, on motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by Mr. Price,
The House Adjourned.

Appendix, 19 June, 1841.*((Notice of proposed motions.))

Mr. Thompson gave notice, that, on the 30th, he would move an enquiry why the £15,000 granted to the Welland Company, 2 Vict. c. 72, promulgated on the 30th January, 1840, for a shiplock at the Dunville Dam, Grand River, had not been so expended.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Small gave notice of a Bill to establish the vote by ballot at elections throughout the Province.<sup>25</sup>

appointed Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. Speaker, communicated to the House the following letter :

KINGSTON, 23rd. JUNE, 1841.

SIR,

I beg leave, with the approbation of the House of Assembly, to appoint Mr. John Roy, my Deputy, as Sergeant at Arms.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

You most obedient, humble servant,

Signed,

GEO. K. CHISHOLM,

Sergt. at Arms.

To the Honorable the Speaker }
of the House of Assembly. }

Leave of absence to Mr. Kimber.

Ordered — That Mr. Kimber, have leave to absent himself from this House from the twenty fourth Instant.

Petition for further regulations by law in preparing Students for the practice of medicine.

A petition of the Medical Board of the District of Montreal, was presented to the House by Mr. McCulloch, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — The necessity of more ample preparation, and instruction, to students for the medical profession than the law at present demands ; and praying that the subject may be taken into the serious consideration of the House, and that such regulations may be established for the improvement of medical education in the Province, as to its wisdom may seem meet.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Draft of Address in answer to Speech
reported.

Mr. Cameron, from the select Committee to whom had been referred the Resolutions of this House on the Speech of His Excellency, the Governor General, to both Houses of the Provincial Legislature, for the purpose of preparing and reporting the draft of an Address in answer to the said Speech, founded on the said Resolutions, reported to the House the said draft of an Address, which was again read at the Clerk's table, and is as followeth : —

To His Excellency, The Right Honorable CHARLES, BARON SYDENHAM, of Sydenham, in the county of Kent, and Toronto, in Canada ; One of Her Majesty's most Honorable Privy Council, Governor General of British North America, and Captain General and Governor in Chief, in and over the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the Island of Prince Edward, and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY ;

Address in answer
to Speech at opening
of Session.

We, Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, most humbly beg leave to thank Your Excellency for Your most gracious Speech from the Throne ; at the opening of the present Session.

We duly appreciate the motives which have led Your Excellency to assemble the Provincial Parliament at the earliest period which the circumstances of the Province, and the duties imposed upon Your Excellency by the Imperial Act for the Union of the Canadas, under which the Legislature is constituted, have admitted ; and we are grateful to Your Excellency's expression of satisfaction in now meeting us, to deliberate on the great and important interests committed to the charge of the Provincial Parliament.

Address in answer
to Speech at opening
of Session.

We learn with pleasure that no time was lost by the Executive of the Province, in remonstrating against the forcible detention of a subject of Her Majesty, an inhabitant of this Province, in the neighbouring States, under a charge of a pretended crime ; that provision was made for securing to the individual the means of defence, pending the further action of Her Majesty's Government, and that the Queen's Representative at Washington has since been instructed to demand his release.

We receive, with feelings of the warmest gratitude, the assurances which Your Excellency has given us, by the Queen's Command, of Her Majesty's fixed determination to protect Her faithful subjects in Canada with the whole weight of Her power.

We are deeply sensible of the great advantages which the Province has derived, and must derive, from the arrangements by which, under the directions of the Treasury, the rates of postage between all parts of the Colony and the United Kingdom have been greatly reduced, as well as from those which have been made by the Deputy Post Master General, under Your Excellency's directions, for the more speedy and regular conveyance of letters between the different parts of this Province ; and we confidently anticipate, with Your Excellency, that the result of the labours of the Commission Your Excellency has been pleased to appoint to inquire into and report upon the whole Post Office System of British North America, will be the establishment of a plan securing improvements in the internal communication, by post, within the Colony, equal to those which we have already obtained in the communication with the Mother Country.

Our earliest and most serious attention shall be given to the many subjects of deep importance to the future welfare of the Province which demand it ; and Your Excellency may rest assured that any measures which You may direct to be submitted to us, shall receive our prompt and willing consideration.

We feel that among the first in importance of these subjects, is the adoption of measures for developing the resources of the Province, by well considered and extensive Public Works ; and that the rapid settlement of the Country, the value of every man's property within it, and the advancement of his future fortunes are deeply affected by this question.

We concur with Your Excellency in the opinion that the improvement of the Navigation, from the shores of Lake Erie and Lake Huron to the Ocean, is a work requiring a great outlay of money, but promising commensurate returns. We are aware of the difficulty which would have existed in undertaking this work in the present financial condition of the Province, and we learn with gratitude and pleasure that Your Excellency has received the authority of Her Majesty's Government to state that they are prepared to call on the Imperial Parliament to afford their assistance towards this important undertaking ; and that in the full belief that peace and tranquillity will be happily established in the Province, under the Constitution settled by Parliament, and that nothing but a relief from its most pressing difficulties is wanting to its rapid advancement to prosperity, they will propose to Parliament, by affording the guarantee of the Imperial Treasury for a Loan to the extent of no less than a million and a half sterling, to aid the Province, for the double purpose of diminishing the pressure of the Interest on the Public Debt, and of enabling it to proceed with those great public undertakings, whose progress, during the last few years, has been arrested by financial difficulties.

Our best consideration will be given to the measure which Your Excellency intend to submit to us, embracing a plan for these important purposes, and we shall thankfully receive the extracts which may be laid before us for our information, and that of the people of

Address in answer
to Speech at opening
of Session.

Canada, from the Despatches in which this gratifying assurance of the intentions of Her Majesty's Government were communicated to your Excellency.

We cordially concur with Your Excellency in the opinion that Emigration, and the disposal and settlement of the Public Lands, are subjects so intimately connected with the welfare of the Province, that we cannot but take the most lively interest in all measures that may relate to them ; and that there exists within the Province no means so certain of producing a healthy flow of Emigration from the Mother Country, and of ultimately establishing the Emigrant as a settler and proprietor within the Colony, as the power of affording sure employment for his labour on his first arrival. The assistance of Parliament for the Public Works which may be undertaken here, will in a great measure provide for this. But we are happy to learn that yet further assistance will be afforded us in this great work, and that, with a view further to aid Emigration, your Excellency is authorized to declare to us that Her Majesty's Government are prepared to assist in facilitating the passage of the Emigrant, from the Port at which he is landed, to the place where his labour may be made available ; and that a vote of money for this purpose will be proposed to the Imperial Parliament. We shall be gratified by receiving any communication which your Excellency may have to make to us on this subject ; and we shall not fail to give our best consideration to any scheme for the settlement and disposal of the Public Lands, which your Excellency may be pleased to lay before us.

Our earnest and most serious attention shall be given to any measure which your Excellency may submit to us for the more extended application of the principles of local self government, which already prevail to some extent throughout that part of the Province which was formerly Upper Canada, for enabling the people to exercise a greater degree of power over their own local affairs, and for the establishment of such a form of local self government for those Districts of the Province which are unprovided with it, as may ensure satisfaction to the people while it preserves inviolate the prerogative of the Crown, and maintains the administration of justice pure from party and popular excitement.

Your Excellency may rest assured that we hold the Education of the people to be a subject of paramount importance, and that we sincerely regret that the want of due provision in this behalf should have been so long felt in the Province — We are aware of the difficulty of establishing an efficient system by which the blessings of instruction may be placed within the reach of all, but we are aware also of the overwhelming importance of the subject, and it shall be the object of our best attention, and our most anxious consideration. We humbly thank your Excellency for the promise of Your co-operation in our labours, and we trust that with that co-operation we shall be able to obtain a measure which, if it should fail so to reconcile conflicting opinions as to meet the approbation of all, will, at least, serve as a step by which an advance to a more perfect system may be made, and the difficulty under which the people of the Province now labour may be greatly diminished, subject to such improvements hereafter as time and experience may point out.

We thank your Excellency for the assurance that the financial accounts of the Province, and the estimates for the public service, shall be submitted to us with the least possible delay; and while we shall give our prompt and deliberate attention to the financial measures which your Excellency may lay before us, for rendering the proposed assistance from Her Majesty's Government advantageous to the Province, we feel grateful to your Excellency for the assurance that whatever may be appropriated for this purpose will be economically employed and rendered effective.

We humbly thank your Excellency for the expression of Your confidence in us for the regulation of the different important matters which must necessarily come before us; we will endeavour so to order our counsels as that Canada, united under a Constitution which the Imperial Legislature has framed with an earnest desire for the welfare of this portion of the British Empire, and subject to such a modifications, as may hereafter be required, cannot fail to prosper.

We gratefully receive, as pledges of the sincerity with which the Mother Country desires to promote the prosperity of Canada, and assist in the well working of the new institutions which it has established, the generous aid which your Excellency has announced to us — the determination which your Excellency has been empowered to state on the part of the Government, to devote annually a large sum for the military defences of the Province — and the fixed and settled determination which your Excellency has declared to us in Her Majesty's name, that Her North American possessions shall be maintained at all hazards, as a part of Her Empire. We are aware that the eyes of England are fixed anxiously on the result of the great experiment which is now to be tried in this Province. We will use our best endeavors to ensure its success, and humbly hope that the aid of Parliament in our undertakings; the confidence of the British Capitalists in the credit we may require of them; the security which the British people will feel in seeking our shores, and establishing themselves on our fertile soil, will carry the improvement of the Province to an unexampled height. The rapid advance of Trade and Emigration within the last eighteen months, afford ample evidence of the effect of tranquillity in restoring confidence, and promoting prosperity. — We pray fervently that no dissensions may mar the flattering prospect which is open before us, — that our efforts may be steadily directed to the great practical improvements of which the Province stands so much in need, and that under the blessing of that Providence which has hitherto preserved this portion of the British dominions, our Counsels may be so guided as to ensure to the Queen, attached and loyal subjects, and to the United Canada, a prosperous and contented people.

Mr. Cameron moved, seconded by Captain Steele, that the question of concurrence be now separately put upon each paragraph of the said Address.

Mr. Neilson moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Morin, that all the words in the said motion after "that" be struck out, and the following substituted "the following draft of an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech be adopted by this House": —

Address in answer
to Speech at opening
of Session.

Amendment proposed by Mr. Neilson, to address in answer to Speech.

"We, Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, most humbly thank your Excellency for the Speech delivered from the Throne, at the opening of the present session.

We receive with respect your Excellency's declaration that you have assembled us at the earliest period which the circumstances of the Province and the duties imposed upon you by the Imperial Act for the Union of the Canadas, have permitted.

It is with deep concern that we have learnt from your Excellency that a subject of Her Majesty, and an inhabitant of this Province, has been forcibly detained in the neighbouring States; and we acknowledge with gratitude the assurance which your Excellency has been authorized to make, that it is Her Majesty's fixed determination to afford her powerful protection to her subjects in this Province.

We feel grateful for the arrangements which your Excellency communicates, by which Her Majesty's Government has reduced the rates of postage between this Colony and the United Kingdom, and that a more speedy and regular conveyance of letters within the Province has been effected under your Excellency's direction. And we shall hail with satisfaction any improvements in the Department of the Post Office which will put us in a condition, in that respect, equal to that which exists in the Mother Country.

Amendment proposed by Mr. Neilson, to address in answer to Speech.

We beg leave to assure your Excellency, that any message from your Excellency on matters which may be of deep importance to the future welfare of the Province, will receive our most serious attention.

The improvements of the navigation and establishment of internal communications are objects essential to the general prosperity; and we feel grateful (sic) for the information which your Excellency has communicated, that Her Majesty's Government is disposed to assist in promoting them. When your Excellency shall be pleased to lay before us despatches which convey this assurance, the whole of these subjects will receive our most respectful consideration.

We will also give our earnest consideration to the subject of Emigration, and the disposal and settlement of the Public Lands, as connected with the outlay of capital upon public works; and we derive satisfaction from the information communicated by your Excellency, that Her Majesty's Government is disposed to assist Emigrants in proceeding to those parts of the Province where their labor may be made available. Any prejudicious measure which may seem calculated to alleviate the sufferings of our fellow-subjects in the United Kingdom, who leave their home with a view of bettering their condition in this Province, will be readily concurred in by us.

We particularly thank your Excellency for your expressions in favor of local self-government, and that the people should exercise a greater degree of power over their local affairs. When the measure may come under our consideration, we shall not fail to respect the prerogative of the Crown, while we endeavor to secure the independent and impartial administration of justice.

We concur entirely with your Excellency in the importance of affording every facility for a general Education of the people. While we are ever ready to respect the rights of all to the equal enjoyment of the blessings of instruction, we trust that our labours, for the ends for which we have your Excellency's proffered co-operation, will eventually prove successful.

It is our peculiar duty to bestow the most serious attention on the public accounts, and the estimates for the public services, to be submitted to us by your Excellency, and also on any financial measures which your Excellency may lay before us affecting the revenue levied in this Province, or which may in any way tend to impose burthens on our constituents.

Your Excellency may be assured that in discharge of our duties to Her Majesty and our constituents, it will be our constant endeavor that all our proceedings should be characterized by wisdom and prudence. In conformity to our obligations as subjects of the British Crown, and bound to fidelity by the most sacred ties, we have assembled in obedience to an Act of the Imperial Parliament and Her Majesty's writs, to advise and consent to such laws as may be deemed necessary for the peace, welfare, and good government of Canada: although we cannot but regret that the most populous portion of the Province heretofore constituted under the Act of Parliament of 1791, as the Province of Lower Canada, has not been consulted on the Constitution of the Government which is now substituted for that which prevailed under the said Act; and there are features in the Act now constituting the Government of Canada, which are inconsistent with justice, and the common rights of British subjects.

We shall, nevertheless, endeavour to discharge the duties which we are now called to perform, in the true spirit of British freemen, in the hope that justice may finally prevail, and restore that confidence and prosperity, which your Excellency desires, and in which we, as well as our posterity, are so deeply interested.

His ((Mr. Neilson's)) desire for pursuing this course, was in order that his opinions might be recorded on the Journals of that House, whatever might be the fate of the amendment.<sup>1</sup>

Main Quest. Carried.

The question being then put on the main motion, it was agreed to unanimously, and

Paragraphs from 1 to 7 agreed to.

The first to the seventh Paragraphs of the said Address inclusively, being again severally read, and the question of concurrence being separately put upon each, they were agreed to unanimously.

The eighth Paragraph of the said Address being again read,<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Hincks could not agree that that House should express its "full belief that peace and tranquillity will be happily established in the Province, under the Constitution settled by Parliament." He wished to take the yeas and nays on the question. It was one of very great importance, and he could not consent to the use of terms which in his opinion pledged the House in support of the Union bill as it is. He alluded to some amendments proposed by Mr. Derbshire which accorded with his (Mr. H.'s) views of the subject.<sup>3</sup>

Amendment proposed
to 8th paragraph.

Mr. Hincks moved, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Price, that the words "render (sic) the constitution settled by Parliament" be struck out of the Paragraph.

Mr. Derbshire rose and said that his amendments were of a different character. He hoped that the division to which the hon. member was about to press the house would be one of hostility to the measure of the Union or not. It was the right of the house to take into consideration the details of the Bill when brought under its notice by the constitutional mode of petition: he knew of no other way of making known the wishes of the people to the Mother Country. They should reserve to themselves a right of considering the measure again. Those who voted yesterday in the hurry of the division, did so under the impression of hostility to the Act.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Boswell hoped the hon. member for Oxford would withdraw his motion. The resolution expressed only the belief of the British Government that peace and tranquillity would result from the Union. The House was not at all pledged in the adoption of the paragraph alluded to.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Durand here rose to correct any impression that might have been formed from the vote which he had just given, tending to convey an opinion that he was opposed to the union. It had been recommended by Lord Durham, and he (Mr. D.) thought, that if it was properly modified, it would not only promote our welfare and prosperity, but elevate us in importance in the eyes of the world. He would therefore say — give the union a fair trial.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Small could not see anything objectionable, in his reading of the paragraph; — the language was that of Ministers, that they believed that "peace and tranquillity, &c. &c. under the Constitution &c.," not that the house believed.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Merritt begged to ask if they were not now legislating, "under the constitution as settled by Parliament?" To say, then, that they did not believe that they would enjoy peace and tranquillity, was rather a most ridiculous piece of affectation, or else a most serious truth which it was proper should be known to the Imperial Government and the British people as soon as possible, that they might not be imposed upon by any duplicity.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Hincks was sorry to differ from those whose opinions he respected; but so convinced was he of the pledge that the retention of these words imposed upon the house — and so impressed upon his mind, was the vanity of expecting peace and happiness under things as they now existed, that he should press the amendment to a division.<sup>9</sup> He was of opinion that if the house merely echoed the Speech they would be deceiving Her Majesty's Ministers. (Cries of no, no.)<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Baldwin did not think the matter ((was)) one of small moment. If hon. members beli((eved)) that the grounds were wrong, they should not rej((oice)) at the delusion of Her Majesty's Ministers. ((He)) could not express his gratitude for a measure which he believed to be founded in error.<sup>11</sup>

Col. Prince was astonished, that the member for Oxford should now attempt to bring on a discussion upon a subject, which he had hoped had been set at rest. If the ayes and the noes had been taken yesterday, as he (Col. P.) had suggested this would have been prevented. Among the mass of talking with which the public time had been consumed, the gallant Col. observed, that the conspicuous brevity of the few unassuming remarks offered by himself during the debate entitled him to a little of that attention, which he had so copiously bestowed upon others, who were distinguished not a little for their dullness and prolixity. The resolutions ((had)) been passed unanimously; — why, then, disturb the house by attempting to unravel them.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Johnston here followed in the same tone.... Addressing himself more particularly to the member for Oxford the hon. gentleman remarked that he (Mr. Hincks) seemed to think that the whole weight of the liberties of Canada rested upon him. He (Mr. J.) begged leave to remark that he would yield to no member of that house in a just zeal for those inestimable blessings. But this was not to be exerted in loud-toned professions, in seduously hunting out for grievances, in mining for imperfections, and in luxuriating in blemishes, and sounding alarms where no danger existed. Many honourable members had talked a great deal about their constituencies, — he (Mr. J.) stood in that house the independent member of an intelligent constituency, whose interests there was not the least probability of his neglecting; although on every trifling occasion, to gain an influence with the house, he refrained from heralding his opinions with the solemn and pompous exclamations of “voice of the people,” “duty to my constituents,” and such like. The Union Bill had passed, and if hon. members expected the country to pay the slightest regard to their hourly professions in that house, of a desire to promote the peace of the colony, let me give it a fair trial. For his (Mr. J.’s) part he verily believed that if the act had been framed with wisdom from or high, it would not even then have found favour in the eyes of some hon. gentlemen.<sup>13</sup> Had the Angel Gabriel brought down an enactment from Heaven, there were certain Members in the House who would oppose it, merely for the sake of speechifying.<sup>14</sup>

The hon. member ((Mr. Johnston)) concluded by observing that it seemed very evident, by the quibbles and discontent of some hon. gentlemen that they were bent upon obstructing the business of the country, and as for the vigilance that they pretended to exercise for the liberties of the people, he (Mr. J.) would be very sorry that the preservation of them should be at all entrusted to their keeping.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Draper begged to say, since hon. gentlemen professed such tenderness of conscience, he did not think their virtuous candour should be limited to suit their own convenience. As even the possibility of enjoying peace and tranquillity under the present constitution as established by the Imperial Parliament appeared to be repudiated by some, let us tell them candidly — it is of no use for you to trouble yourselves to contract a loan for us, to promote emigration and public works, to assist us in our difficulties, or to provide for our defence; alter at our bidding this constitution of ours first, before we have anything to say to you.<sup>16</sup>

Sir A. MacNab thought that the words in the address were simple enough, and very apposite, we are told that we are to have a million and a half in the hope that peace and tranquillity &c. &c. — was not that a very rational hope? <sup>17</sup> to 8th paragraph.

agreed to.

The question being then put on the eighth Paragraph of the said Address, it was agreed to unanimously.

9th to 13th paragraphs agreed to.

The ninth to the thirteenth Paragraphs of the said Address inclusively, being again severally read; and the question of concurrence being separately put upon each, they were agreed to unanimously.

The fourteenth Paragraph of the said Address being again read,

Mr. Cameron observed that in drawing up the Address from the resolutions passed in Committee, a little alteration had been made in the construction of the sentence, not affecting its meaning.<sup>18</sup>

To the 14th paragraph, Mr. Merritt suggested an amendment relative to the modification of the Union Act....<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Cameron moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Merritt, that the words "may hereafter be required" be struck out of the said Paragraph, and the following substituted "as experience may hereafter require."<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Neilson spoke about an instalment of justice....<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Aylwin ((spoke)) about the propriety of paragraphs proceeding from a legislative assembly condemning this one.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Black defended the amendment, and desiring the welfare of the country, supported the address. When the Union act came before the house, he could be free and unfettered to express his opinions.<sup>23</sup>

Sir A. MacNab did not approve of any committee making alterations.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Aylwin, perceiving a desire to persist in wasting time, moved the question....<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Neilson arose and enlightened the house with the grand discovery that he had made, of the destruction of the rights and privileges of Parliament, if a committee were allowed to make any alteration in what was submitted to their judgment.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Black had no dread of any such fatality overwhelming them. Was a committee to be endowed with eyes and ears, and intelligence; and were they not to be used; or were they mechanically to take their seats at a committee table like so many portable automata? He (Mr. Black) could not for a moment contemplate the stealing of a march upon the hon. member for the County of Quebec, and these gentlemen who acted with him, they were not so drowsy as to be caught napping.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Draper defended the committee. It was their duty to make such alterations as would render a document fit to be placed before the public eye, and be of credit to the house.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Christie thought that the terms of the amendment materially altered the sense and he was therefore opposed to it. The resolution as adopted expressed the opinion of the house that some alteration was required in the Union Act. The amendment requires its provisions to be tested before any decided objections are made.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Aylwin withdrew his motion pressing the question....<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Hincks. — The amendment has been fr((am))ed with great ingenuity. He was surprised that the hon. friend from North Lincoln (Mr. Merritt) ((should)) have seconded it, as he could not but see that it was left to experience to point out alterations. He ((could)) say that he thought it would be gravely inconsistent for those who had voted with him on the amendments of the previous evening to give their support to ((this)) now before the house.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Hincks regarded the amendment as pregnant with a dark mysterious meaning, the extent of which he had been able to discover by cautious groping. The hon. member could not see what we wanted with experience to discern the defects of the union bill. — He was satisfied with standing at the threshold to find every fault. Experience he would not wait for, but would at once make a blow at the civil list.<sup>32</sup>

Amendment carried.

So it was carried in the affirmative.

The question being then put on the fourteenth Paragraph of the said Address, so amended,

The House again divided —

Yeas, 45.

Noes, 31.

So it was carried in the affirmative.

(67)

The fifteenth, and the last, Paragraph of the said Address being again read ; and the question of concurrence being put thereon, it was agreed to unanimously, and Address concurred in.

Resolved — That this House doth concur with the Committee in the said Address.<sup>33</sup>

Ordered — That the said Address be engrossed.

Col. Prince now rose to speak, but was called to order by the Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) — some matter having precedence which we do not now recollect.<sup>34</sup>

Colonel Prince rose and spoke to the following effect : — The time, Mr. Speaker, had now arrived for every Hon. Member to record his vote upon the Address now in your hands. I shall record mine in favor of it ; and as a great deal has been said during the debate, while this House was in a Committee of the whole, about Executive Influence, Responsible Government, and Members on the Treasury Benches, as the seats in front of me are called, I beg it to be distinctly understood, that I vote upon the present occasion as the independent Member for the County of Essex — as a Member entirely independent of the Executive — as a Member uninfluenced by the Executive, either directly or indirectly — as a Member who has never been offered place or power, at the hands of the Executive, or been lead (sic) to believe that any such offer will be ever made to him. (Hear, hear.) That this Address may meet with some opposition is not to be wondered at, but I trust it will be carried. I can readily imagine an opposition such as this is, to start up. I can imagine, sir, that some Honorable Member, who having crossed the broad Atlantic, to embark his fortune in this Colony, and invested his capital on the banks of one of our noble rivers, in the just hope and expectation that he would be as safe there under the aegis of the British Constitution as he would be on the river Thames in England, but whose hopes and expectations had been bitterly deceived — who had here spent the prime of his life in counselling the weak, the disappointed and the restless, and had kept them in the straight line of duty, to their Sovereign and their Country — one on whom they had leaned on all occasions — whose time had been entirely devoted to their service and to the service of an ungrateful Government — one who had risked his life too often — and had spent his means, his time, his almost every thing, in repelling from the soil of his adopted country bands of ruffian invaders, who came there to insult the Crown, to change our Laws and Institutions, and to murder and rob his fellow citizens — one whose services thus gratuitously bestowed had met from the Government of other days neglect and coldness, and that indeed which was far worse than mere indifference — ingratitude. I say, sir, I can well imagine that any Hon. Member, used and treated in the manner I have just described, may naturally be expected to oppose this address, and the measures of His Excellency. But, sir, no true Briton will oppose it even on such grounds as those. — (Hear, hear, hear.) No sir, a loyal man, a sincere supporter of Lord Sydenham's administration — he who has an earnest desire to see this country prosper, will not divide the House on this occasion, but he will express as I do now, a hearty hope that there shall be no dissension in the camp — and that the world shall see that the first parliament of united Canada are united in the first important measure upon which they have deliberated (hear, hear.)

Now, sir, with regard to His Excellency's Speech, it promises much, I admit, but not more than, with our united exertions is, I think, capable of being realized. It contains a variety of subjects to which our attention is invited, but sir, not one of them is in my opinion equal in importance to that of Education. (Hear, hear.) I therefore do sincerely hope, as I do confidently expect, that that will be one of the measures to emanate from His Excellency; and I now assure his advisers who sit before me, and whom I hold responsible to some extent for that Speech, that the Country will expect this important measure from their hands; and that my humble support of them will in no small degree depend upon the proof which it is in their power to give, ere this Session ends, of their professions, by introducing and maturing some wholesome, liberal, and far more perfect system of General Education throughout this Colony than the present system, which in fact, is no system at all, or if it be one it is the very worst that can be found in any civilized community. (Hear, hear.)<sup>35</sup>

Responsible Government as he now understood it, he hoped to see carried out; — but upon the subject of Immigration, he disclaimed any wish for an inundation of British paupers. It was substantial farmers from the old country that we wanted; men of intelligence, character, industry and capital, but to induce such men to come among us, there must be stability and peace, not jarring and ceaseless discord. He felt highly gratified at the confidence which the prospect of a loan inspired — maintained in a firm and manly tone, the opinion of the country as regards the presumptuous violence and subterfuge of the United States in the affair of McLeod....<sup>36</sup>

As much, sir, has been said about the Union of these Provinces during these two day's debate, I will briefly state that unavoidable circumstances prevented me from voting on it in the last Assembly; but I will take this opportunity of expressing my entire concurrence in what has fallen from some Hon. Members, that the Imperial Act is objectionable, nay unjust, in some respects, towards my fellow subjects from below. And I beg leave to assure my friends from Lower Canada that when the proper time arrives they will find me go heart in hand with them in taking measures for altering and amending the Imperial Statute, so as to make it, as far as we consistently can, palatable to those whose rights and privileges have been abridged thereby.

I shall, as I said before sir, vote for the Address, and I congratulate this House and the Country at large on the unanimity which appears to pervade us on this first important question. (Hear, hear, hear.)<sup>37</sup>

It was then moved by Mr. Cameron that the address be presented by the whole house.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Small having on the first division been in a minority, trusted that that would not be construed into a desire on his part to vote against the address as a whole.<sup>39</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) decided that Mr. Small was not in order.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Attorney-General Ogden. When the motion for engrossing is made, an opportunity will be afforded members to express their opinions on the whole address. The proper course to be pursued now is, that messengers should be appointed to wait on his Excellency and ascertain at what time his Excellency would be pleased to receive the same, and in the mean time the address might be engrossed. Unless this was done, another day would be lost, and sufficient time had already been spent.<sup>41</sup>

Sir A. MacNab addressed the chair stating that it was the custom in the House of Assembly of Upper Canada to read an address a third time, so that although it had been engrossed, members would even still be allowed to make any alterations that they thought proper, the rule of the present Parliament being closed to such an avenue for cavilling to lie in wait this first bantling of larger growth, which has had the sousing and swathing of so many doctors and nurses — was at length, with much distrust and misgiving, launched forth.<sup>42</sup>

Here a convocation followed on the rules of the late Houses of Assembly of Upper and Lower Canada....<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Attorney-General Ogden ((contended)) that the resolutions having been adopted by the Committee, and submitted to and adopted by the House, as also the address founded upon them, no further action was necessary. He read an extract from the minutes of the Lower Canada Assembly to prove that such had been the practice in Lower Canada.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Cameron (seconded by Captain Steele) moved, that his Excellency the Governor General be waited upon by messengers, to know when he will be pleased to receive the address.<sup>45</sup>

Messengers were then nominated by ((Mr. Cuvillier)) the Speaker.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Aylwin objected to the nomination. He thought that the gentlemen on the treasury benches, who had advised the speech and brought forward the address, were the most persons to wait upon his Excellency. The hon. member here alluded to the practice in England.<sup>47</sup>

Col. Prince would take the sense of the House, whether the Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) had not the power of appointing a committee. The hon. member had alluded to British practices. If they adopt a part, it was his opinion they should adopt all.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Derbishire. British practice is, that the House go up and present the address. (A laugh.) He was not in error. Hon. gentlemen had spoken of the manner of presenting the address to his Excellency. In the confusion which was but too prevalent in that House, hon. members really did not appear to know what they had advanced.<sup>49</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) said that under the rules of the House he had the power of nominating a deputation: he was therefore only fulfilling his duty. If the House thought proper to allow those rules, he should act in accordance.<sup>50</sup>

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, by the whole House.

Ordered — That Mr. Cameron, Captain Steele, Mr. Prince, and Mr. Simpson, do wait upon His Excellency, the Governor General, to know His Excellency's pleasure, when he will be attended by this House with their Address.

Message from Leg.
Coun. with Code of Rules and a Resolution.

A Message from the Legislative Council, by John Godfrey Spragge, Esquire, Master in Chancery: —

MR. SPEAKER,

The Legislative Council have adopted a code of Rules, for the guidance of this House, and a certain Resolution on the same subject, copies of which they herewith transmit for the information of the Legislative Assembly.

(Signed) ROBERT S. JAMESON,
Speaker.

Legislative Council Chamber, }
22nd June, 1841.

"It was moved that it be —

Resolution from
Leg. Coun.

"Resolved — That a manuscript copy of the Rules adopted by this "House be communicated in the usual manner to His Excellency, the "Governor General, and to the Legislative Assembly."

"The said Resolution being read twice and the question of concurrence put thereon, the same was agreed to by the House, and it was "Ordered accordingly."

"Truly extracted from the Journal of the Legislative Council, of "Tuesday the twenty-second day of June, 1841.

(Signed) "JAMES FITZGIBBON, Clerk Legislative Council."

And also —

MR. SPEAKER,

Message from
Leg. Coun.

The Legislative Council have passed a Bill, intituled "An Act to "alter for a limited period the place of sitting of the Heir and Devisee "Commission of the late Province of Upper Canada; and for other "purposes therein mentioned" to which they desire the concurrence of the Assembly.

And then he withdrew.

Bill from Leg. Coun.
Sitting of Heir and Devisee Commission.

An engrossed Bill from the Legislative Council, intituled "An Act "to alter for a limited period the place of sitting of the Heir and Devisee "Commission of the late Province of Upper Canada; and for other "purposes therein mentioned," was read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time to-morrow.

Petition of divers
inhabitants of the county of Frontenac,
complaining of the election of Henry
Smith, Jr. Esquire.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the County of Frontenac, was presented to the House by Mr. Prince, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That petitioners are freeholders in the county of Frontenac, in the Midland district, and as such, entitled to vote at the election of a member to represent said county, in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

(68)

Petition of divers
inhabitants of the county of Frontenac,
complaining of the election of Henry
Smith, Jr. Esquire.

That at the election of such member, held at Kingston, on Monday, the 8th day of March last, Henry Smith, Jun., Esq., and James Mathewson, Esq., were, respectively, proposed as candidates to represent said county in such Legislative Assembly; and Thomas Kirkpatrick, Esq., of Kingston, aforesaid, elected as the Returning Officer and President at the said election.

That the said Henry Smith, by means of bribes, treats, rewards, or favours, or promises of bribes, treats, rewards, or favours, paid, given, or ordered, or promised to be paid or given by himself, or by others, as his friends, agents, committees, or supporters, to divers freeholders and electors of the said county; and by threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal acts, induced certain of such Electors to tender their votes at the said Election for him the said Henry Smith; and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick admitted the votes of such Electors for the said Henry Smith.

That the said Henry Smith, by reason of such bribes, treats, or favours, or promises thereof; and by the said threats and intimidation, and other corrupt and illegal conduct became, and was, and is disqualified from sitting in this present Parliament, as a Member of the Legislative Assembly, and ought not to have been returned as the member for the said County at the late election.

That during the said election the said Thomas Kirkpatrick conducted himself, as such Returning Officer, in an arbitrary, illegal, partial, and overbearing manner, in order to intimidate the electors at the said election, and to favour the said Henry Smith, and that, by reason thereof, freeholders desirous of tendering and recording their votes in favour of the said James Mathewson were prevented from so doing, and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick, during the said election, and contrary to law and the usage and practice at elections in this Province, and without any sufficient cause, removed, or caused to be removed from the Hustings the Counsel, Scrutineer, and Inspector of the said James Mathewson, and deprived the said James Mathewson of the benefit and assistance of the said Counsel, Scrutineer, and Inspector, and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick, by the rejection of good votes tendered for the said James Mathewson, and also by his arbitrary, partial, illegal, and overbearing conduct, and by the said Thomas Kirkpatrick so depriving the said James Mathewson of the benefit and assistance of the said Counsel, Scrutineer and Inspector, induced the said James Mathewson to relinquish the contest when many votes remained unpolled; and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick, illegally and improperly returned the said Henry Smith as duly elected, although the said Henry Smith was and is disqualified as above set forth from sitting in the said Legislative Assembly, and the majority on the poll in favour of the said Henry Smith was only collusive and colourable, and the said James Mathewson was, and is, entitled to the majority of the good and legal votes, and would have been returned by a majority of the legal votes in said county but for the illegal and improper conduct aforementioned, and praying the House to enquire into the merits of the said election and the conduct of the said Henry Smith and of the said Returning Officer, and either to amend the return by inserting the name of the said James Mathewson, instead of the said Henry Smith, or to cause a new writ to be issued for the election of a fit and proper person to represent the said county in place of the said Henry Smith. And also praying that petitioners may be allowed to offer evidence in support of the allegations set forth, before the committee to be appointed for the trial of the matter of this petition.

The gallant Col. ((Prince)) remarked, that in presenting this petition, he was only performing his duty as a member of the House; but he wished to be distinctly understood: that he was not of the opinion that either the returning officer or the sitting member had been guilty of the conduct imputed to them. He thought the statements contained in the petition were greatly aggravated, but as a member of the House it was his duty to lay before the House any petition placed in his hands couched in proper language.<sup>51</sup>

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

(69)

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that Edward Noble, and William Ferguson, had entered into the usual recognizance required by Law, on the subject matter of the contested election for the county of Fron-tenac.

Resolved — That this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the orders adopted by the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada for regulating its proceedings in cases of contested elections in that Province.

The Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to amend the Heir and Devisee Act being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until the twenty-fifth day of July next.

The Order of the day for the House to proceed to the Ballot of members for a Committee to nominate the standing Committees of this House, being read —

Speaker reports
Recognizance
entered into.

House to go into
Committee of whole,
on Friday next, to consider orders of Lower Canada
Assembly on contested Elections.

Orders of day for second reading of Bill to amend Heir and Devisee Act
postponed.

Order of the day
for Committee to nominate Standing

Committees
postponed.

Ordered—That the said Order of the day be postponed until to-morrow, and that it be the first Order of the day.

Gaspé fishery Bill
read second time.

A Bill to regulate the fisheries in the District of Gaspé was, according to order, read a second time.

Bill referred to Committee.

Resolved—That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of five members to report thereon with all convenient speed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered—That Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Christie, Mr. Burnet, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, and Mr. Dunscomb, do compose the said Committee.

Judges' Independency
Bill read second time, and referred to Sel. Committee.

A Bill for better securing the independence and uprightness of the Judges was, according to order, read a second time.

Resolved—that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of five members to report thereon with all convenient speed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered—That Mr. Aylwin, Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Black, Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Price, do compose the said Committee.

Then on motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Mr. Derbyshire,
The House adjourned.

Thursday, 24 June 1841.

His Exy. the Gov.
Gen. to receive the House, with Address, in answer to speech,
at 3 o'clock.

Petition from Clergyman & Members of the Church of England praying that the bible, entire, may be used in schools
as a class book.

Mr. Cameron, accompanied by the other messengers, reported that in obedience to the orders of the House, they had waited upon His Excellency, the Governor General, to know His Excellency's pleasure when he will receive this House, with their Address; and that His Excellency had been pleased to appoint this day, at three o'clock, in the afternoon, to receive the House, at the Government House.

A Petition of the Clergyman, and Members of the Church of England, resident in St. Armand west, was presented to the House by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That petitioners, viewing with dismay the ignorance, and consequent injury to society in general, likely to accrue from the want of schools for the rising generation of the Province, and the utter impossibility of providing them, especially in the new settlements, from private contributions, satisfied also that it is the duty of every wise and beneficent Government to provide, for all classes of its subjects, the means of a sufficient Education, do, in perfect reliance on the wisdom of this House, most earnestly pray that the provision of such means may be amongst its earliest deliberations.

That petitioners, while they are anxious to promote, throughout the Province, the diffusion of general knowledge, are, in their own minds, convinced that knowledge, to be productive of any real benefit or substantial good to the people, must be guided by the unerring wisdom of God, as revealed in His Word.

That further, petitioners, at the same time that they respect the rights of conscience in their fullest extent, do yet consider the Bible as the most sacred of God's gifts to man, — a gift which they would not willingly see denied, or even in part with-held from the rising youth of the Province — That humbly also, but conscientiously, believing that the Bible, as given by God must be received as a whole, and cannot without rashness or detriment be either added to or diminished from — inasmuch, as all scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is therefore declared to be profitable in various ways and for various purposes, petitioners consider that they would ill discharge their duties as christians, and consequently as believers in the whole book of Revelation, if they did not deprecate, in any contemplated establishment of schools, every attempt to introduce into them extracts, only, from the holy scriptures, whereby the word of God would be abridged and mutilated, and the imperfect selections of uninspired men be substituted for the inspired word of the Almighty, expressly revealed for man's benefit and guidance.

Wherefore petitioners humbly pray that not only may the Bible, according to the received translation, be recognized as the class book to be universally taught in all public schools and seminaries throughout the Province in which Protestant children shall receive their Education; but that it may be put into the hands of all such scholars in its full and unabridged state, and that no part of it may be with-held from them.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from President and directors of Canada Fire Assurance Company praying for an Act of Incorporation.

A petition of the President and Directors of the Canada Fire Assurance Company, was presented to the House by Mr. Black, and the same was received and read; setting forth:—That a large number of the citizens of Quebec have associated themselves together for the purpose of insuring against losses by fire, under the name of the "Canada Fire Assurance Company;"

That since the formation of this association, in the year 1840, they have transacted business to a very large extent, and still continue to do so.

That the capital of the said Company amounts to £100,000, divided into 4000 shares of £25 each, of which £58,000 has been subscribed and taken up, and five percent thereon paid up, which, with an additional five percent, to be called in forthwith, will make ten per cent on the amount of capital subscribed.

That the said association allows to its stockholders an abatement or discount of thirty three and a third per cent upon the premiums of the insurances they make with the said Company.

That owing to the small amount of each share, a portion of which only is required to be paid in, viz. ten per cent, it will be in the power of every proprietor, in the City of Quebec, to become a stockholder, and thus ensure his property at the lowest possible rate; an advantage not to be derived from Institutions of a similar nature wherein the shares are nearly four times as large.

That by reason of the shares being so small, many, if not most of the proprietors, of small means, have been induced to purchase stock in the said association, and have thereby become so much interested in the suppression of fires, that threefold the activity has been manifested therein since the establishment of the said association in the City of Quebec.

That to enable said Company to carry on their business with the greater advantage they are desirous of obtaining a charter of Incorporation under the name aforesaid.

Wherefore petitioners humbly pray the House to concur in an Act incorporating the said association for the purposes, and under the name aforesaid.

Foregoing petition referred to select Committee.

Resolved—That the said Petition be referred to a Committee of five Members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered—That Mr. Black, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, the Honourable Mr. Viger, Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Dunsmuir, do compose the said Committee.

Petition of J. Gross and D. High referred to select Committee.

Resolved—That the petition of Jacob Gross and Daniel High, Ministers of the Menonist Church, and others, presented to the House on the fifteenth instant, be referred to a Committee of five Members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered—That Mr. Merritt, Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Prince, Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Boswell do compose the said Committee.

House proceeds to Gov. House, with Address.

At the hour appointed, Mr. Speaker, and the House, went up to the Government House with the Address of the House.

And being returned,

Mr. Speaker reports reply to Address in answer to Speech.

Mr. Speaker reported that the House had attended upon His Excellency, the Governor General, with their address, to which His Excellency was pleased to make the following answer:—

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

Reply.

I thank you for your Address, and I assure you of my entire reliance upon your wisdom and prudence to assist me in whatever may tend to augment the prosperity of the people of Canada.

Petition of R. J. Turner referred to select Committee.

Resolved — That the petition of Robert J. Turner, of the Town of Kingston, presented to the House on the sixteenth Instant, be referred to a select Committee, of five Members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, by Bill or otherwise, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Col. Prince was desirous that the door should be open to all. He deprecated any exclusiveness that would close up the avenue of a profession, and monopolise to itself the privilege of an entré(e) to it.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Price spoke to the high character of the petitioner with whom he had been long acquainted, both in England and in the province. He hoped that he should not give offence to the hon. gentleman; but as a tribute to Mr. Turner, he must say, that he had taught the profession in this province, the practice of the Court of Chancery.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Aylwin regarded the information of the hon. and learned member as a gratifying novelty. The gentlemen of this colony must be singularly indebted to Mr. Turner. He (Mr. A.) was of opinion, though, that to part of the province which was lately Lower Canada, such a compliment to professional ignorance, would have been rather a dry one.<sup>3</sup>

Sir A.N. MacNab hoped that those who had filled their buckets at this fountain of legal knowledge, were grateful for their supply. The Court of Chancery was not proverbial for doing anything for nothing — he shrewdly suspected, therefore, that the gentleman in question had been well paid for his trouble.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Neilson thought that it was inconsistent with the dignity of the House, to reject the prayer of any individual, unless substantial proof before that House justified such a course.<sup>5</sup>

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Price, Mr. Prince, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Cartwright, and Mr. Small, do compose the said Committee.

Petition of divers freeholders of the District of Gore referred to select Committee.

Resolved — That the petition of divers Freeholders, residing in the District of Gore, presented to the House on the sixteenth Instant, be referred to a select Committee, of five Members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, by Bill or otherwise, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Pommittee (sic) formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Durand, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Price, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Thorburn, do compose the said Committee.

Bill for establishing Anatomical schools read.

Ordered — That Mr. Simpson have leave to bring in a Bill for the establishment of Anatomical Schools, and for the encouragement of Anatomical Science.

(72)

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read, for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on the first day of July, next.

Petition of George Rykert, and others, referred to select Committee.

Resolved — That the petition of George Rykert, and others, Inhabitants of the District of Niagara; presented to the House on the sixteenth instant, be referred to a committee of five members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Merritt, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Thorburn, and the Hon. Mr. Moffatt, do compose the said committee.

Motion for Clerk to subscribe for Mirror of Parliament lost.

Mr. Prince, moved, seconded by Mr. Hincks — That the Clerk be directed to subscribe for five hundred copies of the Mirror of Parliament for one month, for the use of the members of this House.<sup>6</sup>

The plan was to report in short hand and give the debates in full — an undertaking, which on account of the expense could not remunerate the projectors without the patronage of the house. Col. Prince thought that it was but reasonable, that their constituents, should know something of their proceedings, — that the Mirror appeared to be well conducted — that it was the impression of the sayings of that house, unmixed with editorial comments, — and that he should move therefore, that the clerk of the house be ordered to subscribe for 500 copies of it for one month.<sup>7</sup>

Sir A.N. MacNab thought that it was taking the house by surprise....<sup>8</sup> Sir Allan MacNab said he concurred in what had fallen from the hon. and learned member for Essex, that it was very desirable that their constituents should know what was going on in that house. But he could see no particular reason why their patronage should be confined to the Mirror of Parliament. He thought it would be better to refer the matter to a committee, which should inquire and inform the house as to the best mode of giving publicity to the debates and proceedings of that house.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Hincks supported the motion, and spoke well of the numbers that had been already published.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Morin said he thought there was another thing to be considered. A large portion of the members of that house and of their constituency would not be in the least degree benefitted (sic) by the publication of the reports, unless it were also done in the French language. He had no objection to the encouragement of reporting, but means should be taken to publish the reports in both languages.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Hincks said that with reference to confining their patronage to the Mirror of Parliament, he thought there were many reasons why that paper should be preferred. In the first place all other papers would have the benefit of the reports given by the Mirror, which from being published more frequently would bring out the debates much earlier than any other; and another consideration was, the Mirror was a paper entirely unconnected with politics, and contained nothing but the debates and proceedings of the Legislature. He trusted the house would concur in ordering a limited number of copies.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he regretted very much that he could not concur in the motion of the hon. and learned gentleman from Essex. He felt it to be his duty to resist the motion. In this matter as in all others he was desirous of being guided by the usages of parliament and the law of the land, and there was no principle more firmly established by both Houses of Parliament in England than that of the impropriety of affording patronage to, or of sanctioning the reporting of their debates, giving thereby an official character to those reports. The learned Attorney General for the west had suggested to him a circumstance which recently occurred in England. The House of Commons were involved in serious difficulty in consequence of the publication of certain proceedings which took place in that house; and there was nothing more likely than that the motion of the hon. and learned gentleman from Essex would have the tendency to bring that house into similar difficulty. He (Mr. Aylwin) would feel exceedingly grieved that the Speaker of that house should be prosecuted in an action at law for any thing which was said in that house, for there were many things said which ought not to be published. He was far from wishing that the most complete publicity should not be given to the debates and proceedings of the house; as a matter of course, it was very much to be desired that it should be done; but there was no doubt that it would take place in the end, without the interference or assistance of the House itself, further than by providing accommodations for the publishers of papers to attend the house and take reports of the debates. Although he opposed the motion of the hon. and learned gentleman, it was not from any fear or dread which he entertained of the fourth estate, as the reporters had been styled — (a laugh) If they were a fourth estate in the affairs of legislation, he thought before the principle was established of giving to these reports the sanction of the house, it would be well to examine as to what was the practice in the British Parliament.<sup>13</sup>

Colonel Prince said, that for the existence of the fourth estate, if there were such an estate, the house would be indebted to he hon. and learned gentleman himself ; for although he would not give them any pecuniary assistance, yet he would provide accommodations for enabling them to attend the house and procure their reports. As to the house rendering itself liable for any thing reported as having been said in that house, he thought it was, to use a vulgar phrase — all nonsense. He (Col. Prince) knew of no rule of law by which the Speaker of that house, as the hon. and learned gentleman supposed, could be held answerable for any thing which was said within it. The hon. and learned gentleman agrees with me, that it is desirable that our constituents should know what is said here : all must agree in that ; no one can deny it for this reason, and because the Mirror of Parliament confines itself to reports of the debates and proceedings in the house, I think it but reasonable that the work should be encouraged.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Johnston suggested that if they really were desirous of supporting the paper, there was no occasion to compromise the house ; let each member take six copies, — that would decide the business at once.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Cameron said he was somewhat surprised to hear the hon. and learned member for Portneuf argue in the way he had done, upon questions which have been already decided in this house, and not upon the question then before them. For his own part, he was uniformly opposed to paying reporters ; he thought it would be better that each member should subscribe for a certain number of copies, as many or as few as he pleased, and pay for the same from his own private funds.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Neilson... observed that as to giving the debates in full, he was very much afraid that such details were not altogether calculated to raise the wisdom of that house in the opinions of the people — There was a great deal said in it that would be much better forgotten as soon as possible. The principle thing for the country to know, was what they were doing, and not what they were saying.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he hoped the matter would be referred to a select committee.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Cartwright said that he was opposed to paying reporters ; but he believed there was a great distinction between paying reporters, (and thereby giving to their reports the sanction of the house,) and taking a certain number of newspapers ; for the correctness of the debates in such case, the reporter would be himself responsible.<sup>19</sup>

Captain Steele rose and said that to him the question of facilitating the publication of the debates was of some consequence, representing as he did the backwoodsmen of the country, and he would be glad to see those hon. members of the frontier towns, to whom and to whose constituents it was of less consequence, give way to some motion which should enable those less favored than those hon. gentlemen to have the benefit of reading the proceedings and debates which occurred in that house.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Johnston was desirous that the question might be postponed that they might ascertain the cost of these newspapers. He had no idea of lavishing the money of their constituents ; still, a work of this kind ought to be supported.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Viger observed that it would be an extremely dangerous precedent.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Neilson said he had read some of the debates as published in the Mirror of Parliament, and he noticed that they had been very fairly reported. The paper he thought should receive encouragement, but the better mode of ascertaining and deciding upon the question would be by referring the matter to a select committee.<sup>23</sup>

(72)

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

Subject of subscribing for News Papers referred to sel. Com.

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Mr. Durand — That the subject of the subscription of the House to the public Newspapers of the Province, be referred to a Committee of five Members, to report thereon, with all convenient speed ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Sir Allan MacNab rose and said he hoped the motion would prevail. The conveniences for admitting the public to be present at the bar of the house were very limited, and he for one was very desirous that the fullest information should be conveyed to the country of the proceedings of that house. He thought it very desirable that the motion should be entertained.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Small, took part in the discussion....<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Draper ... laid hold of the opportunity of newspapers, being before the house, to reflect in very strong terms upon an article, which he had read in one, designating it a foul and slanderous libel. The hon. gentleman alluded to the late trial for murder which took place at Toronto; connected with which, he observed, that the judge, jury, sheriff cum multis aliis had been blackened with the most envenomed slander. Most particularly would he stand up in defence of the honourable and unimpeachable character of the individual who filled the judicial chair on that awful occasion; who was as far exalted above the aspersions of such a wretch — as the author of it was debased beneath his notice.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Hincks here rose, considering it a personal attack upon himself. The cries of question, and the confusion that here ensued, would have been very gratifying to Yankee taste. Mr. Hincks was totally unconscious how such an article had crept into the Examiner. It was merely by chance, quite casually, that it had met his eye. The hon. gentleman denied that he was in the habit of indulging in a vice so loathsome as detraction; and repudiated the idea of his being capable of wounding even the most delicate (sic) sensibility.... But, however, as to the libel, he would require proofs first before he acknowledged the force of such a stigma.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Hamilton here moved an adjournment.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Draper moved order — order.<sup>29</sup>

(72)

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued and it was carried in the affirmative.

Resolved — Accordingly.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Simpson, Mr. Aylwin, Mr. Parent, Mr. Prince, and Mr. Hincks, do compose the said committee.

Petition of Alpheus Todd, read.

Sir Allan MacNab, read in his place a petition of Alpheus Todd, of the City of Toronto, Deputy Librarian, to the late Provincial Assembly of Upper Canada.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Draper, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, for the Province of Canada, rose in his place and said — That he had been commanded by His Excellency, the Governor General, to acquaint the House that His Excellency will concur in such measures for the appropriating moneys to their contingent expenses, as the House may, during the present Session, deem necessary.

Petition of Alpheus Todd.

And then the said Petition was received, and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner, in his capacity of Deputy Librarian to the late Legislature of Upper Canada, having had continual evidence of the necessity which existed for the completion of a work on the practice and privilege of Parliament, to avoid the continual application to the Journals of the Imperial Parliament and other Parliamentary authorities, otherwise indispensable, determined, in the Spring of 1839, to attempt, himself, the compilation of a work calculated to effect the desired object, — and having, from his connexion with the Parliamentary Library, ample resources within his reach, he devoted the whole of his time to the subject, and was enabled, by the next Session, to get his work in such a state of forwardness as to bring it under the notice of the House of Assembly, under the name of the "Practice and Privilege of the two Houses of Parliament" — it having previously received the full approbation of the Speaker.

That the work of petitioner was referred to a select committee, upon whose recommendation an order was passed to print 500 copies of the same; it having, upon examination, given them entire satisfaction, but the amount of remuneration to him was left for future consideration, a small sum only being awarded him to superintend the printing thereof.

That petitioner stated privately, at the time, to the Speaker and one of the members of the Committee, that the lowest sum he could name as remuneration for the work in question was £200, which would indeed barely compensate him for the time expended in its compilation, setting aside the labour, experience, and research which it required; petitioner, therefore, refers the matter to the consideration of the House, praying them to make such provision for his remuneration as they may think fit.

Ordered—That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Mr. Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Sherwood, that the House do now adjourn.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued and it passed in the negative.

Alien's Estate Bill
read.

Ordered—That Mr. Prince have leave to bring in a Bill to enable Aliens to hold real Estate in this Province.

He accordingly presented the said Bill in the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered—That the said Bill be read a second time this day week.

Order of the day for ballotting Committee to nominate standing Committees
postponed.

The Order of the day, for the House to proceed to the Ballot of Members, for a Committee to nominate the Standing Committees of this House being read,

Mr. Draper addressed the house with the view of the introduction of such a measure being allowed to ministers. In connection with the subject, the hon. and learned Att'y General briefly reviewed British practice with respect to such committees. In the House of Commons he said there were only 7 sessional committees: — 1. On expiring laws. 3 & 4. Committees of supply — ways and means. 5. On private bills. 6. Standing orders. 7. Public petitions. Of other committees that he would not include within the seven — were committee on religion, now obsolete — committee on grievances — committee of justice, similar to Sir R. Peel's version of the criminal code; and a committee on trade. (sic) sometimes moved by the ministers, sometimes by the house. Mr. Draper concluded by suggesting, whether it would not be better to refer the matter to a committee to report thereon.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Neilson did not think that there was the slightest cause for alarm as to the working the committees — they would only facilitate the business of the house.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Morin was of the same opinion.<sup>33</sup>

Both Mr. Baldwin and Moffatt knowing the responsibility that ministers had taken upon themselves, expressed a desire that they might have fair play in their endeavours to carry out the principle.<sup>34</sup>

(73)

Heir and Devisee
bill read second time.

Ordered—That the said Order of the day be postponed until to-morrow, and that it be the first Order of the day.

An engrossed Bill, from the Legislative Council, entitled, "An Act to alter for a limited period the place of sitting of the Heir and Devisee Commission of the late Province of Upper Canada, and for other purposes therein mentioned," was, according to order, read a second time.

On motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Viger, Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House, to-morrow.

On motion of Mr. Boswell, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,
The House adjourned.

Appendix, 24 June 1841.

((Petitions Presented.))

Mr. Small presented a petition praying that His Excellency the Governor General would take such steps as were necessary for the suppression of Orange Lodges.<sup>35</sup>

A petition was presented by Mr. Merritt for reducing the fines imposed by the militia laws of Upper Canada.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Durand brought up a petition from certain individuals forming a joint stock company to make a macadamized road from Dundas up the mountain. Some demur was made to it, but the hon. member supported the prayer, as of essential public utility. A committee was then appointed.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Baldwin presented a petition from Mathew Rorke and others. (The purport of this petition we did not understand.)<sup>38</sup>

((Notice for Committee on Election Laws of Lower Canada.))

Mr. Neilson gave notice, that on Friday next he would move for a committee of the whole House on the Election Laws of Lower Canada.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Thorburn would suggest the appointment of a select committee to inform the House what were the laws of Lower Canada. It would prevent much misapprehension.<sup>40</sup>

LORD SYDENHAM

Friday, 25 June 1841.

Petition from divers Inhabitants of Saint Eustache praying relief from the burning of their Church.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Parish of St. Eustache, was presented to the House by Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That during the rebellion of 1837, Her Majesty's troops considered it necessary to destroy, by fire, among other edifices, the Parish Church and Convent of St. Eustache; that the band of unlawfully armed men who took possession of the village and brought on this catastrophe were, with very few exceptions, all from the adjacent Parishes — petitioners therefore consider it very hard that they should be so severely punished for the act of others, over which they had no controul. That an estimate of the value of the edifices destroyed was laid before the Commissioners appointed to investigate such claims, and the Government Appraiser subsequently examined the value of said buildings, but petitioners having obtained no relief, conclude the Report of the Commissioners to have been unfavorable.

That in consequence of the failure of the wheat crops for some years past, which has tended to impoverish the inhabitants, petitioners find themselves unable, without Legislative aid, to rebuild the Temple in which they were in the habit of worshipping their God, and the Convent destined for the education of their children; they therefore pray the House to take their petition into its favorable consideration.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition divers inhabitants of Lower Canada, complaining of ordinances passed by special council.

A Petition of divers inhabitants of the late Province of Lower Canada, was presented to the House by Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read, setting forth: (See Petition of Inhabitants of Port Neuf, Page 55.)

Report on sites of Light houses to be erected on St. Paul's and Scattarie Islands, presented.

Mr. Morin presented to the House the Report of the Commissioner appointed to determine upon the sites of the Light Houses to be erected on St. Pauls and Scattarie Islands, and to apportion the money necessary for their future maintenance.

For the said Report, see Appendix (A.)

Bank statements to be laid before the House.

On motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by Mr. Buchanan,

Ordered — That the officers connected with the several chartered Banks of the Province be respectively directed to lay before this House the statement of the affairs of the said Banks as required by the Acts of Incorporation.

First report of printing committee
presented.

Mr. Morris, from the Standing Committee appointed to superintend the Printing of the House, during the Session, presented to the House the first Report of the said Committee; which was again read at the Clerk's table, as followeth: —

"Your Committee beg leave to recommend to your Honourable House to adopt the Journals of the last Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, as model for the printing of the Journals of the Legislative Assembly of this Province."<sup>1</sup>

Resolved — That this House doth concur with the Committee in the said Report.

Petition of the Montreal Ladies Benevolent Institution, praying to be incorporated.

A Petition of the Members of the "Montreal Ladies' Benevolent Institution" was presented to the House by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, and the same was received and read, setting forth : — That said Institution was originally established in the year 1832, at the City of Montreal, for the relief and support of the widows and orphans of sufferers from the Cholera which had raged in that City, and was afterwards extended to embrace all destitute and friendless widows and orphans.

That the Institution has been supported by voluntary contributions, assisted by the liberality of the Legislature, and has lately extended its sphere of usefulness by giving moral and religious instruction to dependents upon the charity.

That the advantages derived from the Institution would be greatly increased and confirmed by the incorporation of its members, with power to hold real property, to a limited amount.

Wherefore petitioners pray that a law may be passed to incorporate said society upon such terms and conditions as the House may be pleased to direct.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of divers
inhabitants of the Seignory of Faucault, praying for relief from the destruction of their property by Rebels, Refugees, and American Bandits.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Seignory of Foucault, was presented to the House by Mr. De Salaberry, and the same was received and read, setting forth : — That on the night of 30th December, 1838, (while some of petitioners were absent from home on military duty) a large body of rebels, refugees, and American bandits, under command of Jas. W. Grogan, a refugee, entered the Province from Vermont, at Beach Ridge, and driving several families from their beds, on that inclement night, destroyed by fire the dwellings of some petitioners, with their contents of furniture, clothing, and Provisions, together with their barns, stables, farm-sheds, and out buildings, and their contents, of grain, hay, cattle, &c.

That a few days afterwards the amount of losses was appraised on the spot, under oath, by Messrs. Leclerc and Delisle, of the Montreal Police, and the case was laid before the Commission of Indemnity, which however was dissolved for want of funds, without having reported on the claims of petitioners.

That petitioners, mostly having large families, are greatly impoverished by these losses, and therefore pray the House, with the concurrence of the others Branches of the Legislature, to grant them such relief as loyal British subjects who have suffered for their Country have ever expected and found at the hands of a Government every where honored for its justice and liberality.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of
A. Vosburg and others praying same as last petition.

A petition of Abraham Vosburgh, Peter Vosburgh, and Ann Vosburgh, of Caldwell manor, in the District of Montreal, was presented to the House by Mr. De Salaberry, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That on the morning of 3rd February, 1841, while yet dark, their house was surrounded and violently entered by a party of rebels and brigands from the United States, who, after dangerously wounding, with sabres and bayonets, the two first named petitioners, pillaged and set fire to the house, and burned the barns and sheds with their contents and a valuable stock of horses and farm cattle. That a full detail of the outrage was laid before the Commission of Indemnity from whom petitioners received repeated assurances of remuneration, which, however, from want of funds, was never made.

That the amount of losses sustained by petitioners as appraised and duly attested (exclusive of their long confinement and expense of medical attendance) was, £368 6s. 2d. ; viz. Abraham Vosburgh, £299 13s. 2d. ; Peter Vosburgh, £64 15s. 0d. ; and Ann Vosburgh, £3 18s. 0d.

Petitions therefore pray the House, in concurrence with the other Branches of the Legislature, to grant them such indemnity as in their wisdom shall seem just.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of divers
Militiamen & others, of the County of Saguenay.

A petition of divers Militiamen and other Inhabitants of the County of Saguenay, was presented to the House by Mr. Parent, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That the population of the parishes inhabited by petitioners has increased beyond the number which the produce of the land can maintain.

That the subdivision of these lands among the heirs of the original grantees (contrary to the spirit of the law of the Country, which condemns this pernicious system) is the cause of the common distress, because petitioners cannot form settlements upon the barren mountains which bound them on every side.

That the Legislature of the late Province of Lower Canada, caused the uncultivated lands called “the King’s Posts” to be explored by Commissions with the view of affording an outlet to the superabundant population of the County, and that favorable reports of the climate and soil thereof were made to the House of Assembly.

That petitioners have for a long time past been waiting for the expiration of the lease of the territory in question to the Hudson’s Bay Company, in order to petition that the lands may be granted, upon suitable terms, to themselves.

That during the last 3 or 4 years seven or eight hundred persons have been employed by certain mercantile houses in cutting timber on these lands for exportation, without having the power of permanently settling thereon.

That if these lands were thrown open to the agricultural population they would be sufficient for the maintenance of an immense number of persons, it having been ascertained that every kind of grain will readily grow there.

Petitioners, therefore, being anxious to settle in the neighbourhood of Shiuritimish, pray that at the expiration of the lease to the H. B. Compy. in 1842, it may not be renewed, but that the land be divided into townships, and sold as other Crown Lands, and that is many of petitioners as hold scrip be allowed to take lands there to the amount of it, and those who have no scrip be allowed to purchase.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

A further petition from the inhabitants of Saguenay, praying that the County may be exempted from the Ordinances respecting winter carriages and the erection of Court Houses.

A petition of divers Inhabitants of the County of Saguenay, was presented to the House by Mr. Parent, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That the winter carriages, generally used in the said County to convey heavy loads are flat trains, which are less likely than others to form cahots.

That the communication with the upper parts of the Province in winter is very small, and principally confined to the conveyance of persons in carriages very lightly laden.

That the mountainous nature of the Country would render the use of carriages and harness different from those now used very inconvenient and even dangerous, — besides that being obliged to provide themselves with a new set of winter carriages would be a heavy burthen on the inhabitants, afflicted as they have recently been with several years of agricultural distress.

That from the isolated position of the County it must necessarily form, by itself, one of the Judicial Districts contemplated by the Ordinance passed in the fourth year of Her Majesty's Reign, relative to the administration of Justice, — and be subject to the operation of the Ordinance, passed in the same year, providing for the erection of a Court House and Gaol in each such District, — the expense of repairing and maintaining the same, and supporting the prisoners, with other incidental expenses, insuring and furnishing the buildings, and paying the salaries of a surgeon and gaoler, falling on each such District respectively.

That these expenses would be far too heavy for a County like that of Saguenay, containing a population of only 8385 souls, especially as this County is more exposed than any other to the effects of a rigorous climate, which frequently causes agricultural distress, — the mountainous nature of the Country also requiring a great amount of labor on the roads, to which may be added the increased expense of elementary schools in consequence of the distance between the dwellings and the difficulty of communication.

That the morality, for which the people of the County are remarkable, renders the above costly establishments unnecessary, and their surplus means would be much better employed in advancing Education and local improvements.

Wherefore petitioners humbly pray that the County of Saguenay may be exempted, at least for the present, from the operation of the said Ordinances, respecting winter carriages and the erection of Court Houses; and also that the House will take into consideration the subject of the "King's Posts" which formerly occupied the attention of the Assembly of Lower Canada, that a more advantageous outlet may be afforded for their superabundant population.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Further petition from the inhabitants of Saguenay praying that the parish of Les

A Petition of Michel Desgagnés, Joseph Perron, and other inhabitants of the county of Saguenay, was presented to the House by Mr. Parent, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Eboulements may be established as the polling place (sic) for the County.

the inhabitants of said county were put to great inconvenience by having to travel from one extremity of the county to the other to exercise their electoral rights, the polling place having been fixed in the Parish of St. Etienne de la Malbaie.

That the situation of the Parish of Les Eboulements is more central, and being, not like Malbaie or St. Paul's Bay, the centre of a Commercial community, but inhabited by a purely agricultural population, tranquillity would be more readily preserved, — therefore petitioners pray that it may be established as the polling place for the county.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Masters and Owners of British Ships trading to the Port of Quebec, and of Sunday Pilots, praying for the erection of a Light House on the Island of Bicquet.

A Petition of the Masters and Owners of British Ships, trading to the Port of Quebec, and of the Pilots of the River St. Lawrence, was presented to the House by Mr. Black, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That there is no spot on the St. Lawrence more appropriate (in their opinion) for the establishment of a Light House than the Island of Bicquet, as it frequently happens that vessels running up in a dark night give to that Island so wide a birth that the North Shore of Portneuf or Mille Roches brings them up. Vessels navigating the St. Lawrence being often at a loss, from the narrowness of the Channel and strength of the current, which course to steer to a place of safety, a light upon Bicquet Island would enable them to direct their course towards Green Island.

That to vessels bound downward in the Fall of the year this light would be very serviceable, enabling them, when caught by an Easterly wind to take shelter under this Island till morning.

Petitioners therefore pray that, in as much as this proposition is the result of practical experience, the House will pursue such measures in the case as in its wisdom may be deemed expedient.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Alphonse Wells, Esquire, complaining of late Election in the County of Shefford.

A Petition of Alphonse Wells, Esq., was presented to the House by Mr. Black, and the same was received, and read; setting forth: — That at the late election for the county of Shefford, petitioner and Doctor S. Sewell Foster, were the only candidates.

That during the course and progress of the said election the said S. Sewell Foster used divers illegal and unjustifiable means to obtain an apparent nominal majority, but that, in point of fact, petitioner obtained and had a considerable majority of legally qualified electors.

That in consequence of bribery, gifts, promises, and other corrupt inducements contrary to law, resorted to on the part of the said S. Sewell Foster, many persons were induced to, and did, vote for him at the said election.

That a large number of the persons who voted for the said S. Sewell Foster, at the said election, were not possessed of the requisite qualification in point of property to enable them so to vote, and in fact were wholly destitute of any real estate whatsoever in the said county.

That the said S. Sewell Foster himself is not qualified according to law, and did not before, at, during, or since the said election, hold or possess property, being unencumbered, with real estate, as required by the provisions of the Imperial Statute in such case made and provided; and that this fact being then, as it now is, notorious, the said S. Sewell Foster then was, and now is, incapable of being elected; — and petitioner prays the House to obtain a description of the property (if any) on which the said S. Sewell Foster, pretends to be qualified, relative to which petitioner alleges that he will, by the most ample and incontrovertible proof, establish that the said S. Sewell Foster was then, as he now is, incapable of being elected.

That on each of these grounds the said S. Sewell Foster could not be elected, and that the return of the Returning Officer whereby he has declared the said S. Sewell Foster duly elected, is consequently illegal and void.

Wherefore petitioner humbly prays that it may please this House to set aside and annul the said return of the said Returning Officer, as well as the return and election of the said S. Sewell Foster, and to declare that petitioner has been duly elected.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

The Honourable J. H. Dunn, Receiver General of the Province, and one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, laid before the House, by Command of His Excellency, the Governor General, a Schedule of Government Debentures, redeemed and out-standing, issued under authority of Acts of the Provincial Legislature, exhibiting the Public debt of United Canada.

For the said Schedule see Appendix (B.)

Ordered — That two hundred copies of the said schedule be printed, in the French and English Languages, for the use of the members of this House.

200 copies of Schedule of Debentures to be printed.

Sel. Committee appointed to enquire and report on Clerk's Office.

Resolved — That a Committee of seven members be appointed to enquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk and what Officers and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House; what remuneration ought to be given to the officers and persons to be employed in the said offices, and departments; and what rules and regulations it may be desirable to adopt for their Government; that the said Committee be empowered to recommend by whom the offices which they may find necessary, should respectively be filled, and be instructed in so doing to take into consideration the claims abilities and fitness of the several officers and servants of the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada and of Upper Canada, who may be willing to enter the service of this House, and to report on the whole with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Morin, Mr. Small, Mr. Taschereau, the Honourable Mr. Dunn, M. Durand, and Mr. Black, do compose the said Committee.

House will adjourn until Monday when it adjourns.

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Sir Allan MacNab, that when this House doth adjourn, it will adjourn until Monday next.

Mr. Hale opposed the motion; — for one reason, because he had been given to understand that to-morrow, (Saturday) was the last day of presenting petitions; — another reason because they could not afford to spare the time, and a third, because he did not see what hon. members wanted with a day of idleness.<sup>2</sup>

Col. Prince disposed of these objections in a few words. The hon. member said that as to its being a day of idleness, he had no doubt but to many hon. gentlemen, it would be a day of diligence and attention to those affairs both public and private, for which, he considered one day in the week free from Parliamentary attendance, as absolutely necessary. That altho' the hon. member for Sherbrooke might be at a loss how to dispose of himself, when he was not sitting in that house, he did not apprehend that this was an embarrassment that would press heavily on all hon. gentlemen. For his own part he (Col. P.) had brought such a store of occupation in his carpet bag, as precluded him, from the most distant hope of indulging in the culpability of a lounge these three months.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Small opposed the motion. He had also heard that, to-morrow (Saturday), would be the last day for receiving petitions; and as he understood that one was to be presented against his return, he was desirous on his part, of presenting a counter one.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Draper here made a suggestion, which appeared satisfactory; as removing the difficulty.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Johnston then rose, and in his own rich and humorous style, remarked, that from a paper which he held in his hand, he perceived there were twenty-seven lawyers in the house; the whole of whom like the hon. member for Essex, he had no doubt, had also their carpet bags full.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Ogden supported the motion. He would not allude to such an absurdity as idleness. From the responsibility devolving upon ministers, it was imperative, that time should be given them, to prepare their measures. How was this to be effected if every day, was to be occupied unremittingly within the walls of that house?<sup>7</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative and ordered accordingly.

Petition of P. V. Verhoeff, and others, referred to Sel. Committee.

Resolved — That the petition of P. Frederick Verhoeff, Lewis Davenport and others, presented to the House on the eighteenth instant, be referred to a Committee of five members, to examine the contents thereof, and to report thereon, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Prince, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Attorney General Ogden, Mr. Boswell, and Mr. Thorburn, do compose the said committee.

Petition of John C. Moulton referred.

Ordered — That the petition of John C. Moulton, of the Township of York, presented to the House on the Twenty-first instant, be referred to the said Committee.

List of Standing and Select Committees to be put up.

Ordered — That the Clerk of this House be required to cause to be placed in some conspicuous place within this House a list of the several Standing and Select Committees, as appointed from time to time.

Petition from Bible Society of Montreal.

(79)

A Petition of the Auxiliary Bible Society, of Montreal, was presented to the House by Mr. Holmes, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That said society was instituted in 1819, as an Auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society in London, and has, since that time, been occupied in extensively circulating the Scriptures throughout Lower Canada, chiefly among the poorer classes, at a considerable pecuniary loss, which has partly been sustained by voluntary contributions and partly by the British and Foreign Bible Society.

That the Society has been considerably aided by the remission, hitherto, of the duties on the books imported by them ; but that this aid has latterly been refused, on the ground of the inability of the Governor General to grant it, the Society being recommended, at the same time to apply to the Legislature.

Wherefore petitioners pray that the above immunity may be continued to said Society, and a law be passed to exempt from duties all Bibles and Testaments imported into the Province, as is the case in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick ; — and petitioners state further that the British and Foreign Bible Society in London has the privilege of importing all copies of the Scriptures free of duty. They also pray that the duties paid by them during the past year may be returned, as an essential service would thereby be rendered to the said Society.

Some allusion having been made to the United States, the hon. member ((Mr. Holmes)) said the petition intended to bear upon those imported from England.<sup>8</sup>

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Sir A. MacNab said, that having discharged his duty with regard to the Kent Election, — if Mr. Woods who was now in the house, wished to prosecute the matter further, — he was there to give the house, if it was regular, a full statement of all particulars.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Woods expressed his readiness to do so, but it was overruled, as being out of order.<sup>10</sup>

(79)

Order of the day for balloting a Committee to nominate Standing Committees, discharged.

The order of the day for the House to proceed to the Ballot of Members for a Committee to nominate the Standing Committees of this House, being read,

Mr Attorney General Ogden moved, seconded by Mr. Simpson, that the said order of the day be discharged.<sup>11</sup>

Upon making this motion the hon. member ((Mr. Ogden)) observed that he looked upon the appointment of standing committees as an absolute departure from the practice of what that house chose to call responsible government. (Hear.)<sup>12</sup> Committees of privileges, and contingencies, ministers did not object to, — but, if they were to carry out the principles of responsible government ; he contended that the important objects of trade and commerce, should be submitted to them —<sup>13</sup> Here Mr. Ogden enumerated the various objects for which it had been proposed that these committees should be appointed, and remarked that, with one or two exceptions, these were subjects for the especial (sic) consideration of the government, and ought to be submitted to that house by the ministers of the crown. Were it otherwise, the responsibility attached to power would be taken out of their hands, and placed in the hands of certain members to be named by the house itself. He would maintain that if they were to have the responsibility, the power must rest with them also ; and, consequently, the power of deciding upon the nature and character of those measures of public utility which it was their peculiar duty to introduce to the house, and upon those measures the house would be entitled to pronounce judgment (sic), and upon that division would the standing of the advisers of His Excellency be determined. (Hear, hear.) Hard indeed would be the case if they were to sit in that house as responsible servants of the crown, if the conducting the public business were to devolve on others than themselves. They were by no means desirous of taking from that house the privilege of amending all measures which came before them to that extent to which the ministers of the crown could coincide with them ; and whenever they go beyond that, upon those measures of public utility which it would be the duty of ministers to introduce, then would there be a collision between that house and those ministers, and then it would become their duty to make room for others who might possess the confidence of the house. (Hear, hear.) As responsibility had had been asked for according to the principles of the British constitution, the house should at least be willing to allow them the privileges enjoyed by the English ministry, of proposing those measures to which he had already referred.<sup>14</sup> If the hon. member for Lincoln, was so desirous to have British practice, he (Mr. Ogden) should like to have it shown, that the House of Commons and not the ministers conducted the affairs of the country.<sup>15</sup>

He felt satisfied that the house would accede to this proposition, and not fly in the face of the established practice in this respect. In a neighbouring country, where the government was not represented in the legislature by its officers, he was aware that the practice is different. There, however, the advisers of the Government are placed in office for the term of four years, but here the officers of government may not be in office four months. (Hear, hear.) They are liable to be removed by a breath from the majority of that house. Let us, therefore, have a fair trial. Let the new system be put in practice, and see how it will operate. (Hear, hear.) The sooner it is decided the better. As a humble servant of the majority he stood prepared to carry it out. (Hear, hear, hear.)<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he perfectly concurred in what had fallen from the hon. gentleman — that, as the officers of the Government were fully determined to act in accordance with the wishes of the house, and to become answerable to the crown and to the country, they should be permitted the privilege of originating those measures which, by the practice in England, ministers were entitled to introduce. The hon. gentlemen who occupied the treasury benches would not find him disposed to throw even a straw in their way.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Durand said from what had fallen from the hon. and learned gentleman, the Attorney General, he would suppose that it is his intention to monopolise the whole business of the house. If this was going to be the case, he was convinced that the system of responsible government would not work well.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Johnston raised a laugh, ... by asking the occupants of the treasury benches if they would risk their reputation upon those measures which they themselves introduce !<sup>19</sup> Mr. Johnson ... begged leave to ask of the hon. member of Halton, whether he thought that ministers would be rash enough, to take upon themselves the responsibility of any measures, that he had anything to do with ? (a laugh).<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Small said he certainly concurred in what had fallen from the learned Attorney General ; and he would also congratulate the country on the declaration which had been made, that responsible government is, at length, conceded to us by the Imperial Parliament, and he thought the house ought not to relieve the officers of the government from that responsibility under which they profess to be, by interfering with the management of those matters, which they claim the right of introducing to the house.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Roblin said he was perfectly aware that difficulties would arise during the session under the new system. The hon. gentlemen on the treasury benches had undertaken more than they were able to perform ; but he hoped that during the recess they would prepare those measures which were necessary against the next meeting of parliament. For his own part, there were some particular measures which he was desirous of bringing before the house ; and if those gentlemen omitted to bring them forward at a proper time, he (Mr. Roblin) would certainly not be deterred from bringing them before the house without waiting for the assistance of those hon. gentlemen. Perhaps the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Durand), might get some of his measures tripped up in this way. (A laugh).<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Morin rose and said, that had he thought that any embarrassment would be experienced by the officers of the government in consequence of the adoption of the motion for the appointment of standing committees, he (Mr. Morin) would certainly have opposed that motion, because he wished that a fair trial should be afforded to those gentlemen to carry out the new system ; but he did not think the committees would impede them in any way. He considered the existence of committees absolutely necessary to the proper transacting of the business of the house. Matters frequently arise which require the examination of papers and evidence which cannot conveniently be done in committee of the whole house. When the reports of such standing committee(s) are brought before the house, and they are found not to meet the views of those hon. gentlemen who constitute the ministry, they are at liberty to move that the sense of the house be taken upon them; and they cannot, therefore, be in any way discharged from their responsibility. He could not discover any embarrassment to be apprehended in the plan proposed of establishing standing committees.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he could not take the same view of the matter which the hon. gentleman who had preceded him had done. His own conviction was that the government would be exceedingly embarrassed by appointment of those committees. With reference to the advantages to be derived from proceeding in that way he would ask, were they not perfectly safe in following the course adopted in the Imperial Parliament in matters of this description? Admitting that these committees were formed, their duty would be merely to report upon those matters which might be referred to them for consideration, well, on the other hand, all these matters have, previous to the sitting of the legislature, been considered by Her Majesty's government, and the officers of that government will be prepared to submit measures to this house upon all subjects of essential importance; then here we are met by another measure proceeding from some one of the committees. But hon. gentlemen may say the measures coming from her Majesty's government may be submitted to the committee also. The answer to this is, that those measures will have been sufficiently digested if laid before her Majesty's Council previous to their being brought into this house. Sir, this system if carried out, is not a desirable one, and if we are to embrace this course, in the manner spoken of, it will lead to serious difficulties. Sir, the course adopted by the government, as I understand it, is this; certain individuals supposed to have the confidence of the country, are called to the Council of the Governor General; they are then to show that they do possess the confidence of the country by obtaining seats in the house; they have then to show still more strongly that they continue to possess that confidence by carrying with them in their measures generally the voice of this house. Can there be any danger, therefore, in entrusting to their consideration all matters which are to come before this house? The hon. gentleman then proceeded to point out the course pursued in the Imperial Parliament, and continued to observe that it would be interfering with that responsibility which they were desirous of placing upon the ministers of the Crown, because those hon. gentlemen would be able to avail themselves of the labours of the committees, and to throw upon them the chief burthen of responsibility.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Baldwin then rose and said that he certainly was much gratified at hearing the remarks which had fallen from the learned Attorney General (Ogden;) but he did not think that the gentlemen upon the treasury benches had yet fully explained the intentions of the government with regard to the precise policy which they intended to pursue. He (Mr. Baldwin) was averse to offering any embarrassment to those hon. gentlemen, but he could not understand how the appointment of these committees could interfere with them in the smallest degree.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Draper objected to the original motion, upon the same grounds as already had been stated by the hon. and learned gentleman on a previous discussion. He again remarked, that the business of the house would be pre-engrossed by the standing committees, without waiting until himself and his colleagues, had been able to prepare for it.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Viger opposed the government.<sup>27</sup> ((He)) said it appeared to him that although they had treasury benches it was doubtful whether they had a treasury at all. (Hear, hear.) As to the appointment of the committees, it would not have the effect of taking from the occupants of those treasury benches (without a treasury) the power of bringing forward any measure which might be deemed desirable to be introduced by the officers of the government. As regards embarrassment he thought that house would find itself embarrassed when petitions were presented upon various subjects which might require particular investigation and there was no committee in existence to whom those petitions might be referred. Besides those hon. gentlemen tell us that their time is taken up with public business already, why then do they wish to burthen themselves with the introduction of all bills which it might be necessary to be taken into consideration? Who had ever heard before that hon. members of that house had not the right of introducing such measures as they considered necessary for the benefit of the public. The comparison which was to be drawn between the working of the British Constitution, and of the principles of government acted upon in this colony, did not seem to him well founded. In England they have a constitutional government which is well defined and perfectly applicable to the state of that extensive empire. They have municipal government which is the school of self government; the whole machinery of government there is like a clock which requires repairs and regulating occasionally, but never ceases to move altogether. In this new country, on the contrary, the wants are innumerable ; new cases continually arise for adjustment, and a great deal of mechanical art is still necessary to produce perfect harmony in the heterogeneous materials of which the machinery is composed. (Hear, hear.)<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he regretted exceedingly that he was obliged to differ from several hon. gentlemen on this side of the house, but he felt it to be his duty to vote for the motion of the learned Attorney General. If he had entertained any doubts upon the subject those doubts would have been removed by the speech of the hon. member for Nicolet. He (Mr. Hincks) did not desire that the responsibility should be removed from those hon. gentlemen who represent the government, and he looked upon standing committees as a standing screen for the government.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Moffatt contended, that the house having already adopted the principle of the motion, if it was pressed the time had now gone by to oppose it. But it was not his desire to avail himself of this advantage. He could not see thro' this system of responsible government. To him, it was shrouded in mystery and darkness ; — and if his words, were deserving of the remembrance of that house, he seriously apprehended, that it was a system, that must perish in confusion, and compel the government by its failure, to retrace its steps. With a firm opinion, that it would simplify the business of the house, he had brought forward his motion ; and altho' it had been argued, that it would tend to embarrass (sic) the affairs of the country, with all due deference to those opinions, his own was still unchanged.<sup>30</sup>

With reference to the standing Committees, it had been the practice in Lower Canada, and if there could be any improvement on the practice of England, we ought not to oppose it, even though it should be the practice of the United States. We ought to accept of any thing that would be an advantage. He could not believe that it was advisable to refer three of four (sic) hundred petitions to as many Select Committees.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said if he had imagined that the proposition of the hon. gentleman from Montreal, would tend in any degree to interfere with the proceedings of the Officers of the Crown, in carrying on their share of the business of the Session, he would certainly have been opposed to its adoption, but he thought it was rather calculated to facilitate than impede the business. As to the objects which they had in view no man could convince him that those gentlemen, who occupy the treasury benches, believe in Responsible Government. He could plainly discover in the countenances of those gentlemen, that they do not believe in it ; no man in the House had less confidence in the working of the new system of Responsible Government than that hon. gentleman. (Hear, hear.) He had no inclination to accede to the demands of those hon. gentlemen, unless it was likely to produce some good result, and that he feared could scarcely be expected in this instance. He did not think the business of the House should be directed altogether by those hon. gentlemen, while they were disinclined to carry out the principle of responsibility. He could more easily anticipate that after a little they should be told that those gentlemen were so burthened with business that they could not accomplish it all ; in fact, they had already heard that there was a necessity for one day's adjournment in the week — that there must be a holiday for the house, which would be no holiday for Ministers — in order to enable them to prepare Bills to be submitted to the house, he (Mr. Aylwin) was desirous of assisting them, if they were disposed to do their duty honestly, and to carry out the system of Responsible Government. The hon. and learned gentlemen (sic) from Three Rivers has stated that as soon as he felt satisfied he did not possess the confidence of the Country he would retire. That hon. gentleman must know well that he does not possess the confidence of the Country where he resides. If he even (sic) possessed their confidence, he has forfeited that confidence. (No, no.) If, therefore, that hon. gentleman and his colleagues act upon the principles of responsibility, as he has declared they would do, he (Mr. Aylwin) was perfectly convinced that they will not continue long to occupy the treasury benches, (hear, hear,) for so far from possessing the confidence of the constituency of Lower Canada, they do not in fact represent their feelings. — The people of Lower Canada will never forget the proceedings of the Special Council, and of certain courts martial. (order, order, question.)<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Sol. Gen. Day then rose and said that in the discussion of this question, a good deal of irrelevant matter had been introduced. He would beg leave in the first instance to direct his attention to the apprehensions which had been expressed by some hon. members in that house, that the members of the government are desirous of monopolizing the whole business of the House. Nothing could be more unfounded than such a supposition. There was certainly no intention on their part to monopolize more than was absolutely necessary to the proper discharge of their duty. The system hereafter to be pursued in the government of the Country imposed upon them, the duty of originating all important measures of public utility. And he would ask hon. members in what way they desire to obtain the confidence of the house if those measures were to be taken out of their hands and brought before that house in shape and detail essentially different from that in which the government desires to bring them forward. But he would not rest his argument upon this doctrine, which might perhaps be considered a narrow view of the subject, but he would go further and say that the appointment of standing Committees is unconstitutional. (Hear, hear.) The house had no right to delegate the powers with which they were entrusted by their constituents of deliberating upon any subject, to any particular members of their body, for the entire space of time for which they were themselves empowered to act as representatives of the people. To say that information upon certain subjects is only to be acquired in a particular manner — by particular persons appointed by the house before the questions arise upon which that enquiry is needed, — is a practice which is not borne out by Parliamentary usage. He would refer hon. gentlemen to the practice of the House of Commons. (Here Mr. Day read from a Parliamentary work which he held and also from the journals of the House of Commons.) He would admit that Sessional Committees are sometimes appointed, but it was impossible for hon. gentlemen to show that standing Committees which last for the whole Parliament is Constitutional.

He had also another objection to the appointment of Committees in the way proposed, and he would state it in plain terms, he would take for example the case, a Committee on trade, or on internal improvements, and he would suppose the members of those Committees to be wisely chosen from those most conversant with the subject — from those whose friends are more closely applied to the subject to be committed to them. A question for a particular public improvement comes up from one part of the Province and another application for a similar purpose from another. Then the members of that Committee come together, they will involve the Country in more projects for improvements, than it will be possible for them to accomplish, because each of the hon. gentlemen would naturally favor the projects of others in order to secure the adoption of his own, (hear, hear,) this is the natural result. — An imputation had been thrown upon the constituency of some of his hon. friends, as well as his own, by the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf. He (Mr. Day) was not prepared, nor was he willing to enter into personal altercation with that hon. member, which the notice of the remarks of that hon. gentleman were calculated to produce. He (Mr. Day) stood upon the floor of that house as the Representative of as respectable a constituency as any in the Province, and when that gentleman (Mr. Aylwin) adopted, that the people of this Province did not repose confidence in him (Mr. Day,) it was an assertion which was not justified, and it was one which he believed the house itself would condemn, (sic) Although, a few years ago, he (Mr. Day) had performed a painful duty, in which that hon. gentleman had felt himself aggrieved — a duty performed not for remuneration, but, because it was his duty as a servant of the Crown — yet he would put it to the country whether in the fulfillment of this duty, he had deviated from that course of honor and benevolence, which should actuate any gentleman in this situation. He did not think that hon. gentleman was justifiable in making those assertions which he had made.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Merritt said he could not attach so much importance to this question, as some hon. gentlemen seemed to do. In the Parliament of Upper Canada they had been in the practice of appointing Committees upon all subjects, whenever those subjects might arise. But now they had a different system, and they had reason to expect that satisfaction would hereafter be given, because as the hon. gentlemen who are members of His Excellency's administration, a fact that we now have Responsible Government, he thought it the most judicious method to allow those hon. gentlemen to proceed in their own way, that they might have a fair opportunity of proving to the house that they intend to fulfill what they promise.<sup>34</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he had no desire to throw the least impediment in the way of the officers of the Government, but he could not for one moment consent to remain in his seat, and allow those gentlemen to have the appointing of the select Committees upon all matters which might come before that House. Were hon. members of that House to be told that they had no right to appoint a Committee? (No, no.) He could not for one moment admit the propriety of allowing those gentlemen to have all the management, of all the business of that house. The first Committee to be named, is a Committee of privilege; is that Committee to be appointed by the administration? (Hear, hear.) He (Sir Allan) would give to the members of the administration every assistance in his power, when he believed they were in the right, but when they were wrong, he would give them all the opposition which he thought they deserved. Another Committee to be appointed was a Committee on grievances, or complaints against the administration.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Boswell said the hon. and learned member was altogether out of order in making the remarks he had done, — he entirely misconceived the nature of the question.<sup>36</sup>

Sir Allan ((MacNab)) continued, — he knew as well as the hon. member himself, whether he was in order or not, — when he wanted information, he knew where to apply for it — he certainly would not apply to that hon. gentleman. With regard to appointing standing Committees, although he did not think it was a good plan, yet at the same time he did not approve of leaving the appointment of Committees to the administration. With regard to the question of Responsible Government, — as he (Sir Allan) understood it — he did not believe that the appointment of Committees by that House, would at all interfere with its operation. He believed that the head of the Government was entirely in favor of carrying out the principle of Responsible Government to its fullest extent, — this point seemed evident from the nature of the appointments made by the Governor General, — why was the late Sol. General called to the Executive Council? — in fact all the recent appointments had been of persons who were known to be strenuous advocates for Responsible Government. A very recent instance was that of the appointment of the hon. member for Middlesex, (Mr. Parke) to the office of Surveyor General; would the hon. gentlemen who were members of the administration say that this appointment was not made with their advice and consent? (hear.) This being the case, he for one was perfectly satisfied, without further questioning the intentions of those hon. gentlemen. (Hear, hear.)<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Price said he had been exceedingly gratified at hearing the remarks which fell from the hon. and learned Atty. General for Lower Canada. He (Mr. Price) was now satisfied that they were going to have the practical working of the new system. Some hon. gentlemen seemed exceedingly anxious to originate Bills; he (Mr. Price) was one who would be perfectly satisfied that the members of the administration should originate all measures, if they chose to burthen themselves with the labour, but he did not believe that they had any such desire. In the House of Commons in England, Lord Stanley's Registration Bill was heartily concurred in by Ministers, — they went hand in hand with that measure, although introduced by one who was not a member of the Government. The gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches would find him ready and willing to afford them his assistance on all occasions, upon which they act consistently with the course which they had declared their intention of pursuing, for he considered it would be unjust and unfair towards those gentlemen, if they were to be held responsible for their acts, whilst the House claimed the privilege of controlling (sic) them. (No, no.) He hoped it would not be imputed to him that he was desirous of offering a factious opposition, (hear, hear.)<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Price then addressed the chair, censuring the pettish puerility of some hon. members, who were continually vaunting of the superior foundation of their own return to Parliament over that of other hon. gentlemen. He was determined to support ministers as long as he could approve of their measures; and was happy to hear, that a system of local self government was about to be established, which would relieve them greatly.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Atty. General Ogden said he felt not a little flattered by the confiding tone of the hon. gentleman's speech, it was certainly very cheering after the vituperative language of the hon. gentleman who represents the Returning Officer, for the County of Port Neuf. Now that that gentleman had come to the school of Reform, it would be well if he were disposed to cast his eyes about occasionally for precedents. That hon. gentleman is mistaken if he supposes that we on the treasury benches are disposed to control the whole business of this house. Any hon. member can of course introduce such measures as he thinks proper, and I shall be happy to find them forwarding as much of the business of the House as possible. But I say that all matters relating to the trade of the Country, — all matters contained in the Speech from the Throne, — should be matured by us when we meet in the closet. All that we ask and require is, that we shall be permitted to conduct the business of the Country, for which you look to us to be Responsible.<sup>40</sup>

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Christie took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Christie reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and had directed him to report the same, without any amendment.

Ordered—That the said Bill be now read, for the third time.

The said Bill was accordingly read, for the third time.

Resolved—That the said Bill do pass.

Heir and Devisee
Commission Bill passed.

Ordered—That Mr. Attorney General Draper do carry back the said Bill to the Legislative Council, and acquaint their honours that this House have passed the same without any amendment.

Then on motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day,

The House adjourned.

Appendix, 25 June 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Bills.))

Col. Prince moved, for leave to bring in a bill, to amend an Act ; providing against the killing of deer and certain of the feathered tribe at a particular season of the year. It was particularly on account of Woodcock shooting that the gallant Colonel wished to introduce this bill. Where amusements were so limited, the sports of the gun afforded not a little gratification to many, living on the land. Now as regards the killing of Woodcocks the day originally fixed for the commencement of the sport was the 1st August, but the wisdom that followed after, extended the restriction to the 1st of September, when it was found that there were no birds remaining. It was to counteract this ingenious mode of legislation that the hon. member begged leave to introduce the bill.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Holmes brought under the notice of the house, the defective state of the exchange in the United Province. Unless ministers were prepared with a measure upon the subject, he should in the beginning of the week move for a committee thereon, and to assimilate the currency.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Solicitor General Day gave notice, that on Monday he would move to bring in a bill to establish a Board of Works, — and on Thursday, a bill for the introduction of local and municipal government into the Province.<sup>43</sup>

Ordered — That when this House doth adjourn, it will adjourn until Wednesday next, at ten o'clock, A. M.

Petition of Louis Michel Viger, Esq., complaining of the late Election for the county of Chambly.

A Petition of Louis Michel Viger, Esquire, of the City of Montreal, was presented to the House by Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That on Monday, the twenty-second day of the month of March last, at St. John's in the county of Chambly, an election took place for the purpose of electing a member to represent the said county in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

That of the candidates, one was John Yule, of the parish of Chambly, Esquire, and Petitioner was the other, and Augustus Delisle, of the parish of Boucherville, discharged the duties of Returning Officer.

That the said election was opened at St. John's, a place which had been chosen as that of the Poll, but which, far from being a central one, is situated at one of the extremities of the county, the selection of which could be attended with no other result but that of subjecting the majority of the electors of the county to inconveniences the most grave.

That, on the first day of the election, when the Returning Officer requested the electors, then present, to name the person whom they were willing to appoint as a member to serve in the said Assembly, the great majority of the said electors, on the show of hands, declared themselves in favor of the undersigned; upon which a poll was asked for by the partisans of the said John Yule, and was granted by the Returning Officer, who began to take in and register the votes of the electors.

That, on the very first day, Petitioner had already a majority of fifty-five votes over his antagonist, when the Returning Officer was compelled to adjourn the poll, in consequence of the violence and the outrages committed by the said John Yule's partisans, who, being in a state of inebriation, commenced assailing the partisans of Petitioner, at a moment when these were engaged in peaceably giving their suffrages to Petitioner.

That the said John Yule's partisans were armed with clubs and other offensive weapons, of which they made use to illtreat Petitioner's partisans, and committed acts so outrageous that the Returning Officer was obliged to stop the poll, and found that it was necessary to adopt efficient measures, such as the having at his disposal a sufficient force to enable him to continue the said election, and protect the lives of Her Majesty's subjects, jeopardized in consequence of the acts of violence and outrages committed by the partisans of the said John Yule; that the said Returning Officer even repeatedly promised to the electors, that he would, on the day following, have a sufficient force at his disposal to maintain order.

That, on the next day, the said Returning Officer, not having procured or not being able to procure the support and assistance of which he himself had acknowledge the necessity to protect the electors of Petitioner, the said John Yule's partisans, in the view of preventing all and every the electors favorable to Petitioner, from having any access to the Poll, and their (sic) inscribe there (sic) votes, did obstruct or cause to be obstructed, by means of bullies, armed with clubs and other offensive weapons, all the public roads leading from the different parts of the county of Chambly, to the place of the poll, and thus forcibly, and with violence, did keep Petitioner's partisans away from the place of the poll.

That on the twenty-third day of March, last, (being the second day of the election) owing to the illegal and violent practices, on the part of the said John Yule's partisans, they became absolute masters of the poll, and they alone were enabled to give in their votes, by which means a slight majority of ten votes was on that day secured to the said John Yule.

That, on this same day, it was with great difficulty that a few only of petitioner's electors could succeed in reaching the place of the poll, and then they were menaced with violence if they persisted in their wish to vote for petitioner.

That Petitioner finding himself deprived of the means of communicating with his electors, and of demanding the adjournment of the poll, as he had a right so to do, on being assisted but by three of his electors, the said John Yule of this did take advantage and cause a proclamation, for the purpose of bringing the said election to a close, so that he might be proclaimed elected, in the event of petitioner's not producing any vote during the space of a hour; a vote which it was impossible for him to produce, owing to the distance at which his electors were forcibly kept away from the place of the poll, and the menaces held out to the very few, who could reach it; upon which the election was declared to be closed, and the said John Yule was illegally proclaimed elected.

Petitioner doth further aver, that previous to and pending the said Election, the said John Yule, and his partisans, did open or cause to be opened, and did support, a great number of houses of public entertainment, within the limits of the said county, and namely at St. John's aforesaid where the said poll was held; that moreover, the said John Yule, and his partisans, had recourse to divers means of corruption, to procure votes for him.

That Petitioner had protested against all and every return that might be made in the behalf of the said John Yule Esquire, as appears by his protest dated the twenty-fifth of March last,

For these reasons, Petitioner prays this House to take this, his petition, into their serious consideration, and declare the Election aforesaid illegal and null, as also the proclamation made by the said Returning Officer of the person, of the said John Yule, to represent the electors of the county of Chambly in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

A Petition of divers Electors of the County of Chambly was presented to the House by Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That on Monday the twenty-second day of March last, at St. John's. in the county of Chambly, an election took place for the purpose of electing a member to represent the said county in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

That Louis Michel Viger, of the City of Montreal, Esquire, was one of the candidates, and John Yule, of the parish of Chambly, Esquire, was the other; and Auguste Delisle, of the parish of Boucherville, Esquire, fulfilled the duties of Returning Officer.

That the above mentioned election was opened at St. John's; which place had been appointed for the holding of the poll, but which, far from being a central one, is situated at one of the extremities of the county, the selecting of which could be attended with no other result, but that of subjecting the majority of the electors of the county to the most serious inconveniences.

That on the first day of the election, when the said Returning Officer requested the electors, then present, to name the person whom they were willing to select as a member to serve in the said Assembly, the great majority of the said electors declared themselves, on a show of hands, in favor of the said Louis Michel Viger; upon which a poll was asked for, by the partisans of the said John Yule, and was granted by the said Returning Officer, who began to take in and register the votes of the electors.

That, on the very first day, the said Louis Michel Viger had, already, a majority of fifty-five votes above is (sic) antagonist, when the Returning Officer was compelled to adjourn the poll, in consequence of the violence and the outrages that were committed by the said John Yule's partisans, who, being in a state of intoxication, began to assail the partisans of the said Louis Michel Viger, at a time when they were engaged peaceably in given their suffrages in favor of (sic) the said Louis Michel Viger.

That the partisans of the said John Yule were armed with clubs and other offensive weapons, which they used to illtreat the partisans of the other candidate, and committed such violence that the Returning Officer was obliged to stop the poll, and acknowledged the necessity of adopting efficient measures, such as the having at his disposal a sufficient force to enable him to continue the said election, and protect the lives of Her Majesty's subjects, endangered in consequence of the acts of violence and outrages that were committed by the said John

Yule's partisans; that the said Returning Officer even repeatedly promised to the electors that on the day following he would have a sufficient force at his disposal to maintain order.

That, on the next day the said Returning Officer, not having procured, or being unable to procure, the support and assistance of which he himself had acknowledged the necessity of to protect the electors of the said Louis Michel Viger, the said John Yule's partisans, with a view to prevent all the electors in favor of the said Louis Michel Viger, from having access to the poll and there inscribe their votes, did obstruct, or cause to be obstructed, by means of bullies, armed with sticks and other offensive weapons, all the public roads that lead from the different parts of the county of Chambly to the place of the poll; and thus, forcibly and with violence, did keep away from the place of the poll the partisans of the said Louis Michel Viger.

That on the twenty-third day of March, last, being the second day of the election, in consequence of the unlawful and violent practices, on the part of the said John Yule's partisans, the latter became absolute masters of the poll, and they alone were enabled to give in their votes, by which means a slight majority of ten votes were, on that day, secured to the said John Yule.

That, on this same day, it was but with difficulty, that a few of the electors of the said Louis Michel Viger could succeed in reaching the place of the poll, and then they were menaced with violence if they persisted in their wish to vote for him.

That the said Louis Michel Viger, finding himself deprived of every means of communicating with his electors, and of demanding the adjournment of the poll, as he had a right so to do, if he could but be assisted by three of his Electors, the said John Yule of this did take advantage and cause a proclamation for the purpose of bringing the said election to a close, in order to be proclaimed elected, in the event of the said Louis Michel Viger's not producing any vote during the space of an hour; a vote which it was impossible for him to produce, owing to the disturbance at which his electors were forcibly kept away from the place of the poll, and the threats held out to the very few who could reach it, upon which the election was declared to be closed and the said John Yule was illegally proclaimed elected.

Petitioners do further aver that, even before, and during the election, the said John Yule, and his partisans, opened, or caused to be opened, and did support, a great number of houses of public entertainment, within the limits of the said county, namely at St. John's aforesaid, where the said poll was held; that moreover the said John Yule, and his partisans, had recourse to divers means of corruption to procure votes for him.

For these reasons Petitioners pray this House to take this their Petition into their serious consideration and declare null and illegal the above mentioned election, as well as the proclamation made by the said Returning Officer of the person of the said John Yule to represent the electors of the county of Chambly in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada.

And Petitioners pray this House to please to adopt such measures, as in their wisdom they may think proper, as will prevent a recurrence of similar acts of violence; and enable Petitioners to exercise their elective franchise, without being exposed to become the victims of outrages of such a nature as those which they complain of in this their present petition.

Petitioners further earnestly represent, to this House, the necessity of immediately making an enquiry with regard to the acts of violence and disgraceful scenes that have occurred at several of the elections, in the District of Montreal, to the end that this House may be enabled to adopt such measures as their wisdom shall suggest, and such as may become necessary in consequence of the said enquiry.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of P. B. Smith, praying to be naturalized.

A Petition of Benjamin Peabody Smith, of the township of Kitley, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris; and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner immigrated into this Province, six years ago, from the United States of America, and has since acquired a pretty handsome property; — That he is much pleased with the Laws, Government, and Institutions of this Province, in which he would fain end his days, and settle permanently his family of eight children; — he therefore prays for the enactment of a law to confer on him all the rights, immunities, and privileges of a natural Born subject.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from Commercial Bank of Midland District praying for increase of capital.

A petition of the President, Directors and Stockholders, of the Commercial Bank of the Midland District, was presented to the House by Mr. Morris, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That, in consequence of the increasing trade of the upper part of this Province, applications are constantly made to said institution for greater Bank accommodation than its limited capital will enable it to afford.

That the late Legislature of Upper Canada, were of opinion that the extension of the capital of the chartered Banks would best encourage the importation of capital, and accommodate the agriculturist and the Merchant.

That petitioners appeal with confidence to the public as to the honourable and correct management of affairs of said Institution, and feeling satisfied that an increase of its capital would be of increased benefit to the Province, pray for such an extension of its capital stock as would be sufficient to meet the growing wants of the colony.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from the people, called Mennonites and Tunkers, complaining of the militia laws.

A petition of the people called Mennonites and Tunkers was presented to the House by Mr. Durand, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That the militia laws of this Province, bear heavily on the said sects, burthening them, in times of profound peace, with a Tax of one pound for every individual capable of bearing arms, their conscientious scruples preventing them from complying with the provisions of the laws requiring them to learn and practise the Art of war.

That in times of actual war, they have never murmured at paying exempt money, and have rendered, at the same time, important services by raising the necessaries of life, teaming, &c. —

Petitioners therefore pray that the militia laws may be so altered as to relieve the said Mennonites and Tunkers from the pressure of the said tax, or to cause the same to be exacted in labor on the roads, and bridges, within the townships where they may reside.

Ordered — That the said petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of B. Pinguet praying for relief.

A petition of Louis B. Pinguet, of the City of Quebec, was presented to the House by Mr. Neilson, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner was for 35 years in the service of the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada, viz. from 1805 to 1835 as a writer, and from thence till the suspension of the Constitution as Clerk of Committees, at a salary of £100 per annum, on which he was wholly dependent for support.

That about four years back Petitioner became subject to a weakness of sight, which has continued increasing until he is now scarcely able to write by daylight, and quite unable to do so by candle light, — in consequence of which he is reduced to great distress, and feels himself chiefly dependent for future support on the expectations he humbly trusts he may reasonably entertain for his long and faithful services.

Wherefore Petitioner earnestly prays the House to consider his advanced age and passed services and grant him such relief as may appear just and expedient.

Ordered — That the said Petition be referred to the Committee appointed to inquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House.

Petition of Henry Sherwood, Esquire, of the City of Toronto complaining of the return of Messrs. Dunn and Buchanan.

A Petition of Henry Sherwood, Esq., of the City of Toronto, was presented to the House by Sir Allan McNab, and the same was received, and read; setting forth: — That Petitioner was a Candidate at the last election for a member to serve in this Parliament in and for the City of Toronto, in that part of the Province of Canada called Upper Canada.

That, at the said election, Petitioner was duly proposed and nominated, and had recorded on the Poll Book in his favour upwards of four hundred votes; — that at the close of the Poll the Returning Officer, Robert Stanton, Esquire, declared the Honourable John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, Esquire, who were also candidates at the said election, duly elected, as having a majority of votes; — that certain electors of the said City protested against the said Return, in writing, for the reasons set forth, to which Petitioner begs leave to refer this Honourable House.

Petitioner further begs leave to represent to this Honourable House that the return of the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan should be set aside as being illegal and void, and a new election ordered, or that Petitioner and George Munroe, Esquire, who was also a candidate at the said election, should be declared duly elected instead of the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, for the following reasons: —

1st. — That the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, or their agents or friends, did after the teste of the writ for the said election, offer and give to various persons having voices at the said election divers sums of money and other rewards, as an inducement for them to vote for the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan at the said election, and that after the said teste various Public Houses or Inns were kept open at the expense of the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, or their friends, at which meat and drink were given to persons having a right to vote at the said election, as an inducement for them to vote for the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan; — that several Inn-keepers who had declared their determination to vote for Petitioner and the said George Munroe were told by the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, or their agents, that if they would vote for the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan that they should receive a large sum of money each day of the election to keep open houses, and which sums of money were afterwards paid by the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, and that various other acts, having for their object a direct interference with the freedom of the election, were committed by the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, or their agents and friends.

Petitioner begs further to represent that intimidation and an undue influence was exercised over persons holding situations under the Government, and Clerks in the Public Departments, to compel them to vote for the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, and that during the last two days of the election upwards of thirty-five individuals holding situations under the Government, many of whom declared, up to the hour at which they voted, their opposition to the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, recorded their votes in their favor, and the majority which the said Isaac Buchanan, had over Petitioner was only twenty-five.

Petitioner therefore humbly prays that this Honourable House will take into consideration the several matters and things herein before stated; and that the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan may be declared not duly elected or returned; and that Petitioner and the said George Munroe may be declared duly elected to serve in this Parliament for the said City of Toronto, and their names substituted in the Return for the said City; — or that the election and return of the said John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan may be declared to be null and void, and that the House may make such order, and give such further relief in the premises, for securing the freedom of election in the said City, as to this Honourable House shall seem fit.

On Motion of Sir Allan MacNab seconded by Mr. Aylwin.

Ordered — That the Petition of Henry Sherwood Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of the Honourable John Henry Dunn and Isaac Buchanan, Esquire, be taken into consideration by this House, on the fifteenth day of July next, at the hour of three o'clock, P. M. and that notice, to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given by the Speaker to the Petitioner and the sitting Members, according to the provision of the second clause of an Act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, during the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty GEORGE the IV. Chap. IV.

Petition of Henry Sherwood, Esquire, to be considered on the 15th day of July next.

Mr. Draper, read the practice laid down by law, "that a day and time be fixed" to go into such petitions.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Small specified as the proper course, that fourteen days must expire after presentation before the petition can be taken into consideration.<sup>2</sup>

Petition of James Mathewson, complaining of the election of Henry Smith, Esq. for the County of Frontenac.

(86)

A Petition of James Mathewson, of the Township of Pittsburg, was presented to the House by Mr. Johnston, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : — That at the election of a Member to serve in the Legislative Assembly of this Province, for the county of Frontenac, held at the Town of Kingston, on the eighth day of March last, Petitioner and Henry Smith, Esquire, were respectively proposed as candidates to represent said County of Frontenac, and Thomas Kirkpatrick, Esquire, acted as Returning Officer, and presided at the said Election.

That the said Henry Smith, by means of bribes, treats, rewards, or favors, or promises of bribes, treats, rewards, or favors paid, given, or offered, or promised to be paid or given by himself or by others as his friends, agents, Committee, or supporters, to divers freeholders and electors of said County, and by threats and other illegal and corrupt acts induced certain of such electors to tender their votes at the said Election for him the said Henry Smith, and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick admitted the votes of such electors for the said Henry Smith.

That the said Henry Smith, by reason of such bribes, treats, favors, or promises thereof, and by the said threats and intimidation and other corrupt and illegal conduct, became, and was, and is, disqualified from sitting in this present Parliament as a Member of the Legislative Assembly, and ought not to have been returned as the Member for the said County at the late election.

That during the said election the said Thomas Kirkpatrick, conducted himself, as such Returning Officer, in an arbitrary, partial, and illegal manner, and refused to admit divers freeholders and voters to register their votes in favor of Petitioner ; and arbitrarily, illegally, unjustly, and contrary to the usage and practice at elections in this Province, and contrary to law, refused to allow Petitioner the benefit of a Counsel, Scrutineer, or Inspector, at the poll during said election ; and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick, by so refusing to allow such voters to vote as aforesaid for Petitioner, and by his illegal, partial, and over bearing conduct in not permitting Petitioner to have the benefit of his Counsel, scrutineer, or inspector, induced Petitioner to relinquish the contest when many votes remained unpolled, and the said Thomas Kirkpatrick returned the said Henry Smith as duly elected, although the said Henry Smith was and is disqualified as aforesaid from sitting in the said Legislative Assembly, and the majority on the poll in favor of the said Henry Smith was only collusive and colourable, and the said James Mathewson was and is entitled to the majority of the good and legal votes and would have been returned and duly elected for the said County but for the illegal and improper conduct aforesaid.

Petitioner therefore humbly prays this Honourable House to inquire into the merits of the said election and the conduct of the said Henry Smith, and Thomas Kirkpatrick in regard thereto, and to relieve Petitioner either by requiring the said Thomas Kirkpatrick to amend the return made by him, of the said Henry Smith, by inserting the name of Petitioner, in such return in place of said Henry Smith, disqualified as aforesaid, by reason of such bribery and other corrupt and illegal conduct as aforesaid, and by the illegal and improper conduct of the said Thomas Kirkpatrick as above mentioned, or to cause a new writ to issue for the election of a fit and proper person to represent said County in the place of said Henry Smith.

Petitioner craving permission to offer evidence in support of the allegations aforesaid before a Committee of this Honourable House to be appointed to try the merits of the said Election.

Mr. Johnston, in presenting a petition against the return of Mr. Henry Smith, regretted that he was compelled to say, if the allegations contained in it were true, that of all the cases he had ever heard of, this was one in which the returning officer richly deserved to be brought before the bar of that house, as a warning to others against pursuing a line of conduct, productive of endless labour and interruption to the business of that house. (Hear, Hear.)<sup>8</sup>

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition from second Riding York, complaining of the election of Geo. Duggan, Esq.

A Petition of divers electors of the Second Riding of the County of York, was presented to the House by Mr. Baldwin, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That at the last election holden in and for the second Riding of the county of York, George Duggan, Jun., Esq., Connell J. Baldwin, Esq., William Thompson, Esq., and Edward Thompson, Esq. were Candidates, and the election commenced on Monday, the eighth day of March, last; that on Tuesday the ninth of March, William Thompson, Esq. retired; that on Wednesday morning the tenth, Edward Thomson, Esq. retired; that on the evening of the said day the said Connell J. Baldwin, Esq. retired after protesting against the violence of the party supporting said George Duggan; that notwithstanding such protest the Returning Officer John Hector, Esq., returned the said George Duggan, Jun., Esq. as duly elected.

That in the opinion of Petitioners the following are among the grounds for this protest: —

That the said Connell J. Baldwin's supporters were from time to time during the said election forcibly driven out of the village of Streetsville where the election was held.

That immediately before the said Connell J. Baldwin retired and protested as aforesaid, between sixty and one hundred of his supporters were present at the Hustings and in the said village ready to vote for him but were prevented from so doing by the violence, threats and intimidation made use of by the supporters of the sitting member George Duggan, and that the supporters of the said George Duggan were principally reputed members of the Orange Society.

That certain Magistrates at or near the Hustings during such election were called upon to suppress a violent riot commenced by said sitting member's supporters, but that the said Magistrates declined interfering.

That with a view to maintain peace and good order it was suggested that twenty special constables should be appointed; that only seven were sworn in, five of whom were reputed to be Orangemen.

That electors who intended to vote for the said Connell J. Baldwin, and who were attending at Streetsville aforesaid were followed to their lodgings in Streetsville, and there assailed by the supporters of the said George Duggan, and that in consequence thereof they were prevented or deterred from giving their votes to the said Connell J. Baldwin, and were forcibly driven out of Streetsville, where the said election was held.

That — McIntyre, of Chinguacousy, in said Riding, an elector in favour of said Connell J. Baldwin, was on said Wednesday the last day of said Election, with several others, attacked by the said supporters of the said George Duggan in a house near the hustings and dreadfully beaten — that apprehensive that his life was in danger he determined upon returning home without voting; that when in the sleigh he was again assailed by the said party and severely beaten, making his escape with much difficulty.

That besides the outrageous violence and intimidation of said George Duggan's party, Petitioners conceive that there is another ground for protesting against the return of the said George Duggan, namely, that there are many persons whose names are entered in the poll book in favor of the sitting member who had no votes.

Petitioners further beg to state that, in their opinion, had proper and efficient means been adopted to secure the peace and protect the electors in the exercise of their right of suffrage, the said George Duggan would not have been returned to represent the said second Riding, as a very large proportion of the electors have not voted and were and are opposed to his return as their representative.

Petitioners humbly pray that this House will cause the premises to be enquired into and if proved to their satisfaction that they will cause the said Return of said George Duggan to be set aside, and that this House will order a new election and adopt such measures as will ensure the peaceable and quiet enjoyment of the elective franchise, without the peaceable electors being put in fear of life or of bodily injury.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Petition of Connell J. Baldwin, Esq., complaining of the late election for the second Riding of the County of York.

A Petition of Connell James Baldwin, Esquire, was presented to the House by Mr. Baldwin, and the same was received and read; setting forth: — That according to previous notice given an election for a Member to represent the 2nd Riding of York, in the Parliament, was held in the village of Streetsville, in the said 2nd Riding, on Monday the eighth of March last, and the two subsequent days.

That the candidates were: George Duggan, Jr., Esquire, of the City of Toronto, Connell James Baldwin, Wm. Thompson, Edward Thomson, and John Carey, Esquires, of the said Riding; that after his address on the first day Mr. Carey did not appear; that on Tuesday, the ninth March, Wm. Thompson, Esquire, retired; that on Wednesday morning, Edward Thomson, Esquire, retired; that on the evening of the same day, Petitioner retired, having first protested against the election, in consequence of violent attacks by Mr. Duggan's party, armed with bludgeons, on his supporters, by which they were prevented from recording their votes; that notwithstanding this, the Returning Officer declared Mr. Duggan duly elected, as having the greater number of votes.

That Petitioner's supporters were, from time to time, during the election, severely beaten, driven out of the Town, and prevented from recording their votes, by bands of ruffians armed with bludgeons, many of them not being freeholders of the Riding, but, in a great proportion, strangers from a different part of the country, many of them known to be orangemen, who could have no other object in coming into, and remaining in the village but to terrify and prevent Petitioner's supporters from recording their votes, thus to ensure the return of Mr. Duggan, who, in his opening address, proclaimed himself an orange-man! which he did, Petitioner believes, for no other purpose than to ensure the support of that body from the highest to the lowest, and which support was afforded him, as well by legal and illegal votes, as by intimidation of every kind, and the most lawless and outrageous aggression.

That on Tuesday morning, Mr. Duggan having hoisted a flag near his quarters, and which was never interfered with, some of Petitioner's friends in the act of hoisting a flag at his quarters, within 30 to 40 yards of the hustings, were attacked by a set of the bludgeon supporters of Mr. Duggan, the flag pulled down and trampled upon in the mud, Petitioner's friends pursued into the tavern and obliged to conceal themselves, the flag again seized, torn, and a piece of it thrown at Petitioner whilst attending to the election in the hustings, which struck Mr. Galt, the Clerk of the poll. Others, not able to escape, were beaten with clubs.

That such was the disposition of the mob in front of the hustings, mostly all composed of Mr. Duggan's friends, as Petitioner's friends left the village for their homes as soon as they succeeded in giving their votes, for fear of abuse, and many had been severely beaten for having voted for Petitioner, Mr. Duggan found it necessary to address them two or three times to be peaceable, to which they paid some attention, considering that a riot immediately at the hustings would upset the election, whilst it was supposed that aggressions and attacks, not exactly there, would not affect it.

That a respectable medical practitioner, who witnessed the tearing down of Petitioner's flag, and subsequent attack, from which he feared loss of life would accrue, applied to three different magistrates, but they declined to interfere, stating that they could do nothing with such fellows.

That besides the attacks alluded to, threats of injury, as well as apparently friendly advice, were used, not only at the hustings and in the village, but all over the Riding, by Mr. Duggan's friends, to intimidate and prevent Petitioner's supporters from voting.

That on the morning of Wednesday, the 10th of March, a band of bludgeon men opened the door of the room within from 30 to 40 yards of the hustings, where some of Petitioner's supporters were taking breakfast, and desired them, in a most threatening manner, to fill themselves well, for that it should be the last meal they should eat there.

That during the whole of this day, the denunciations and violence of those ruffians increased till 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when a band of them broke into the aforesaid room, attacked a number of Petitioner's supporters when peaceably at dinner, who had voted or intended to vote for him; smashed chairs, tables and glasses; beat and forced those persons to break and escape through the windows and to conceal themselves, and one in particular, who came to vote, whilst trying to escape in his sleigh, was ferociously beaten after he got into it, and, probably, owed his life to the swiftness of his horses, and was unable to record his vote.

That in consequence of this last attack, the owner of the house sent Petitioner word, that if he did not close the poll she must close her house against him and his party, as she was afraid it would be torn down about her.

That on this, and the above outrageous assault, being reported to the Petitioner in the Hustings, he saw there could be no hope that his supporters, the great body of whom intended, and were preparing, to come in on the three following days, could be induced to come forward, as before the election a great degree of terror existed in the Riding amongst his friends, being afraid of abuse and outrage from the orangemen, should they come forward to vote for Petitioner: nor would they have consented to do so, a vast proportion of them being respectable, quiet and religious people, averse to contention, and unwilling to risk their lives by coming in contact with a set of ruffians, who, at former elections, and at public meetings, were in the habit of attacking, assaulting and ill treating them, had they not been encouraged to hope for peace and safety by the orders addressed to Sheriffs, Magistrates, &c., by His Excellency the Governor General, about that time.

That consequently Petitioner reported the above attack, on the flight of his supporters, to the Returning Officer, and by the advice of some friends, and in their presence, protested against the election, and refused to go on with the poll.

That then, it is true, one or two Magistrates called the Petitioner to go with them, and if he had any voters in town they would bring them up. Petitioner replied, that they had been driven out of the village, and when told to send after them, answered, that it would be impossible for him to do so, and that they would not return, nor could confidence, after that attack, be restored. Petitioner consequently said he would not poll another vote, and retired.

Petitioner begs leave further to state, that, before he left the hustings, a number of sleighs, laden with voters for him, intending to vote that evening or next morning, were attacked by a party of the aforesaid bludgeon men, obliged to conceal themselves, and finally to fly from fear of being murdered, out of the village, and some were so terrified that they sent others to fetch them their sleighs and horses, and that one of this party, who, as they stopped at the tavern, proceeded towards the Hustings, and when close to it was struck and knocked down by two of these bludgeon men.

Petitioner begs leave further to represent, that the Thursday, Friday and Saturday were the days the greatest body of his supporters fixed on to come in, supposing they would then be less liable to interruption or outrage.

Petitioner also begs leave to state, that the general opinion, as well as his own, is, that Mr. Duggan had very few, if any, more votes to poll, whilst the great bulk of his was yet to come in, and that it was in consequence of this, and to force him to retire, that the above attacks were made on an organized plan, as it was supposed that if not made at the Hustings they would not upset the election.

Petitioner therefore prays, that for the above assigned reasons, and to afford the freeholders of the said Riding an opportunity of returning the person of their choice as their representative to this House, as by right and according to the constitution they should be able to do, that this House will hold, declare, and determine the said election for the said Second Riding of the County of York, and all proceedings thereon had to be null and void, and that the seat in the same is vacant and unfilled, and that in ordering a new election, should this House deem fit to order one, such steps may be taken, as to this House may seem proper, to ensure to the freeholders, of the said Riding, security whilst exercising the greatest and most valuable privilege of the subject, and for want of which security they were unable to do so at the said election.

Petition of Benjamin Ham, and David Roblin, and others, to be considered on 1st day of July next.

On motion of Mr. Hincks, seconded by Mr. Baldwin,

Ordered — That the Petition of Benjamin Ham, and of David Roblin, and others, complaining of the undue Election and return of John Solomon Cartwright, Esq., be taken into consideration, by this House, on the first day of July next, at the hour of three o'clock, P. M., and that notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given, by the Speaker, to the Petitioners and the sitting member, according to the provision of the second clause of an act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, during the fourth year of the reign of his late Majesty GEORGE the IV, Chap. IV.

Petition from divers electors of the county of St. Maurice, complaining of the

A Petition of divers Electors, of the County of St. Maurice, was presented to the House by Mr. Prince, and the same was received, and read; setting forth: — That at the last general election there were only two candidates for the said county, namely Bartholomew Conrad Augustus election of

J.E. Turcotte, Esq.

tus Gagy, Esq., a gentleman holding large estates therein, and Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Esq., notoriously without any property whatever.

That the latter being, in the terms of the Statute, "incapable of being elected" and there being consequently no real opposition, Petitioners and others comprising with a solitary exception all the men of property and education in the county, confidently, and without deeming it necessary to make any effort, anticipated the return of the candidate of their choice.

That Petitioners have been disappointed in this just expectation and have to complain of the conduct of the Returning Officer in having proclaimed, as duly elected, a person who was not only destitute of the requisite qualification, but who, when duly required by the other candidate as well as by an elector, refused to make the declaration prescribed by the twenty-eighth clause of the act in such case made and provided.

That Petitioner invoking a salutary provision of the law tending to exclude from the Legislative Assembly a class of persons without stake in the country, appeal to this House for relief and respectfully solicit their attention to the following statement of facts : —

Adverting to the absence of qualification, Petitioners respectfully allege that it has for years been, was immediately previous to, as well as at the period of the said election, notorious, that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, had no property whatever ; in this allegation Petitioners persist although they freely admit that under the deed whereof a copy and translation are annexed, the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, would appear to hold the lot therein described ; but, touching this lot, Petitioners are prepared to prove, firstly, that without any incumbrance whatever it is scarcely worth three hundred pounds currency, and secondly, that the incumbrances upon it absorb, if they do not exceed the whole value.

Aware that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, has made several different attempts to become possessed of lands or tenements for the purpose of qualifying and enabling himself to be returned a member, the extraordinary details of which may hereafter be disclosed, Petitioners, declaring that he has himself distinctly and publicly admitted, that he was not qualified, most respectfully pray this House will be pleased to take measures to elicit a description of any property in virtue of which he may pretend to be qualified — circumstances of a peculiar nature having transpired, Petitioners believe it possible that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, may rest his claim to be qualified on other property than that to which they have hereinbefore adverted ; in this contingency they unhesitatingly allege and will prove that any apparent title that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte may have, has been obtained in defiance of the expressed provision of the Statute “collusively, colourably,” and fraudulently, merely with a view to defeat the said salutary provision of the Statute, and to enable him to be returned a member although Petitioners repeat “incapable of being elected.”

Petitioners however submit as a preliminary question which they respectfully pray that this House will be pleased to inquire into and decide upon, previous to any examination of the matters of fact herein above set forth, that it appears by the poll book that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, although duly required to make the declaration prescribed by the Statute in such case made and provided, refused to make the same — Petitioners disclaim any intention to deny that a verbal declaration might satisfy the Law, but they respectfully complain that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, resorted to an artifice, and a quibble to elude the law, and in truth made no declaration whatever — referring, in proof of this allegation, to the record, Petitioners respectfully submit that in proclaiming the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, as duly elected, the Returning Officer has departed from the course prescribed to him by law, in as much as it was then clearly his duty to have proclaimed as duly elected the said Bartholomew Conrad Augustus Gagy, who had received several hundred votes, who had made the said declaration and is qualified according to law. Petitioners accordingly humbly appeal, in the first place to this House, to rectify the error committed by the said Officer.

But should this House require other and further evidence touching the evasion practised by the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Petitioners allege that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, did, at the said election conduct himself in a violent manner, did threaten the life of the said Petition from divers electors of the county of St. Maurice, complaining of the election of J.E. Turcotte, Esq.

Returning Officer and others, did repeatedly declare that he would carry his point or that blood would be shed — and that having urged his followers, many of whom had bludgeons and other weapons, to acts of violence, he, the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, did purposely excite a great tumult, noise and confusion at the moment when he was required to make the said declaration.

That at this moment and under these circumstances the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, snatched out of the hands of the Returning Officer the copy of the Imperial Statute III and IV Victoria, chapter XXXV, held by that functionary for his guidance, and having so possessed himself of the book, not only overlooked the official character of the said Returning Officer and deliberately declined to call him to witness or to receive any declaration on the part of him, the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, but that the latter purposely withdrew from the presence of the said Returning Officer and repairing to a spot where the said tumult, noise and confusion so excited excluded the possibility of his being distinctly heard, affected to read the said declaration — that while in the act of so withdrawing, the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, significantly intimidated that his then proposed perusal would impart little or no information; lastly, Petitioners allege and are prepared to prove that though (from the noise, tumult and confusion then prevailing) occasionally inaudible, the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, read certain parts of the declaration literally as they are printed, namely the third and fourth lines including the words “or” and “as the case may be.”

Referring to the copy of protest made at the close of a contest which Petitioners deemed it unnecessary to prolong, they respectfully submit that under the circumstances they cannot expect any satisfactory result from a bill of indictment against the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, and that this House alone can redress the grievance of which Petitioners complain.

That should the record contained in the poll book fail to convince this House of the truth of the statement made by petitioners they will be prepared to establish by sufficient evidence, that the circumstances hereinabove specified actually took place at the period when the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte was required to make the requisite declaration, and in the event of this House requiring further testimony, Petitioners will prove that the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, in point of fact, was then notoriously disqualified as aforesaid.

That Petitioners humbly pray, that this House will vacate and set aside the erroneous decision of the Returning Officer, and the return of the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Esq., and declare the said Bartholomew Conrad Augustus Gagy, to have been duly elected.

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that James Dickson and B. C. A. Gagy had entered into the usual recognizances required by law on the subject matter of the contested election for the County of Saint Maurice.

Recognizances by
J. Dickson, &
B. Gagy.

Allegations in Petition, if true, will make void the election of J.E. Turcotte, Esq.

Mr. Prince moved to resolve, seconded by Mr. Hamilton, that the grounds and reasons of complaint set forth in the said Petition, if true, are sufficient to make void the election of the said Joseph Edouard Turcotte Esq.

The gallant Colonel ((Prince)) remarked that in compliance with his conviction of the necessity of observing the proper forms, in order to secure the proper action of the petition, he was desirous of proceeding with all the caution and regularity required. The petitioners charged the hon. member for St. Maurice, with having forcibly, violently and fraudulently obtained his seat; and with having refused to qualify in compliance with the law expressly insisting upon it. Further, the petitioners set forth, that the deed attached to the petition as the assumed right of qualification, on the part of the member for St. Maurice, established a claim to property of the real real (sic) value of £300 currency. The gallant Colonel had no desire to wound the feelings of the hon. member, by standing forth as an advocate to insist upon the premises contained in the allegations; but he must be permitted to say, if they were true, in common justice to the people, and in solemn deference to those laws of which they are called upon to be framers, and not the opponents, — if, he observed, the charges were founded, the sooner the member for St. Maurice was deprived of his seat in that house, the greater would it redound to the honour of that house, which ought ever to go forth to the people as unsullied. (Hear, hear.)<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Aylwin and Mr. Hincks made a few remarks....<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Hamilton ... plainly affirmed that if the hon. member was not qualified ipso facto his seat was vacant. — "I am of opinion", said the hon. gentleman that there are many in this house not qualified." (Name, name.)<sup>6</sup>

Col. Prince expected discussion would arise on so important a subject — the period allowed according to the law in Lower Canada, he was informed was an interval of 20 days between such petition being laid on the table, and taken into consideration; but so grave were the charges against the hon. member, (the returning officer's life being represented as having been threatened,) that he thought it must be a natural wish on the part of Mr. Turcotte to repel them as early as possible. He would therefore suggest to the hon. member, the propriety of appointing an earlier day, which was allowed with the consent of parties, should they desire it.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Boswell wished to know the proper mode of proceeding.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Neilson replied, that the petition should lie on the table.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Baldwin was in favour of such a course.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Hamilton was desirous, to be secure against any informality — which he had no doubt would be given against the petitioners and in favour of the hon. member for St. Maurice. From his knowledge of the petitioners he was convinced the prayer was not the offspring of imagination.<sup>11</sup>

Messrs. Viger and Neilson were desirous of postponing the motion.<sup>12</sup>

Col. Prince said, that if they had laws, they ought to act upon them; if they had not their proceedings were nugatory.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Black, ... gave his decided opinion that the law relating to contested elections was in force. — Under all circumstances, however, he requested the gallant Colonel to postpone his motion till Wednesday.<sup>14</sup>

Col. Prince, finding that the journals of the house afforded him a precedent, consented to postpone his motion till Wednesday next. The hon. member then moved that the petition against the return of Mr. Hamilton be discharged — but in compliance with the wishes of hon. members, the motion was withdrawn. —<sup>15</sup>

Ordered — That the consideration of the said motion be postponed until Wednesday next.

Motion that the consideration of the Petition from Bonaventure against the Election of John R. Hamilton, Esquire, be discharged.

Mr. Prince moved, seconded by Mr. Henry Smith, that the further consideration of the petition of divers Freeholders and Inhabitants of the county of Bonaventure, complaining of the undue return of John R. Hamilton, Esquire, Member for the county, presented to the House on the eighteenth instant, be discharged.

Ques. postponed.

Ordered — That the consideration of the said motion be postponed until Wednesday next.

Canada Fire Assurance Company Bill read.

Mr. Black, from the special Committee to which was referred the petition of the President and Directors of the Canada Fire Assurance Company, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill for incorporating the "Canada Fire Assurance Company;" which was received and read for the first time.

Bill to regulate inspection of Timber, Masts, etc., read.

Ordered — That Mr. Cameron have leave to bring in a Bill to regulate the Inspection and measurement of Timber, Masts, Spars, Deals, Staves, and other articles of a like nature, in the Ports of Quebec and Montreal, and for other purposes relative to the same.<sup>16</sup>

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time, this day Fort-night.

Bill to be printed.

Ordered — That two hundred copies of the said Bill, in English, and one hundred copies, in French, be printed for the use of the Members of this House.

Petition of James Mathewson, complaining of the election of Henry Smith, Esq. to be considered on the 22nd day of July next.

On motion of Mr. Johnston, seconded by Captain Steele,

Ordered — That the petition of James Mathewson, of the Township of Pittsburg, complaining of the undue election and return of Henry Smith, Esq. be taken into consideration by this House on the twenty-second day of July, next, at the hour of three o'clock P. M. and that notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given, by the Speaker, to the Petitioner and the sitting Member, according to the provision of the second clause of an Act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, during the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the IV. Chap. IV.

Notice to be given to parties thereof.

Mr. Baldwin moved, seconded by Mr. Christie, that the time for the Petitioners, against the election and return for the Town of Niagara, to enter into the Recognizance required by law, be enlarged, until Wednesday the seventh of July next.

Mr. Campbell now objected that the form prescribed by law had not been complied with — that the signature appended to the recognizance, was that of the defeated candidate, Mr. Boulton, instead of the petitioner, Melville, rendering it void and of non-effect.<sup>17</sup>

Sir A.N. MacNab alluded to the case of Mackenzie in support of the motion of an extension of time — and belonging to the profession of the law, regarded the insertion as one name for another as a mere trifle.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Merritt was of opinion, that if there had been any informality in the proceedings, postponement was necessary.—<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Black with his usual accuracy, defined the law upon the subject.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Aylwin, although on some occasions evincing great tenderness for legal ceremonies, was of opinion in this case that any observance of them was perfectly unnecessary. Immediately after proclaiming with great consistency his anxiety for their observance, the hon. member said something about sacred rights, and determined to vote with Mr. Baldwin.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Boswell could not understand the arguments of some hon. gentlemen. To-day they were as rigid as though they were the very guardians of the A's and the B's upon which, according to their magisterial authority, depended our inhaling even the atmosphere of liberty. To-morrow, they proclaimed a general license; and like the physician who shook his prescriptions up in a bag, you were at liberty to take your chance and draw for any names or events that might turn up: Thomas Styles answering as well for John Stokes as any other name, to give effect to an ingenious mode of cross-reading. The hon. member contended, that if we were to have laws we were bound to obey them — and if a particular recognizance is demanded by the law, that recognizance must be entered into and no other.<sup>22</sup>

Sir A. MacNab was of opinion that the necessary recognizance had been entered; that merely the name of Boulton had been written instead of Melville.<sup>23</sup>

The House divided on the motion, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

Ordered accordingly.

Petition against the Election of
E. C. Campbell, Esq., to be considered
on the 7th July next.

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Viger,
Ordered — That the Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, electors of the Town of Niagara, complaining of the undue election and return of Edward Clarke Campbell, Esquire, be taken into consideration by this House on the seventh day of July next at the hour of three o'clock P. M., and that notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given by the Speaker to the Petitioners and the sitting Member, according to the Provision of the second clause of an Act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, during the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the IV, chap. IV.

Notice of the same to be given to the parties.

Petition against the election of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, to be considered
on the 7th July next.

On motion of Sir Allan MacNab, seconded by Mr. Prince,
Ordered — That the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, be taken into consideration by the House on the seventh day of July next, at the hour of three o'clock, P. M., and that, notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given, by the Speaker, to the Petitioners and the sitting Member, according to the Provision of the second clause of an Act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada during the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the IV, chap. IV.

Notice of the same
to be given to the parties.

Petition complaining of the election of
Geo. Duggan, Esq.,
to be considered
on the 19th July next.

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Hincks,
Ordered — That the Petitions of divers Electors of the Second Riding of the County of York, and of Connell James Baldwin, Esquire, complaining of the undue Election and return of George Duggan, Esquire, be taken into consideration by this House on the nineteenth day of July next, at the hour of three o'clock, P. M., and that notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given, by the Speaker, to the Petitioners and the sitting Member ; according to the provision of the second clause of an Act passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, during the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the IV, chap. IV.

Notice of the same
to be given to the parties.

Ordered — That Mr. Small have leave to bring in a Bill to authorize the voting by ballot.

Bill, for voting by ballot, read.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read, for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday week.<sup>24</sup>

Committee on Petition of Mennonites, report Bill to amend the Militia Law.

Mr. Merritt, from the Special Committee, to which was referred the Petition of Jacob Gross and Daniel High, Ministers of the Mennonite Church, and others, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to amend the Militia Law of that part of this Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, which was received and read for the first time.

Petition of John Atkinson, complaining of Incendiarism and praying indemnity.

A Petition of John Atkinson, of the Township of Hemmingford, was (with the consent of His Excellency the Governor General, that the House may proceed thereon as they shall think fit,) presented to the House by Mr. Dunscomb, and the same was received and read ; setting forth : That on the night of 9th August last certain incendiaries came over from the United States, and destroyed, by fire, amongst other buildings, a barn belonging to Petitioner, containing 9 tons of Hay and a load of Grain ; and though said incendiaries were followed into the United States and arrested, the authorities there refused to give them up.

That Petitioner is assured that this outrage was perpetrated in revenge for the zealous and active part which he took in suppressing the late rebellion.

That Petitioner's loss has been impartially estimated at £71, a sum which he cannot afford to lose, having a large family to maintain ; he therefore prays the House to grant him such indemnity as to them may seem meet and just.

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

Committee of whole, on Wednesday week, to take into consideration the Laws relating to "Feudal Tenure."

Resolved — That the House will, on Wednesday week, resolve itself into a Committee, of the whole House, to take into consideration the Laws of that part of the Province heretofore known as Lower Canada, touching the tenure of lands, and commonly known as "Feudal Tenure," and to consider the expediency of altering and amending the same ; and the best and most equitable mode of affecting the alterations that may be deemed necessary.

Committee appointed to report on Turnpike Trusts.

Resolved — That a Committee of five members be appointed to report upon the Turnpike Trust in the Gore District, by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Durand, Mr. Harmanus Smith, Mr. Thorburn, Sir Allan M.Nab, and Mr. Price, do compose the said Committee.

Motion for adding a member to a Com.

Mr. Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Derbishire, that a member be added to the Committee to which was referred the Bill to amend a certain Ordinance passed in the third year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled "An Ordinance to provide permanently for the want of 'Notaries in the Inferior District of Gaspé, and to remove doubts therein mentioned.'"<sup>25</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

Petition from County of Drummond praying for a Survey.

A Petition of divers Proprietors, residing in the third range of the Township of Durham, County of Drummond, was presented to the House by Mr. Watts, and the same was received, and read ; setting forth : — That the line between the 2nd and 3rd range of said Township is materially incorrect, from Lot No. 13 to Lot No. 28, as has been proved by three sworn Surveyors employed by petitioners to survey the same, and subsequently by a Surveyor sent for the purpose by the late Surveyor General of Lower Canada.

Petitioners therefore pray that a new survey of the said line may be ordered, the expense attending which they are willing themselves to defray.

Petition referred.

Resolved — That the said Petition be referred to a Special Committee of five members to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Watts, Mr. Killaly, Mr. Child, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt and Mr. Moore, do compose the said Committee.

A Petition of the Inhabitants of Charleston, Hatley, and its neighbourhood, in the County of Stanstead, was presented to the House by Mr. Child, and the same was received and read, setting forth : (vide petition of the Clergyman and Members of the Church of England in St. Armand West — page 69.)

Ordered — That the said Petition do lie upon the table.

On motion of Sir Allan McNab, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt,

Resolved — That the ordinary routine of the daily proceedings in this House, in the transaction of business, be as follows : (after reading the minutes of the preceding day)

BRINGING UP PETITIONS.

THIRD READING OF BILLS AND ADDRESSES.

READING PETITIONS.

REFERRING PETITIONS.

NOTICES TO BE GIVEN.

PRESENTING REPORTS, (by standing and select committees.)

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

Order of proceedings in the House.

Copy of Order of proceedings to be laid upon Speaker's table, and hung up in Lobby every morning.

Ordered — That the Clerk of this House be directed to lay on the Speaker's table, every morning previous to the meeting of the House, the order of the proceedings for the day ; and that a copy of the same be hung up in the lobby, for the information of members.

Motion for adopting a mode of appointing Special Committees.

Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, that in the appointment of special committees by this House, when the committee to be appointed shall be composed of five members, or less, the member moving for the same shall name the persons to compose said committee, subject to alteration by the House, and that when the committee to be formed is to consist of more than five members, it shall be first determined, the number of which it shall consist ; then each member shall write on a slip of paper the names of as many members as are to form such committee, and deliver the same to the Clerk, who shall thereupon examine the said Lists, and report to the Speaker, for the information of the House, who have most voices in their favour ; and if any difficulty should arise, by two or more having an equal number of voices, the sense of the House shall be taken as to the preference.

Consideration of Quest. postponed.

Ordered — That the consideration of the said motion be postponed.

Com. on petition of divers freeholders, of Gore District, report "Sydenham Mountain Road" Bill.

Mr. Durand, from the select committee to which was referred the Petition of divers Freeholders residing in the District of Gore, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to establish a company, by the name of the "Sydenham Mountain Road Company," which was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Friday next.

Petition of Monsieur Taylhades referred to a Committee.

Resolved — That the petition of Jacques Alexandre Taylhades, gentleman, be referred to a Committee of five Members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon, with all convenient speed ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Holmes, the Honourable Mr. Viger, Mr. Parent, and Mr. Aylwin, do compose the said Committee.

Petition against the election of J. M. Strachan, to be considered on 5th July next.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Child.

Ordered — That the petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the county of Huron, Esq. complaining of the undue election and return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, be taken into consideration by this Notice of same to be given to parties.

Also second reading Usury Law.

The Order of the day, for the House in Committee to consider the propriety of amending the Usury Laws of this Province, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Friday, the second of July next.

Also second reading, bill to enable members to vacate their seats.

The Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to enable Members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats in certain cases, and for other purposes, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed, until Friday next.

Also a committee of whole, on West Guillimbury road, and bridge bill.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to amend an Act of that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to provide for the making and keeping in repair the West Gwillimbury Road and Bridge and to authorize the erection of a Toll Gate thereon," being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Wednesday next.

Then on motion of the Honourable Mr. Viger, seconded by Mr. Raymond,

The House Adjourned.

Appendix, 28 June 1841.

((Withdrawn Petition for Grant of Money.))<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Small presented a petition....<sup>27</sup> from an individual, praying for remuneration for the loss of a horse, when employed in carrying Government despatches. The hon. member was surprised (sic) that so long a time had been permitted to elapse without this honest claim being adjusted. — He (Mr. Small) knew the circumstances, and that the individual had in vain applied to the Government — he trusted, however, that this course would not be persisted in.<sup>28</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuivillier)) observed that the petition could not be received by the house, as it was asking for a grant of money, unless the hon. member had complied with the rule which required the consent of His Excellency to be first obtained.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Small said he had not obtained that consent, and he wished the question to be settled once for all as to whether upon presenting a petition to that house, it was necessary to obtain such consent. Because he wished most distinctly to repudiate the principle that no petition could be entertained by that house, without having first obtained the consent of the government. He was aware that by a clause in the Union Act, no grant of money for public purposes could be obtained without the consent of the Executive; but he would protest, if he should stand alone in that question — that for the presentation of a petition of this nature he would ask the permission of no human being. (Hear, Hear.)<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he believed if the hon. gentleman had consulted the statutes of this Province, he would have found the relief he seeks for. The sum of £40,000 had been appropriated for the payment of losses of this nature. As regards the right to petition, that certainly was a subject which ought to be considered.<sup>31</sup>

Col. Prince said he entirely concurred in what had fallen from the hon. gentleman for the third riding of York as to the right of petitioning on all occasions (hear, hear.) He (Col. Prince) would be the last man to admit that even the Queen herself, much less her Representative, had a right to dictate the terms upon which petitions should be received by that house. Upon consulting the Act of Union he found it was Bills for the appropriation of money which required to be originated by the government; but as to the right of petitioning, they might as well abolish Magna Charta at once, as to take away that right. He begged, therefore, with great humility, to differ with the opinion which had been expressed by the Speaker.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Cameron observed that he had a few days ago presented a petition from certain gentlemen engaged in the lumber trade; but because that petition contained a suggestion that money should be expended for the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa, he had deemed it advisable in accordance with the recommendation of the house to send to the head of the Government for its approval; on consideration however, he felt convinced that it arose from a misapprehension of the provisions of the Act of Union.<sup>33</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) here observed that, in his opinion, no petition praying for a grant of money for any purpose whatever, could be received by that house.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Att'y Gen'l Draper was quite certain that no officer of the Government wished to prevent any member from presenting petitions, on any subject, to that house. The practice was governed by a rule of the house, which might be rescinded at any time.<sup>35</sup> Mr. Draper referred to the rule of the House adopted from Lower Canada, militating against the motion — but he was told that it had been struck out.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said that although he was free to admit the cogency of the observations of the hon. and learned member for Essex, that it was exceedingly desirable to prevent any restrictions upon the right of petitioning, yet he was bound to state that according to the parliamentary practice in England, and the rules adopted in the Lower Canada Legislature, no application for an appropriation of money could be entertained until it had received the sanction of the head of the government. The rule, he thought, should be complied with, (no, no,) and to confirm his opinion he would refer to authorities on the subject. (Mr. Aylwin then read a second extract.) He could not conceive that this was an invasion of the privileges of the House, as it was in strict conformity with the practice in the House of Commons in England, as well as of the House of Assembly in Lower Canada. He made these observations because no one felt more forcibly than himself the importance of preserving inviolate the rights of the subject and the privileges of Parliament.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Viger addressed some remarks to the House but in so low a tone of voice that we could not gather the purport of them.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Small stated that the course which had been pursued in the Upper Canada Legislature was, that all petitions should be received as a matter of course, and laid on the table; after two days they were read, and if any thing improper was found to be contained in them, the member introducing such petition was expected to withdraw it. It would be perfectly absurd and ridiculous if a petition complaining of oppression on the part of the Executive must first be presented to the Executive and their consent obtained for its introduction to the House. If it had been the rule heretofore in Lower Canada, it was a very bad rule, and it was one which the people of Upper Canada would never submit to. The people may petition against any act of the Executive, and it would be the duty of the House to receive their petition.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he certainly agreed with the hon. gentleman who had last spoken, that the people of this Province had an undoubted right to petition that House respecting any grievances under which they may labour: but it appeared to him that there was a misapprehension existing with regard to applications for a grant of money. There could be no great danger in adopting the course which had been uniformly pursued in England. It was undoubtedly true that where a party comes to that House complaining against the Executive, the House has a right to receive the petition; but where a party comes to that House asking for a vote of money, it was altogether a different affair. It is a petition of the latter character to which the objection applies. It appeared to him that as it was admitted there could be no steps taken by the House, although ((if)) the petition were received, according to the provisions of the Union Act, the more decorous course towards the House itself would be, that those steps which must become necessary before any definite action of the House can take place, should be complied with previous to the presentation of the petition.<sup>40</sup>

Capt. Steele said it appeared to him that all difficulty might easily be resolved by asking the gentlemen on the Treasury benches whether they had any objection to the petition being received and acted upon.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Small. — I say without hesitation that I will ask no man living. (A laugh.)<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Moffatt wished to be informed whether the hon. gentlemen had any objection to receiving the petition.<sup>43</sup>

Atty. Gen. Draper said that as to the reception of petitions, it was entirely a matter for the house itself to regulate.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said, that no one objected to the bringing up of the petition — acting upon it was another thing.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he regretted to find the hon. and learned Atty. General pursuing the course he did. As an occupant of the ministerial benches he has an interest in upholding the rules of the house in this matter. You, Mr. Speaker, in your official capacity have already decided that no such petition ought to be received. He (Mr. Aylwin) was far from approving of the provisions of the Union Bill as regards restrictions upon matters of this nature; there was no member in that house who could possibly view with greater feelings of horror than he did, some of the provisions of the Union Bill, but ita lex scripta est, and it was the business of that house to acquiesce in the law such as it exists.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Viger argued the propriety of adhering to the rule as a matter of convenience to the house. It was a rule which prevailed in the House of Commons in England, and which had been followed in the Legislature of Lower Canada. He had no hesitation in saying that the House of Commons had pursued the practice for the conveniences of the House itself.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Simpson stated that the hon. member was altogether incorrect regarding the practice of the House of Commons in England. There no petitions are refused.<sup>48</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) said it was due to himself to explain the grounds upon which he had decided that the petition could not be received. By a rule of the House of Commons no petition praying for a grant of money can be received without the consent of the King or his ministers, they had acted on this rule as late as the year 1819. (The Speaker here read the rule.)<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Black said his views coincided with those of the hon. member for Richelieu: (Mr. Viger) that the rule was one of convenience only. It was a matter of Parliamentary practice, and was a fitting subject for the consideration of the house whether they would be guided by the same practice. There would be no appropriation of the revenue, it is true without the consent of the head of the government....<sup>50</sup> This was a case which did not come within the letter of that law, and was consequently a question for the decision of the house itself. That provision in the Union Act had been denounced as unconstitutional, and at the same time it was endeavored to bring within the same provision that to which it was never intended to apply (hear, hear.) He (Mr. Black) would be exceedingly sorry to deprive the subject of the right of petitioning on all occasions; he hoped if they should finally decide against the reception of the petition, that the hon. member from the third riding of York would appeal from that decision.<sup>51</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab desired that the hon. gentleman would withdraw his motion. He hoped he would neither appeal to the house nor call upon the Speaker to make a decision.<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Small said he was willing to consult the convenience of the house, and in order to do that he would take the sense of the house itself. He would be very sorry to appeal against the decision of the Speaker ; he appreciated the motives which had influenced his decision. He (Mr. Small) did not consider that such an one as would come within the rule. It was not a petition praying for public aid, and the committee would perhaps recommend an address to His Excellency praying that His Excellency would order the man to be remunerated. His object and intention was to bring the matter under the notice of ministers in the hope that they would advise his Excellency to comply with the prayer of the petition ; he would now move for leave to withdraw the petition.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Moffatt observed that the House had recently adopted certain rules for its guidance, and having deliberately omitted the adoption of this particular rule of the House of Commons, he did not consider that the House was at all bound to follow it.<sup>54</sup>

Col. Prince said it was his intention to say very few words of the question before the House, but he was one of those who are so tenacious of the rights and privileges of the subject, that whenever a question of this kind arises, he would dissent from the hon. member's right to withdraw his motion until a determination could be arrived at. Sir, (said Col. Prince,) I reverence the Chair on all occasions, and with its decisions I consider the dignity of the House to some extent involved. I would not compromise that dignity by annulling any necessary restrictive rule, but when you reflect that in matters of this kind its discontinuance does not in the least infringe upon the provisions of the Union Act, I say the rule should be abrogated in favor of the rights and privileges of the subject. But as regards the petition there is one consideration which hon. members seem to have overlooked ; it was that which had been suggested by the hon. member for Lincoln, that it is a matter which falls within the scope of the Act which was passed in the last Upper Canada Parliament. Why that Act had not gone into effect — why commissions had not been issued, seemed certainly to him perfectly unaccountable. Why the just and natural claim of the country had not been attended to, was to him (Col. Prince,) a matter, he was going to say of disgust, but certainly of astonishment. It was, to say the least of it, an unjust, unjustifiable, and, he thought, illegal proceeding. He could not consent that the petitions (sic) should be withdrawn, for he looked upon it as a dangerous precedent.<sup>55</sup>

Mr. Small consented ; — although with all deference to the chair, he did not think that the objection applied in this case.<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Draper suggested, that a courteous respect for what had fallen from the chair, and a desire to shield the House from an embarrassing position, pointed out the propriety of withdrawing the motion.<sup>57</sup>

Mr. Boswell would again take occasion to say that they could not go far astray so long as they were willing to take the parliamentary practice in England for their guidance. Hon. members who were so desirous of being considered strong advocates for the rights and privileges of the people might feel quite satisfied so long as the same degree of liberty was accorded to them and to the country as are enjoyed by our fellow subjects in England, and he believed it would be admitted that they enjoyed as great a degree of liberty as any people in the world. It was in consequence of the inclination which had been shown in both Provinces not to adhere so closely to the practice at home as they ought to have done, that the clause which had been so frequently adverted to had been introduced into the Union Bill. He (Mr. Boswell,) certainly objected to that clause upon principle, but compliance with the provisions of the Act he considered to be, for the present, imperative upon the House.<sup>58</sup>

The petition was then withdrawn.<sup>59</sup>

((Recognizances Reported.))

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuivillier)) reported that the recognizances for the town of Niagara contested election had been entered into.<sup>60</sup>

Ordered — That Captain Steele, Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Williams, the Honourable Mr. Dunn, and the Honourable Mr. Killaly, do compose the said Committee.

Committee formed.

Alpheus Todd.

Ordered — That the Petition of Alpheus Todd, of the city of Toronto, Deputy Librarian to the late Provincial Assembly of Upper Canada, be referred to the Special Committee appointed to enquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish, for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House.

On motion of the Honourable Mr. Moffat, seconded by Mr. Buchanan :

Resolved — That this House will, on Wednesday, the fourteenth of July next, resolve itself into a committee of the whole, to take into consideration the expediency of allowing the exportation, from this Province, of Flour and Meal, Pot and Pearl Ashes, and Beef and Pork,

House to go into
committee of whole,
on Inspection Laws, on 14th July next.

without inspection, and of amending and consolidating the laws now in force in this Province in relation to the inspection of the said commodities.

Report of Special Com. on subscription for Newspapers.

Mr. Simpson from the Special Committee to which was referred the subject of the subscription of the House to the Public News-papers of the Province, presented to the House the report of the said committee, which was again read, at the Clerk's table, as followeth : —

"Your committee deemed it advisable to summon the proprietors of the various newspapers of this Town before them for the purpose of ascertaining the best practical method of giving a correct report of the proceedings and debates of your Honourable House to the public.

That the witnesses, almost unanimously, were of the opinion that encouragement in some way should be afforded by Your Honourable House to assist in defraying the expenses of such reporting.

That your Committee have concluded to recommend to Your Honourable House that the Clerk be instructed to procure from the Proprietor of the Canadian Mirror of Parliament, five hundred copies of each publication, for the use of members, at the rate of five shillings currency each, per month, and that the same be charged in the contingent accounts of your Honourable House.

Your committee have directed their Clerk forthwith to communicate to the several proprietors of newspapers of the Province, that are printed in the French language, a request that they will furnish your committee with the terms upon which they will publish the Debates of your Honourable House in their respective newspapers, in the French language, as they may be given in the Mirror during the present Session ; the result of which your committee will make the subject of a subsequent report."<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Thorburn suggested the propriety of going into committee of the whole house upon it, as a vote of money was recommended.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Hamilton desired to know if the motion was in order. A few days ago an application similar to the present one was made to that house to subscribe for a certain number of copies of the Mirror of Parliament. That motion was negatived (no, no.) I maintain that the application was negatived, and I cannot in three days' time forget what took place then. He would refer to the journals of the house for the correctness of what he had stated. His principal objection against the application which had then been made was that he considered it would be an act of injustice towards all other papers published in the town of Kingston. Another objection was that the reports contained in the Mirror were partial reports (hear, hear), and words were put in the mouths of hon. members which they never uttered (hear, hear). It would be a perfect waste of the public money ; and as the Mirror of Parliament was published only in the English language, it would be giving an undue preference to English members ; they would have their speeches reported and French members would not have theirs, consequently the French portion of the House would be paying for the convenience of the English portion. The third ground of objection was that there was no necessity whatever for the measure. If hon. members desired their constituents to be made aware of what they say, they might put their hands in their pockets and pay for the reporting. This would be much better than involving that house in an expense of this kind.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Ogden was of opinion, that the house ought to go into committee of the whole upon it.<sup>4</sup> Attorney-General Ogden observed that the objection which had been taken against the immediate adoption of the report was perfectly correct. When an application for money was made the house ought to go into committee (sic). He would take this opportunity of stating that he had been altogether misrepresented in the language which had been imputed to him in that paper, in stating that he declared himself the servant of a majesty of that house instead of what he actually did say, that he was the servant of her Majesty. There was certainly a very wide distinction. (Hear, hear.)<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said it was a subject for consideration whether or not the house would not, by allowing a proposition of this kind to be brought forward a second time, stultify itself.<sup>6</sup>

Colonel Prince said that as one of the committee who had made the report he felt it to be his duty to say a few words respecting it, in reply to the objections which had been urged against its adoption. It was true that a motion for subscribing to the Mirror of Parliament for one month had been made by himself, that that motion was negatived, and that immediately after the hon. member for Vaudreuil had moved that the subject be referred to a select committee, which was carried in the affirmative and resolved accordingly. He was willing to admit that according to a rule of the house when a motion had been once negatived the same identical motion could not be received, but the present report was founded upon the action of the house, and was drawn up in accordance with the views of the committee appointed to investigate the subject. Then with regard to an objection stated by the hon. member from Bonaventure, (Mr. Hamilton), it could be no hardship upon the French population of the country, because the second part of the report goes on to say that the clerk of the house should be directed to ascertain from the proprietors of newspapers printed in the French tongue the best mode of having these debates translated and published, so that that point had not been overlooked.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he had opposed the motion the other day, and he should still do so; it was well calculated to lengthen out the session. (Hear, hear.) If he, (Mr. Johnston) had five hundred copies of all the debates, he would lay them aside and not let his constituents see them at all. (Hear, hear, hear.) — They would be less likely to form an opinion that their Representatives could find nothing to do but to cavil and fritter away the time of the Session uselessly.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Hale should not consent that the House should concur in the Report. Those newspapers which furnished the best reports he believed would have the best patronage, and he would leave the matter entirely to the publishers. Another reason, perhaps, which influenced some hon. members, and made them so desirous that what they say should be ...<sup>9</sup> might possibly be an election at a future day at which those hon. gentlemen would be candidates, and they were therefore desirous of creating a feeling of confidence in their favor. He would move in amendment that the Report be adopted on this day six months.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Thorburn desired to be informed by the Chair whether the original motion for the adoption of the Report was in order.<sup>11</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuuvillier)) decided that it was not in order, as it was asking for a grant of money.<sup>12</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he believed the majority of the House was in favor of having the reports go to the country. He (Sir Allan) was in favor of giving publicity to their proceedings, for the very reason which had been ironically alluded to by an hon. member, that the constituents of hon. members might have an opportunity of judging of their conduct — He believed the Chairman of the Select Committee, however, had been premature in moving for the adoption of the Report. It would be as well to allow it to remain upon the table until to-morrow.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Hale proposed an amendment which being founded upon the original motion, was pronounced to be irregular.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Simpson remarked that it was extremely discourteous towards the committee which have been appointed by the house to enquire into this matter and report upon it, that the house should refuse to receive their report.<sup>15</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab. — The Speaker has already decided that the original motion is irregular, the amendment is therefore irregular also.<sup>16</sup>

Report referred to
Committee of whole.

Ordered — That the said report be referred to a committee of the whole House to-morrow.

Mr. Morris, from the Standing Committee appointed to superintend the printing of the House during the present Session, presented to the House the second report of the said committee, which was again read at the Clerk's Table, as followeth : —

2nd Report from Committee on Printing.

"Your Committee have considered the Tenders of the Printers, for the Printing required by your Honourable House.

"From the statement hereunto annexed, it appears that the Tender of Messrs. Desbarats and Cary is the lowest; and your Committee are of opinion that they are entitled to the work.

"There will be a separate charge for the paper used in doing the printing of your Honourable House; and your Committee having examined the specimens of paper accompanying the Tender of Messrs. Desbarats and Cary, are satisfied with the quality and price." <sup>17</sup>

The discussion upon reporting was again renewed....<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Hamilton said he should also oppose that motion, and in order to be very brief, he would at once move that the report be taken into consideration this day five months, as six months hence there might be another session of parliament.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he hoped the house would not concur in the amendment; it was treating the committee with very little courtesy. He (Mr. Hincks) would be prepared at the proper time to discuss the question; to do so at the present was quite disorderly, although many hon. members had paid no attention to the impropriety. It was a question upon which a great deal of interest is taken by the country.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he had the misfortune to differ with the hon. gentleman. He concurred in the remarks which had been made by the learned Attorney General Ogden. He was persuaded that the measure which the committee had recommended was completely at variance with every constitutional principle, and he would go farther and say it was anti-British. As one of the members of that committee he had been obliged to co-operate with that committee in procuring information, but he was opposed to the principle of the proposition which had been introduced into the report, and he had heard nothing as yet which would induce him to alter his determination in any way. He would support the amendment.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he thought the house ought at all events to allow the report to be considered in committee of the whole. It would be a direct insult upon the act of the house itself to refuse to consider that report.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he certainly concurred entirely in what had fallen from the hon. gentleman who had just spoken, and dissented from the hon. member for Portneuf. It was a subject upon which the constituents of the country take a deep interest, and he conceived it to be the duty of every hon. member to assist in affording them all the information in their power; all that was desired at present was that the plan presented by the committee should be considered by the house, and he certainly thought that that consideration was due to the committee themselves.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Hamilton. — Hon. members complain that the committee is treated with little courtesy. I think it is treating this house with very little courtesy to bring forward a proposition a second time which had been once rejected.<sup>24</sup>

Atty. Gen. Ogden said that out of deference to the Committee, he for one would be disposed that the report should be considered, but his mind was firmly made up beforehand. It is not by reporting incorrectly that information is afforded to the constituency of the country. He would rather the country should judge from the result of the session than from the reports of the debates as to the faithfulness and industry with which they carried on the business. (Hear, hear.) He trusted hon. members would consider how important it was to preserve inviolate the privileges of the house. Were they to be told that the publication of the debates were a part of their contingencies, and consequently a part of their privileges. (Hear, hear, hear.) <sup>25</sup>

Mr. Moffatt was not disposed to refuse to take into consideration the report of the committee; but he begged hon. members would reflect upon this point, that although they were authorised to apply the public money in transacting the business of the house and of the country, yet he did not think their right extended so far as to allow them to subscribe for newspapers. It would be opening a dangerous precedent.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Simpson observed that he had been informed the House of Assembly in Upper Canada had been in the habit of paying £300 a year for reporting, and he thought if that principle were acted upon, surely the subscribing for a certain number of papers which contained the debates was far less objectionable.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Cook declared that the House of Assembly of Upper Canada had had more trouble with reporters and publishers than they had with all the business of the country. (a laugh.)<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Black regarded the proposition as entirely novel. In England, it was effected by private enterprise. The plan in view might suit the United States, but British practice did not sanction it. The hon. and learned gentleman approved of the speeches being reported with accuracy and in detail, and condemned the insinuations that had been indulged in by some hon. gentlemen regarding the motives of those who had advocated an encouragement of the Mirror. If it was desired that the proceedings of the house should go forth to the country, those who did desire it, should pay the expense, and the matter would be disposed of at once. He would however vote for receiving the report.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Durand said the hon. gentlemen must recollect the very great difference there is between the circumstances of England and of this country. Something more than the ordinary newspaper patronage was necessary here to induce reporters to give their attention to reporting the debates of the House of Assembly.<sup>30</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said, that if it was a misapplication of the public money to subscribe for 500 copies of the Mirror, upon the very same principle it was equally a misapplication to subscribe for any papers at all, and that those which they did subscribe for already, would fall within this condemnation. As regarded what had been said relative to the incorrectness of the reports, the gallant Knight was perfectly ready to acknowledge the graveness of a charge, having the culpable effect of infusing a spirit into that dullness which would otherwise pall upon the senses of those who seek for information among the oracles of legislative wisdom. He (Sir Allan) could not exactly comprehend the refinement of the Attorney General Ogden's distinction between being the servant of the majority of that house, and the servant of the Crown. They (Ministers) had taken upon themselves the harness, and the question was, who held the reins? <sup>31</sup>

The amendment was then withdrawn, and after a few observations from Mr. Hincks, the original motion was carried.<sup>32</sup>

(99)

Ordered — That the said report be referred to a committee of the whole House to-morrow.

Turner's relief Bill reported and read 1st time.

Mr. Price, from the Special Committee, to which was referred the Petition of Robert J. Turner, of the Town of Kingston, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to permit Robert J. Turner to practise as Solicitor in the Court of Chancery; which was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time to-morrow.

Freedom of Election
Bill to be read 2nd time this day week.

Ordered — That the Bill the better to provide for the freedom of elections throughout this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned, be read a second time on this day week.

Bill to be printed.

Ordered — That 200 copies of the said Bill be printed in the English and French languages, for the use of the members of this House.

Leave of absence to
Mr. Campbell.

Ordered — That Mr. Campbell have leave to absent himself from this House during the space of a week.

Address for returns of duties collected in Gaspé.

On motion of Mr. Hamilton, seconded by Sir Allan MacNab,

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, praying His Excellency to direct the proper officer to lay before this House, a statement of the nett amount of duties collected at the several ports in the District of Gaspé, since the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, inclusively; also a detailed statement of the amount of public money, appropriated for, and expended in the said District, since the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty five, inclusive.<sup>33</sup>

Ordered — That Mr. Hamilton, Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Simpson, and Mr. Gilchrist, do present the said Address to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Select Committee, on Currency, appointed.

Mr. Holmes moved, seconded by Mr. Dunscumb, that a select Committee be appointed to inquire and report to this House such measures as will most readily equalize the rates of Exchange, and assimilate the currency throughout this Province; with power to send for persons, papers, and records; and that the said Committee do consist of the following gentlemen, viz: the Honourable Mr. Dunn, Mr. Dunscumb, Mr. Burnet, Mr. Cameron, Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Morris, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, and Mr. Hincks, and that the seventy-seventh rule of this House be dispensed with so far as relates to this motion.

(100)

Mr. Johnston moved, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Merritt, that Mr. Aylwin and Mr. Neilson be added to the said Committee.

The question having been put, upon the motion of amendment, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

The question being then put upon the main motion, as amended, it was agreed to unanimously, and —

Resolved accordingly.

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Captain Steele, that this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into Committee of the whole House, to consider the expediency of repealing the Act of the late Province of Upper Canada 6th, Wm. 4th, Chap. 27.<sup>34</sup>

The Honourable Mr. Moffatt, seconded by Mr. Attorney General Draper, moved the previous question, viz:

Shall the question be now put?

A division ensued and it passed in the negative.

On motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by Mr. Small,

Resolved — That this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the state of the Law relative to the Court of Requests, in that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada.

House to go into Committee to-morrow, on Court of Requests Law.

On motion of Captain Steele, seconded by Mr. Williams,

Resolved — That this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into Committee of the whole House, to consider the expediency of authorizing an additional loan to complete the Court House and Gaol of the District of Simcoe.

Also on subject of Loan for Gaol and Court House, in County of Simcoe.

The Speaker communicated to the House the following letter:

CHIEF SECRETARY'S OFFICE, 30th JUNE, 1141.

Royal Assent to be given to Heir and Devisee Bill,
to-morrow.

SIR, — I am commanded by the Governor General to inform you that it is His Excellency's intention to proceed to the Legislative Council Chamber To-morrow at a quarter past two o'clock, for the purpose of giving His assent to the Bill which has been passed by the Legislative Council and Assembly, intituled "An Act to alter, for a limited period, the place of sitting of the Heir and Devisee Commission of the late Province of Upper Canada, and for other purposes therein mentioned."

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

T. W. C. MURDOCH, Chief Secretary.

The Honourable, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. }

On motion of the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, seconded by Mr. Thompson,

Ordered — That the orders of the day be now read.

The order of the day, for the House in Committee, to consider the orders adopted by the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada, for regulating its proceedings in cases of contested Elections in that Province being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Raymond took the Chair of the Committee.<sup>35</sup>

House in committee of whole on contested Elections,
Lower Canada.

A series of resolutions upon the subject under the assumption of the law relating to contested elections in Lower Canada having expired, was then submitted by Mr. Neilson. The hon. member said that opinions varied very much in the case as to whether the law was defunct or not, and also as to what did or did not comprise a session of Parliament. He had therefore, in compliance with the wishes of many, advanced his resolutions, and was ready on his part to award that justice, which was so loudly demanded. He averred that neither the existence nor non-existence of a law, ought to be a stumbling block in the way of petitions, and if there was no other plea, he would urge the privileges of that house to investigate the allegations that were contained in those from Lower Canada.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Thorburn alluded to the anxiety of the country relative to an investigation of the late elections in the Lower Province, which report had characterized, as having exhibited so much violence. He observed, that in pursuance of the order of the day, the subject was now before them; whether at the period to which he alluded, the law was, or was not in force, and altho' it might occupy the house for the day, he felt convinced, that the result of the enquiry would lead to the triumph of true British principles.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Hamilton was on his legs for some time; and came to the conclusion, that the law in question was in force. The hon. member would never allow, that exparte newspaper statements were evidence of guilt.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Hincks asked, what mode of proceeding, those opposed to the resolutions of the member for Quebec, meant to adopt? Tho' there might be doubts, as to the existence of the law, and what constituted a session, this however was a notorious fact, that many members were sitting in this house in opposition to the wishes of the people, (order, order.)<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Hamilton was desirous of knowing where that notorious evidence was to be met with? There were a vast number in the Province, who might stand forward upon the same principle of notoriety, and proclaim that they were quite as many revolutionaries and turbulent demagogues, who had usurped a seat in that Assembly, as men of another impress, as had been insinuated!<sup>40</sup>

Colonel Prince regarded the question now before them, as a most important one. The house was at issue upon two points, — what constituted a session, and whether the law in Lower Canada, relating to elections had expired or not. The first, under the great authority of Lord Coke, the gallant Colonel defined, as being regarded only as a session, by the law, when an act or statute passed during its existence received the Royal Assent; otherwise, notwithstanding the affairs upon which it might have been occupied, it was held to be only a convention. The second point at issue, the law regarding elections, was also disposed of by the hon. gentleman with equal facility — the statute aiming at the report of such law, having been disallowed in England. During his remarks, the gallant Colonel also read from the Union Act, demonstrating from the manner in which it had been framed, that the existence of such a law was already contemplated.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Johnston saw plainly that from the diversity of opinions, on the subject, the day would be spent like many previous ones in mere idle dispute. The conclusiveness of the arguments assumed on both sides, reminded him of the remark of a learned judge on one occasion, when great ingenuity had been exercised by the contending counsel, — and numerous authorities cited — "Would to God (exclaimed he), that those law books were destroyed (putting his hand upon them), and then I should be able to form an opinion of my own." The hon. member did not forget to fire a side shot which appeared to have some effect in a certain quarter. He observed that those whose turbulent impetuosity hurried them on to prejudice before hand, were not such as ought to sit upon the committee.<sup>42</sup>

The hon. member for Oxford ((Mr. Hincks)) did not reply to this in the language of the dramatist — "Let the galled jade wince my wethers are unwrung."<sup>43</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab desired, that justice should be done. It was reported and very strongly told, that in the Western District, government influence had been most unconstitutionally exerted in the late elections, and as there appeared to be some difficulty relative to the existence of the law affecting them, he was desirous that a short bill should be passed to accelerate the wishes of the petitioners. He was of opinion that such a course must be as agreeable to those whose elections were disputed, as to the House at large, for they could not be devoid of anxiety to have all doubts upon the subject cleared up. On the whole, considering the great importance of the question under deliberation, he would move that the committee rise, and ask leave to sit again.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Aylwin opposed the motion of the gallant Knight. The hon. gentleman affirmed that with respect to the violence at the late elections, an opinion prevailed to a great extent in the Lower Province, that many were sitting in that house, the representatives of only six or seven individuals. In disposing of the question before them to which the hon. member added with his usual adroitness the titillating echos (sic) of rights, freedom, justice, &c., he refused his assent to the doctrine which had laid down the definition of a session, and by a laboured attempt to prove the non-existence of the election law, — endeavoured to convey away the common sense of the house into that chaos of obscurity which he appears to regard as the genial atmosphere of legislative wisdom. The conviction that the disallowance of a statute of repeal brought into reaction the statute, merely suspended during the interval of such repeal statute awaiting the Royal Assent, after passing the legislature, was to him no conviction at all, — altho' in justice to the hon. and learned member, it must be added that he confessed himself ready to retract his opinions when he was convinced of their unsoundness.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Cartwright demonstrated from authority that there had been no session since 1836, and that the statute 4th, Wm. IV. having been disallowed the law regarding elections, in the Lower Province did exist.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Black ... assented to the inferences of the member for Lennox & Addington, that there had been no session since May 1836, and that the law of elections was in force having recovered from its suspension, immediately upon the disallowance of the statute framed to repeal it. Hon. members spoke lightly of the law, but it was by the observance of the law, that we preserved our rights, and by our neglect that we must lose them. Whatever feelings he might have upon the subject, he would never allow himself to be so much under the influence of impulse, as to attempt to pass so sacred a barrier, but would cheerfully submit to a hardship, rather than derive a benefit from an infringement of the law, and thereby establish a precedent that might be the forerunner of evils that it would be impossible to calculate.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Ogden ... remarked, that this was one of those cases, upon which nothing could be said, — unless the deception of a shadow, was an authority for conjuring up all kinds of nonsense. The learned Attorney General's opinions were those of the learned member for the town of Quebec, — which were incontrovertible.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Boswell expected to have been enlightened by the arguments of the hon. member for Portneuf's party — but he had heard nothing but a dull repetition of absurdities. The hon. gentleman put this simple plain question to the common sense of all to whom nature in its bounty had bestowed such a commodity. If an act to repeal the currency, passed both houses but was refused the Royal Assent. In such a case, would not the existing act come into force again? The hon. member was perfectly convinced by no appeals to the reason of his hearers could the member of Portneuf establish his position.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said that whatever ulterior proceedings, might be taken by the house, they were bound to be governed by the law that did exist. He would therefore move that the chairman do leave the chair.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Merritt asked what the effect of the vote, — and was told that it would militate against the petitioners which decided him to oppose it.<sup>51</sup>

Messrs. Sherwood and Neilson were severally for the postponement of the question.<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Durand ... ((made)) a side attack upon Mr. Johnston, the member for Carlton, purporting that justice was not meted out during the time of Sir Francis Bond Head....<sup>53</sup>

This is the first time, (replied the hon. member for Carlton ((Mr. Johnston))), since I have sat in this house that I have had the pleasure to agree with the member for Halton. Justice was not dispensed during the government of Sir Francis Bond Head, or the hon. member at this time would in all probability have been very differently employed, to framing laws for the encouragement of loyalty and the promotion of good order through the Province.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Draper in answer to some remarks that fell from the hon. member for Oxford, observed, that he saw very clearly thro' the obstacles that many complained of. But he knew well where all the anxiety arose from. Hon. members knew, that if the law had not been complied with, those petitioners who had neglected to observe its provisions, would have to submit to the consequences. This was not a question of passion, of impulse, or of feeling, to which some hon. gentlemen would fain that the solidity of judgment, should bow on every accident of caprice. It was an all important question. Were the laws to be obeyed by those, who assumed to be examples of obedience to the people, or was it to go forth from the seat of legislative wisdom, that they, the framers of law, were the reckless patrons of its violators. His conviction of the existence of the law relating to contested elections, it would be only a waste of the public time to occupy the house with; and whatever might be the effect upon the petitioners, they were bound to administer the law, or to the utter ruin of society, it must become a dead letter in its organization.<sup>55</sup>

Mr. Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Hincks, that the House do adjourn until to-morrow at ten o'clock, A. M.

The Honourable Mr. Viger moved, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Buchanan, that the words "at ten o'clock" be struck out of the said motion.

The question having been put on the motion of amendment, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put upon the motion, it was agreed to unanimously, and

The House accordingly adjourned until to-morrow, at ten o'clock, A. M.

Ordered — That the Honorable Mr. Moffatt have leave to absent himself from this House, from this day until the twelfth instant, on urgent business.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that the Clerk of this House had received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, a Certificate of the Election of a Member for the Town of Kingston, in the room of Anthony Manahan, Esquire, who had vacated his seat.

And the said Certificate was read, and is as followeth :

OFFICE OF THE CLERK OF THE CROWN IN CHANCERY, KINGSTON, 1ST JULY, 1841.

This is to certify that, in virtue of a Writ of Election, dated the nineteenth day of June, last past, issued by His Excellency, the Governor in Chief, and directed to the Returning Officer for the Town of Kingston, (John Counter, Esquire) for the Election of one Member for the said Town of Kingston in the place and room of Anthony Manahan, Esquire, who, since his Election, hath accepted the Office of Collector of Customs for the port of Toronto, the Honourable Samuel Beasley Harrison, has been returned as duly elected accordingly, as appears by the return of the said writ, bearing date this day, which is lodged of record in this Office.

THOS. AMIOT,
Clk. Cr. in Chy.

To Wm. B. Lindsay, Esquire, }
Clk. Leg. Assembly.

Hon. S. B. Harrison elected for Kingston, in place of Anthony Manahan, Esquire.

Hon. W. Harrison takes his seat.

The Honourable Samuel Beasley Harrison, member for the Town of Kingston, having previously taken the oath according to law, and subscribed before the Commissioners the roll containing the same, took his seat in the House.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Thorburn.

Address to His Excellency for returns of fines & forfeitures.

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to direct to be placed before this House, copies of all such returns of fines and forfeitures, imposed by Justice of the peace in that part of this Province formerly known as Upper Canada, and required by an Address of the House of Assembly of the said late Province of Upper Canada, as have been received.

Ordered — That Mr. Small, Mr. Thorburn, Mr. Parent, and Mr. Barthe, do present the said Address to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Bill for naturalizing certain persons reported.

Mr. Prince from the select Committee to which was referred the petition of P. Frederick Verhoef, Lewis Davenport, and others; and also the petition of John Clough Moulton, of the Township of York, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to naturalize certain persons therein named, which was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time this day week.

Committee of whole on Warehousing to sit on Monday next.

On motion of Mr. Dunsmomb, seconded by Mr. Holmes,

Resolved — That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the expediency of introducing measures for the Warehousing and Bonding of Goods in the several free Warehousing ports of this Province.

Committee of whole,
on imports, to sit on Monday next.

On motion of Mr. Dunscorn, seconded by Mr. Holmes,
Resolved—That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to consider the expediency of enquiring into the several laws, levying Duties on Imports into this Province, and to consider the propriety of amending and consolidating the same.

Address to His Excellency, for amount of duties levied, at Bytown, on Timber.

On motion of Mr. Derbshire, seconded by Mr. Cameron,
Resolved—That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to order that there be laid upon the table of this House, a return of the amount of duties levied at Bytown, upon timber floated down the river Ottawa, for the last five years, specifying the amount paid in each year, and upon what descriptions of Timber, and also if any and what portion of such duties has been expended upon the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa, at or above Bytown, and what improvements have been so effected.

Mr. Hamilton said he had been obliged to give notice of an address for a return, and he did not know why the hon. member for Bytown should be exempted from observing the same formality.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Derbshire said he had the consent of the Executive officers of the Government in that House, and as notice was only an act of courtesy and convenience to those who might have an interest in opposing such a motion, it was not necessary in this instance. This was a motion for the information of the House, and if the head of the government had no objection that such information should be given from the public Departments under the control of the Executive, the House itself could scarcely interpose against the motion.<sup>4</sup>

Ordered—That Mr. Derbshire, Mr. Cameron, Mr. Quesnel and the Honourable Mr. Viger, do present the said Address to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Address to His Excellency, for copy of correspondence
on duties on Timber.

On motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Sir Allan MacNab,
Resolved—That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House, a Copy of all correspondence between Her Majesty's Ministers and His Excellency, the Governor General, in relation to any alteration in the scale of duties upon the importation, into Great Britain, of foreign and colonial timber, or either.

Ordered—That Mr. Alwyn, Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Turcotte, and Mr. Boutillier, do present the said address to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Address to His Excellency, for copy of Report of Commission on Toronto Riots.

On motion of Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Sir Allan MacNab,
Resolved—That an humble address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency, will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House, a copy of the Report and proceedings of the Commission appointed to investigate certain supposed riots, at or after the election of two members to serve in Parliament for the City of Toronto.

Ordered—That Mr. Aylwin, Sir Allan MacNab, Mr. Turcotte, and Mr. Boutillier, do present the said address to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Leave of absence to
Mr. Cook, to 12th Instant.

Ordered—That Mr. Cook, have leave to absent himself from this House, from this day, until the twelfth instant.

Then on motion of Mr. Hamilton, second by Mr. Watts,
The House adjourned, until two o'clock, P. M., this day.

(105)

Two o'Clock, P.M.

A Message was brought by Frederick Star Jarvis, Esq., Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod.

MR. SPEAKER,

His Excellency the Governor General, desires the immediate attendance of this Honourable House, in the Legislative Council Chamber.

Accordingly Mr. Speaker, with the House, went to the Council Chamber.

And, being returned,

Mr. Speaker reported that, agreeable to the commands of His Excellency, the Governor General, the House had attended His Excellency, in the Legislative Council Chamber, where His Excellency was pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal assent to the following public bill : —

"An Act to alter for a limited period the place of sitting of the Heir
"and Devisee Commission of the late Province of Upper Canada, and
"for other purposes therein mentioned."

The Hour appointed for taking into consideration the petition of Benjamin Ham, of the Township of Ernest Town, and the Petition of David Roblin, and others, Freeholders of the Incorporated Counties of Lennox and Addington, in the Midland District, complaining of the undue election and Return of John Solomon Cartwright, Esq., as a member to represent the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, in this present Parliament, being come — <sup>6</sup>

The House proceeded to the appointment of a Select Committee, to try and determine the merits of said Petitions.

Mr. Speaker ((Cuvillier)) ... expressed a belief relative to the disability appertaining to certain hon. members being nominated to such committees — <sup>6</sup>

Mr. Delisle observed, that as he was one, against whose election a petition had been presented, he had therefore no desire to sit in judgment upon others similarly situated.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Ogden called the attention of the house to the discussion of the previous day relative to the existence of the law, as regarded contested elections, and remarked that should it be decided that the law was in force — those petitioners who had not complied with it, would not be heard.<sup>8</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab thought it premature to express such an opinion, though, its proceeding from the first law officer of the Crown, must necessarily give it great weight.<sup>9</sup>

(105)

The Serjeant-at-Arms was directed, by Mr. Speaker,<sup>10</sup> to go with the the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the Members, on the business of the House,

And he went accordingly,

And being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present ;

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel, or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

Mr. Ham, a Petitioner, on behalf of himself, and Mr. Roblin, in behalf of himself, and the other Petitioners, appeared at the Bar.

Mr. Speaker then called upon the sitting member, his Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

Mr. Cartwright, sitting member for the Incorporated Counties of Lennox and Addington, appeared at the Bar, in his own behalf.

His Excellency sends for House to Council Chamber.

Royal Assent give to Heir and Devisee Bill

House proceeds in trial of Petitions against Lennox and Addington Election.

Mr. Ham and
Mr. Roblin, appear at the Bar.

Mr. Cartwright
appears at the Bar.

Mr. Hincks presented a list of Witnesses in the case of the Petition of Benjamin Ham, and also of the petition of David Roblin, and others, which was read by the Clerk as follows : —

Doors locked.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant-at-Arms to lock the doors; which being done, Mr. Speaker directed the Clerk to read the order for taking the said Petition into consideration, and the same being accordingly read, and the attestation of the Speaker being taken from off the Box, in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up; the same was read by the Clerk as follows:—

Attestation of the Speaker read by the Clerk.

"I attest that this Box was, on the 30th day of June 1841, made up
"in my presence, in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth "year of the Reign of His late Majesty, GEORGE the 4th, intituled, "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His late
"Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted
"elections, or returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,
"and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER.
Speaker.

Attestation of Clerk
read.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box, and read by him as follows : —

"I attest that I did, on Wednesday, the thirtieth day of June, 1841,
"in presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a Box, in which this "attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the "present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment and "rolled up as directed by An Act passed in the fourth year of the "Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, intituled, 'An "Act to repeal an Act, passed in the Forty-Fifth year of His late Ma- "jesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted
"Elections, or returns of members to serve in the House of Assembly,
"and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

(Signed) W. B. LINDSAY, of whole, on report

of printing committee.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Gilchrist took the chair of the Committee, and,

Mr. Morris brought up the report: — received. The hon. member then read the list of charges.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Thorburn observed that they appeared in accordance with every thing else, which had risen to an extravagant price upon the seat of Government being removed to Kingston.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Johnston and Mr. Hincks considered them reasonable.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Boswell hoped the house would not be unnecessarily taken up with disputing them, he was confident that no combination had been formed by those offering to do the work.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Morris and Mr. Parent expressed their approval of the terms.<sup>18</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Resolution reported.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair, and Mr. Gilchrist reported that the Committee had come to a resolution, which he was directed to report to the House, whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.

Ordered — That the report be receive (sic) to-morrow.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee, on the report of Special Committee to which was referred the subject of the subscription of the House to the public Newspapers of the Province, being read.

House in com. on report of special com. on subscription for newspapers.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Armstrong took the Chair of the Committee,

The report of the committee was, that they recommended that the clerk of the House subscribe for five hundred copies of the Mirror, and that tenders be offered to any of the other papers to print a given number in French.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Small's rising was to prevent the report from being received, and so quashing the affair. The report was then brought up. Mr. Small then moved that the committee rise.<sup>20</sup>

This brought on a discussion that lasted the remainder of the session for the day: but the arguments were merely a repetition of those on a former occasion.<sup>21</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab was favourable to encouraging the Mirror as the means of disseminating through the country the business of the House.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Johnston was opposed to it, on public grounds, and advocated, as the most consistent plan, the private subscriptions of the members of the House.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Simpson, from the opposition that the measure had created, withdrew himself from further anxiety as regarded its success.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Williams opposed it on account of its previously having encountered the disapprobation of the house.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Small was opposed it as unparliamentary and unconstitutional.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Price said that if one-third part of what was said in that house went forth to the public, it would not tend a great deal to elevate the wisdom of the Assembly in public estimation!<sup>27</sup>

Capt. Steele was desirous of encouraging the reporting of the debates. It would be a boon to the distant country people.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Hincks spoke at great length about the incorrectness of reports, and was desirous that the Mirror should have the patronage sought for.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Turcotte appeared to be very indignant (sic) that the reporters had not discovered the honied properties contained in the oracles that he had occasionally delivered.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Moffatt opposed the measure of paying reporters upon principle, and as establishing (sic) a most dangerous precedent.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Baldwin, on the other hand, had no such scruples with respect to its unconstitutionality, and was in favour of the recommendation of the committee.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Ogden denounced it as a squabble about speeches, to the neglect of the more substantial business; he declared it, as he had done before, unconstitutional, and unparliamentary, and as totally improper to be sanctioned though it might be tolerated.<sup>33</sup>

Col. Prince spoke at some length in favour of encouraging the reports alledging (sic) that what had been done to provide the house with information, ought not to be denied to the county, which was deeply interested in its transactions.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Boswell was of opinion that although the measure was unconstitutional he believed it to be supported from good motives.<sup>35</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

Resolution reported.

Mr. Armstrong reported that the Committee had come to a Resolution, which he was directed to report to the House, whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.

Mr. Speaker having put the question,

"Is it the pleasure of the House to receive the Report of the Committee?"

The House divided on the question, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth :

YEAS.

Armstrong,	Durand,	Morris,	Smith, (Went.)

Friday, 2 July 1841.

(112)

Mr. Aylwin, from the Select Committee appointed for taking into consideration the petition of Benjamin Ham, of the township of Ernestown, and the Petition of David Roblin, and others, freeholders of the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, in the Midland District, complaining of the undue election of John Solomon Cartwright, Esq., as a member to represent the said incorporated counties, reported, from the said committee, the following resolution, which was again read at the Clerk's table and agreed to by the House :

(113)

Resolved — That a Member of the House having offered himself as Counsel for the Petitioners, it is the opinion of this Committee that no member of the House should be received and heard before them, either as Counsel for the sitting member or any party petitioning against his return.

Resolution reported from select com. for trial of Lennox and Addington election.

Petitions brought up.

The following Petitions were severally brought up and laid on the table :

President and Directors of Bank of Montreal.

Of the President and Directors of the Bank of Montreal, praying that the period of its charter may be extended, — that its corporate powers may extend to the whole Province, and that its capital stock may be increased.

Petition of A. M.
Farewell, Abraham
Butterfield and others, referred to a select committee.

Resolved — That the Petition of A. M. Farewell, Abraham Butterfield, and others, of townships of Whitby, and Darlington, presented to the House on the first instant, be referred to a committee of three members, to examine the contents thereof, and report thereon with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise ; with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Small, Mr. Merritt, and Mr. Baldwin, do compose the said committee.

Statement of affairs of Commercial Bank laid before the House.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a General Statement of the affairs of the Commercial Bank of the Midland District, received in conformity to an Order of this House of the twenty-fifth of June last.

For the said Statement see Appendix (C.)

Petition of President and Directors of Bank of U. C., referred to select committee.

Mr. Roblin moved, seconded by Mr. Hincks, that the petition of the President, Directors and Company, of the Bank of Upper Canada, praying that the section of the Act of Incorporation of said Bank, requiring its principal place of business to be at the seat of Government, may be repealed, be referred to a select Committee to examine the contents thereof ; with power to send for persons, and papers, and to report, from time to time, by Bill or otherwise, and that the said Committee shall consist of the Honorable Mr. Dunn, Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Hincks, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Dunscornb, and that the seventy-seventh Rule of this House be dispensed with so far as relates to this motion.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Black opposed the motion as a bad precedent. The hon. member suggested, that as it was expedient that gentlemen conversant with the affairs of Banking should be selected on such occasion, he had no doubt that the wisdom of the house would appoint those who had been named, as possessing the requisite qualifications ; but he did not approve of the infringement (sic) of the rule, to invest any hon. member with the power of nomination.<sup>2</sup>

Sir A. MacNab supported the motion, upon the plea of expediency, considering it as a decided advantage that business involving the necessity of a competent knowledge, should be submitted to the consideration of those who were capable of assuming its direction.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Aylwin could not agree with the opinions of those who advocated the measure ; it afforded no security at all for the minority in that house. A slight discussion afterwards took place....<sup>4</sup>

The House divided on the motion, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth : —

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued and it was carried in the affirmative and

Ordered accordingly.<sup>8</sup>

House, on Tuesday
 next, to go into com.
 of whole, on Act for payment of claims.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Resolved — That this House will, on Tuesday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the expediency of amending the Act now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the 'payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and invasion of this Province'" by enlarging the time for the sittings of the Commissioners to be appointed under and by virtue of that Act.

House to go into com.
 of whole, on Tuesday next, on Game Law.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Henry Smith,

Resolved — That this House will, on Tuesday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the expediency of amending the Act now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to amend an 'Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His Majesty King 'George the Fourth, entitled 'An Act for the preservation of Deer 'within this Province,' and to extend the provisions of the same, and 'to prohibit hunting and shooting on the Lord's Day,'" by altering the time for the commencement of Woodcock shooting from the first day of September to the fifteenth day of July, in every year.

Order of day on Simcoe District loan revived.

On motion of Captain Steele, seconded by Mr. Merritt,

Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee to consider the expediency of authorizing an additional loan to complete the Court House and Gaol of the District of Simcoe, lost by the adjournment of the House yesterday, be revived, and that this House will, on Thursday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

On motion of Mr. Solicitor General Day, seconded by the Honorable Mr. Daly, House to go into com.

 of whole, on Ordinances relating to Board of Works, on Tuesday next.

Resolved — That this House will, on Tuesday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the expediency of repealing an Ordinance of the Legislature of that part of this Province heretofore called Lower Canada, intituled "An Or- "dinance to establish a Board of Works in this Province," and another Ordinance of the same Legislature, intituled "An Ordinance to amend and render permanent the Ordinance establishing a Board of Works in this Province," and of making provision for the establishment of a Board of Works for the Province of Canada.

On motion of Mr. Solicited (sic) General Day, seconded by Mr. Black, House, on Wednesday next, to go into committee of whole, on address to His Excellency, for revising statutes of Lower Canada.

Resolved — That this House will, on Wednesday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the expediency of presenting an humble Address to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying His Excellency to appoint a Commission for the purpose of revising the Statutes and Ordinances of that part of this Province formerly called Lower Canada.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Solicitor General Day ... ((declared)) ... that the House would provide for the expenses of the same. The learned gentleman remarked, that there were many laws on the statute books, that were a dead letter: and that, as there were many legal gentlemen holding seats from the lower province, he had no doubt that, during the discussion that would ensue, they would be enabled to ferret them out, and make such a revision as would be extremely beneficial.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Neilson admitted the voluminous character of the statutes, but objected to the form of the motion. It went to pledge the House to make good the needful cost, but he knew not whether they had any funds or not.<sup>8</sup> The House ought not to pledge itself to make good any expenditure, until the financial state of the country had been enquired into and ascertained.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Aylwin expressed his unqualified approbation, at what had fallen from the learned Sol. General. The proposition, observed the member for Port Neuf, is an excellent one; and if Ministers will only come forward with such useful measures as these, they shall never want my firm support. Let our statutes, added he, undergo that wholesome weeding that they require, and clothe them in a British garb, and I am sure, for the happiness of the province, that many of those evils, that have engendered so much heartsearing and bitterness among its inhabitants will speedily be removed.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Draper concurred in the sentiments of the member for Port Neuf. A proper digest would prevent the necessity of wading through a mass of much confusion. It was his opinion, that if the Commission was properly carried out, it would lead to that amalgamation of the provinces that was so desirable.<sup>11</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab ... on the present occasion ... did not fail to coincide with Mr. Neilson.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Draper and Mr. Simpson ((said a few words))...<sup>13</sup>

The motion was altered, so as to allow of its first being considered in Committee...<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Day alleged as his excuse for his present course, the exact conformity with the proceedings adopted in Upper Canada in a similar matter.<sup>15</sup>

(116)

On motion of Sir Allan McNab, seconded by Mr. Black,

Special committee on Clerk's office to report from time to time.

Ordered — That the Special Committee appointed to inquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House, have power to report from time to time.

Report of Special committee on Clerk's office.

Sir Allan McNab, from the Special Committee appointed to inquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House, presented to the

(117)

House the first Report of the said Committee, which was again read at the Clerk's Table, and is as followeth: —

The Committee called upon the Clerk of the House to furnish them with a statement of the officers and servants necessary for the business and convenience of the different departments. The Statement thus furnished is herewith appended; and your Committee, having carefully examined the same, and agreed thereto, respectfully submit it for the adoption of the House.

CLERK'S OFFICE,
LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY, 28TH JUNE 1841.

Clerk's statement.

The Clerk respectfully submits to the Committee the following statement, shewing the officers and messengers which he will require in his establishment, to carry on the public business of the Assembly, during the sittings and recess of Parliament, with the salaries and allowances which he humbly thinks they will severally be entitled to. The Clerk, on referring to the Lists of the officers of the two Houses of Assembly, of the late Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, perceives that some of them, from age and long services, have fair claim to pensions: he has, therefore, appended a scale which he submits to the Committee, should they feel disposed to recommend those persons to the favorable consideration of the House.

PERMANENT OFFICERS.

Report referred to
committee of whole.

Ordered — That the said Report be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Monday next.

Special com. on petition of J.A. Tailhades, report by bill.

Mr. Parent, from the Special Committee to which was referred the petition of Jacques Alexandre Tailhades, Gentleman, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to secure to and confer upon Jacques Alexandre Tailhades, an inhabitant of this Province, the civil and political rights of a natural born British subject, which was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday, the fourteenth instant.<sup>10</sup>

On motion of Mr. Simpson, seconded by Mr. Neilson.

Ordered — That when this House doth adjourn it will adjourn until Monday next.

Committee on Petition of Geo. Rykert, and others, report Niagara district Bank bill.

Mr. Merritt, from the Special Committee to which was referred the petition of George Rykert, and others, inhabitants of the District of Niagara, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to incorporate sundry persons under the style and title of the President, Directors and Company, of the Bank of the Niagara District; which was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday next.

On motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day,

Ordered — That the order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the state of the Law relating to the Courts of Requests, in that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada, lost by the adjournment of the House yesterday, be revived; and that this House will, on Tuesday next, resolve itself into the said Committee, and that it be then the first order of the day.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Boswell,

Ordered — That William Dunlop, Esquire, the petitioner in the matter of the controverted election for the County of Huron, do before one o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, the fifth day of July, instant, deliver to James McGill Strachan, Esquire, the sitting member for the said County, or to his Agent, a List of the persons intended by the petitioner to be objected to, who voted for the sitting member at the Order of the day for the House in committee on Court of Requests Law of U. C. revived.

Lists of objected votes to be furnished by the parties to the Huron contested election.

said election, giving in the said List the several heads of objections, and distinguishing the same against the names of the voters excepted to ; and that the said James McGill Strachan, or his Agent, do within the same time, deliver a like List on his part to the said Petitioner or his Agent.

Mr. Simpson added to the committee on currency.

Ordered — That Mr. Simpson be added to the Select Committee appointed to inquire and report to this House such measures as will most readily equalize the rates of exchange, and assimilate the currency throughout this Province.

Mr. Taché and Mr. Berthelot, added to the com. on ordinance respecting notaries in Gaspé.

Ordered — That Mr. Taché and Mr. Berthelot be added to the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to amend a certain Ordinance passed in the third year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled "An Ordinance to provide permanently for the want of Notaries in the Inferior District of Gaspé, and to remove doubts therein mentioned."

Mr. Thorburn moved, that a special committee be appointed, to whom the contingent accounts and expenses of the House shall be referred, from time to time.<sup>17</sup>

Sir. A. N. MacNab could not understand the motive for adopting such a course.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Thorburn explained. What was due previous to the present session, he supposed would be paid by each province respectively — but the charges that had been incurred during the present Parliament, would have to be defrayed by the House. Now, as he (Mr. T.) knew that many, who were employed on the establishment of the House, were in need of funds, he should propose that an address be presented to his Excellency, to place a sum of money in the hands of the Speaker, to be applied for such purpose, in conformity with the orders of the House.<sup>19</sup>

Committee on contingencies appointed.

Resolved — That a committee of five members be appointed, to which the contingent accounts and expenses of this House during the present Session shall be referred, to report from time to time ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Thorburn, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Hale, and Mr. Parent, do compose the said committee.

Report of Commissioners of Chambly canal presented.

The Honourable Mr. Killaly, presented to the House the report of the Commissioners of the Chambly Canal.

For the said Report see Appendix (D.)

Committee appointed on transit of products.

Resolved — That a committee of seven members be appointed to examine into the prices paid, and the methods adopted, for the transit of products, on the different communications, within this Province, to report thereon with all convenient speed ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Merritt, Mr. Burnet, the Honourable Mr. Killaly, Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Dunscomb, Mr. Neilson, and Mr. Crane, do compose the said committee.

Order of day, second reading Sydenham Mountain Road bill, postponed.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to establish a Company by the name of the "Sydenham Mountain Road Company," being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until Tuesday next.

Also second reading Bill to enable members to vacate their seats.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats, in certain cases, and for other purposes, being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until Tuesday next.

A Bill to permit Robert John Turner to practice as Solicitor in the Court of Chancery was, according to order, read a second time.<sup>20</sup>

The bill having been introduced by Col. Prince, the hon. member took the opportunity to make some remarks upon the occasion. He observed that the Court of Chancery had been established in this province about four years, and that the gentleman, for whom the sanction of parliament was now sought to admit him as a practitioner, was well known for his abilities, and of indispensable utility to many of the profession in Upper Canada. That his testimonials were of the highest order, and that although some vague rumours had gone abroad, relative to a report connected with his name when in England, from the public and private estimation in which he knew him to be held in this country, he hoped hon. gentlemen would discard all undue prejudice from their minds, and give the bill a free passage.<sup>21</sup>

Sir. A. MacNab opposed the motion, upon the grounds of Mr. Turner's having been rejected by the Vice Chancellor, and observing that if such talents and virtues were concentrated in Mr. Turner, the report ought to be on the journals.<sup>22</sup>

Col. Prince replied, that it was, and proceeded immediately to read it. The gallant Col. then in allusion to the Vice Chancellor's refusal, assigned as a sufficient reason, for Mr. Turner's not having succeeded in his application, that the number of practitioners from England, to be admitted by the act, being limited to six, and Mr. Turner having applied too late, he thought it advisable to prevent further delay, to apply for the assistance of parliament.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Aylwin felt it his duty, to resist the motion. — There was something requisite, in addition to talents, to entitle any one to be admitted as a gentleman to practise in the Court of Chancery. The representations, that he had heard, militated most seriously against the moral character of Mr. Turner, and unless they were substantially rebutted, and that gentleman came forth unblemished and unstained, he would never give his consent to the passing of a bill, which would for ever remain as a record of the total disregard of that house, for those solemn obligations of morality, upon which the very structure of society is based.<sup>24</sup>

Col. Prince replied at some length, to the hon. member for Port Neuf.... The gallant Col. denied the existing of any cause, for such dark and mysterious insinuations. It was true, he said, that Mr. Turner had once been known under another name. For so doing, he himself could not refrain from saying that he was not undeserving of censure — but, as a plain exposition of facts, it originated from this: Mr. Turner had conducted a most extensive practice as a highly respectable solicitor at Norwich, and unfortunately having become deeply involved, owing to the generosity of his disposition, in becoming security for his friends to a large amount — (hear, hear) — he had emigrated to this country, under a fictitious name, in the hope of practising in security, until he was able to meet those demands, in which, for the benefit of others, he had become involved even to ruin. (Hear, hear.) He had met those demands by his talents and assiduity to the satisfaction of all parties; and now he stood forward fearlessly in his own proper character. (Hear.) In palliation of so serious a charge, as that of an assumed name, the hon. member facetiously remarked that it was a crime of aristocratic precedent, — my lord or his grace often descending from his high dignity, to wend his way among inferior mortals, under the modest cognomen of a Jackson or a Thompson, which was politely termed being incog. If the breath of slander, observed the gallant Col. in conclusion, is to be the proof of guilt, what character then, however unsullied, however spotless, can serve as a shield against the envenomed shaft. But if professional talents of the highest order, of respectability and moral worth, of domestic virtues, and all those qualities that are estimable in the human character, — if these can entitle Mr. Turner, to the suffrages of this house, then said the hon. member, I am convinced that I shall not have appealed to it in vain, but it will pronounce by its decision that great and moral maxim, that every man has a right to be regarded as innocent until he has been found guilty.<sup>25</sup>

Sir Allan ((MacNab)) attacked Mr. Turner very bitterly....<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Black also opposed the bill....<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Sol. General Day passed a high eulogium in his favour....<sup>28</sup>

Capt. Steele was also favourable to the motion....<sup>29</sup>

Some of the opponents of the bill...repeated on the floor of the House reports which prevailed elsewhere derogatory to the good fame of Mr. Turner....<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Viger took them up. — He said that when last in England he was present at a debate in the Commons, when a Member of Parliament, abusing his privilege, of liberty of speech, had utterly ruined the character of an innocent man. The effect, upon his mind, was to produce a horror of similar proceedings, and he conjured the Hon. Members to recollect that they were called to act in a legislative and not judicial capacity.<sup>31</sup>

Amendment to bill for relief of R. J. Turner.

Mr. Baldwin moved, seconded by Mr. Hincks, that the following amendment be made to the said Bill : —

(120)

Preamble —

Amendment to bill for relief of H. J. Turner.

Line II. — After "Draftsman in this Province" insert "and was of "essential service from his acquaintance with the practice and proceedings of the High Court of Chancery in England, in facilitating the "business of the Court of Chancery in this Province on its first establishment."

Mr. Roblin moved, seconded by Mr. Black, that the said Bill and amendment be referred to a committee of the whole House on Wednesday next.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put upon the main motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

Then, on motion of Mr. Hamilton, seconded by Mr. Henry Smith,
 The House adjourned.

Appendix, 2 July 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Mr. Burnet gave notice, that he would move that an humble address be presented to his Excellency, from the electors of Quebec, praying for the restoration of those sacred rights of which they had been deprived by proclamation; and that a committee be appointed to report thereon, with liberty to send for persons and papers.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Small gave notice that, on the 8th, he would move that the House go into Committee to consider the propriety of repealing certain parts of the law of Upper Canada relating to the wages of Members of the Assembly; and on the 7th, he would move to read the Journals of Upper Canada, in reference to the petitions of J. F. Taylor and C.C. Small, on the subject of their claims for services at the special sessions of Oyer and Terminer, for trials of high treason, in 1838.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Moffatt ... gave notice, on Thursday, of his intention to introduce a Bill regarding the inspection of produce. It is understood that the Honourable Member for your city proposes, that ashes, provisions, or flour, may be exported without without (sic) inspection; but, at the same time, Inspectors at Toronto, Kingston, Montreal, and Quebec, continue (sic) to discharge the duty of examiner, &c., whenever called upon by purchaser and vender.<sup>34</sup>

Sir A. N. MacNab gave notice that, on the 5th, he would move, that in future when motions are made to bring up petitions, and for the second reading of Bills on any future day, or for adjournment of the House, except it be special, such motion be verbal.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Burnet gave notice, for the 5th, of a motion for an Address to His Excellency, praying for a statement of the money expended on the Chambly Canal, and the present state of that work.<sup>36</sup>

((Motion to Revive Simcoe Gaol Bill.))

Mr. Steele moved that, on Thursday, the order of the day on the Simcoe Gaol Bill, lost by a former adjournment of the House, be revived.<sup>37</sup>

((Question Re : Suppression of Orange Lodges.))

Mr. Small inquired of the Attorney-General, for the West, whether Government intended to do any thing with regard to the suppression of Orange lodges? otherwise he should proceed with the petition thereon, the ensuing week.<sup>39</sup>

Doors locked.

Order of day read.

Speaker's attestation.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant-at-Arms to lock the doors.

And the doors being locked accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the box, in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

"I attest that this Box was, on the third day of July, 1841, made up in my presence, in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, entitled, 'An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His late Majesty's reign, entitled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly' "and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker.

The box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the box and read by him, as follows : —

Clerk's attestation.

"I attest that I did, on Saturday, the third day of July, 1841, in presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a box in which this attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections, or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the box, and put into three other boxes.

Drawing of names proceeded in.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn, to which no objection was taken : —

Names drawn from which to strike
a select committee.

1 Steele,	9 Thompson,	17 Williams,
2 Quesnel,	10 Holmes,	18 Morris,
3 Neilson,	11 Barthe,	19 Merritt,
4 Robertson,	12 Hale,	20 Thorburn,
5 Durand,	13 Powell,	21 Moore,
6 Christie,	14 Price,	22 Parent,
7 Burnet,	15 Raymond,	23 Chesley.
8 Johnston,	16 Ruel,

In the course of the drawing Mr. Prince's name was taken out and set aside, being chosen nominee for the petitioner, and the name of Mr. Sherwood was likewise drawn and set aside, being chosen nominee for the sitting member.

(126)

State of the House on drawing the names.

Twenty seven other names were drawn and set aside or excused, as follows : —

Sixteen against whom Petitions were pending.

Ten serving on Election Committees.

One being upwards of sixty years of age.

Thirteen names were also drawn of members who were absent.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Hamilton said there were certain formalities which must be complied with, one of which was, that before any petition against the return of a member could be acted upon, recognizances must be entered into by the parties complaining, for the payment of all costs attending the trial. The Statute was plain and positive upon this point, and no two constructions could be put upon it. There was another thing pointed out by the statute, which was that no member petitioned against could be a member of a committee for the trial of a controverted election. He did not think, however, that the objection could apply to those who were petitioned against upon slight and insufficient grounds. The hon. member for Chambly, who had been nominated, he believed was fully competent to make one of the committee.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Small pointed out the words of the statute which declared that no person petitioned against shall serve upon a committee for the trial of any controverted election. The speaker of that hon. house had decided the other day that no person so situated could serve upon a committee of that description, and the only mode by which the hon. gentleman could test the question would be by appealing to the house from that decision.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Johnston desired to know whether it was by the statute of Upper or Lower Canada that that provision was enacted.<sup>4</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) stated that he had founded his decision upon the Upper Canada Statute. As long as a petition was depending against any hon. member that member was incompetent to serve upon a committee.<sup>8</sup>

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Hamilton.

Commission appointed.

Resolved—That this House do nominate and appoint, under the hand and seal of the Honorable the Speaker, three Commissioners, for the purpose of examining the witnesses of the parties in the matter of the controverted election for the County of Huron, and that John H. Haggerty, Adam Johnston Ferguson, and George Boomer, be such Commissioners, — who shall be authorized and empowered to hold their several sittings at Goderich, Stratford, Balkwell's Tavern, Hodgin's Tavern, all in the County of Huron, aforesaid, — and at the City of Toronto, and at the Town of London, or at any or either of those places, or at any other place or places, and at such time and times as they, the above named Commissioners, shall deem fit and proper.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Hamilton,

Speaker to furnish parties with writs of summons.

Resolved—That the Speaker do furnish the parties concerned in the County of Huron controverted election, with Writs of Summons, under his hand and seal, for the parties, and also for the production of records, deeds, and papers, by such witnesses.

Parties retired.

At fourteen minutes before four of the clock, P. M., the parties, with Mr. Alfred Todd, Clerk to the Select Committee, retired for the purpose of striking said Committee.

Speaker reports Bank returns.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a general statement of the affairs of the "City Bank" of Montreal.

Also, a statement of the affairs of the Bank of British North America, Quebec, received in conformity to an order of this House of the 25th of June last.

For the said Statements, see Appendix (C.)

Speaker lays before the House Statement of affairs of Champlain & St. Lawrence Rail Road.

The Speaker also laid before the House a Statement of the affairs of the "Champlain and St. Lawrence Rail Road," required by the 49 section of the Act 2d, WILLIAM IV., cap. 28, of the late Province of Lower Canada.

For the said Statement, see Appendix (E.)

At four o'clock, P. M., the Clerk to the Select Committee, delivered to the Clerk of the House, a List containing the names of the nine members, unstruck, comprising the Select Committee, which is as follows :—

Select committee to try the election for county of Huron.

The names of the members remaining in the List to try the merits of the Petition of William Dunlop, Esquire, complaining of the undue return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, to serve as the representative for the County of Huron, in the present Parliament :

- |               |            |
|---------------|------------|
| 1 Steele,     | 6 Holmes,  |
| 2 Neilson,    | 7 Raymond, |
| 3. Robertson, | 8 Morris,  |
| 4 Christie,   | 9 Moore.   |
| 5 Burnet,     |            |

Mr. Prince, nominee for Petitioner,

Mr. Sherwood, nominee for sitting member.

ALFRED TODD,
Clerk to Committee.

(127)

Committee sworn.

The said nine members, and the nominees, were then, severally, sworn at the Table, by the Clerk, in the usual manner.

Committee to meet at 11 o'clock A.M. tomorrow.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Hamilton,

Ordered—That the Committee appointed to try the Petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the County of Huron, Esquire, complaining of the undue Election and Return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, do meet in a Committee Room of this House on to-morrow, at eleven o'clock, A. M.

(128)

A. Dingwall Fordyce and others.

2nd do.

Alex. Young and others.

Turner's relief bill read 3rd time.

By Sir Allan McNab, the Petition of A. Dingwall Fordyce, and others, Magistrates and Freeholders in the District of Wellington.

By Mr. Durand, the Petition of A. Dingwall Fordyce, and others, Magistrates and Freeholders of the District of Wellington.

By Mr. De Salaberry, the Petition of Alexander Young, and others, censitaires of the Seignories of Noyan and Foucault.

An engrossed Bill to permit Robert John Turner to Practice as Solicitor in the Court of Chancery, was read for the third time.

Mr. Prince moved, seconded by Mr. Johnston, that the Bill do pass, and that the title be "An Act to permit Mr. Robert John Turner to practice as Solicitor in the Court of Chancery."

Motion for amending said Bill.

Sir Allan McNab moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Cartwright, that the Bill do not now pass, but that it be amended by striking out the following words in the Preamble : —

"And was of essential service, from his acquaintance with the practice and proceedings of the High Court of Chancery in England, in facilitating the business of the Court of Chancery in this Province, on its first establishment."<sup>6</sup>

This revived the skirmish of the preceding Thursday. In that discussion, the tone of the parties so unequivocally expressed their motives, in taking opposite courses upon the question, that a repetition is unnecessary....<sup>7</sup>

Sir Allan ((MacNab)) was as bitter as ever, in his attempts to obstruct the bill which Col. Prince defended.... Sir Allan ... ((proposed)) ... as an amendment to strike out certain words in the preamble, indicative of the estimation in which the services of Mr. Turner were held ; and cynically alluding to the importance given to them by Col. P....<sup>8</sup>

The gallant knight ((Colonel Prince)) unfortunately drew upon himself a sarcastic retort that evidently galled him very much — "Let the words proposed to be struck out by the member for Hamilton be expunged" (said the gallant Col.) I beg my hon. friend's pardon. I really was in ignorance that his knowledge and practise in Chancery were so extensive, and profound, or I should certainly not for a moment have ventured to insert in the preamble of the bill, words that could have alarmed the jealousy of one so vastly pre-eminent in the profession, and so universally known as an authority of the highest order.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Aylwin((’s)) ... objections, as on a former occasion, were based upon principle.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Johnston was rather sharp both with Sir Allan and Mr. Cartwright.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Price also showed that the absence of the latter gentleman on the occasion of Mr. Turner's merits being discussed, was his own fault.<sup>12</sup>

(128)

The question having been put upon the said motion of amendment, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

Dunn, Hon. J.H.

So it passed in the negative.

Mr. Cartwright then moved, in amendment to the main motion, seconded by Mr. Strachan, that the Bill do not now pass, but that it pass this day six months.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a discussion ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put on the main motion, it was agreed to unanimously, and

Resolved, accordingly.

Ordered — That Mr. Prince do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council, and desire their concurrence.

Pursuant to the order of the day, the following Petitions were read : — divers Inhabitants of Saguenay, referred to a select committee.

Resolved — That part of the petition of divers Inhabitants of the county of Saguenay, relating to winter vehicles, be referred to a Committee of five members, to examine the contents thereof, and to report thereon, with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Parent, Mr. Taché, Mr. Watts, Mr. Tasche-reau, and Mr. Noel, do compose the said Committee.

Petition of John W.
Woolsey and others, referred to select committee.

Resolved — That the petition of John William Woolsey, and others, of the City of Quebec, presented to the House on the 2nd instant, be referred to a Committee of five members, to examine the contents thereof, and to report thereon, with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Burnett, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Attorney General Ogden, Mr. Black and Mr. Aylwin, do compose the said Committee.

Petition of John Atkinson, referred to

of, and to report thereon, with all convenient speed ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Aylwin, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Parent, Mr. Cartwright and the Honourable Mr. Viger, do compose the said Committee.

Ordered — That the petition of divers Inhabitants of the late Province of Lower Canada, presented to the House on the 25th day of June, last, be referred to the said Committee.

Sir Allan McNab, moved seconded by Mr. Aylwin, that a call of the House be made on Wednesday next at two o'clock, P.M.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he could see no necessity for a call of the House.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Durand was of the opinion that there should be a call of the House, otherwise it would be difficult to procure a sufficient number of members to be present, especially as two election committees were already sitting.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Merritt was opposed to the motion, because he had never known any good result from it.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Simpson said that it was impossible ; that some were at Quebec, some at Montreal, and others on their travels, — but whether to Lilliput or Constantinople, the hon. gentleman gave no precise information to the house.<sup>17</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab would very kindly leave it to the friends of absentees, to account for them.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Viger was unfavorable to such legislative summonses, having known not only fines imposed upon delinquents, but the quiet repose of a gaol, considerably awarded as an additional proof of parliamentary indulgence, to those who were innocently astray.<sup>19</sup> ((He)) remarked that a call from the House should only take place in cases of urgent necessity, and upon questions of the utmost importance, (hear, hear,) and when put in practice the attendance of members should be enforced.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Aylwin considered it imperative, that some measure of the kind should be adopted ; or the house occupied with the contested elections, would be left without a quorum.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Johnston suggested that instead of a call of the house, the Sergeant-at-Arms should be simply directed to make a tour round the premises, and he would find members enough to answer every purpose.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Cameron accorded with the hon. gentleman, (Mr. Aylwin), that there should be a call.<sup>23</sup> Mr. Cameron said, that it was a common thing in Upper Canada to have such call on all pressing occasions. He instanced the anxiety that prevailed on the Clergy Reserves Bill. Here much confusion took place, some member moving to read the orders of the day.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Child observed that the language of the motion should be somewhat different — it should be a call of the whole House.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Merritt said it must clearly be understood that a call of the House meant a call of the whole House. He thought, however, that calls of the House should be avoided on all occasions where it was possible to avoid them. It was utterly useless unless the call were enforced (sic), and the attempt to enforce a call was sometimes attended with disagreeable consequences. On one occasion in Upper Canada certain Members were brought to the bar of the House, and required to make an apology for their absence. They did so, but in a way which was not very creditable to themselves or the House.<sup>28</sup>

Motion for call of House.

Mr. Aylwin would be very happy to adopt any other measures, could they be suggested as efficacious. He had heard from the Speaker, that on Wednesday more election business would be before the house, which unless members attended more numerous, must leave the affairs of the country in statu quo.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Speaker ((Cuvillier)) here informed the house that two contested elections were on the orders of Wednesday, which unless a more numerous attendance took place, would leave the House incompetent to act. — <sup>28</sup>

Mr. Black remarked that a call was rarely made in the House of Commons, and when made a remote period was invariably fixed for the call to take place: for upon a call being ordered it becomes the duty of the Speaker to cause the proper officer to notify absent members. He did not consider that the business of Wednesday next was of that importance that a call of the House would be required; it should only take place upon the determination of some great Constitutional question. — The hon. mover of this proposition had no right to assume that members would be guilty of a dereliction of duty in the present case.<sup>29</sup>

Col. Prince said he was sorry to differ from the hon. gentleman who had just spoken. He (Col. Prince) would support the motion, because he thought it all important that a full attendance of Members of that House should be had on Wednesday next. He could not concur in the view which was taken by the hon. Gentleman from Quebec (Mr. Black,) that there was any necessity for sending to Montreal, Quebec or Sandwich for absent members when a call of the House takes place. Members were presumed to be during the continuance of the session in attendance at the place where the Parliament is summoned to be holden. The intention of a call was to secure the attendance of those who were within a reasonable distance, and not of those who had obtained leave of absence. He certainly thought that a call should take place to prevent the possibility of the business of the House being delayed, of which complaint had already arisen; and while upon this subject he would take occasion to advert to a letter which he noticed in one of the newspapers, published in this Town, containing insulting language towards that House, for which the publisher should be brought to the bar.<sup>30</sup> ((He)) had seen some very flattering remarks in the Kingston Chronicle and Gazette, upon the judicious disposal of time, and the very luminous debates, that had taken place in the House, upon those subjects that were connected only with the interests of the Province — for which the editor of that journal merited the thanks of parliament, at the bar of that house.<sup>31</sup> He ((Col. Prince)) would support the motion of the hon. and gallant gentleman from the Town of Hamilton.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Chesley said he certainly apprehended that this very protracted debate, would not have a tendency to remove, or to silence the complaints which were going abroad of the procrastination of the real business of the house, and of the country. Would it not be better that the speaker should direct the proper officer to wait upon the different members who are in Town and request their attendance; he thought that a call of the house should only be resorted to on the most momentous occasions; he would not vote against the motion.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — Hon. Gentlemen seem very much alarmed at the idea of having a call of the house. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Chesley) would only have a call to take place upon momentous occasions; is not this a momentous occasion? Unjust charges have been preferred that members of that house were willing to protract the business of the country. It certainly appeared to him (Mr. Aylwin) that there was a most urgent necessity for the adoption of the resolution.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Roblin was in favour of the motion.<sup>35</sup>

(131)

Amendment proposed.

Mr. Hamilton, then moved, seconded by Mr. Dunscomb, that the Orders of the day be now called.

Amendment lost.

The question having been put on the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

Main Question put.

The question being then put upon the main motion the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth: —

Appendix, 5 July 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Mr. Holmes gave notice, that, tomorrow, he would move that the House in Committee consider the expediency of abolishing all duties now levied upon copies of the Holy Scriptures imported by sea....<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Johnston ((gave notice)) that, tomorrow, he would move for the consideration of the amendment of the existing Road Act of Upper Canada....<sup>37</sup> ,

Mr. Turcotte, ((gave notice)) that, on Friday, he would move for the consideration and amendment of the Winter Sleigh Ordinance — and the laws relating to the establishment of Parishes, the erection of Churches, &c.<sup>38</sup>

((Withdrawn Report on Gaspé Fisheries Bill.))

Mr. Hamilton reported on the Gaspé Fisheries Bill, but subsequently, for sufficient reasons, withdrew his Report.<sup>39</sup>

((Motion Re: Report of Printing Committee Lost.))

Mr. Morris moved to revive the order of the day on the Report of the Committee on Printing, lost by a previous adjournment, and to put it on the orders for today, but was met by a motion to take up the orders of the day, which prevailed.<sup>40</sup>

((Printed Petition Rejected.))

A petition presented yesterday, and read over today in its usual order, was rejected by the Speaker, in consequence of the petition being printed. The decision is founded on the practice of Parliament.<sup>41</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion Re : Contingencies Conference.))<sup>42</sup>

The hon. member ((Mr. Thorburn)) was of opinion that the disposal of monies should originate with the commons, but as it was necessary that immediate action should be taken upon it, in order that the wants of those who were employed upon the establishment, might meet with immediate attention, he was desirous to that effect, that a conference should take place with the upper house. The hon. gentleman therefore moved, that the select committee appointed to report upon the contingencies of this house, be authorised to confer with a select committee of the legislative council, upon the contingencies of both houses — merely as a conference.<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said it would be remarked as a singular circumstance in the history of this Parliament, that no committee of privilege, or committee of good correspondence with the other branch of the Legislature had as yet been appointed. He was sorry the hon. gentleman had brought up this motion at a moment when the treasury benches were deserted. All the measures which had as yet been proposed to that house had originated with private individuals, whereas the house had been led to expect that ministers were prepared to bring forward all necessary measures. He perceived that complaints had been made in some of the newspapers against that house for procrastination, and he was inclined to think that if they were to wait until ministers were ready to bring forward their promised measures that those complaints would be fully justified. (Hear, hear.) It was a disgrace to that house that no committee of good correspondence with the other branch of the Legislature had been appointed. He hoped that another day would not be allowed to pass without the appointment of such a committee.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Thorburn observed that such had not been the practise in Upper Canada. As regards a committee of privilege (sic), he believed there had been no complaints of breach of privilege (sic). There was no doubt that a great many things had been left undone which they ought to have done, and the appointment of a committee upon the contingencies of that house he considered to be one of those things which ought not to be any longer delayed.<sup>45</sup>

Sol. Gen. Day said that as reference had been made to the members of the administration by the hon. member from Port Neuf, it might perhaps be proper that he (Mr. Day) should make a few observations in reply. The first charge made by the hon. member against the officers of government was, that the business of the house had been delayed by awaiting the introduction of those measures which they were expected to bring forward. He could only say, that although himself and his colleagues had assumed certain duties for the performance of which they hold themselves accountable, yet as far as relates to the ordinary business of the house, it was as much the duty of the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf himself as it was their duty, to forward all ordinary measures. The hon. member from Port Neuf seemed desirous of forcing upon the members of the administration a responsibility somewhat greater than it could reasonably be expected that they should assume. With respect to the absence of any government measure, he could only say that the attention of the officers of the government had been given with great assiduity to the preparing and maturing such measures as were necessary to be brought before the house; and he would put it to the good sense of the house whether under the peculiar circumstances, placed as they were in a situation altogether novel, they could be expected to be prepared at once: besides, it must be recollected that questions of no small consequence had already been discussed, questions which required the attendance of the members of the administration in their places in that house. He was, however, happy to be able to inform the house that in the course of the ensuing week some of those all important measures would be brought forward, and he trusted that all reproach on the score of delay would be entirely removed.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Viger addressed the house for a considerate (sic) time, but in so low a tone that it was impossible to do more than catch the general tenor of the hon gentleman's observations. He animadverted upon the conduct of the gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches, for having on a recent occasion vigorously opposed the appointment of committees for various purposes, without having at that time or since proposed in any manner to supply the place of those committees.<sup>47</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he was not prepared to vote for the resolutions of the hon. gentleman from Lincoln immediately. He did not know what the Legislative Council could have to do with the contingencies of the House of Assembly. They could appoint a committee with regard to their own. The course proposed by the hon. gentleman had never been in use in Upper Canada, and he (Sir Allan) did not consider it advisable to adopt it now. He was glad to hear from the hon. gentleman, one of the officers of the government, (Mr. Day,) that those great measures which were expected from ministers were in a state of forwardness, and would soon be submitted to the House. The country was looking anxiously for those measures, and that House was looking anxiously for them; and he thought they had every reason to expect that there (sic) would be no delay in bringing them forward, as there were a double number of law officers of the Crown, a double number of Secretaries, &c.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. T((horburn)) gave notice that he would move on the subject on some future day.<sup>49</sup>

Bank Statements laid in for Niagara
contested election.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a general statement of the affairs of the Quebec Bank.

Also a general statement of the affairs of the Gore Bank.

And a statement of the affairs of the Branch Bank of British North America, at Toronto.

The said statements being received in conformity to an order of this House of the 25th of June, last.

For the said statements see Appendix (C).

Recognizance given in for Niagara
contested election.

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that Charles Stewart and Henry John Boulton, had entered into the usual recognizance required by law, on the subject matter of the contested election for the Town of Niagara.

Petitions brought up.

The following Petitions were severally brought up, and laid on the table.

President and Directors of Quebec Bank.

By Mr. Black, the Petition of the President, Vice President and Directors, representing the Stockholders of the Quebec Bank, and the Petition of the right reverend the Bishop of Montreal, and others, proprietors of land in the Seignory of Saint Gabriel.

Bishop of Montreal
& others.

By Captain Steele, the Petition of Alexander Lewis, and divers others, of the Townships of Caledon, Albion, Mono, and other places.

Alex. Lewis & others.

John Rae and others.

By Mr. Christie, the Petition of John Rae, and others, Inhabitants of Kempt road, in the county of Bonaventure, and the Petition of Robert W. Kelly, and others, Inhabitants of the upper part of the county of Gaspé.

R. W. Kelly & others.

Duncan McDonald
and others.

By Mr. Chesley, the Petition of Duncan McDonald, and others, Inhabitants of the Town of Cornwall.

Rev. Wm. Ryerson,
and others.

By Mr. Boswell, the Petition of the Reverend William Ryerson, and others, composing the Board of the Upper Canada Academy.

Hon. Matthew Bell
and others.

By Mr. Attorney General Ogden, the Petition of the Honourable Matthew Bell, and others, Inhabitants of the District of Three Rivers.

William Robinson
and others.

By Mr. Hopkins, the Petition of William Robinson, and others, Inhabitants of the Township of Trafalgar.

Rev. Andrew Balfour,
and others.

By Mr. Foster, the Petition of the Reverend Andrew Balfour, and others, residents of the Township of Shefford.

Gaspé Fishery Bill
reported amended.

Mr. Hamilton, from the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to regulate the Fisheries in the District of Gaspé, reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and had made several amendments thereto, which he was directed, to report to the House, whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Christie objected to the report being received. He had not been consulted on the subject, although he was one of the select committee to whom the matter had been referred.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Hamilton said it was the report of a majority of the committee unanimously agreed to, and he trusted the house would not reject the report in consequence of the objection of a single individual.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Viger said he thought it was understood, when the hon. member had withdrawn the report yesterday, it was with the understanding that the report should be re-committed.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Cameron said it appeared, rather unfortunately for the house, that there was a misunderstanding between the two hon. members from adjacent counties. He believed the house understood, and common sense dictated, that the report should have been re-committed, that the committee would again have met, and have given notice to the hon. gentleman from Gaspé to attend the meeting of the committee. By the proceeding of this committee, however, he thought one important feature was pointed out, which was, that in appointing select committees the rules of that house should not be departed from; that no person who was known to be hostile to the subject submitted should be named to serve upon the committee.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Sherwood was of opinion that the intention had been that the report should lie upon the table until to-day that the hon. member from Gaspé might have an opportunity of examining it, and he would have ample opportunity of expressing his dissent when the house went into committee of the whole upon the report.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Johnston said his understanding of the matter was that the report was to be re-committed.<sup>7</sup>

(133)

Mr. Speaker having put the question "Is it the pleasure of the House to receive the report of the Committee?"

Report not received.

The House divided on the question, and it passed in the negative.

Committee on Petition of inhabitants of Gore
District, have leave to report, from time to time.
Second Report of committee on Printing recommitted.

Ordered—That the Special Committee to which was referred the Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Gore District, have power to report, from time to time.

On motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Ordered—That the Order of the day for receiving the report of the Committee of the whole House on the second report of the Standing Committee appointed to superintend the Printing of the House, during the present Session, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and discharged; and that the said report be re-committed to the said Standing Committee, for further consideration.

Report of committee
of whole on report
of special committee on subject of subscribing to Newspapers revived.

Mr. Hincks moved, seconded by captain Steele, that the Order of the day for receiving the report of the Committee of the whole House on the report of the Special Committee to which was referred the subject of the subscription of the House to the public Newspapers of the Province, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that the report be now received.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Hamilton said he should oppose the motion; not that he thought their constituents ought not to be made acquainted with the proceedings of that House, but he thought the mode proposed was altogether unconstitutional. He thought it would be abusing the confidence of the government which had placed money in their hands for the purpose of defraying the contingent expenses of the House, to expend that money in the way proposed. He would not now urge the same reason which he did on a former occasion, that it was not in accordance with the practice in England; he would set aside that argument, and oppose it on the ground that it was unconstitutional — that they had no right to apply the money to such a purpose. If they had a right to apply this money for the payment of subscriptions to a newspaper, they had an equal right to apply it to the payment of their own expenses. Such a practice had been resorted to on one or two occasions in Lower Canada, but that was no reason why they should in that House adopt a similar proceeding.<sup>9</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he would, before the question was put, take the liberty of saying a few words upon it. He did not view it in the light of paying Reporters; it was merely facilitating the publication of the debates of that house, in order that the constituents of hon. members might the better understand what was said there. It was well known to every one in that house that a vast majority of the public newspapers were decidedly in favour of one particular party: and the speeches of hon. members who were favorable to that party would doubtlessly be well reported in those papers; while those of others would be wholly omitted or imperfectly given. But here was a paper entirely unconnected with party politics, which professed to give, and he had no doubt would give, an impartial unbiassed and correct report; he thought therefore, it should be encouraged, he thought it was due to the constituency which sent them to that house, that they should not reject the only means in their power for giving them correct information. The British House of Commons although they did not pay Reporters, nevertheless tolerated the practice of Reporting ; and why did they do so ? It was that the public might be put in possession of that knowledge which it was so desirable they should possess, namely, of the conduct and proceedings of their representatives. He would not for a moment admit the truth of the proposition, that it was a misapplication of money, or that they had no right to apply the money for this purpose. The same objection would apply to the ordering of 5 newspapers as five hundred. It is precisely the same in principle. It was very well known that the country looked for information at their hands, and in what way would that information be given them, if it were left to those party newspapers ? (hear, hear.). The amount required to be expended was a mere trifle, and he thought if it were supposed that the vote would be unconstitutional, they would find before the end of the Session a great many unconstitutional grants of money, and of larger sums than the one now proposed to be voted.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he felt it his duty to vote against this motion, having hitherto been opposed to the proposal of the committee on principle. If it were not paying for reporting directly it was doing so indirectly, and he thought there was very little difference. He found besides that it was not one paper alone which they were going to support by this vote but two or three ; in the Chronicle & Gazette appeared a long report purporting to have been made by H. Fowler, Esq. who is also the publisher of the Mirror of Parliament. If he furnishes other papers besides his own, it is but reasonable to suppose that he receives quid pro quo from those papers, and he (Mr. J.) thought therefore the vote proposed, would be a useless expenditure of money. He did not see the propriety of voting away five hundred dollars a month to so little purpose. Besides he did not altogether believe in the correctness of the report contained in the "Mirror," he would mention an instance when exactly the reverse of what he (Mr. Johnston) had said was stated ; he was represented to have demanded from the gentlemen on the treasury benches, whether they would rest their popularity upon those measures which they themselves introduced ; now what he had asked of them was whether they would rest their popularity on such measures as the hon. member for West Halton (Mr. Durand) might introduce.<sup>11</sup> The hon. member amused the house by saying that he had paid one subscription for the Mirror, amounting to 7s. 6d. currency, which he would transfer to any hon. member for a quarter-dollar.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Durand said it appeared from the hon. gentleman's observations, that he feared other papers would benefit by the labours of the publisher of the Mirror of Parliament. He (Mr. Durand) hoped it would be the case ; it was the very thing which was most desirable ; the more they could diffuse information the better and as the vote they were about to give would have the effect of placing all newspapers in the possession of the reports, he thought there could be no reasonable objection offered to it on that score. It was expected that very shortly the Budget would be opened, and there would then be abundant materials both for the employment of hon. members in that House, and also for those whose business it would be to furnish to the country information of the proceedings of the House. He thought the arguments of the hon. member tended to strengthen the position. He would cheerfully support the motion.<sup>13</sup>

Col. Prince said he merely rose for the purpose of cautioning hon. members against consuming the time of the House unnecessarily by again going into a debate upon this subject. The resolutions had been already carried by a considerable majority in committee of the whole House on a former occasion.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Chesley said he observed on the part of hon. gentlemen who were in favor of the proposition a great fear of entering into any further discussion upon the subject. For his own part he had heard subjects of far less consequence discussed, and he was particularly desirous of hearing and understanding the full merits of the case. He (Mr. Chesley) was perfectly aware that there are among the constituents of hon. members many who would be extremely glad to obtain information without expense to themselves ; but he would not to gratify the selfishness of any one, consent to vote so large a sum of money.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Turcotte spoke out against the mode adopted by the press generally, of commenting upon the speakers, and in allusion, to remarks that had appeared in the Morning Courier, as to his having previously made a furious speech, he remarked that he cared not who the correspondent of that Courier was, be he present or absent — Member of this House or not — the Hon. Member for Bytown or any other individual, he had much satisfaction in openly saying he had stated an infamous and abominable falsehood.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Derbishire repudiated the charge distinctly, and the matter dropped in the House, after several loud cries of "order."<sup>17</sup>

from committee.

Accordingly Mr. Armstrong from the Committee of the whole House on the report of the Special Committee to which was referred the subject of the subscription of the House to the Public Newspapers of the Province, reported to the House the resolution of the said Committee, which was again read at the Clerks table as followeth : —

Resolution.

Resolved, as the opinion of this Committee, that the Clerk of this House be authorized to procure, from the Proprietor of the Mirror of Parliament of Canada, five hundred copies of each publication of that paper, for the use of the members of this House, at the rate of five shillings currency, each, per month ; and that the same be charged in the contingent accounts of this House.

Motion for concurring in resolution.

Mr. Hincks moved, seconded by Captain Steele, — That the House doth concur with the Committee in the said resolution.

Amendment proposed.

Mr. Hamilton, then moved, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day, that the question of concurrence be put upon the said resolution this day six months.

Original Question carried.

So it was carried in the affirmative, and,
Resolved — accordingly.

The Honourable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, delivered to Mr. Speaker a message from His Excellency, the Governor General, signed by His Excellency.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Harrison rose and stated that answer to that address had been placed under his charge, and with permission of the House he would now read the same. But before doing so perhaps he would be allowed to make one observation. There would be no necessity on future occasions for messengers from the House to wait upon his Excellency in cases where information or papers were asked for. All that would be necessary would be that twenty-four hours notice be given of the intention of the House to apply for such information, or for the production of any particular document. Then when the address is passed the proper officer will be prepared in his place in the House to furnish the reply. This method he believed would greatly facilitate the business of the House.<sup>19</sup>

(135)

And the said message was read by Mr. Speaker, All the members of the House being uncovered, and is as followeth : —

SYDENHAM,

The Governor General informs the House of Assembly that the Bill passed by the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of the late Province of Upper Canada, in the month of May, 1839, and reserved by the Lieutenant Governor of that Province for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure, entitled "an Act to authorize the purchase of 'the Private Stock in the Welland Canal on the part of this Province, 'and for other purposes therein mentioned'" was specially confirmed and finally enacted by Her Majesty in Council on the 11th day of September, 1840.

Government House, Kingston, }
5th, June, 1841.

Message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Act for purchasing Welland Canal
private stock, confirmed by Her Majesty.

Mr. Viger objected to this mode of proceeding. It was out of all form of parliamentary practice. They had no right to receive this as an answer to their address.<sup>20</sup>

Attorney General Ogden said, perhaps it might be new to the hon. gentleman, but nevertheless he considered it perfectly unobjectionable. It was not necessary that His Excellency should give the answer to the messengers. A gentleman holding a high office comes into the House and says: here is the answer of His Excellency. He (Mr. Ogden) could see nothing irregular or improper in this method of communicating with the House. Here the channel of communication is direct between the Governor General and the House of Assembly, and all the House required to know was that the gentleman presenting the answer of His Excellency was an officer of the government.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Viger. — Really if this mode of proceeding be adopted to-day, how are we to know what innovation may be attempted next. His Excellency informed the messengers of the House that he would communicate to the House his answer by message. Now let any hon. member read this communication which has been produced by the hon. gentleman opposite, who is a member of His Excellency's administration, and see whether it can be called a message such as this House is entitled to expect. A message to this House should be signed by His Excellency — this is not. He thought it was treating that House with very little consideration.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Simpson said with all due deference to the hon. and learned member who had just spoken, he conceived that hon. Gentleman, was out of order in making the observation he had made. What could be the difference whether the hon. gentleman — the secretary to His Excellency appeared at the bar of the house and there delivered the message of His Excellency, or whether he delivered it in his place in the house. The new practice arises from the new system which is now to be put in operation, and he (Mr. Simpson) was not inclined to quarrel with it.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Viger said he did not object to the message being brought by the hon. gentleman who had brought it, he only wished that the message itself should be such as it ought to be.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Cameron said if he understood the meaning of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Viger) he certainly thought he would be borne out by authorities. The message should have been addressed to the Legislative Assembly, and should have been signed by His Excellency the Governor General. He (Mr. Cameron) concurred with the hon. gentleman in thinking that the practice should correspond with that pursued in England with regard to messages communicated from the head of the Government to the House of Commons.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Harrison said there seemed to be a slight misapprehension on the minds of hon. members with regard to the intention of the officers of the government in adopting this course. The communication which he (Mr. Harrison) had made to the house was the answer which the Governor General communicates through him (Mr. Harrison) to those gentlemen who were the bearers of the address.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Viger said if it were possible to view it in that light, he certainly had no objection.<sup>27</sup>

Committee to wait on His Excellency with address for information on timber duties, reports answer.

Mr. Aylwin, accompanied by the other Messengers, reported to the House, that their address of the thirteenth of June last, to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying him to be pleased to cause to be laid before this House a copy of all correspondence between Her Majesty Ministers and His Excellency, in relation to any alteration in the scale of duties upon the importation into Great Britain, of foreign and colonial timber, or either, had been presented to His Excellency: — and that he had been pleased to give the following answer:

"GENTLEMEN,

Answer to address to Governor General on timber duties.

I have not received from the Secretary of State any communication on the subject of the proposed alteration of the duties, on Foreign or Colonial Timber, imported into the United Kingdom; I will transmit, however, for the information of the House of Assembly, the copy of a despatch which I addressed to the Secretary of State on that subject, in the month of April last."

Committee to wait on His Excellency with address for copy of Report on Toronto Riots, reports answer.

Mr. Aylwin, accompanied by the other Messengers, reported to the House that their address of the thirteenth of June last, to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House a copy of the report and proceedings of the Commissioners appointed to investigate certain supposed riots at or after the election of two members to serve in Parliament, for the city of Toronto, had been presented to His Excellency and that He had been pleased to give the following answer : —

"GENTLEMEN,

Answer to address to His Excellency for copy of report of Commissioners on Toronto Riots.

I have not yet received any report from the gentlemen who were deputed by me to investigate certain proceedings at Toronto, but when I shall have received, and shall have considered that report, I have little doubt of being able to comply with the wishes of the House of Assembly, by laying a copy of it before them."

On motion of Mr. Morris, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

An address to be sent to His Excellency, for information in relation to losses of C. Leggo.

Resolved — That an humble address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to inform this House whether an answer has been received from Her Majesty to an address of the late House of Assembly of Upper Canada, in behalf of Christopher Leggo, of the Town of Brockville, and that the Honourable S. B. Harrison, and W. H. Draper do present the same.

Trial of Hastings controverted election postponed.

Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by Mr. Morris, that the time appointed for the trial of the Hastings contested election be postponed until the hour of four o'clock, P. M., to-morrow, and that notices be given to the parties accordingly.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Ordered, accordingly.

Mr. Neilson said he had had the honor of presenting to the house a petition, a few days ago, upon the proposed alteration of the timber duties in Great Britain. A press of other matters had prevented him, from moving the adoption of any proceedings relating to the subject. It was now time that they should bestow some attention upon the subject, and he would therefore move that the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole on Friday next, that the sense of the house might be taken upon the question. He had named Friday because he perceived there was no item of importance upon the order for that day.<sup>28</sup>

(136)

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Cameron,

Committee of whole, to-morrow, on petition of William Walker and others.

Resolved — That this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the Petition of William Walker, and others, inhabitants of the City of Quebec, presented to the House on the 16th day of June, last.

Another subject to which he wished to draw their attention, was with reference to Election contests for that part of the Province heretofore called Lower Canada. In a matter which so nearly concerned the privileges, the honour and character of the house, it was certainly unbecoming that so much delay should take place. There had been a difference of opinion as to whether the law of Lower Canada relating to trial of controverted elections was still in force. He did not think it necessary to enter into any discussion upon the subject, he would merely move that the proceedings in cases of contested Elections in that part of Canada, heretofore constituting the province of Lower Canada, be conducted according to the provisions of the Statute 4 Geo. 4 chap. 31.<sup>29</sup>

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Christie,

House to go into Committee of whole on Thursday next on proceedings of Lower Canada on controverted elections.

Ordered — That the order of the day, for the House in Committee, to consider the orders adopted by the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada for regulating its proceedings, in cases of contested elections in that Province, lost by the adjournment of the House on Friday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Thursday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

House in Committee of whole on Court of Requests Law.

The order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the state of the Law relating to the Courts of Requests, in that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada, being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. McLean took the Chair of the Committee.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Atty. Gen. Draper rose and said that he had given notice at an early part of the Session, that he should bring under the consideration of the House, the laws now in force in that part of Canada heretofore called Upper Canada, relating to Courts of Request; and he was impelled to this step in consequence of the reiterated complaints which had been made against those Courts, (and which had come under his (Mr. Draper's) notice in the performance of his official and professional duties) that they had failed to attain those ends which the Legislature had in view when the Act was passed for their establishment. It was not his intention at present to occupy the time of the Committee with an exposition of the details of the measure which he proposed to substitute in the place of the law now in existence. If the House should concur with him in thinking that some amendment was necessary, the consideration of those details would naturally arise at a future day; all that he was desirous of doing at present was to establish the position that those Courts were capable of improvement. He would first mention that the question had been brought under the notice of the Government two or three years ago, in consequence of an hundred complaints, from different sections of the country. The hon. and learned gentleman opposite (Mr. Baldwin) could bear witness to this particular. — He would go farther back than the period of that hon. gentleman's connexion with the Government extends; and he (Mr. Draper) had had at that early period of the establishment of the Court, as many as thirty applications submitted to him at one time, for relief from the improper decisions which had taken place in that Court. In some cases the Commissioners had acted in the very teeth of the Statute; sometimes in opposition to every principle of justice; sometimes taking on themselves to decide points which Courts of a higher jurisdiction would hesitate to decide upon. They constituted themselves a sort of general court for legislation, and not for the administration of the law. Such was the nature of the complaints which the country preferred against the operation of Courts of Request. He would not do the Commissioners of that Court the injustice to suppose that those complaints were in all cases well founded. He would be sorry to have it supposed that he would, at once, endorse all complaints. They were all well aware that an unsuccessful suitor is very apt to find cause of complaint, not in the weakness of his own case, but in the (as he imagines) wrong decision of the Court. But at the same time it would be right to observe, that when the very constitution of the Court is considered, and the great number of the persons who must necessarily be engaged in them, it was almost impossible to expect that the Government could find persons in all the remote sections of the Province who were perfectly qualified for presiding over courts of that description, to whom the Government could entrust even (sic) so limited a jurisdiction. In the year 1838 there were one hundred and seventy-three Courts, and one thousand and sixty eight Commissioners. He believed that hon. gentlemen would agree with him that it would be a difficult matter to find nearly eleven hundred persons who might properly be entrusted with the administration of justice in those Courts. Reasoning upon general principles, even were there to be a large number of vacancies at this moment, the filling them up would be found to be a matter of serious difficulty, and one involving a serious responsibility. It had been a matter of considerable difficulty to find persons to fill the situations of Judges of the District Courts, though fewer in number; and where the Judge is not permitted to indulge discretionary powers, but is bound down by positive rules of law. He believed the experience of hon. gentlemen, speaking as a matter of general reflection, would bear him out in saying that in some cases those appointments had not been successful.<sup>31</sup>

We are now acting under a law which was passed at a period when it was more difficult to find persons of experience and ability to preside over the courts; and let hon. gentlemen reflect, how many thousand cases there are in which people go into those courts to seek for justice, and there is nothing more likely to create a discontented (sic) feeling than when people find that in a tribunal into which they are obliged to go for justice, there are not persons qualified to transact the business of the courts. One of the arguments in favour of these courts has always been, and I admit it is one which has much weight, that while they afford an expeditious remedy in cases of trifling debts, they are at the same time attended with little expense. But it must be recollected that it is not simply the cheapness and expedition of obtaining judgment that is to be regarded, but you should be well assured that the judgment is a proper one, and that you have such a decision as may be relied upon. If, therefore, I can establish that the complaints against these commissioners have been well founded, I shall then have made out my case. — I will state one or two leading features of these complaints. I recollect one case, and rather an amusing one. There had been committed one of those breaches of moral and social rights which sometimes occur to the disgrace of those who are concerned in them — a case of seduction. One would have supposed that this was one of those cases which could not be tried under head of debt or contract. The commissioners of the court, however, thought differently. They tried the case in two shapes — one on behalf of the Doctor for his bill, and the other on the part of the father for the loss of the daughter's services. And I will mention another case, where a man had lost certain property under such circumstances as would naturally give rise to an action of Trover. The commissioners of the court, however, in their wisdom, determined that it was a case which came under their jurisdiction, and they gave judgment accordingly. Besides all this it was strongly contended that the Court of Requests might hold jurisdiction in cases of tythes. I could multiply cases upon cases, did I not know that there are many hon. (sic) gentlemen in this house of the legal profession, who can bear testimony to the extraordinary proceedings of some of the Commissioners of these courts. I do not wish to be understood as charging upon them a desire of doing wrong; and I would not do justice to my own feelings were I not to add that there are many cases also, where the gentlemen presiding over those courts have given great satisfaction. I could mention many instances (were it not invidious to do so) such as I have last alluded to. The reason of this is, that in such cases the government have been fortunate in finding persons of uprightness and intelligence, which it is impossible should be the case, to a very great extent, in a system of jurisprudence, which requires a thousand or more commissioners; this is what we should first strike at. Do away with the necessity of employing so large a number; and we shall have the matter more tangible, and more within our reach; but where you find a Court of Request, with three or four commissioners presiding, there is a division of responsibility which very often amounts to no responsibility at all. Unless they subject themselves to an action in such a manner as is tangible, however improperly they may act, however ruinous may be their judgment, unfortunately it must stand, the evil is incurable, there are no means of redress. I have known another instance of flagrant abuse, where a merchant in extensive business was appointed a commissioner of a Court of Request; he had a vast number of debts which came within the jurisdiction of the court, the first step he took was to obtain notes from all persons who owed him; so far all was right, the next thing he did was to transfer all these notes to his own clerk, and then to employ a bailiff at a per-centage, to serve the parties with summonses; and he himself gave judgment upon them. (Hear, hear, hear.) But it is only necessary to show that such cases can occur, to convince this house that the matter requires amendment. When this circumstance became known, he was of course promptly removed. It would be out of place if I were now to enter into the details of the measure which I trust the committee will at a future day give me an opportunity of bringing under their notice. I will now call the attention of the committee to the only remaining point which I desire to bring under their notice, at the present moment; and whatever the other alterations may be, this is one to which my attention has been particularly drawn, namely: the payment of the officer presiding not by fees, but by fixed salary, favour would not, then, be shown to these who brought most cases into court, as has been too frequently the case heretofore. I do not think any system more false, and more prejudicial to the pure and faithful administration of justice, than the payment of the services of a judge by fees. A charge in this respect is one of those reforms which, of all others, is most to be desired. Now so far from proposing an increase of expenditure I believe that the adoption of the amendments which I shall propose will have the effect of lessening it. In order to show to this committee the amount of costs accruing upon business in those courts, I will state, from returns which I am in possession of, for the Year 1838 the costs exceeded £10,000. The remedy I would propose is to establish a graduated scale of fees, according to the amount of the demand sued for; let these fees be paid in the first instance into the hands of a public officer, to be placed in the treasury of the District, let the Judge who shall be appointed to preside in each court be paid a fixed salary from the treasury, and let it be such as to induce a Barrister or some other person equally competent to undertake the office. I have now endeavoured, as briefly as possible, to explain to this committee the reasons which induced me to make this motion. — I have abstained from entering into particulars, and only ask the committee to declare whether they concur with me in saying that it is proper there should be some amendment in the present law upon the subject.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Merritt said the hon. gentleman had made out a strong case, but he calls upon this committee to do what he (Mr. Merritt) thought required mature consideration, viz. to pay the Judges of the Court of Request by salaries out of the District Treasury. He (Mr. M.) would certainly be opposed to any resolution of this nature. In his part of the country the operation of the law which regulates the Courts of Request was universally approved of. There were no complaints. It was called the poor man's court. Complaints might justly (sic) be made against the courts of a higher jurisdiction, for in them the costs were excessive. He could mention a case where upon collecting £50, £150, of fees had been demanded and paid, (hear, hear. Who was the defendant?) It was not myself. I was fixed in another case in which I was bail for a contractor upon the Welland Canal. The case I here referred to was not my own. He (Mr. Merritt) had paid particular attention to the operations of the system upon which the Courts of Request were founded as early as the year 1832, upon their first establishment. He had also taken pains to ascertain the operations of similar courts in the United States. (The hon. gentleman here read extracts from letters which he had received upon the subject.) He did not think it right that the system should be condemned hastily. It was a cheap method of obtaining justice, and he (Mr. Merritt) believed there were no well founded complaints which were sufficient to justify that house in making any material alteration in the law. The hon. and learned gentleman states that persons cannot be selected who are fit to be entrusted with the management of matters which come within the jurisdiction of their Court. He (Mr. Merritt) would repudiate such an idea — he would not admit it for a moment. It was an imputation which that hon. and learned gentleman was not justified in, casting upon the commissioners of the court. Instead of confining the jurisdiction of the Court to £10 he would extend it to £50. If the hon. and learned gentleman would propose a plan for amalgamating the District Court with the Court of Request, he would readily give it his support: He (Mr. Merritt) felt every disposition to go with the hon. and learned gentleman in establishing any tribunal whatever, provided the costs were not increased, and provided the salaries of the officers of the Court were in all cases paid by fees. Otherwise those fees would never be collected: they would be like Militia fines, insufficient to reimburse the Treasury for the expense of the Courts Martial which sit to determine those fines. If people choose to go to law it is right that they should pay law expenses, and those Courts whose expenses were least were in all cases to be preferred.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he was desirous that the Court of Requests law should be amended, but he could not agree with the hon. gentleman who had last spoken, that it was desirable to have cheap law. He believed that the paltry costs of that court had been the cause of creating a hundred suits where under other circumstances not one would have been instituted. He (Mr. Johnston) would desire that the costs should be more than they are at present. — He had been in the habit of attending these Courts, and he could mention some amusing decisions. —<sup>34</sup> Mr. Johnston after relating some droll anecdotes at variance with the doctrine of these verbose advocates of a defective system, left the hon. gentlemen to the enjoyment of their own opinions.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Roblin — I certainly must say the hon. gentleman who has just sat down has paid a high compliment to his constituents. I certainly did expect that the hon. (sic) and learned Attorney General would have shown us that some glaring abuses existed in the Courts of Request; now it is well known that no persons go to law unless there is a disagreement between them, and very often both parties are dissatisfied with the decision: it is not surprising therefore that complaints should be made; but the hon. and learned gentleman states as an objection that there are such a vast number of judges in these courts. It must be recollected that the commissioners of these Courts are not only judges but juries also. I believe that the Courts generally speaking give satisfaction; indeed I am convinced that this is the case. The hon. and learned gentleman has produced but two cases where improper judgements have been given, and those cases arose rather from misunderstanding than from any ill intentions on the part of the commissioners. I am only astonished that out of so great an amount of business as those Courts have before them, so few grounds of complaint should have arisen.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Hincks expressed his great surprise that what was so universally complained of, in that part of the country which he had the honour to represent, should have found any defenders in that house. (hear, hear.)<sup>37</sup>

Sir A. MacNab, Capt. Steele, and Col. Prince who is himself a Commissioner, respectively spoke with some effect in favour of the motion, which was carried unanimously, — the question of concurrence meeting with the same favourable reception.<sup>38</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

And Mr. McLean reported, that the Committee had come to a resolution, which resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Resolved — That the Laws now in force, constituting and regulating the Courts of Request, in that part of this Province formerly Upper Canada, requires amendment, so as to render it unnecessary to employ so large a number of persons to discharge the duties of Commissioners in those Courts — to introduce the principle of substituting payment by salary instead of by fees — and generally to improve the practice of those Courts.

Ordered — That Mr. Attorney General Draper have leave to bring in a Bill to repeal the Laws now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, for the recovery of small debts, and to make other provision therefor.

He accordingly presented the said Bill, and the same was received and read the first time, and,

Ordered — That the said Bill be read this day week.

Ordered — That five hundred copies of the said Bill be printed for the use of the members of this House.

A Bill to require Justices of the Peace to make returns of convictions and fines, was, according to order, read a second time.

Resolved — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of five members to report thereon, with all convenient speed ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Prince, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Merritt, and Mr. Boswell, do compose the said Committee.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to establish a Company by the name of the "Sydenham Mountain Road Company," being read,

Mr. Smith moved, seconded by Mr. Roblin,

That the seventy first rule of this House be dispensed with, as relates to this Bill.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats, in certain cases, and for other purposes, being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until to-morrow.

The order of the day for taking into consideration a motion made by Mr. Prince, on Monday the 28th of June, last, viz : That the grounds and reasons of complaint set forth in the Petition of divers electors of the County of St. Maurice, if true, are sufficient to make void the election of Joseph Edward Turcotte, Esq., being read, (138)

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until Thursday next.

The order of the day, for the House in committee, to consider the expediency of amending the Act now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and invasion of this Province," by enlarging the time for the sittings of the Commissioners to be appointed under and by virtue of that Act, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Delisle took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Bill for recovery of Small Debts brought in and read, and ordered to be printed.

Bill for returns of convictions and fines from Justices, read second time and referred to select committee.

Order of day for 2nd reading Seats Vacation Bill postponed.

Do, for considering a motion on St. Maurice contested election, postponed.

House in Committee of whole on Act for payment of claims.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Delisle reported, that the Committee had come to a Resolution, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's Table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Resolution reported.

Resolved — That the Act now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and Invasion of this Province," requires to be amended by enlarging the time for the sittings of the Commissioners to be appointed under and by virtue of that Act.

Bill to amend the above Act brought in and read.

Ordered — That Mr. Prince have leave to bring in a Bill to amend and enlarge an Act of the Legislature of the late Province of Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and Invasion of this Province."

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time, and,

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time this day week.

Order of day for Committee of whole on Game Law, postponed.

The order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the expediency of amending the Act now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to amend an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His Majesty King George the fourth, entitled 'An Act for the preservation of Deer within this Province,' and to extend the provisions of the same, and to prohibit hunting and shooting on the Lord's Day," by altering the time for the commencement of Woodcock shooting, from the first day of September to the fifteenth day of July, in every year, being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until this day week.

House in committee on Ordinances relating to Board of Works.

The order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the expediency of repealing an Ordinance of the Legislature of that part of this Province heretofore called Lower Canada, intituled "An Ordinance to establish a Board of Works in this Province," and another Ordinance of the same Legislature, intituled "An Ordinance to amend and render permanent the Ordinance establishing a Board of Works in this Province," and of making provision for the establishment of a Board of Works for the Province of Canada, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Derbshire took the Chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein.<sup>39</sup>

Resolution reported.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Derbshire reported, that the Committee had come to a resolution, which he was directed to submit to the House whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.

(139)

Mr. Speaker having put the question —

Is it the pleasure of the House to receive the report of the Committee ?

The House divided, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

YEAS.

Armstrong,	Draper, Hon. W.H. Johnston,	Small,
Boswell,	Dunn, Hon. J. H. Jones,	Smith, (Front.)

NOES.

Aylwin,	Berthelot,	Noel,	Viger, Hon. D.B.
Baldwin,	Boutillier,	Raymond,	(7).

So it was carried in the affirmative,

And the report was received, and the resolution was again read at the Clerk's Table, as followeth : —

Resolution.

Resolved — That it is expedient to repeal a certain Ordinance of the Legislature of the late Province of Lower Canada, passed in the second year of Her Majesty's Reign, and intituled "An Ordinance to establish a Board of Works in this Province;" and to inquire into the practical operation of the Board of Works since its establishment, and the expense attending the same.

Mr. Solicitor General Day, moved, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Harrison,

That the House doth concur with the Committee in the said Resolution.

House concurs in Resolution.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and,

Resolved — That this House doth concur with the Committee in the said Resolution.

Board of Works Bill brought in, and read.

Ordered — That Mr. Solicitor General Day have leave to bring in a Bill to repeal certain Ordinances therein mentioned, and to establish a Board of Works in this Province.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read, for the first time, and,

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday, the 14th instant.

Names taken down.

Several members having retired, the names of those present were taken down, as followeth : —

Mr. Speaker,

Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Boswell, Mr. Boutillier, Mr. Buchanan, Honourable Mr. Day, Mr. Delisle, Mr. Dunscomb, Mr. Hincks, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Morris, Mr. Prince, Mr. Quesnel, Mr. Raymond, Mr. Simpson, Mr. Small, Mr. Henry Smith, and the Honourable Mr. Viger.

And at ten minutes past ten o'clock at night, Mr. Speaker adjourned the House for want of a Quorum.

Appendix, 6 July 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Sir A. MacNab gave notice, that he would call the attention of Ministers to the Burlington Bay canal, with a view of eliciting whether it was their intention to adopt any measures with respect to that work, which was in a most defective state.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Harrison has given notice of a general Bill to naturalize some thirty or forty persons, who have prayed for that benefit, instend (sic) of each individual Member pushing on the claims of their respective friends.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Thorburn has given notice of an Address for an advance of some £3000 or £5000, (for I could not hear the amount,) to cover the outstanding (sic) debts of the late House, and to defray the current expenses of the present Assembly.<sup>42</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion re : Printing of House.))

Mr. Morris moved that the order of the day for receiving the report of the select committee to whom had been referred the subject of the printing of the house, which had been lost by the adjournment on Friday last, be revived, and that the report be received. In making this motion he was aware, he said, that he should be opposed by the hon. member for Lincoln. The committee had given notice to all the printers in town to attend and give information before the committee; they all stated that the price which had been determined on was a reasonable one; but he believed that an individual from the city of Toronto had since stated that he would be willing to do the work for less; hence the opposition of the hon. member.<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he should oppose the motion (sic) as the hon. gentleman had very correctly supposed; but his opposition did not rest exactly on the ground predicated by the hon. gentleman. His objection had arisen before he saw the persons alluded to by the hon. member. It had come to his knowledge that a combination had taken place among the printers of this town: there had been a meeting of all the trade at which meeting it was agreed that one only should put in a tender for doing the work, with the understanding that it should be divided amongst them. He (Mr. Thorburn) was well aware that the work could be done at a saving to that house of at least two thousand dollars; it became therefore an important consideration whether the house would allow a band of individuals to conspire together, and to obtain from the house a large sum of money over and above what the work was really worth. He thought it should be thrown open to competition, and that tenders should be received anew. Another point was, that as the paper was furnished by the house, he thought it would be as well that it should be manufactured in this Province. He desired that it might be referred back to the committee, with instructions to receive new tenders.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Morris said he would move for leave to withdraw the motion which he had made. And it was withdrawn accordingly.<sup>45</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion re: Usury Laws.))<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Hincks moved that a select committee be appointed to enquire into the operation of the existing usury laws &c. and in making the motion he observed that he had long been persuaded in his own mind that the usury law as at present in force, was productive of very serious injury to the true interests of the country. It was a question of very great importance, and he desired that the subject should be fully discussed; and to this end he would move for the appointment of a committee who were favourable to the measure in order that a report might be made and the subject be brought under the consideration of the house.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he would oppose this motion upon this principle, that the committee named by the hon. gentleman, consisted of the very last persons who ought to be appointed upon it, besides in order that a committee should be named by the hon. member it was necessary that a rule of the house should be rescinded and if a precedent were once set for dispensing with the rules of the house, they might expect that it would be followed up on all occasions. It was just as well that the Committee should be balloted for.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Harrison said that on this subject he thought it necessary to inform the house that the Government had it in contemplation to submit a general measure to that house, which should embrace the subjects of Banking; of the regulation of the currency and of usury, (hear, hear,) these subjects were so closely connected that it was considered advisable to include the whole in one act. (Hear.) He had no wish to interfere with the motion of the hon. gentleman otherwise than by informing the house of the intention of the government.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he could only say he had heard with great satisfaction the announcement which the hon. and learned gentleman had made, and he would with much pleasure, with the permission of the house, withdraw his motion.<sup>50</sup>

The motion was withdrawn accordingly.<sup>51</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion on Administration of Justice, Gaspé.))<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Christie ... ((moved)) that a committee be appointed to inquire into the abuses in the administration of justice in the District of Gaspé —<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Atty. Gen. Draper rose and said it appeared to him that the hon. gentleman who had made this motion, had not duly considered its effect. He believed the hon. gentleman would find no precedent which would justify him in proposing that the house should take on itself an enquiry of this nature. At all events he would find that in all cases where a special committee was moved for to investigate a subject of this important description, the hon. member moving for such committee was at least bound to explain the grounds for such a proceeding. The adoption of a resolution of this kind by the house is to a certain extent an acknowledgement that abuses do exist ; it would be in a manner prejudging the case. Although the appointment of a committee pledges the house to no particular course, yet it certainly did imply to the country at large that some grounds exist for going into an enquiry ; and he thought the more regular course for the hon. mover would be now to state to the house the grounds upon which he conceives the inquiry necessary, and why it is that he believes the only source of redress for any complaints which may exist, is from a committee of this house. But to ask for a committee without giving the house any information as to whether the law was in itself defective, whether individuals were guilty of malversation in office, was, in his opinion, asking what was altogether unreasonable. Before a committee is granted the hon. gentleman should put the house in possession of all the facts.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Cameron would ask the hon. gentleman also whether there had been any petitions presented to the house complaining of the ill administration of justice in that district. If there was not, he doubted whether the house would be justified in adopting any such proceeding.<sup>55</sup>

Mr. Christie said he was anxious to avoid entering into the subject at this moment, as it related more particularly to the character of an individual who presides over the District Court in the District of Gaspé. He had been desirous that the case should not be prejudged by reason of anything which he (Mr. Christie) might say previous to the production of those proofs which he was prepared to lay before the committee. But as he had been called upon to state the reasons why he desired that a committee should be appointed, he would do so. From one end of the District to the other there is one shout of disapprobation of the conduct of that individual who presides over the administration of justice in that district. He is pronounced to be a man who is totally unfit and incapable to fill that important station ; he is one of those who are called the family compact in Upper Canada. (Hear, hear.) If the committee were appointed he would be prepared to lay before them proofs of the most flagrant dereliction (sic) of duty — proofs of the most flagrant abuses in the execution of the important duties which devolve upon him as judge — cases where the jurisdiction of the court had been unwarrantably exceeded — cases of costs having been taxed to an enormous amount, unparalleled in other parts of Her Majesty's dominions, these were facts which he was prepared to prove, and if he failed to prove them, he was willing that the committee should visit him with their severest censure. He had been anxious to avoid entering into these statements until the proper time arrived for producing to the committee the proofs ; but as he had been forced into making them before the house, he would not hesitate to declare, and he would assume all the responsibility of making such a declaration that the individual holding the office of judge in the District of Gaspé, was one who, by his habits of life was totally unfit for the situation ; he was a man habituated to habits of intoxication and drunkenness. By searching the journals of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada it would be found that articles of impeachment had been entered against him : how he had been absolved God only knows, he came back, however, and resumed the administration, not of justice, but of injustice. Depositions in his favor were gathered with the utmost assiduity from door to door, and he had understood that one gentleman has asserted that he had never seen the judge drunk ; however, when the particulars came out, it appeared that he had seen him only three times in ten years !<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Aylwin here called the hon. member to order ; he could not consent that detraction of this kind should be indulged in before an investigation of the facts could take place. The character of a high public functionary was a stake ; he was a gentleman with whom he (Mr. Aylwin) had had the honor of studying his profession (hear, hear) ; and although he (Mr. Aylwin) would not presume that the hon. member from Gaspé would make assertions in that house which he was unable to prove, yet he did hope that at least such statements would be deferred until after an investigation had taken place.<sup>57</sup>

Mr. Christie replied that the house would bear in mind that he had avoided alluding to the character of that individual until forced to do so. He (Mr. Christie) entertained no personal animosity against him, and it was with great reluctance that he felt himself compelled to take this course, that the complaints which exist within that district might be expressed. He (Mr. Christie) resided at a distance of seventy-five miles from the residence of the individual referred to, and he had no communication or connexion with the court over which he presides, and it was only in compliance with the positive injunctions of his constituents that he now brought the subject under the notice of the house. In order to give that house a specimen of the way in which it was attempted to gloss over the character of this individual, he would mention a circumstance which occurred in that district. A packed jury, the foreman of which was a clerk in a mercantile establishment, drew up a statement expressing their satisfaction with the manner in which the business of the court was conducted.<sup>58</sup>

Mr. Hamilton. — It is not true. (Order, order).<sup>59</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he hoped that an end would be put to observations of this nature. He did not know how far the hon. member for Gaspé could be considered in order in making the observations he had made but he was quite sure the hon. gentleman from Bonaventure was not in order. Such language as he had used was disgraceful to the house.<sup>60</sup>

Mr. Harrison said he could not refrain from making one observation. It is well known that the individual alluded to is a public functionary, acting under the appointment of the Executive ; the Executive is therefore, bound to take cognizance of all complaints which may be made against him. He (Mr. Harrison) did not consider that it was a case which formed a proper subject for the investigation of a select committee of that house ; it should first be shown that there were no other means of redress. He maintained that there were ample means, without bringing the matter before that house at all : he thought quite unnecessary to appoint a committee, the effect of which would be to cast an imputation upon the character of that gentleman.<sup>61</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he believes the hon. gentleman had taken an improper course in bringing the matter before the House of Assembly. If the individual alluded to behaves in an improper manner, it is the business of the grand jury for the district to make a representation of his conduct. The hon. gentleman had spoken of a grand jury the foreman of which was a person in humble station ; the reason of that was obvious ; he believed it was a matter of notoriety that in that part of the province the population consists of a few merchants and fishermen ; as a matter of necessity, therefore, the grand jury must be composed of that class of persons who are most intelligent, and he believed that if the grand jury such as they were had acquitted the judge of all blame, he must stand exonerated until proved guilty by some higher authority. He did not think that house ought to entertain the motion ; it was contrary to all precedent.<sup>62</sup>

Mr. Atty. Gen. Ogden wished to be informed whether the hon. gentleman, in the application which he had made to that house, was fortified with any petitions from the inhabitants of that district.<sup>63</sup>

Mr. Christie said he was of opinion that it was competent for any member to ask that house to enter into an inquiry respecting any grievance which he might allege to exist.<sup>64</sup>

Mr. Atty. Gen. Ogden. — Then I am to understand there are no petitions.<sup>65</sup>

Mr. Christie. — It was not until redress had been refused by the Executive government that he had determined to make application to that house.<sup>66</sup>

Mr. Black. — The question now submitted to this house is one of more importance than at first may be conceived. An inquiry into the official conduct of a public functionary is by no means a matter of course, and on no occasion to be considered a trifling subject. The hon. gentleman from Gaspé has stated that he was not actuated by any vindictive (sic) motive ; he has asserted that he has brought the question forward at the urgent request of the body of his constituents ; the hon. gentleman had declared that no redress would be obtained from the executive government ; but he has not condescended to inform the house whether there were any petitions proceeding from the great body of the people of that district, or whether the complaint proceeded from an individual. I think, from the facts and my own knowledge, that I could point out the individual from whom the complaint proceeded.<sup>67</sup>

Mr. Christie. — I am that individual.<sup>68</sup>

Mr. Black. — I am glad that the few observations which I have made have drawn forth his confession. The house may now be able to decide how far that hon. member has proceeded in the disinterested manner which he professes. In point of fact, a complaint proceeding from him was submitted to the executive, and the answer was not so satisfactory as the hon. gentleman desired. It seemed certainly like a want of candor (to use the mildest term) on the part of that hon. gentleman not to state that the complaint had proceeded from himself, that he had not obtained the redress which he considered he was entitled to, and that therefore he now brought his complaint to that house. It would have been more manly if he had done so. But I think enough has fallen from the hon. gentleman to satisfy every person in this house that the application which he has now made ought not to be entertained. I am one of those who think that when the character not only of a public officer, but of any individual is impeached, some means should be afforded to the individual (sic) accused of answering the charges which are brought against him, and of establishing his innocence. But it will be borne in mind that the hon. gentleman has stated to us that the subject has already been investigated by a former House of Assembly. He has brought forward no new charges. If hon. members will refer to the Journals of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada, they will find that the charges referred to were then investigated. If this gentleman has been once tried, the public should not be put to the expense and inconvenience of a second trial, nor should the individual himself be subjected to the necessity of being tried a second time for the same offence. It will be competent for the hon. gentleman to move an address to the Governor praying that the proceedings which took place upon the complaint which was made by the hon. gentleman to the executive should be laid before the House, and they would then be enabled to determine whether it was a case which required their interference.<sup>69</sup>

Mr. Hamilton—If on the present occasion I rise it is as representing the larger portion of the district of Gaspé, and I think it my duty on the present occasion to deny the statements which have been made by the hon. gentleman opposite. The hon. gentleman states that shouts of dissatisfaction have arisen from one end of the district to the other, and that the conduct of the judge of that district had been characterised as an administration, not of justice, but of injustice. I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, to be under the necessity of contradicting the statement altogether. Such is not the case. I am sorry on this occasion to be under the necessity of rising, as I stated before, as the representative of the larger portion of the district, to deny the fact. The hon. gentleman seems to forget what occurred only yesterday, that he himself when a candidate for the representation of Gaspé, in his address to the electors, dared to touch upon the subject of the administration of justice. (Cries of order, order.) I wish to shew to this House that he does not come forward as a disinterested friend of justice, but in order to gratify his own vindictive feelings. (Order, order, order.) We were told that the foreman of a grand jury had drawn up an address in favor of the judge and district. Now I am compelled to state what that address was. A certain petition in the hand of the hon. member (Mr. Christie) was circulated in the district of Gaspé to obtain signatures; when he found he could obtain none, he signed it himself and sent it to the head of the government. (Hear, hear, hear.) That petition, Mr. Speaker, was presented to the grand jury; what was the consequence? the foreman of the jury returned that the individual who had drawn up the petition was guilty of a gross libel upon the character of the judge. Was this a burst of indignation from one end of the district to the other? It was a burst of indignation against that hon. gentleman himself. (Order, order.) We have been told to refer to the journals of the House of Assembly, and what do we find? Petitions for the redress of grievances in the district of Gaspé, but no complaints against the judge of that district. What further do we find? That the court over which that hon. member presided, the Quarter Sessions, was complained of; and yet we are told by that hon. gentleman that his court alone was pure — that there only could people obtain justice. The hon. member has, moreover, thought proper to state, that the judge of that district is a notorious drunkard. I have known that gentleman for 25 years, and during all that time I have never once seen him intoxicated. Affidavits innumerable have been sent up to meet the ex parte statements of the disappointed individual, the unfortunate barrister who took so much pains to prefer his complaint. The hon. gentleman tells us he himself was the individual who complained. What was the result of that complaint? Immediately upon its being made, his Excellency considered he was bound to call upon the Judge for his defence. The Judge might well have said, already has my answer been submitted, already have I been exonerated (sic); but that was not the course he followed — I am accused of certain crimes and misdemeanors; I will again prepare my answer; I will again justify my conduct, and I will shew the individual who brings this accusation against me in his true colors, (hear, hear.) I do not wish to enter at large into this subject — it is not necessary; but the fact that the very individual of whom the hon. gentleman has complained from day to day, and from year to year, the very individual whom that hon. gentleman would desire to see at the bottom of the sea, that very individual has been returned as a member of this House by the largest portion of the District, (order, order, order.) It is perfectly immaterial what the result may be, whether the motion is adopted or not, but I shall say this, it seems to me that by consenting to this motion the House admits that there are grounds for entering into the investigation of the charges preferred by the hon. member. He would refrain from entering more at large into this subject at the present moment.<sup>70</sup>

Mr. Small said he thought it was very much to be regretted that this debate had occurred: it would not appear very creditable to that House which was the highest tribunal in the land.

Such grave charges as the hon. member for Gaspé had made against a high functionary, were worthy of investigation certainly, but he believed the better course would be to move for an address to the Executive praying for the production of all papers relating to the matter, and the case would then come more clearly and properly before them.<sup>71</sup>

Mr. Viger. — The hon. gentleman (sic), I conceive, has acted with the greatest delicacy in this matter; he says I am ready to make out a case whenever it will please the House to afford me an opportunity. We cannot at present say that the charges are untrue. We are not to presume that an hon. member would rise in his place and be guilty of uttering a calumny upon any individual. There is no man in the House who ought to say so. The responsibility of sustaining those charges — and they are enormous I admit — must rest with the hon. gentleman who makes them. Was it not possible that the Executive had been led into error in refusing the redress which the hon. gentleman sought? If so, he deserved to be applauded rather than censured for persevering in bringing the matter under the notice of that House. He (Mr. Viger) could mention many instances where people were deterred from bringing forward the complaints — where they were afraid of coming to Her Majesty's Government for justice. Instead of blaming the hon. gentleman, therefore, he should be applauded for his courage: every hon. member sitting in that house knew full well that it was to men of courage and determination that they owed the liberties and the privileges which they enjoyed, of sitting and legislating in Parliament.<sup>72</sup>

Atty. Gen. Ogden said that he could not agree with what had fallen from the hon. gentleman (Mr. Viger) in asserting that it was the privilege of any member rising in his place to ruin the character of a public functionary.<sup>73</sup>

Mr. Christie deprecated the expatiating upon matters which were not properly before them for discussion. The question was would there be any inquiry granted or not.<sup>74</sup>

Atty. Gen. Ogden. — The question is rather, whether the hon. gentleman is fortified with any petitions to support his application. The hon. gentleman states that the responsibility of taking the step he proposes will rest with him; sir, the responsibility will rest with all of us. Sir, I will not take the word of any hon. member, however responsible he may be, as authority for granting an application of this kind; I require more than the mere ipse dixit of any hon. gentleman in such a case as the present, when an individual standing in the high character of a Judge is accused. The hon. Gentleman from Richelieu may laugh, and no doubt he is sincere when he states that it is the right of any hon. member to move for the appointment of a committee to investigate the conduct of any individual. There is no doubt the power exists, but it is dangerous to exercise that power on all occasions. What will be the consequences of such a proceeding, the committee will be appointed — witnesses will be examined — a report will be made — the house as a matter of course will concur in it, and resolutions will follow for an address to the crown for his removal; and all this without affording the individual accused the opportunity of exculpating himself. It is a course of proceeding which I can never consent to; its inconvenience has been felt in England; and I should be very glad that the day would arrive, and I trust it is not far distant, when we shall have an act similar to the one in England, that when a party is arraigned for trial before the House of Commons, he shall appear at the bar, and have an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses who are brought against him. I allude to the case of Sir Jonah Barrington. A list of witnesses, as in the case of a contested election, was given to him, and he was permitted to enter into his defence in the same manner as in a court of law. This is what I call justice. If an opposite course from this has been hitherto pursued from necessity, for God's sake let us discontinue it. Although the House has the power of proceeding in this arbitrary manner, the expediency of the thing has not been made manifest. I should have been better satisfied if the hon. gentleman had produced petitions which would justify us in taking upon ourselves so important a step.<sup>75</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he concurred almost entirely in what had been advanced by the hon. gentleman, the Secretary of His Excellency, and the hon. gentleman who had just spoken. He believed the proper course was to apply, in the first instance, to the Executive; but when he heard the hon. gentleman from Gaspé stand up and declare that he had repeatedly applied to the Executive Government and that he had received only insult, he felt that there was some explanation necessary from the hon. gentlemen on the treasury benches. Hon. gentlemen must recollect that the system of Government has been altered; and consequently they would not be entitled to expect more ready access to the head of the Government with all matters of complaint, and a more speedy and certain redress of all abuses. Upon these grounds he would be very much inclined to recommend that the hon. gentleman from Gaspé should withdraw his motion, and take the course which had been suggested by the hon. gentleman from the Third Riding of the County of York, and move for an address to His Excellency for the production of all papers connected with the case. The hon. gentleman would then come before the house better prepared to suggest such further steps as might be found necessary to be taken. If the papers are forthcoming, hon. gentlemen will have an opportunity of arriving at a correct judgment before entering upon so important a step as that proposed by the hon. gentleman. With regard to the observations made by the hon. gentleman from Bonaventure, it is to be recollected that that gentleman is connected with the individual against whom these accusations are made. There has been a good deal of recrimination indulged in, and I hope it will now be at an end. I cannot at present vote for the motion.<sup>76</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he certainly thought a great deal which had fallen from the hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Ogden) deserved attention. Many observations which he (Mr. Baldwin) had intended to make had been anticipated by the hon. gentleman from Oxford. But instead of withdrawing the motion he thought the house would agree with him in postponing the consideration of the question, until Friday next. It appeared the matter had been under the consideration of a former Governor and a former Council; and without intending to pay a very great compliment to the hon. gentlemen opposite who form part of the present Council, he would say this, that he would be better satisfied that the matter should come before them; for he would not hesitate to say that he was not entirely satisfied with the manner in which the affairs of the Executive department of the Government had been administered on former occasions. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the necessity for petitions being brought before the house he would observe that this is not the just complaint which they had heard respecting the administration of justice in the District of Gaspé; there had been petitions before the House of Assembly in Lower Canada, that he conceived, was quite sufficient. They could not, however, proceed too carefully; and he trusted therefore, the consideration, on the subject would be postponed.<sup>77</sup>

Mr. Daly observed that he believed the hon. gentleman from Gaspé himself, was in possession of all the documents relating to the case.<sup>78</sup>

Mr. Boswell, my own opinion is that the sooner the House takes action upon the matter the better, and I am utterly opposed to any postponement. Sir I am willing to admit that questions of this kind must arise, and that it sometimes becomes necessary, that a body having the high power which this hon. body is invested with, should enquire into the course of the administration of justice; but I trust that on all occasions the House will exercise their power with becoming dignity; and I do not hesitate to say that it would be exceedingly undignified to enter into the consideration of this subject, upon a motion such as that which had been made. The hon. gentleman from Gaspé comes down to this House, and tells us the administration of justice in the District which he represents is exceedingly bad, that an eminent Judge who presides in that District is in the habit of going into Court in a state of intoxication, and that the people of the District are indignant to an extent almost impossible to express. How is he borne out in this assertion? Have the people sent a signed petition? Without imputing to the hon. gentleman any thing improper, I would ask, where is our information upon which to found a proceeding, which would contribute to bring the administration of justice into disrepute. The more grave and serious the accusation, the more necessary is it that the House should be well informed before they take the first step in the matter. I shall, decidedly, vote against the motion.<sup>79</sup>

Mr. Christie said the House must certainly acquaint him of any intention of forcing upon the House the consideration of the subject. His object was now in part accomplished by having drawn to the attention of the Gentlemen of His Excellency's Council to the matter, he would therefore, readily move for leave to withdraw the motion.<sup>80</sup>

Mr. Merritt said he thought the hon. gentleman was correct in withdrawing his motion. He had made a grave accusation, which that House could not reject as destitute of foundation, as it must be supposed that that hon. gentleman has the confidence of the County which he represents; but the question was now brought under the notice of the Administration whose bounden duty it was to enquire into all abuses in the administration of justice (hear, hear) and he thought it should be left in their hands. This he thought was the correct course to be pursued.<sup>81</sup>

Attorney General Draper said if he understood the hon. gentleman, the mover of the resolution, that there was no new complaint, since the old one had been fairly answered, he did not consider that the question therefore was fairly before them, and he thought that they were not bound to take notice of it.<sup>82</sup>

The motion was withdrawn.<sup>83</sup>

The report of the MONTREAL GAZETTE does not coincide with the other reports in terms of speakers mentioned, therefore it was not possible to establish the probable speaking order by merging lists as found in all the papers. For this reason, the order of speakers was listed by merging the lists of all papers except that of the MONTREAL GAZETTE, and then the GAZETTE's list was added to the end. There is no internal evidence which can justify or invalidate this list ; it is purely arbitrary. The GAZETTE's speakers are Turcotte and Derbshire.

What the result has been, no one seems to know — but the Mayor of Kingston, I have been informed, was out at an early hour this morning ((8 July 1841)) with the whole of his posse urbis, to put a stop to any intended duello on the part of these legislators, and even allowed his anxiety for the preservation of the public peace, to carry him beyond the municipal limits, which the law has given to brevet rank as a Magistrate. I do not vouch for this, but tell the story as it is currently reported. No damage has yet been done, as I have seen today both the parties concerned, but the whole affair is any thing but creditable."

Doors locked.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant at arms to lock the doors.

And the doors being locked accordingly, and the Order of the day for taking said petition into consideration being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the Box in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the Members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

"I attest that this Box was, on the sixth day of July, 1841, made up in my presence in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of 'controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker.

Attestation of Speaker read.

Attestation of Clerk read.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box, and read by him, as follows : —

"I attest that I did, on Tuesday, the sixth day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a Box in which this attestation is found, the names of all the Members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the Members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

Names of members drawn, from which to strike a select com. for trial of Niagara contested election.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn to which no objection was taken : —

1 Quesnel,	9 Barthe,	17 Gilchrist,
2 Woods,	10 Ruel,	18 Day, Hon. C.D.
3 Durand,	11 Armstrong	19 Hopkins,
4 Derbishi,	12 Donald McDonald,	20 Williams,

Names drawn

Twenty eight other names were drawn<sup>2</sup>

A desultory conversation took place touching the right of exemption from serving on Election Committees.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Harrison wished to be exempted on the ground of being a public servant.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Viger on the score of old age.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Price on the plea of severe illness in his family calling him home.<sup>6</sup>

The two latter excuses prevailed, but Mr. Harrison failed in his plea.<sup>7</sup> and set aside.

(144)
and ((these names were)) set aside or excused, as follows : —

Fourteen against whom Petitions are pending.
Thirteen serving on Election Committees.
One being upwards of sixty years of age.

(145)
Six names were also drawn, of members who were absent.

Sir Allan MacNab, who was intended as the Nominee of the Petitioner, but whose name was drawn as one of the first Committee, made a legal objection to this course, and the House was occupied a long time in discussing the matter. Sir Allan at length moved for Counsel to be heard at the Bar, on the ground of the alleged irregularity.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Roblin said that there were already thirty lawyers in that House, and surely there was no occasion to have a stranger dictate to them. He should oppose the motion.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Sherwood should wish to hear the learned Counsel — he was there to attend to the rights of the petitioner, and he ought to be heard.<sup>10</sup>

Col. Prince said that he had often listened to the learned Counsel with pleasure, and would again; but on the present occasion, he should be deprived of the enjoyment, as the statute was a plain one, as all who could run might read. The law of the land must be obeyed, and if the name of the learned Knight was wrongfully drawn, there was no remedy now.<sup>11</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) decided that the motion was irregular, and called upon the Counsel to name a Nominee from the gentlemen whose names were not drawn as Committee men.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Small was chosen Nominee for the Petitioners.

Mr. Thorburn was chosen Nominee for the sitting member.

At half past four o'clock, P. M., the parties, with Mr. Thaddeus Patrick, Clerk to the select committee, retired for the purpose of striking said Committee.

At twenty minutes to five o'clock, P. M., the Clerk to the Select Committee, delivered to the Clerk of the House a List containing the names of the nine members unstruck, composing the Select Committee, which is as follows:—

Names of members of select committee.

1 Quesnel ,	4 Hale ,	7 Gilchrist ,
2 Woods ,	5 Donald McDonald ,	8 Hopkins ,
3 Powell ,	6 Chesley ,	9 Williams .

Nominee for the Petitioners, Mr. Small, Nominee for the Sitting Member, Mr. Thorburn.

THADDEUS PATRICK,

Clerk to Committee.

Committee sworn.

The said nine members and the nominees were then severally sworn at the Table by the Clerk, in the usual manner.

Committee to meet at nine a.m. to-morrow.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Baldwin,

Ordered—That the committee appointed to try the Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, electors of the Town of Niagara, complaining of the undue election and return of Edward Clarke Campbell, Esquire, do meet in a committee room of this House to-morrow, at nine o'clock, A. M.

House proceeds in the appointment of a sel. com. for trial of Hastings
contested election.

The hour appointed for taking into consideration the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings in this present Parliament, being come,<sup>13</sup>

The House proceeded to the appointment of a select committee to try and determine the merits of said Petition.

The Sergeant at Arms was directed by Mr. Speaker to go with the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the members on the business of the House.

House called.

And he went accordingly,

And being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present,

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

Counsel appears at Bar.

J. H. Cameron, Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Petitioners.

Mr. Speaker called upon the Sitting Member, his Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

John Ross, Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Sitting Member.

Doors locked.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant at Arms to lock the doors, And the doors being locked accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration, being read, the attesta-tion of the Speaker was taken from off the Box in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

Attestation of
Speaker.

"I attest that this Box was, on the sixth day of July, 1841, made up in my presence in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His 'late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted elections, or returns of members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to made more effectual provision for such trials."

(146)

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,

Speaker.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box and read by him, as follows : —

Attestation of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Tuesday, the sixth day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of the House, put into a Box, in which this attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of Parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to 'repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, 'entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted elections or returns of members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make 'more effectual provision for such trials.'"

W. B. LINDSAY,

Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn, to which no objection was taken : —

6 Taschereau,	13 Hermanus Smith,	19 Harrison, Hon. S.B.
7 McLean,

In the course of the drawing, Sir Allan McNab's name was taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the Petitioners, and the name of Mr. Boswell was likewise taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the sitting member.

Number drawn, insufficient to form a select committee, and House adjourns.

And there not being a sufficient number of members to complete the twenty three required by the 6th Section of the Act 4, GEORGE 4, Chapter 4,

Mr. Speaker declared the House adjourned, in conformity to the Statute in that case made and provided.

HON. AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker of the House of Legislative Assembly

Thursday, 8 July 1841.

Speaker reports return from "Fire and Life Assurance Company."

(146)

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a return of the "British America Fire and Life Assurance Company," received in conformity to an order of the House of the twenty second of June last.

For the said Return, see Appendix (F.)

House again proceeds to appointment of
sel. com. to try the merits of Hastings
contested election.

(147)

In consequence of the adjournment of yesterday, the House proceeded to the appointment of a select committee to try and determine the merits of the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings in the present Parliament.

The Sergeant at Arms was directed by Mr. Speaker to go with the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the members on the business of the House,

And he went accordingly,

And being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present,

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

J. H. Cameron, Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Petitioners.

Mr. Speaker called upon the Sitting Member, his Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

John Ross, Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Sitting Member.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant-at-Arms to lock the doors.

And the doors being locked accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the box, in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

Attestation of
Speaker.

"I attest that this Box was, on the seventh day of July, 1841, made up in my presence, in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled, "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His 'late Majesty's reign, entitled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,

Speaker.

The box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the box and read by him, as follows : —

Attestation of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Wednesday, the seventh day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of the House, put into a box in which this attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to re-

"peal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, "entitled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections, or "Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make "more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn, to which no objection was taken : —

Sir A. McNab, and Mr. Boswell, chosen as nominees.

In the course of the drawing, Sir Allan McNab's name was taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the Petitioners, and the name of Mr. Boswell was likewise taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the sitting member.<sup>1</sup>

Various were the expedients suggested by Sir Allan MacNab, and other great authorities ; and simple and conclusive were the arguments of those hon. gentlemen to set aside the law whenever it interferes in the slightest degree with their wishes.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Draper declared it not to be in accordance with inclination on the part of hon. gentlemen, that they were to be allowed to sit upon committees whenever they were disposed, but that it must be in strict compliance with the law only, that they could enter upon such duties, the question not being one of mere willingness, but of legality.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Harrison, in a ... reply to Mr. Viger, declared it not to be a subject of private right, that members should be accepted on any particular service that they were ready to undertake, but a question whether they could legally perform it. The act of parliament specified, that when the number of members that could be ballotted for a contested election committee did not amount to twenty-three, the house must adjourn there and then to a stated hour on the following day. The course was plain enough, it was the law and they were bound to abide by it.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Boswell suggested that the petition against the Hastings election should be postponed indefinitely.<sup>5</sup>

Col. Prince regarded the dilemma in which they were placed, as originating entirely in their not having decided in the first instance, whether the law as regarded contested elections in Lower Canada was in force or not. The Hon. Speaker, he conceived, must assume such to be the case until a proof to the contrary should be established. The question having been allowed to slumber so long, he regarded as a tacit concession of the point, on the part of Lower Canadian members ; but as it was the stumbling block that obstructed their proceedings, he felt convinced that if the sense of the house was taken upon the subject, a decision would be given in the affirmative, and the impediment at once removed.<sup>6</sup>

Sir A. MacNab ... could see no difficulty at all, providing those who had served and for whom the law makes a provision of exemption, were willing to do so again.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Quesnel did not assent to such a convenient construction of the act of parliament.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Speaker ((Cuvillier)) decided, that as the law of Upper Canada disqualified all those whose elections were contested, from sitting upon such committees ; pari ratione the law must equally apply to those of the lower province also.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Morin's mode of elucidating the position of the house ((was as follows:)) We have, said the hon. gentleman, about eighty members returned to parliament, a number quite inadequate, as experience has proved for the business that may come before it. If, he continued, Lower Canada had not been deprived of her rights, we should have had members sufficient for any purpose.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Henry Smith quoted from the act, that they were compelled ex necessitate to adjourn till to-morrow without discussion.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Speaker ((Cuvillier)) said the only motion that was in order, was for a call of the house; in the absence of that he should be under the necessity of adjourning it.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Hincks was sure that if members would attend they would be able to go on.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said that the number of petitions had not been duly considered. Those from Lower Canada required action upon them fourteen days after presentation — in Upper Canada no particular time was specified, an arrangement consistent with this distinction might be made to avoid a similar occasion of delay.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Draper did not consider, that although an adjournment must be resorted to at last, the time was misapplied in discussing the matter, with a view of finding a remedy. He was opinion that they would be obliged at last, to take the sense of the house, whether there was not a sufficient number of members present who de jure were not petitioned against.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Johnston thought that they had acted rather unwisely in not securing the attendance of those who had actually been present, but that they should have been permitted to leave, and delay the proceedings of the house accordingly.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Hincks said that one member was on two committees — either that was legal or he had no right to sit.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Small rose to move a call of the house — remarking, that when he had consented to serve as nominee on the Niagara election, it was with the view of facilitating business, although against his own personal convenience. The motion of the hon. member was, that a call of the house be made to-morrow at six p.m., and that all members neglecting to attend, be given into custody to the sergent-at-arms.<sup>18</sup>

Sir A. MacNab ... ((considered)) ... this as too harsh a treatment for absentees....<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Small consented to expunge that part relating to the sergeant-at-arms.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Hale said they would be no better off to morrow, than they were at present.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Day submitted that it was inconsistent that any member should sit upon two committees at the same time, as it would afford him an undue election either to facilitate or dispatch the business of the one or the other, according to his own private views. He appealed to the authority of the Grenville Act, and Gurney's statutes for the exemption of those who had already sat upon such committees, and argued a fortiori that those who were actually sitting had a much stronger claim to be exempt — the very circumstance itself implying a disqualification, which any express specification of the law could have shown ex absurdo.<sup>22</sup>

The discussion was continued for a short time longer, — Mr. Hincks persisting that any member was perfectly competent to undertake the duties of two committees at the same time.<sup>23</sup>

(148)

Motion for call of House to-morrow.

Mr. Small moved, seconded by Mr. Parent, that there be a call of the House to-morrow at ten minutes before six o'clock, P. M.

The question having been put upon the said motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth : —

Friday, 9 July 1841.

(148)

Statement of Bank of U. C. presented.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a general statement of the affairs of the Bank of Upper Canada, received in conformity to an order of this House on the twenty fifth of June last.

For the said Statement, see Appendix (C.)

Recognizance entered into in York county election contest.

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House, that the Petitioners complaining of the undue election and return of George Duggan, Esquire, for the second Riding of the County of York, had entered into the usual recognizance required by law, on the subject matter of the said contested election.

(149)

One member reported absent from com.
on Huron contested
election.

Mr. Christie, Chairman of the Committee, to which was referred the contested election of the member returned for the County of Huron, (Mr. Strachan,) informed the House, that the member for the County of Leeds, (Mr. Morris,) had absented himself, owing to illness, from the committee, and would probably, on that account, be absent a few days therefrom.

Public accounts for 1839 and 1840, laid before the House.

The Honorable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, laid before the House, by command of His Excellency, the Governor General, statements of the Public Accounts of the late Province of Upper Canada, for the years 1839 and 1840.

For the said statements, see Appendix (B.)

A message from the Legislative Council by John Godfrey Spragge, Esquire, Master in Chancery.

MR. SPEAKER :

Gwillimbury Road and Bridge bill passed Leg. Council.

The Legislative Council have passed the Bill entitled "An Act to amend an Act of that part of the Province formerly called Upper Canada, entitled 'An Act to provide for the making and keeping in repair the West Gwillimbury Road and Bridge, and to authorize the erection of Toll Gate thereon,'" without any amendment.

And then he withdrew.

House again proceeds to ballot for a committee to try the merits of the contested election for Hastings.

In consequence of the adjournment of yesterday, the House again proceeded to the appointment of a Select Committee to try and determine the merits of the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings in the present Parliament.<sup>1</sup>

The Sergeant at Arms was directed by Mr. Speaker to go with the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the members on the business of the House,

And he went accordingly,

And being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present,

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

J. H. Cameron, Esquire, appeared at the Bar, as Counsel for the Petitioners.

Mr. Speaker called upon the Sitting Member, his Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

John Ross, Esquire, appeared at the Bar, as Counsel for the Sitting Member.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant at Arms to lock the doors,

And the doors being locked accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the Box in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

Attestation
of speaker.

"I attest that this Box was, on the eighth day of July, 1841, made up in my presence, in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted

(150)

"Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly, and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,

Speaker.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box, and read by him, as follows : —

Attestation
of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Thursday, the eighth day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a Box, in which this attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly," and to make more "effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,

Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn, to which no objection was taken : —

Name's drawn for a select committee.

1 Johnston ,	7 Taschereau ,	13 Black ,
2 Hincks ,	8 Ruel ,	14 Merritt ,
3 Cameron ,	9 Thompson ,	15 Parent ,
4 Desrivieres ,	10 Harmanus Smith ,	16 Watts ,
5 McLean ,	11 Killaly , Hon. H.H.	17 Morin ,
6 Barthe ,	12 Armstrong ,	18 Durand ,

Capt. Steele, although he spoke with his accustomed good sense, and regard, for the value of the public time, may perhaps rather have overlooked the necessity of keeping within the law....<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Boswell ((gave his)) construction of a clause in the act, empowering the house to postpone a contested election, in cases of perplexity arising....<sup>3</sup>

Col. Prince ((attempted)) to bring about a decision as to the Lower Canada law of election....<sup>4</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) pronouncing against the regularity of introducing such a discussion, the position of the house was obliged to stand upon its own merits.<sup>5</sup>

(150)

On Mr. Holmes' name being called,

Mr. Aylwin moved, seconded by Mr. Cartwright,

A member incompetent to serve upon two committees at same time.

That Benjamin Holmes, Esquire, one of the members of this House, and a member of the committee appointed to try and determine the Petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the County of Huron, Esquire, complaining of the undue election and Return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Huron in this present Parliament, is incompetent to serve upon the committee now being struck, until the said committee, upon the Huron election, shall have finally reported.

The question having been put upon the said motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth : —

YEAS.

Aylwin ,	Dunn, Hon. J.H.	Morin ,	Sherwood ,
Barthe ,	Foster ,	Noel ,	Strachan ,

Cameron ,	Hale ,	Raymond ,	Viger, Hon. D.B.
Chesley ,	Hincks ,	Roblin ,	Williams. — 29.
Child ,

So it was carried in the affirmative, and —

Resolved accordingly.

Sir A. McNab, and Mr. Boswell, chosen as nominees.

In the course of the drawing, Sir Allan McNab's name was taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the Petitioners, and the name of Mr. Boswell was likewise taken out and set aside, being chosen Nominee for the Sitting Member.

((There ensued many)) repetitions of former opinions, and a confused discussion....<sup>6</sup>

(151)

Mr. Hincks moved, seconded by Mr. Small,

That the names of the members of this House, now in Kingston, be called over on to-morrow, Saturday, at two o'clock, P. M.

The question being put upon the said motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth : —

YEAS.

Armstrong ,	Durand ,	Morin ,	Smith, (Fron.)
Berthelot ,	Foster ,	Neilson ,	Smith, (Went.)

Cartwright,	Hamilton,	Sherwood,

So it was carried in the affirmative, and —
Resolved accordingly.

Mr. Hincks moved, seconded by Mr. Small,

That such of the said Members as shall not be then present be taken into the custody of the Sergeant at Arms attending this House, or his Deputy.

The question having been put upon the said motion, the House divided thereon, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

YEAS.

Armstrong,	Boutillier,	Campbell,	Daly, Hon. D.

Statement of affairs of Bank of Montreal
laid before the House.

House called.

Members Absent.

House again proceeds to the appointment of sel. com. to try
the merits of Hastings
contested election.

Attestation
of Speaker.

(152)

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a Statement of the affairs of the Bank of Montreal, received in conformity to an order of the House, of the 25th of June last.

For the said Statement, see appendix (C.)

Pursuant to the order of the day, at 2 o'clock, P. M., the House was called.

MEMBERS ABSENT.

Mr. Borne, (not yet taken his seat,)
Mr. Buchanan,
Mr. Cook, (with leave,)
Mr. Hopkins, (sick,)
Mr. Kimber, (with leave,)
Mr. McCulloch,
Mr. J. S. MacDonald, (sick,)
Hon. G. Moffatt, (with leave,)
Mr. Morris, (sick,)
Mr. Price, (sickness in his family,)
Mr. Strachan.

In consequence of the adjournment of yesterday, the House again proceeded to the appointment of a Select Committee to try and determine the merits of the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings, in the present Parliament.

The Sergeant at arms was directed, by Mr. Speaker, to go with the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the members on the business of the House ;

And he went accordingly,

And, being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present,

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

J. H. Cameron, Esquire, appeared at the Bar, as Counsel for the Petitioners.

Mr. Speaker called upon the Sitting Member, his Counsel, or Agent to appear at the Bar.

John Ross, Esquire, appeared at the Bar, as Counsel for the Sitting Member.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant at Arms to lock the doors. And the doors being locked, accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration, being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the Box, in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read, by the Clerk, as follows : —

"I attest that this Box was, on the 9th day of July, 1841, made up in my presence, in the manner directed by an Act passed in the 4th year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections, or returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box and read by him as follows : —

Attestation
of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Friday the 9th day of July, 1841, in presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a Box, in which this attestation is found, the names of all the Members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the 4th year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections, or returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

Motion for rescinding resolution of yesterday on competency of certain members serving on Election
Com.

Mr. Black moved, seconded by Mr. Boswell,

That the resolution of this House, of yesterday, declaring that a member already serving upon a committee on a contested election is incompetent to serve upon a second until the previous committee shall have finally reported, be rescinded.

Previous Ques. moved.

Mr. Aylwin, seconded by Mr. Prince, moved the previous question, viz : —

Shall the main question be now put ?

(154)

The House divided on the question, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

Mr. Speaker called upon the sitting member, his counsel or agent, to appear at the bar.

John Ross, Esquire, appeared at the bar, as counsel for the sitting member.

Mr. Speaker then desired the sergeant at Arms to lock the door, and the doors being locked accordingly, and the Order of the day for taking the said Petition into consideration being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the box in which, agreeably to the statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk as follows :

"I attest that this Box was, on the 10th day of July, 1841, made up in my presence in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted elections, or returns of members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

Attestation of Speaker.

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,

Speaker.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box and read by him, as follows :—

Attestation of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1841, in presence of the Speaker of the House, put into a Box, in which this attestation is found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of Parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to regulate the trial of controverted elections or returns of members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,

Clerk of Assembly.

(157)

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn, to which no objection was taken :—

On motion of Sir Allan McNab, seconded by Mr. Boswell,
Ordered — That the committee appointed to try the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, do meet in a committee room of this House to-morrow, at 1 o'clock, P. M.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Hincks,

Resolved — That this House do nominate and appoint, under the hand and seal of the Speaker, three Commissioners, for the purpose of examining the witnesses of the Parties in the matter of the controverted election for the Town of Niagara, and that John Shuter Smith, Jacob Keeper, Jr., and Edward McMahon, Esquires, be such Commissioners, who shall be authorized and empowered to hold their sittings at Niagara, on Tuesday next, the 20th instant, with John Shuter Smith, Esquire, as Chairman of the said Commission.

Mr. Hale, Chairman of the Select Committee appointed to try the merits of the Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, electors of the Town of Niagara, complaining of the undue election and return of Edward Clarke Campbell, Esquire, sitting member for the said Town of Niagara, reported to the House.

Select Committee to meet at one o'clock,
P. M.

Commission appointed to receive evidence in the matter of the Niagara contested
election.

Committee on Niagara
contested election report absence of members.

(161)

That they had met, daily, since their appointment, but were obliged to adjourn, without proceeding to business, on the 9th instant, in consequence of the absence of Caleb Hopkins and Donald McDonald, Esquires, members of the said Committee; and upon this day, in consequence of the absence of Caleb Hopkins and John Gilchrist, Esquires, members of the said committee.

On motion of Mr. Hale, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Sittings of Committee adjourned until 26th Inst.

Ordered—That the Committee appointed to try the merits of the Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, electors of the Town of Niagara, complaining of the undue election and return of E. C. Campbell, Esquire, as representative of the Town of Niagara, be adjourned until the 26th instant.

Com. on Huron contested election reports absence of its members.

Mr. Christie, Chairman of the Committee appointed to try the merits of the Petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the County of Huron, Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Huron—Reported to the House that, on the 8th and 9th instant, Mr. Morris, one of the members of the committee, was absent, from sickness, and that, on the 10th and 12th instant, Mr. Morris and Mr. Robertson, were also both absent, from sickness.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Mr. Haggerty appointed chairman to commission on Huron contested
election.

Resolved—That John H. Haggerty, Esquire, one of the Commissioners named to take evidence upon the controverted election for the County of Huron, be appointed by this House as Chairman of the said Commission, and that he be such Chairman accordingly.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Sherwood,

Copy of Poll Book to be sent to Commission.

Resolved—That the Speaker do order the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to transmit to the Chairman of the Commissioners appointed to take evidence on the Huron controverted election, a certified copy of the poll book taken at such election.

On motion of Mr. Prince seconded by Mr. Sherwood.

Sittings of Committee
adjourned until 17th August.

Ordered—That the Committee appointed to try the merits of the Petition of William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the County of Huron, Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of James McGill Strachan, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Huron, be adjourned until the 17th day of August next, then to meet in one of the committee rooms of this House at 11 o'clock, A. M.

On motion of Mr. Black, seconded by Mr. Boswell,

Time postponed for taking into consideration the contested election for City of Toronto.

Ordered—That the time fixed by the order of this House, of the 28th of June last, for taking into consideration the Petition of Henry Sherwood, Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of the Honourable John H. Dunn, and Isaac Buchanan, Esquire, be extended till next Monday fortnight, at the hour of 3 o'clock, P. M., and that notice to that effect in writing be forthwith given, by Mr. Speaker, to the Petitioner and the Sitting Member.<sup>2</sup>

Here again the delay was objected to, by Mr. Baldwin, who concluded by saying, if those hon. members, were unlawfully in possession of their seats, they should be ousted as soon as possible.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Thorburn remarked that only fourteen days were allowed for a petition against a return to lie upon the table without any action of the House being had upon it. The fourteen days expire to-day, and if no intimation has been given of the intention of the petitioners to follow up the matter, he did not think that the motion should be made at all.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Small observed that one of the Committies (sic) now sitting, would probably finish their labors, and report, in the course of the week. This matter should not therefore be ((put)) off too long.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Black moved a similar motion with regard to the contest for the second Riding of the County of York.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Hale hoped the hon. gentleman would name a different day. They had been caught in that sort of trap once already. — Two Committies (sic) have been moved for on the same day.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Hincks recommended that a different day would be appointed in order to avoid all difficulty.<sup>8</sup>

The day was altered to the 27th Inst. ....<sup>9</sup>

(161)

Time for considering the matter of the second Riding of York contested election postponed.

On motion of Mr. Black, seconded by Mr. Boswell,

Ordered — That the time fixed by the order of this House of the 28th June last, for taking into consideration the Petitions of electors of the Second Riding of the County of York, and of Connell James Baldwin, Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of George Duggan, Esquire, be extended till Tuesday, the 27th instant, at the hour of 3 o'clock, P. M., and that notice to that effect, in writing, be forthwith given, by Mr. Speaker, to the Petitioner and the Sitting Members.

Leave of absence to Mr. Jones.

Ordered — That Mr. Jones have leave to absent himself from the sittings of the select committee appointed to try and determine the merits of the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings, in the present Parliament, on account of ill-health.

List of objected votes to be handed in by the parties, to Niagara contested election.

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Small,

Resolved — That the petitioners complaining of the undue election and return of Edward C. Campbell, Esquire, for the Town of Niagara, and the sitting member, do exchange, on or before Thursday next, at 11 o'clock, A. M., lists of the voters objected to, giving the several heads of objection, and distinguishing the same against the names of the voters excepted to by them respectively — such lists to be delivered to the parties or their agents.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said that he was not altogether certain that the House was at liberty to make such an order. The sitting Member may not be prepared to furnish such list. He felt in duty bound, upon this ground, to oppose the motion.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Campbell said, if the hon. and learned gentleman had given him any intimation of his intention to make such a motion, he would have been prepared to furnish the list; but under the circumstances he would object to the motion of the hon. gentleman.

If at the beginning of the Session it had been made a standing rule, that all parties should give in a list of voters objected to, he would have been prepared to comply with it, but instead of this being the case, he had not even until this moment heard it suggested that such a proceeding would be required. It was an ex post facto resolution, and was entirely contrary to all precedent. Another objection as regarded his own particular case was, that he was a long distance from the town which he represented, and it would be utterly impossible to procure the required lists within the time specified by the hon. gentleman in his motion.

There was no other reason why he would object to the motion the Returning Officer for the Town of Niagara had been complained of, and that compliant (sic) was still pending; a Committee should be appointed to determine upon that complaint, before any other proceedings were had on the matter. The proposition of the hon. and learned gentleman was altogether unprecedented, and he would vote against the motion.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he was really astonished to hear the hon. and learned gentleman say that the motion was unprecedented. It was precisely the course which had been followed in the case of the Huron Election. It was evidently a reasonable proposition. How could the parties go into the evidence at all, unless the votes objected ((to)) were to be known? <sup>13</sup>

Att'y. Gen. Draper said, it appeared to him that even if the motion were adopted, it would be wholly inoperative as far as regards the expediting the receiving of testimony by the Commission which must necessarily be appointed. By what authority were they to restrain the commissioners from taking evidence in such manner as they pleased; they would not be confined to the lists furnished them. He merely threw out these hints for the consideration of the House.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said with respect to that, the resolution was only directory. The committee would not of course be restrained by it, but would be at liberty to receive evidence as fully as they might consider necessary. With regard to the remarks, which had been made by the hon. gentleman, the sitting member for Niagara, he was not precisely aware of the object of them. If the hon. gentleman had intended to impute to him, (Mr. Baldwin) any desire to take him by surprise, he would assure the hon. gentleman that he had no such desire. That hon. gentleman was perfectly well aware that a petition had been (sic) presented against his return and that it was intended to be proceeded upon. With respect to the time for delivering the list he (Mr. Baldwin) was perfectly willing to name a more distant day that might be convenient to the hon. gentleman himself. But if the objection of the hon. gentleman is to delivering the list at all, what would be the consequence? The whole election would have to be gone over again. Every voter upon the polls would have to be brought up, and his qualification entered into. He (Mr. Baldwin) was certain that the hon. Gentleman was not supported in the position he had taken by any precedents, because it is obvious there must be a large number against whose votes there can be no objection. With regard to precedents the gentleman would find that all precedents were in favor of the motion he had made. There could be no doubt the ends of justice would be best obtained by the delivery of such a list as his motion required. Such time might be set as would suit the hon. gentleman's convenience, but to say that lists should not be delivered at all, certainly appeared very much like an attempt to embarrass the proceedings of the house.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Prince moved, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

House to meet at 3 P. M. in future.

That this House do meet to-morrow at 3 o'clock, P. M., and on every future afternoon at 3 o'clock, P. M., (Saturdays excepted,) and that the 1st Rule of this House be suspended.

Mr. Simpson remarked that it was his intention to move that the rules of the house be referred again to a committee for revision.<sup>16</sup>

(162)

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and
Ordered, accordingly.

Petitions brought up.

The following Petitions were severally brought up and laid on the table :—

Ordered — That the Petition of the Corporation of the City of Quebec, be referred to the said Committee.

Committee on Petition of Sharrard
& Henry, report
Bill for Religious Denominations to hold lands, and a Bill to enable them to celebrate Matrimony.

Mr. Williams, from the Special Committee to which were referred the petitions of James W. Sharrard, and Thomas Henry, Christian Ministers, of the Home District, and of the People denominated Bible Christians, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to enable Religious Societies of all denominations of Christians, to hold the lands requisite for certain purposes therein mentioned, which was received and read for the first time.

And also a Bill to enable the Ministers of all denominations of Christians to solemnize marriage, under certain restrictions, which was also received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the Bill to enable Religious Societies of all denominations of Christians to hold the lands requisite for certain purposes therein mentioned, be read a second time this day week.

Ordered — That the Bill to enable the Ministers of all denominations of Christians to solemnize marriage, under certain restrictions, be read a second time this day week.

Mr. Hamilton, from the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to regulate the Fisheries in the District of Gaspé, presented to the House the report of the said Committee, which was again read at the Clerk's table, as followeth : —

Report of Select Committee on Gaspé
Fisheries Bill.

Your Committee having ascertained the fact that legislative enactments were essentially requisite to regulate the important Fisheries in the said District, and to protect its trade, have adopted, with certain amendments, all that part of the Bill relating to the Cod Fisheries.

Your Committee regret to find, that the value of the Salmon Fisheries has considerably decreased in the said District, and being of opinion that such decrease may probably be owing to the absence of those wholesome regulations which have been adopted in other countries for the preservation of such fisheries, and to the permission of a practice, condemned both in England and Scotland, of using stake nets in the rivers, have thought it advisable (the Salmon Fishery being over for the present season) to strike out the several clauses in the said Bill, relating to the Salmon Fisheries, and have prepared questions to be submitted to those persons engaged in the same and interested in the trade connected with them, in order that answers may be forwarded to the Clerk of the House before the next session of the Provincial Parliament, when a permanent law may be passed for the preservation of the Salmon and the regulations of Salmon Fisheries, in the said District.

(Mr. Christie dissents from that part of the report which attributes the falling off, of the Salmon Fishery, to the practice of using stakes : —

(167)

This is not the fact, — the Salmon Fishery cannot, in the Ristigouche, be carried on without the use of stakes. — In other respect he agrees with the report.)

Ordered — That the said Bill and report be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Monday next.

The Honourable S. B. Harrison, presented, pursuant to an Address to His Excellency, the Governor General, of the first instant, a return of the amount of duties levied at Bytown upon timber floated down the River Ottawa, for the last five years, specifying the amount paid in each year, and upon what description of timber, and also, if any, and what portion of such duties has been expended upon the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa, at, or above Bytown.

For the said Return see Appendix (G.)

Ordered — That Mr. Price have leave to absent himself from this House until Wednesday the fourteenth Instant.

Ordered — That Mr. Jones have leave to absent himself from this House on account of indisposition.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Cameron,

Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the Petition of William Walker, and other inhabitants of the City of Quebec, relating to the Timber Trade, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into the said Committee.

On motion of Mr. Simpson, seconded by Mr. Hincks,

Resolved — That the Committees on currency, and on Banking Petitions, be consolidated, and that it be an instruction to the same to ascertain the most advisable standard or standards of the value for the currency of the Province, and the regulating the exchange thereof ; and to consider the expediency of one general system of Banking for the Province, to report from time to time ; with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Ordered — That the Honourable Mr. Harrison, and Mr. Quesnel be added to the said Committee.

On motion of Mr. Hincks, seconded by Mr. Dunsmob,

Ordered — That it be an instruction to the Select Committee on currency and Banking to inquire into the operation of the existing Usury Laws on the Agricultural and Commercial interest of this Province, and that the said Committee have the same powers with reference to this, as to the other subjects now under their consideration.

Mr. Thorburn moved, seconded by Mr. Neilson,

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to issue his warrant in favor of the Speaker of this House for the sum of five thousand Pounds, to be applied in liquidation of the contingent expenses due by the Legislature of the late Province of Upper Canada, and toward the payment of the contingencies of this House consequent on the present session.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Christie, a member of the Committee, dissents.

Return of duties levied at Bytown on timber, presented to the House.

Mr. Price obtains leave of absence.

Mr. Jones obtains leave of absence.

Order of day relating to pet. of W. Walker, revived.

Committees on Banking and on Currency consolidated.

Com. on Banking to inquire into usury laws.

Address to His Excellency to issue warrant for payment of certain contingencies.

Mr. Moffatt suggested that the proper course would be to introduce a bill for the payment of those expenses.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Black said he doubted whether the expenses of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada could have any connexion with the contingent expenses of this house.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Neilson said the hon. gentleman had given notice of this motion several days ago, and although it is true that the contingent expenses of the late House of Assembly of Upper Canada formed no part of the current expenses of this house, yet as the funds of this province were now in common, he thought that all arrearages should be paid; it was wrong that the servants of the public should be deprived of their salaries.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he had repeatedly endeavored to bring the matter before the house, and he had repeatedly found various obstacles presenting themselves. He believed there were some of the servants of that house who had not the means of subsistence, and were living in the daily hope of receiving aid from the house, the accounts were already to be placed before the committee, there could be no irregularity in adopting the course he had proposed, it had been the usual practice in Upper Canada.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he was exceedingly unwilling to oppose the motion of the hon. gentleman, and if he rose to speak upon this question, it was not to throw any obstacles in the way of the motion, but he could not refrain from declaring that he heartily concurred in the remarks which had fallen from the hon. member for Quebec, that the servants of the house of Upper Canada are not the servants of this house; there seemed to be an attempt to place in the category of the contingent expenses of this house, expenses which were incurred before the existence of this house. There was no one who felt more than he did, that the honour of the Government was compromised (sic) when the wages of public servants are allowed to fall into arrears. It must be recollected that a new system has been introduced, and if public servants had not been paid, those who ought to hear the blame were those hon. gentlemen on the Treasury Benches; a representation coming from them he (Mr. Aylwin) would listen to with respect.<sup>22</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and—

Resolved accordingly.

Ordered—That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Council of this Province.

(168)

On motion of Mr. Black, seconded by Mr. J. S. M'Donald,

Order of day for
com. on Canada Fire Assurance Company
bill, revived.

Ordered—That the Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill for incorporating the Canada Fire Assurance Company, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Order of the day on elections bill revived.

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Durand,

Ordered—That the Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill the better to provide for the freedom of elections throughout this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Thursday next, and that it be then the first item on the Order of the day.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Baldwin rose and said he felt it necessary in consequence of the hon. gentleman on the treasury Benches not being ready to introduce a bill to provide for the freedom of elections; to bring forward a measure for that purpose; he waited a considerable time in expectation of such a bill from the officers of the government. He did not think it was consistent with the duty which they owed the country, to postpone the measure.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Harrison said he felt it necessary to make one or two remarks upon this subject. It must have been in the knowledge of the hon. gentleman himself, that it was a subject which had been in the intention of the government to take up; delays occurred greater than were expected, though not so great but they might be reasonably accounted for—Probably in another week the bill would be prepared.<sup>25</sup>

The latter gentleman ((Mr. Baldwin asked)) ... of the Treasury benches, whether they contemplated any legislative act, to remove the nullity pending over the petitions against contested elections in the lower province — <sup>26</sup>

Mr. Ogden peremptorily said, No. Elections were governed by the law of the land — if the member for Hastings was desirous of subverting the law, let him try.<sup>27</sup>

(168)

Address to His Excellency for correspondence from School visitor.

On motion of Mr. Dunscomb, seconded by Mr. Holmes,
Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House copies of the reports and correspondence received from the school visitor under the Ordinance 2 Vic. Cap. 43. in the county of Beauharnois.

Ordered — That the said address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House, as are of the Honourable Executive Council of this Province.

Order of the day,
for Com. of whole on Feudal Tenure
revived.

On motion of Mr. Dunscomb, seconded by Mr. Black,
Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the Laws, of that part of the Province heretofore known as Lower Canada, touching the tenure of Lands and commonly known as "Feudal Tenure," and to consider the expediency of altering and amending the same, and the best and most equitable mode of effecting the alterations that may be deemed necessary, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Message to be sent to Leg. Coun. for attendance of certain members on Sel. Com.

Resolved — That a message be sent to the Honourable the Legislative Council, praying their Honours will permit the Honourable

(169)

René Edouard Caron, and John Frazer, two of their members, to attend the Select Committee of this House, to which is referred that part of the Petition of certain Inhabitants of the county of Saguenay, relating to Winter Vehicles, on Thursday next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to be examined on the subject of the said reference.

Ordered — That Mr. Parent, do carry the said Message to the Legislative Council.

Order of day, on bill for relief of disabled and infirm persons, revived.

On motion of Merritt, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,
Ordered — That the Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill for the relief of disabled and infirm persons, lost by the adjournment of the House, of Wednesday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time, on Friday next.

Order of day, for House in com. on the matter of Lower Canada contested elections, revived.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Noel,
Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee to consider the orders adopted by the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada for regulating its proceedings in cases of contested elections in that Province, lost by the adjournment of the House on Thursday last, be revived, and that this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into the said Committee, and that it be then the first Order of the day.

Order of day for House in com. on laws levying duties on imports, &c., revived.

On Motion of Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. Dunscumb,
Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee, to consider the expediency of enquiring into the several laws levying duties on imports into this Province, and to consider the propriety of amending and consolidating the same, lost by the adjournment of the House, of Wednesday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

House to go into com. of whole on Judicature acts relating to Gaspé.

On motion of Mr. Christie, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Viger,
Resolved — That this House will, on Tuesday, the twentieth instant, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the expediency of altering and amending the Judicature Acts, relating to the Inferior District of Gaspé.

Naturalization Bill brought in and read.

Ordered — That the Honourable Mr. Harrison have leave to bring in a Bill to secure and confer upon certain inhabitants of this Province the Civil and Political Rights of natural born British subjects.

He accordingly presented the said Bill, to the House and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Monday next.

Order of the day for second reading of ballot bill, revived.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Durand,
Ordered — That the Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to authorize the voting by ballot, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Tuesday the 20th instant.

Order of day for 2nd reading members seats vacation bill, revived.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Noel,
Ordered — That the order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats in certain cases, and for other purposes, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday, the 21st instant.

Bill, inspection of timber &c., read second time.

A Bill to regulate the inspection and measurement of timber, masts, spars, deals, staves, and other articles of a like nature, in the Ports of (170)

Quebec and Montreal, and for other purposes relative to the same, was, according to order, read a second time.

Mr. Cameron moved, seconded by Mr. Noel,

Bill referred to select committee.

That the said Bill be referred to a Select Committee, of seven members, to be composed of Mr. Solicitor General Day, Mr. Derbishire, Mr. D. McDonald, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Brunet, and the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, to report thereon with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and that the 77th Rule of this House be dispensed with, so far as relates to the appointment of this committee.

Mr. Aylwin said there was not one more anxious than himself, that some modification of a Legislative character should take place, but this was one of those subjects on which it is difficult to proceed correctly. He must express his dissatisfaction (sic) with the departure from the rules of the house, which the hon. gentleman had committed in naming the committee.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Cameron. — The rules of the house have been departed from already, and he noticed an inconsistency, that by not observing this rule, they were unable to fulfil the other rules of the house, in appointing a committee upon any subject; those members should be selected who are favourable to the measures submitted. This could not be done if the committee were chosen by ballot.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Neilson. — Every one is in favour of a given measure, unless he declares himself opposed to it.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he should support the motion of the hon. member. He believed the rule which prohibited the naming of the committee, by the moving of a resolution, was one which should be abrogated.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Viger said that in his opinion the rule was a very good one; it was not right that a person bringing a measure into that house should name the committee to whom (sic) the measure should be referred. The object of appointing a committee is that the subject should be discussed, and information elicited. But if all the members of the committee are favourable to the measure, that full and thorough investigation which the house requires could not be obtained, he thought the rule should be adhered to it would then be in the power of certain hon. members to command the house.<sup>32</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and—

Resolved accordingly.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Simpson,

Ordered—That the order of the day for the House in Committee on the 1st Report of the Special Committee appointed to enquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Wednesday next, resolve itself into the said Committee, and that it be then the first order of the day.

On motion of Mr. Solicitor General Day, seconded by Mr. Black,

Ordered—That the order of the day for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the expediency of presenting an humble Address to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying His Excellency to appoint a Commission for the purpose of revising the Statutes and Ordinances of that part of this Province formerly called Lower Canada, lost by the adjournment of the House of Wednesday last, be revived, and that this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Then, on motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Aylwin,
The House adjourned.

Appendix, 12 July 1841.

((Unsigned Petition Presented.))

By Mr. McLean, who spoke too low to be heard.<sup>33</sup>

This petition was objected to, for want of signatures. Mr. Speaker ((Cuvillier)) brought it under the notice of the House.<sup>34</sup>

Col. Prince illustrated the evil of permitting the absence of this sine qua non. The gallant Colonel recited an instance of a Colonel of a regiment in Canada, suffering much annoyance,

Order of day for
committee of whole on 1st report on clerk's office, revived.

Order of day for
com. of whole on address to His Excellency on revising of statutes, revived.

and for a time unpopularity, by the action of a fabricated petition. It was presented, observed the member for Essex; with the signatures of from two to three hundred of his men, complaining of undue severity, and other grievances, and praying for the removal of the commanding officer. The Col. astounded, had the regiment paraded; when, chose extraordinaire, the men stepped forward and declared, they had never even seen the document!! They acknowledged having signed their names, but they were told it was for a very different purpose. The consequence was, to counteract the mischief, the friends of the gallant officer were obliged, at much trouble and expense to go through the country, and get up a bona fide petition, contradicting the whole of the forged allegations. Col. Prince also gave another instance of the character of a Magistrate being similarly affected by a petition, the signatures to which, obtained in blank, had been thus appended.<sup>35</sup>

Sir Allan ((MacNab)) requested to look at the petition before the House, and perceiving the non disputanda names of the quorum of the Quarter Sessions at the head of the list, was of opinion that such a collection of syllables was a sufficient guarantee to the subs that succeeded.<sup>36</sup>

Not so, Mr. Johnston; although it did contain four of five leading names, experience had taught him that even the initials J.P. (Justice of the Peace) might possibly be connected with instruments of rather a questionable character.<sup>37</sup>

Petition received.<sup>38</sup>

((Question Re : Money for Roads.))<sup>39</sup>

Mr. McLean said he had given notice some days ago of his intention to ask the Receiver General whether a sum of money which had been laid out in the construction of a public road in the Eastern part of the Province by commissioners appointed for that purpose, was likely to be paid from the Treasury.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Dunn said he would state the circumstances under which the money was granted: the act granted £50,000 from the unappropriated funds in the Treasurer's hands. Since the passing of the act there have been no unappropriated funds (a laugh.) One dollar in the pound was advanced, and the commissioners went on to construct the work. Subsequently five shillings in the pound more was paid, but where the remainder was to come from was more than he (Mr. Dunn) was able to say.<sup>41</sup>

Col. Prince said in consequence of what had fallen from the hon. gentleman he would give notice that he would on Monday next, move an address to His Excellency the Governor General, for information upon the subject. Some hon. members might be disposed to treat the subject with levity, but he (Col. Prince) considered that the Government was pledged to make good the monies which had been expended by the Commissioners. — He was led to believe that there was now no chance of its being paid — so much for Government credit.<sup>42</sup>

((Question Re : Burlington Bay Canal.))<sup>43</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab rose and said he had given notice a few days since to the hon. gentleman at the head of the Board of Works, that he would ask whether it was the intention of the government to bring forward any measure respecting the Burlington Bay Canal. That work is going rapidly to decay. It is a work of great importance, and one which should not be suffered to be lost.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Thorburn answered the gallant knight by saying, that of the £50,000 granted for the benefit of roads, only £25,000 had as yet been paid — inflicting much distress in those districts, where money had been raised for that purpose, on the strength of the grant. That until the remainder was paid, it could not be expected that a sum of money would be appropriated to other improvements, leaving a claim that had a prior right, unpaid.<sup>45</sup>

((Mr. Killaly)) answered ((Mr. MacNab)) that the matter was under consideration, and would shortly be decided upon; but he (Mr. Killaly) believed that it was one of the first works that would be attended to.<sup>46</sup>

((Questions Re : St. Lawrence Canal and Great Western Railroad.))

Mr. McLean ... asked what was going to be done with the St. Lawrence Canal.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Prince then humourously claimed equal information, relative to the Great Western Railroad....<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Killaly was silent as to both, as he had not had previous intimation of the intended inquiries.<sup>49</sup>

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Mr. Draper gave notice, that on Monday next he would move for leave to bring a bill affecting Bankrupts, and the disposal of their effects.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Duggan, that he would move for an address to the Governor-General, for copies of communications with the home Government.<sup>51</sup>

Mr. Day gave notice of a very important measure to be brought forward shortly, by the Government — Education in the province !! (hear, hear.)<sup>52</sup>

((Question Re : Political Amnesty for Rebellion Exiles.))<sup>53</sup>

Col. Prince rose and said, that as he observed every hon. member of the Executive Council who had seats in that house were present, he would give notice that he would, on Thursday next, put the following questions to them, namely, whether it was the intention of Her Majesty's government to introduce any measure for the relief and pardon of certain persons charged with political offences alleged to have been committed within the last four years.<sup>54</sup>

He knew that there were many who, like the sans culottes in the revolutionary days of France, could be called to memory only with abhorrence; but there was also numbers to whom the hand of mercy might be extended, without mistaken leniency. Of such men, the dupes of a crew of villains, he was not ashamed to step forward as the advocate. The punishment which they had suffered, ought to have been the portion of their leaders; of those men who, more elevated in infamy, have been cherished in proportion, to disseminate through the province, the miasma of their principles, with a more lingering and withering effect.<sup>55</sup>

A great number seemed to cast their eyes, perhaps mechanically, to the seats occupied by certain of the Opposition Members, whose names will at once occur to you.<sup>56</sup>

((Mr. Prince continued.)) The important changes about to take place in the Imperial Cabinet, if reports be true, render some prompt action upon this interesting subject necessary; and he sincerely hoped that the last act (would that it had been the first act!) of a liberal government would be to restore many, very many, of those misguided persons who had been temporarily seduced from their allegiance and loyalty by traitors and designing and dishonest knaves; but who, if suffered to return, would, as he (Col. Prince) verily believed, prove good and faithful subjects for the entire remainder of their lives, (hear, hear.)<sup>57</sup>

On motion of the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, seconded by Mr. Holmes, Ordered — That the Petition of the Board of Trade of Montreal, respecting Usury — and the Petition of the Board of Trade, of Montreal, respecting the Currency, presented to the House on the 21st of June last, be referred to the select committee on Currency and Banking.

Petition of Robert Armour and others, referred.

The Honourable Mr. Moffatt moved, seconded by Mr. Dunscornb,
That the Petition of Robert Armour, and others, merchants of the City of Montreal, praying for an Act to incorporate the Board of Trade of said City, presented to the House on the twelfth instant, be referred to a select committee, consisting of Mr. Dunscornb, Mr. Black, Mr. Burnet, and Mr. Merritt, to examine the contents thereof, and to report thereon with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise; with power to send for persons, papers, and records; and that the Rule of this House, in relation to the nomination of Committees, be dispensed with, so far as relates to the appointment of this Committee.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and —

Resolved accordingly.

Bill, Notaries in Gaspé, read.

Mr. Hamilton, from the Special Committee, to which was referred the Bill to amend a certain Ordinance passed in the 3rd year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled "An Ordinance to provide permanently for the want of Notaries in the Inferior District of Gaspé, and to remove doubts therein mentioned," reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill without making any amendment thereto; and the report was again read at the Clerk's Table.

Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Monday next.

Address to His Excellency for information, in relation to continuation of Saint Lawrence Canal.

On motion of Mr. Burnet, seconded by Mr. Merritt,

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to inform this House if it be the intention of Government to recommend a continuation of the St. Lawrence Canal, so as to open the communication hence to the Ocean, with the least possible delay.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Council of this Province.

On motion of Sir Allan McNab, seconded by Mr. Sherwood, Address to His Excellency on time of appointment of R. Baldwin, Esq., as Executive Councillor.

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to inform this House of the date upon which Robert Baldwin, Esquire, was appointed to the office of one of His Excellency's Executive Council, also of the day upon which he was sworn in, and accepted the said office.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Council of this Province.

Order of day for considering grounds and reasons against the Election of J. E. Turcotte, Esq., revived.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. DeSalaberry,
Ordered—That the order of the day for taking into consideration a motion made by Mr. Prince on Monday, the 28th of June last, viz : that the grounds and reasons of complaint, set forth in the Petition of divers electors of the County of St. Maurice, if true, are sufficient to make void the Election of Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Esquire, lost by the adjournment of the House, of Thursday the 8th instant, be revived, and that the said motion be taken into consideration to-morrow, and that it be then the first order of the day.

Order of the day for considering petition of Henry Sherwood, Esq. discharged.

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Black,
Ordered—That the order made on the 28th. day of June last, for taking into consideration the petition of Henry Sherwood Esquire, complaining of the undue election and return of the Honourable John Henry Dunn, and Isaac Buchanan, Esquire, to serve in this present Parliament, be discharged, and also that the order of yesterday, for the future consideration of the same, be rescinded.

And on making this motion Mr. Thorburn said that as the petitioners had shown no disposition to proceed with this contest, it was quite as well that the matter should be set at rest. They had quite enough to occupy their attention.

The public mind was not yet settled with regard to the present administration — the eyes of an intelligent public are upon them, and if they stray to the right hand or to the left, they will be checked at once. The electors of Middlesex had shown that they confide in the administration, and he (Mr. Thorburn) firmly believed that we now have better prospects before us; that such a policy would be hereafter pursued, as would reach the poor as well as the rich, and that all should receive protection — (hear, hear.)<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he was perfectly prepared to vote in favour of the resolutions of the hon. gentleman, but he confessed he was utterly at a loss to conceive on what principle it was, that the hon. gentleman had thought it necessary to favour the house with such a homily as he had done. He thought the motion which the hon. gentleman had made was called for — but not the observations. He hoped, however, the House would profit by the lecture.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Black stated that he had been under the impression, and he believed the whole House had been under a like impression, that the proceedings in this case, up to this time, had been regular; upon reference to the proper officer, however, it was found that no security had been given by the petitioners.<sup>3</sup>

Committee of whole, on to-morrow, on purchasing private stock of the Welland Canal.

(172)
 On motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by Mr. Hamilton,

Resolved — That this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the expediency of granting a sum of money to purchase the private shares in the Welland Canal.

Address to His Excellency for information on Bill to impose duties on imports from United States.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Woods,
Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that this Excellency will be pleased to inform this House whether the Royal assent has been given, or is likely to be given, to a Bill passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada, at their last session, intituled "An Act to impose certain duties on certain articles Imported into this Province from the United States of America."

And if not, whether His Excellency has received any instructions from Her Majesty's Government respecting that Bill, and if so, that His Excellency will be pleased to give this House all such information upon the subject as to His Excellency shall seem meet.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Council of this Province.

Address to His Excy. for certain papers in relation to the impeachment of the Hon. J. G. Thompson.

Arthur Ackland, chairman of the commission on Niagara election.

House in com. on Lower Canada proceedings as to elections.

On motion of Mr. Christie, seconded by Mr. Taché,

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House copies of the defence, or answer of the Honourable John Gauler Thompson, Provincial Judge, of the inferior District of Gaspé, together with the depositions or affidavits, and papers, in support thereof, to the accusations or impeachment voted by the Assembly of the late Province of Lower Canada, against the said Provincial Judge, the 12th of March, 1836, and presented to the then Governor in Chief, the 16th of the same month; and copy or copies of any despatch or despatches to the Governor of Lower Canada from the Government in England, disposing of the said accusations or impeachment, or relative thereto.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency, by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Counsel (sic) of this Province.

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Small,

Ordered — That the name of John Shuter Smith, be struck out of the Commission for taking evidence in the Niagara contested election case, and that Arthur Ackland, be appointed in his place, and be Chairman of the said Commission.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to consider the orders adopted by the late House of Assembly of Lower Canada, for regulating its proceedings in cases of contested elections in that Province, being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Raymond took the Chair of the Committee.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Nelson proposed his resolutions for the adoption of the committee.<sup>5</sup>

1. Resolved — That all matters which shall come in question touching returns of Elections, shall be heard at the Bar of the House, either before the House on a Committee of the whole House, or be referred to a Special Committee, as circumstances shall require.
2. Resolved — That all Petitions complaining of undue Elections, shall be direct and pointed in the charges of complaint; whether against sitting Members, Sheriffs or Returning Officers.
3. Resolved — That the House shall first determine whether any Petition complaining of an undue Election, contains matter sufficient for the House to proceed upon.
4. Resolved — That if the House shall determine that a Petition does not contain sufficient matter to proceed upon, such Petition shall be discharged.
5. Resolved — That if the House does determine that a Petition contains sufficient matter to proceed upon, a day shall be fixed for trying the merits of such a Petition.
6. Resolved — That if Petitioners object to the votes that were given or offered at the Poll, they shall by themselves or agents give (in a convenient time to be fixed by the House) to the sitting Members or their agents, lists of the persons against whom they are to object, giving also the different heads of the objections, and distinguishing them after the names of the voters objected to; and the sitting Members shall furnish similar lists to the Petitioners or their agents.
7. Resolved — That no ex parte evidence shall be admitted; nor shall any written evidence be received where testimony can be produced viva voce.
8. Resolved — That the parties may be heard by Counsel, and that Members complained of shall be heard in their places as well on the matter of complaint as on the evidence, but they must withdraw before a division on any question.
9. Resolved — That the evidence in support of Petitions shall first be heard, and the evidence in behalf of the parties complained of shall next follow.
10. Resolved — That after a witness shall have been explained by the party calling him, and cross-examined by the opposite party, every Member of the House may ((propose)) in writing to the Speaker, such questions as he may think proper to put, which shall be put to the witness by the Speaker unless he thinks them not pertinent ((to)) the subject; but the sense of the House may be taken thereon if the Member proposing the question should retire it.
11. Resolved — That in case of a debate arising on the ((propriety)) of a question proposed to a witness, or any other matter or thing touching any contested Election, the parties and their counsel shall be directed to withdraw whilst such debate is depending; and after the house has determined on the same, they shall be again called in and informed by the Speaker of the decision (...) resolution of the House thereon.

12. Resolved — That the parties interested in any contested Elections, shall deliver to the Clerk within a reasonable time before the day fixed for hearing the merits ((thereof)), a list of such witnesses, papers or records as ((they)) think necessary; and the Speaker shall issue his warrant for the producing papers and records, and ((attendance)) of witnesses, accordingly.

13. Resolved — That persons refusing to obey the warrant of the Speaker, shall be considered guilty of a ((contempt)) of the House, and taken into custody by the Sergeant at Arms.

14. Resolved — That in all cases of contested Elections ((referred)) to Committees, they shall follow the Rules of the House as nearly as circumstances will permit; and (...) Committees shall report the evidence produced ((between)) them, and the merits of the case as it shall have ((appeared)) to them, together with their resolutions thereon.

15. Resolved — That if either of the parties, their ((counsel)) or witnesses should speak indecent language against ((any)) Member of the House, or against the Rules of the (...) he or they may be called to order by any Member (...) in his place claiming privilege.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Neilson in proposing these resolutions observed that it was perfectly unnecessary for him to enter into the discussion of this dry law question. There were many hon. members in that house better acquainted with subjects of this nature than himself. His sole object, and he had from the first avowed that object, was to obtain justice for the petitioners, and he was sorry to say that too much delay had already occurred. He did not find fault with the house or with any of its members, but in a matter of this kind (said the hon. member,) I apprehend that a decision might have been had long ago. It will be observed that this is not a simple petition against the return of an individual member, but it is an address to the house generally upon the subject of alleged violence committed at the election in the district of Montreal. In consequence of the doubts which have existed respecting the law which regulates the elections in Lower Canada, petitions have been presented to this house, and those petitions have been presented under the supposition that that law was not in force. This supposition is justified in my humble opinion, and I believe the house will bear me out in that opinion. The Governor of the Province and the Executive Council had admitted that this is the case, an ordinance having been passed in Lower Canada with a view of remedying the defect. This house by receiving the petitions and ordaining the mode for taking them into consideration, have also admitted that this is the case. That so large a portion of the inhabitants of this Province should be deprived of having representatives of their free choice is a deplorable circumstance. The electors of this country should have full liberty of exercising their elective franchise, free from violence and intimidation. (Hear, hear.) Hon. gentlemen will recollect that the Throne of England has been supported on this principle, the present Royal Family occupy the throne in consequence of maintaining the freedom of elections (hear, hear).<sup>7</sup>

To add weight to the claims which he set up — he ((Mr. Neilson)) gave the house to understand as a piece of historical information that the Stuart family had been expelled from the throne for its corrupt interference with the suffrages of the people, indirectly conveying apparently the inuendo (sic) that unless things were so managed that the Parliament might be composed of such a majority of Lower Canadian representatives as were desirous of swaying the destinies of Canada, that the Royal Lady Queen Victoria, might prepare for the same agreeable journey as that which the mandate of his political physicians had forced upon her predecessor James II.<sup>8</sup>

The constitution of Great Britain would long ago have been annihilated had not the freedom of elections been preserved. Without this, the privilege of having a representative form of government is but a solemn mockery; it is ridiculous to pretend to take the sense of the people through their representatives when the people are not permitted freely to exercise their elective franchise. I have every confidence that this house will not refuse the petition of 150,000 electors, and that they will redress their wrongs, if they believe they have been aggrieved. I shall express no opinion upon the subject, I stand here as a Judge in this matter; the decision of the house upon the first resolution will determine the question, whether the house will proceed to determine upon the common law usages or whether they hold the law of elections to be in force.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Christie rose and addressed the Committee. It had been said on a former day that the adoption of such resolutions as those now submitted by the hon. Member from Québec, was not necessary — that there was a certain law in force which regulates the proceedings in cases of contested Elections. This proposition involves a question of law. He (Mr. Christie) had looked into the law relating to the subject, and he was prepared to state to the Committee the result of his research, and the conclusion which he had arrived at in consequence of that research. He had found that the contested Election Act had been originally passed in the year 1808. That Act was continued and amended by divers Acts of Parliament until the year 1834. In that year, by a separate Act, this law was continued for two years, and from thence to the end of the ensuing Session of the Legislature. This act having been passed by the three branches of the Legislature, was sent to England and laid before the King in Council. It was disallowed within two years from the time of its being passed. The disallowance of this act had the effect in his (Mr. Christie's) opinion of placing the former enactment which the disallowed act in part repealed, in the same situation as if the subsequent act had never existed — the previous act was revived. The act of 1834 declared that it should remain in force for two years, and from thence to the end of the next session of the Legislature. Now he believed it would be allowed that no session had taken place since 1836 until the present session of the united Legislature. It was true the Legislature had met, but no act was done which would constitute a session — no Act had passed the three branches, and he believed it was perfectly understood that unless an act were passed or a judgment given, it could be no session. His own opinion was that the former law was revived ; and he considered that the present House were bound to proceed upon it in the investigation of the election trials. He was ready to listen to the arguments and opinions of hon. gentlemen who were conversant with the subject, and if he should find that he was wrong, he would turn round, (hear, hear.) At all events he believed it was incumbent on this house to enter into the investigation. It was expected by the country, and unless they did so, the country would not be satisfied, (hear, hear.) He felt some regret in differing from many of his friends on this question, but unless he heard such arguments as would convince him that he was wrong, he felt bound to act upon the views which he had taken of the matter, and vote against the resolutions.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said that as he had been one of those who, when the subject was laid before the committee, had desired that there should be a postponement of its consideration, to be enabled to examine the law upon the subject, and to consider the powerful arguments used by the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf, he felt it to be due to the committee on this occasion that he should take an early opportunity of expressing the result of his considerations upon the subject. It was a subject, as had been well observed by the hon. member from Quebec, of grave importance. The consideration whether the law in question was in operation or not, was one which would be attended with deep and important results. One effect which was likely to be given to this decision was the disfranchisement of a large number of electors, assuming the facts which were set forth in the petition to be true. And without pretending at present to prejudge those facts, which he would be as far from doing as any hon. member of that house, he believed they were bound to consider that the facts are true, as far as this question was concerned. The result therefore of the views of some hon. gentleman would be the virtual disfranchisement of 150,000 of the electors of this Province, upwards of one fifth of the population. The decision of the present question is to determine whether this large portion of the Province is to be not only unrepresented but misrepresented. (Hear, hear.) It is precisely as if the Parliament of England were to enter into the question of the disfranchisement of five millions of the subjects of Great Britain. The proceeding would be precisely similar. When such are the consequences of a decision upon this question, it will not be over-estimating its importance when I express the deep responsibility which I feel in giving expression to my views upon the subject. It will be necessary to refer to the origin of the difficulty in which this question is involved. It is pretended that the petitioners have wontonly (sic) disregarded the law? It is pretended that they have endeavored to evade the law? far from it; they have uniformly expressed their readiness to acquiesce in the law. (Hear, hear.) The difficulty — assuming that a difficulty does exist, has arisen from a mistake, a misapprehension. It is a mistake into which not only the people of Lower Canada have fallen; but also both houses of the legislature; and the representative of the Sovereign himself. By turning to the Journals of the Legislature of Lower Canada it will be perceived, that the meeting of that legislature in 1836 was called a session by both houses, and also by the representative of the Sovereign. Therefore if it be a mistake, it is one to which all are parties; and considering that this is the nature of the mistake, I certainly had hoped as I ventured to express on a former occasion that those hon. gentlemen, in whose keeping, the honour of the Province has been placed, would long ere this, have come down to this house with a Bill to relieve us from this difficulty. — However little confidence I have in some of those hon. gentlemen, I have at least some confidence in others among them, and I certainly think that I had — that this house had — that the country had had, good reason to expect this from those hon. Gentlemen. I allude more particularly to the hon. gentleman from the City of Toronto, (Mr. Dunn) who I perceive has shifted his place to-day. (A laugh.) These gentlemen one and all of them owe it to the house and to the representative of that Sovereign whose servants they are and to the country, and they owe it to themselves, that they should have prepared such a measure. I have expected it at their hands; but I have been disappointed; this house has been disappointed. It is now said that if a measure were now passed it would be an ex post facto law; this is the excuse under which those hon. Gentlemen shelter themselves. There is no denying that it would have been an ex post facto law; but it is not better to dispense with a mere technical objection, rather than involve the most important rights which can be exercised by freemen, in so serious an embarrassment. Some of those hon. gentlemen are so tenacious respecting the adoption of an ex post facto measure have not always been so scrupulous. If we look at the records of Parliament of Upper Canada as well as of Lower Canada, we shall find cases of ex post facto laws having been passed, and I do not think the hon. and learned gentleman from Russell can demonstrate to this house, that on any occasion he protested against them. I find that hon. gentleman was not backward in passing an act to enable the chartered banks to suspend specie payments.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Draper. I was not then in the house.<sup>12</sup>

((Mr. Baldwin continued.)) The hon. gentleman would scarcely have voted against it, (order, order,) but to come to matters of more importance; I find that hon. gentleman was quite ready to assist in passing a law relating to the trial of criminal offences, committed before the passing of that act, the most highhanded measure perhaps that was ever carried into effect in any colony. I am not attributing this as a crime ((to)) the hon. gentleman; I only say that there have been measures equally entitled to be characterised as ex post facto? (sic) and they were certainly of greater moment as regards the principles of ex post facto legislation, than the one which I now claim at their hands. If we turn to that august body the Special Council we shall find that it has not been one whit behind. (Hear, hear.) Here Mr. Baldwin pointed out several of the ordinances of the Special Council.

The hon. and learned Gentleman the Attorney General for Lower Canada has told us that it is not the intention of the government to bring in any measure for the purpose required, and I confess that I am disappointed. — From this declaration, I am bound to believe that no measure is requisite, because according to the new system of government under which those gentlemen act, we must suppose they have the confidence of this house and the country. Educated as I have been both professionally and politically with a deep reverence for the laws of my country, it is out of my power to say that is law which I do not believe to be law. Therefore, if I come to the conclusion that in point of fact the act of parliament to which I have alluded is the law of the land, however it may grieve me to give such a vote — however I may mourn over the necessity, of giving it, I shall nevertheless be under the necessity of giving it, (hear, hear.) The hon. gentleman from Gaspé has referred to different statutes regulating contested elections; the hon. gentleman must be aware that the provisions of these statutes are contained in the Act of Union. I have listened to the arguments stated on a former occasion by the hon. and learned gentleman from Port Neuf, but they do not afford me sufficient grounds for concluding that the law of 1834 is not in force. The question is, what is the effect of the disallowance of the latter statute, of course if the effect was a repeal of that statute, it would leave the former one in force. The hon. and learned gentleman then entered into the legal construction to be applied to the operation of the disallowance of the act, in contradistinction to the repeal of a statute. It appeared to him (Mr. Baldwin) that the intention was to reserve to the Crown a negative on all acts of the Provincial Legislature, (hear, hear,) if therefore the construction put upon it by the hon. and learned gentleman from Port Neuf would interfere with this object, it appeared to him (Mr. Baldwin) it would hardly be a fair construction to put upon the act. While therefore he (Mr. Baldwin) did not by any means admit that the view taken by his hon. and learned friends from Port Neuf (Mr. Aylwin) and Montmorency (Mr. Quesnel) was one which could be so easily disposed of as seemed to be imagined by some hon. gentlemen the other day, he had felt it due to his hon. friends and to that house to state the reasons why he was not prepared to adopt that view as the ground upon which to vote upon the present occasion. There was, however, another view of the subject to which he (Mr. Baldwin) would beg leave to call the attention of hon. gentleman: It was a well understood and established rule in the construction of statutes that all such acts ((do)) relate to the same subject, or in the technical language of the profession, all in pari materia ((and)) are to be constructed with reference to each other. Where, therefore, a term is used in a given sense in one of such statutes, it is to be presumed that the legislature when they used the same term in another of them, meant to use it in the same sense. That the 48 Geo. 3d, c. 21, the first and principal of the acts which it is contended were in force at the time of the suspension of the constitution of Lower Canada by the Imperial act of I and I Vic. c. 9, and which if then in force is clearly continued by the Union act to this day, enacts in its first section, "That no petition complaining of an undue election or return of any member shall be receivable unless the same be presented to the house within 14 days after the first meeting of the Legislature ensuing the election and return complained of." Assuming then for the present purpose the correctness of the distinction contended for the other day by the hon. and learned member from the city of Quebec (Mr. Black,) between a mere meeting, a convention, and a session of Parliament, the legislature of Lower Canada had in this instance at all events, by the very terms they used, distinctly provided that petitions complaining of undue elections should be presented within 14 days after the first meeting of the legislature, whether such meeting should ultimately prove a session (in actual sense) or not; and it was obvious from the reason of the thing as well as from the words used by the statute that such was the real intention of the legislature; unless indeed hon. members were prepared to contend that the term "meeting of the legislature" which he had quoted from the act, were to be confined to such meetings only as should become regular sessions. The consequence of which construction would necessarily be that although there might be a meeting of Parliament lasting 20 or 30 days, and affording, therefore, ample time for the receiving all complaints of undue elections, unless a bill was passed, or judgment pronounced, so as to convert such meeting into a session in the technical sense of the term, it would be equally open to parties to petition against elections and returns within the first 14 days of a subsequent meeting as if such first meeting of Parliament had never been held at all — a conclusion to which he (Mr. Baldwin) presumed hon. members were not prepared to come. He therefore felt justified in interpreting the words "meeting of the Parliament" in the first part of that section of the act to mean any coming together of the Legislature which would afford an opportunity for such complaints to be made, without reference to whether it should or should not assume the character of a "session" — and this he had no doubt would be concurred in by all who heard him. He (Mr. Baldwin) would now direct the attention of hon. gentlemen to the concluding part of the same section, and they would find it provided "that whenever the matters contained in such petition cannot be fully heard, tried, and adjudged at the same session of Assembly in which the same were begun, that the same may be continued and taken up, heard and adjudged upon at the next meeting of the House of Assembly, in the same manner as if no prorogation had taken place." He (Mr. Baldwin) took it for granted that it would be admitted that the term "Session" in the proviso must be held to refer to any mob "Meeting of the Legislature" as is spoken of in the earlier part of the clause, as, if not, it would manifestly leave parties without remedy in the very cases most requiring the protection of such a provision — as where petitions had been presented during a short and abortive Meeting of the Legislature, when there had not been time to dispose of them, and which would, in effect, place it in the power of the Executive Government by the exercise of the prerogative (sic) of prorogation to preclude inquiry altogether. He (Mr. Baldwin) thought therefore, that he had established (at least to the satisfaction of his own mind he had done so) that the Legislature had in the Act of Parliament, which was the basis of the whole code for the trial of their contested Elections, used the term "Meeting of the Legislature" to mean any Meeting of such Legislature, and that they had also in the same Act applied the term "Session" to any such meeting. The Legislature therefore in this instance had chosen to make use of this term "Session," which, as was contended, a more restricted meaning was in general to be applied as descriptive of a mere "Meeting of the Legislature." It must therefore be contended in accordance with the rule respecting the construction of Statutes in pari materia, to which he had referred, he presumed that in the subsequent Statutes, upon the same subject, they had made use of the term in the same sense — he was therefore justified in holding that term "Session" in the 4Wm. 4. c. 9 was meant to impart any such "Meeting of the Legislature" as the same term used in the proviso to the 1 sec. of the 48 Geo. 3c. 21 clearly does — and as, therefore, there had been two such Meetings after the 1st May, 1836, the day referred to in 4 Wm.4c. 9, and prior to the Imperial Act of 1 and 2 Vic. c. 9, he held that the 48 Geo. 3c.21. and the other Acts continuing and amending it had expired with the termination of the first of those Meetings of the Legislature, whether it was or was not a "Session" in the restricted sense of the term, or with respect to other temporary acts — such at least was his view of the subject, and unless he should be shaken in it in the course of the debate, upon that view he was at present prepared to vote for the resolutions of his hon. friend from the County of Quebec, being of opinion that the Acts of the Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada for the regulation of the trial of contested Elections are not now in force.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Boswell expressed his firm desire that the house, if it had or could have the power to inquire into these petitions, should proceed to the investigation. His hon. friend the member for Hastings had endeavored to impress the house with the idea that the legislature of Lower Canada when it passed the law and introduced the word "Session" had not in its mind such a session as the law implies. He joined issue with his hon. friend on this point, for he believed that there were found in that Assembly, as there were in the present one, some of the brightest ornaments of their profession, who would give to the word its natural and legal signification, and that which the good sense of all men would pronounce to be the proper one. It was not meant indeed that it should be a session in which no act was passed bearing signification, but it was meant that some actual business should be transacted, some law passed or revised; and that this act should continue till such a session was held. He would not allude to the other parts of his hon. friend's arguments, because, although the speaker was entitled to great credit for ingenuity, he had taken excellent care to show that he was not prepared to sustain the position taken by the member for Port Neuf. He would now come to the point under discussion. His hon. friend from Hastings had said that the law was not in force. He (Mr. Boswell) should distrust his own good sense and legal knowledge if he did not come to a contrary determination, and assert that the law was in force. The question then was, the act having passed, was it competent in them, as one branch of the legislature, to overrule the law and proceed to the consideration of these petitions? No man was more willing than himself to uphold the constitutional privileges of that body: those privileges had been stated to be so great as not to be defined; and ought not therefore, to be carelessly interfered with; but on this subject there could be no difficulty at all, and he was bound to say that the Act of Parliament must have a much greater force than single privileges (sic) of that house. For what, he would ask, did those privileges amount to, except to the right to inquire into all acts relating to their own elections? The House of Commons in England had found great difficulty in carrying out these privileges, and it had been found under the old laws that these contests were made mere party struggles, and which in reality interfered with the course of justice. The hon. member referred to what was the state of things before the passing of Grenville's act, which was introduced to overcome these difficulties. This act encountered great opposition, and at the time it was complained and concurred in, that its introduction was a breach of the privileges of the house, which had no longer the same extensive powers it had before to inquire into contested elections. It was, however, a compromise: what the house lost on the one hand it regained in the solemnity given to its proceedings, which were henceforward to be conducted in the same manner as before the regular courts of justice. He thought therefore that the position he took was a correct one — the house had given up some of the powers it possessed before, in order to obtain more perfect machinery. But it was said that the house still possessed the power to inquire into its own elections. He did not deny it, but the question was, whether in the exercise of this privilege they would not be affording a precedent which might be dangerous hereafter. He who stood by the privileges was a truer friend of the people than he who sought to use power simply because they had it, and in opposition to the law itself. The hon. member then referred to the allegations contained in the petitions. He understood that it was there stated that the executive government had by itself and agents interfered with the election. He did not deny the right of the House to enquire into such accusations, and even to expel any member who could be proved to hold his seat in consequence of such practice: but if the matter were merely a minor one, in that case he had no difficulty in saying that the petitioners were precluded by the statute when they required certain recognizances should be entered into, and which had not been complied with. He said, therefore, that they were not in a situation to claim the protection of that house, and that having allowed the time to pass by, it would be an act of injustice to the sitting members were they to entertain their petitions. An attempt had been made to prove that this delay arose from ignorance on the part of the petitioners, but there was one of those petitions in which it was difficult to suppose that the gentleman concerned could have been ignorant of the law, he referred to Mr. Lafontaine.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Aylwin denied (sic) that Mr. Lafontaine laboured under ignorance: he knew that the law did not exist.<sup>15</sup>

If it was contended that he knew that the law did not exist, and was prepared to sustain a doubt on a matter on which he (Mr. Boswell) contended there was no doubt at all, he certainly was not entitled to ask for indulgence at their hands.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Aylwin — He asks for no indulgence.<sup>17</sup>

He (Mr. Boswell) put it to the house whether the matter had not been put as an indulgence. (Cries of "yes," "no.") That was the line of argument that had been adopted, though some had gone further and said that justice required that effect should be given to the prayer of those petitions. Now he was prepared to meet this cry of justice. What was the justice asked — what was its nature? Was it just in that Assembly, the first legal body in the country, to depart from law? Was it just to other members whose elections were not contested to depart from law? He would suppose a case in which a party owed a sum of money, had allowed the time settled by the Statute of limitations to run out without proceeding for payment; could this person, when before the Judge, avail himself of the plea that he was ignorant of the law? He declared that he had sought to discover arguments for these petitions, but that he had failed to find them. If they passed these resolutions, they might as well go further and extend the time for putting in recognizances at once. For himself he had no doubt but that the law was in force, and he did not feel himself justified in departing from it.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Durand referred to the question as one involved in legal doubts and subtleties. And was therefore inclined, as in all other cases of a like nature, to give these doubts in favor of the petitioner, and vote for the resolutions. Justice, he was satisfied, must be done, and in order to arrive at that an opportunity must be afforded of investigation. The petitioners trust to the generosity of the house to afford them justice, and a mere quibble ought not to interfere with their privileges.<sup>19</sup>

Capt. Steele was convinced there was but one course for the house to follow. If the law existed they must abide by it, and they could not introduce any measure to relieve the house from the difficulty it was in. If hon. gentlemen would only divest themselves of all those arguments which only serve to "make worse the better reason," they must arrive at the same conclusion he did, and vote accordingly.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Johnston would say a few words on the subject, though not many, as those on both sides must be now pretty well prepared, after all they had heard, to proceed to work like several medical men on the same patient — one to doctor, one to physic, one to bleed. (A laugh.) He heard several gentlemen talk of justice, and that was all that he wanted, though justice was sometimes principal; but, was it justice to interfere with the seats of sitting members when the time had elapsed in which it was considered lawful to do so? He considered that the law was in force, and all that he had heard from his neighbors had not enlightened him more than what he had himself read on the subject. The petitioners said that it was doubtful and if this was their opinion, it was more incumbent upon them to be cautious and place themselves in a safe position. He viewed the attempt as a mere stratagem to embarrass the Government, and should therefore set his face against it, and he was sure that his constituents would say that was the honest course.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Morin denied that there was any desire to embarrass the government, but the question was whether the house was at present properly constituted. His opinion was that the law was not in force, and the unanimous consent of the government went to that point. The law of Parliament and the power of the House had been abridged by the previous law, and it was imperative on them to assert their privileges.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Sherwood as one who had proposed the delay of this question, thought it necessary to state the opinion he had come to upon it. He had at the time referred to great doubts as to whether the law existed or not, and, had a decision been come to then, should certainly have voted for the resolutions. he (sic) had considered the matter well since, and after hearing the arguments on both sides, had come to the conclusion that the law as to Elections in Lower Canada was in force, still he was willing, as one of the Members of that House, that an investigation should take place into the merits of the petitions, and not all that had been said about ex post facto laws would deter him from giving every assistance to this enquiry. If the petition for this object was presented to the House, it should receive his most cordial support.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Small expressed his opinion that by the disallowance of the law, the Act which, not expiring in 1836, was continued to the end of the next session, was revived, and that no Session had been since held. Although he had come to this conclusion, he was not sure that the truth of these petitions should not be enquired into by the House: he thought, on the contrary, that they ought to be, and if, when the present question was disposed of, no one else would bring forward a resolution for a Committee to enquire into these petitions, he would do it himself.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Sol. Gen. Day rose and said he really thought the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf should extend some slight indulgence to the officers of the government in that house, and not censure them so severely as he had done for a supposed unwillingness on their part to enter into a discussion of this question. If they had refrained from taking part in the debate at an earlier period, it was that they might profit by the light which that hon. gentleman (Mr. Aylwin) was expected to throw upon the subject. But he (Mr. Day) was sorry to find that his expectations upon this point had not been fulfilled; that after the long harangue with which they had been favored by that hon. gentleman, they were as unenlightened as before; and that his arguments had proved to be a complete failure — so complete a failure that he (Mr. Day) was absolutely astonished, (hear, hear.) The question before the house was a question of law, but it had been encumbered with extraneous matter. They had been told by the hon. gentleman from Quebec (Mr. Neilson) that it is a question in which the exercise of an important franchise is concerned. He (Mr. Day) would readily admit with that hon. gentleman that the rights of electors are not to be trifled with. It was the duty of that house and every hon. member within it, to watch over the right of the electors with a jealousy as vigilant, as a man would watch over his own honor. The facts connected with the case before them was (sic) however of a very simple nature. A number of persons had come before the house with petitions, setting forth that outrages of a violent character had taken place at the election for the District of Montreal. These petitions had been brought before the house destitute of those formalities with which the law requires they shall be accompanied. The question now comes up, why have they not complied with the law? and it appeared to him (Mr. Day) that they were not entitled to that sympathy which was claimed for them by several hon. gentlemen. (Hear, hear.) And he rested this objection upon several grounds. It was contended that the authority upon which the application was made fully justified the petitions in coming before that house in the way they had done. It was urged that they were not aware of the existence of the law; this is a doctrine which is exceedingly dangerous, because if the principle were admitted in that house, that ignorance of the law, in doubtful cases, excuses the wrong doer, the principle may extend to cases when its application would be extremely improper. It was not only dangerous to depart from the stern principle of law, but no case should be made out which could justify the parties in claiming indulgence from that house. (Hear, hear.) It was a question on which no member of the profession could accord with the opinions expressed by hon. members. He believed the difficulty might be traced to the hon. gentleman who brought forward the petitions, having made up his mind hastily and rashly that the law was not in force. However this might be, it seemed to him (Mr. Day) that there had been a want of that careful vigilance (sic) which should have been exercised by the petitioners and those who advised and directed them. They should not have been satisfied to allow the matter to rest in doubt. They should have informed themselves carefully, before bringing their petitions before the house, having neglected to do so, they have placed themselves in a position in which they are not entitled to claim the indulgence of the House, or a regulation of the law on the part of the House.

As connected with this part of the subject, he (Mr. Day) having taken up this position, would now direct the attention of the committee for one moment to the remarks of the hon. and learned gentleman from Hastings. That hon. gentleman had appealed to the members of the Executive Government, and demanded why they had not brought in a law upon this subject. With what show of propriety, with what shadow of common sense, could his colleagues or himself bring in a law when they believed the law to be in existence? For what purpose should they bring in a law? Not to regulate controverted elections, because a law is already in existence (sic) for that purpose. If that hon. gentleman came to the conclusion which he said he had come to — if he was willing to assume the responsibility of passing an ex post facto law, why did he not himself bring forward a bill? But if he wished to shift the responsibility from his own shoulders to theirs, he (Mr. Day) could tell that hon. gentleman he would find himself very much mistaken. (hear, hear.) Having thus briefly disposed of this part of the subject, he would now merely say, in as fat (sic) as regards an investigation of the circumstances which have occurred, he apprehended that neither the members of the government, nor the members of that house individually, were disposed to avoid it. That a proper investigation should take place, was a proposition which no man in that house could be disposed to deny, (hear, hear.) To suppose that such investigation would tend to throw any discredit upon the government, would be to suppose an absurdity. This much upon this part of the subject. He would now come to the more direct business of the present discussion.

The point upon which the Court was called upon to decide was one of a purely Judicial character. During the course of the present session they had already been called upon to decide several matters of a Judicial nature. It arose from the peculiar position in which they were placed; but there had been no question before them the decision of which would be attended with more important consequences than the one now submitted; and it was not one the importance of which would hinge upon or grow out of the question whether A. should sit in that house, or whether B. should sit there representing a certain constituency; but its importance grew out of the consideration of the character which that house should maintain abroad, throughout the country. They were sitting in the capacity of Judges in the matter, and he trusted that every man would, without reference to the consequences, decide conscientiously, and according to his reason and judgment. The hon. gentleman from Port Neuf had endeavored to make out a case of difficulty. It was a question to be decided by authorities. It turns particularly on the construction which is to be put on the word session. He (Mr. Day) would not enter into the arguments at length but would refer the house at once to certain worthies of the law — and he must be permitted to say that he placed great reliance on those worthies — and by them it was held to be so clearly settled as to what was the true construction to be put upon the word session, that he (Mr. Day) could scarcely conceive that there could be any serious doubt upon the subject. There is no name which stands so high as that of the learned Seldon, and when to this highly respected authority is added the name of Lord Bacon, I think I am sufficiently fortified to meet the hon. gentleman as to the application of the term.

It appeared to him there could be no doubt as to what constitutes (sic) a session. No doubt had been created in his (Mr. Day's) mind by the reference made by the hon. gentleman from Hastings to the 48 Geo. III., c. 21. The hon. gentleman seems to have drawn conclusions upon which to rest his whole argument which certainly seemed not very intelligible. He was at a loss to conceive upon what grounds the hon. member had come to the conclusion that a meeting, and a session of Parliament meant the same thing, when they are obviously placed in such broad contradistinction. He would now direct the attention of that hon. house for a few moments to the question whether the disallowance of 4 William IV., c. 28, operated as a repeal of the previous statute. In coming to this part of the question he would observe, in reply to some remarks of the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf, that had the statute 48 George III., c. 21. expired by lapse of time, before the disallowance of that statute would most certainly not have revived it. But that was not the case. The repeal of a repealing statute operates the revival of the act repealed. This is a doctrine which I apprehend will not be controverted. But the disallowance of an act is totally different. The power of disallowance is a power which takes effect from the commencement. It is a condition hanging over the statute, rendering that statute incompetent until the condition is removed by lapse of time.

He (Mr. Day) would have been glad if the house could have proceeded with the trial of these election contests and disposed of them. They must all feel that there was an embarrassment now existing, which it was very desirable to get rid of, (hear, hear,) and if he could have come to the conclusion which would have justified him in coinciding with the hon. gentleman, he would have been most happy to do so, (hear, hear.)<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Aylwin would ask whether the hon. gentleman professes the same ignorance of what has taken place in England. The cry of the Colonists had gone across the ocean, but it appeared not to have reached that hon. gentleman. He (Mr. Aylwin) would assert the charge, having been challenged by the hon. gentleman to do so, he would repeat it before God and man that if an investigation were gone into, the administration would be found to have been guilty of acts of corruption of a most flagrant kind, acts which could scarcely be equalled in the world, (hear, hear.) What did the Government do, only within the last few weeks, when a complaint was made respecting the Toronto election? At the transactions which took place there men's minds were naturally indignant. An investigation could not be refused; but who were the men appointed to investigate the matter? One individual was appointed whose name was connected with the Terrebonne election; a man who had made himself conspicuous in the outrages committed there, some three or four months afterwards is named upon the commission to investigate the riots and outrages committed at another election. It appeared to him (Mr. Aylwin) extraordinary that the Government should express surprise when they were charged with participation in the occurrences when such proceedings as these were adopted by them. He (Mr. Aylwin) would not be intimidated or deterred from repeating the charge, which the whole Province of Lower Canada would reiterate, as with one voice. He was convinced that the conduct of the Government was was (sic) worse than it had been represented. — His mind ((was)) made up on this point, and he could not therefore consistently sit as judge upon this matter when it should come before that house. Let it be fairly understood that justice alone was sought for ; but he very much feared notwithstanding all the fine words they were favored with, that there was no disposition to give them justice. — He would feel exceedingly sorry if it should become necessary that the House of Commons should investigate the matter ; but he could never loose (sic) sight of this one consideration that although justice should be delayed for twenty years, yet a day of retribution would come at last. (Hear, hear.)<sup>26</sup>

Attorney General Ogden said that hon. gentlemen would best discharge their duty by confining themselves to the subjects before them, namely, the resolution of the hon. member from Quebec, entering into the merits of the petitions until that subject should come properly before the house. It was to be lamented that hon. gentlemen should so far forget the duty which they owed to the house and to themselves, as to undertake to pronounce upon these petitions before the time arrived for the investigation of the complaint contained in them. He (Mr. Ogden) would be perfectly prepared for that investigation.

With respect to the law regulating contested elections, he had already stated that he believed it to be in force ; and he had heard nothing to induce him to believe the contrary. Upon the disallowance of the repealing statute, the act intended to be repealed thereby was of course revived : and he was only surprised that hon. gentlemen were so obstinate (if he might use such an expression) as not to admit a fact which had been so clearly established. Something more than the mere declaration of hon. members was necessary to prove that the law was not in force, and he (Mr. Ogden) could not believe that the petitioners acted in ignorance of this, (order, order.) He stood upon this conviction, and he believed in his conscience that that law, was the law of the land, and so long as it was so it could not be presumed that the petitioners were ignorant of it. He should vote against the resolutions.<sup>27</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said the subject was one which had occupied the public mind for a considerable time. Serious and grave charges having been made, not only that violence had prevailed at the Elections, in some parts of Lower Canada, but that the government itself had been a party to those riots and outrages. The government was accused of violence, intimidation, bribery, partiality, and all sorts of corruption. He observed that the matter had already occupied the attention of the Imperial Parliament, and he regretted very much, indeed, that the hon. gentlemen who occupy the treasury benches — the advisers of the Government had not felt it necessary to introduce a measure calculated to satisfy the public mind, regarding their intention of providing a remedy for the embarrassment under which they at present stood, and one which would render justice to the 150,000 petitioners. He was satisfied that a large majority of the House would have gone with them (the Officers of the Government) in the adoption of such a measure as would be calculated to render substantial justice to those petitioners (sic) ; who have an undoubted right to claim at our hands, but more especially at the hands of those hon. gentlemen, whose duty it is to advise the Government, a measure of that description. What is the question before us ? we have petitions from 150,000 persons, complaining that they are not only unrepresented, but that they are misrepresented, now this being the case, what steps have been taken to render these people justice : we have been a month in session without taking any steps to accomplish this purpose. If those hon. gentlemen would introduce a law, extending the provisions of the former law for one month — (why did you not do so ?) I will tell you why : because it would come with a much better grace from the Officers of the Government. The hon. gentleman from Ottawa (Mr. Day) says the people who have petitioned this House, are not entitled to our sympathy. He says it is not generally believed that the outrages complained of occurred.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Day begged to correct the hon. and learned Knight ; he said the government had not, as was asserted, any participation in those disturbances.<sup>29</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab. — But you have the assertion of these petitioners to the contrary ; and this being the case, would it injure those hon. gentlemen to allow the investigation to take place ? (Hear, hear.) If no other member of that House would introduce a Bill, he (Sir Allan) would do so, and if he were told it would be an ex post facto law, he would turn to the journals and show the House that ex post facto laws in abundance had already been passed ; and one in particular, which many hon. gentlemen then present had been very active in passing, which took a retrospective effect of at least 20 years. He alluded to the act which established a Court of Chancery. He fully believed that he would be justified in going with that House in the adoption of any measure which would render justice to the petitioners. His desire would be that the Committee should rise, and recommend the appointment of a Select Committee for the purpose of introducing a measure, at once, upon this subject ; and that in a few days, if it were found that the Legislative Council were unwilling to co-operate with the House of Assembly in the adoption of such measures; that the House would then be justified in taking a much higher stand; in rendering justice to the petitioners at all events, without further delay.<sup>30</sup>

Atty. Gen. Draper said after the numerous invitations with which he had been favored by the hon. gentleman from Port Neuf, he could not of course refrain from entering into the discussion; and although he had been silent thus far, it was not because he had not been called upon to take up the subject, but it was because he had been desirous of profiting by the opinion of those upon whose judgement he could most rely.<sup>31</sup>

As to ignorance of the law, the learned Attorney General thought such an excuse was not very complimentary to one of the gentlemen at least, he having always been given to understand that Mr. Lafontaine was a lawyer of some celebrity in the Lower Province. (Hear, hear.)<sup>32</sup>

He had not, however, discovered that any new principle was requisite to be applied to the present case, and he felt therefore at liberty to argue the matter on the broad principle of the English law. There was some principle bearing upon this case which he (Mr. Draper) thought was capable of controverting the arguments of the hon. and learned member from Port Neuf, from beginning to end. The hon. gentlemen (said Mr. Draper) treats this law which was disallowed — and which was in fact brought into existence, and enforced as it were, de bene esse, if I may be permitted to apply a professional term, as he would an Act which had been absolutely confirmed and allowed. An Act of Parliament to be complete requires the concurrence of the King, Lords, and Commons. And in like manner it requires the concurrence of those three estates to put an end to the existence of an Act, which has received the sanction of those three estates: but it requires no such thing to put an end to an Act such as the one in question, because this last mentioned Act never was complete and perfect. The question then is, whether the simple dissent of the Sovereign, expressed according to law, is to be considered as placing the matter in the same light as the Legislative authority of three estates. I say it is not; and for this reason; the law which has once been concurred in by the three branches of the Legislature is final in its nature, and must continue until put an end to by equal authority to that which gave it birth.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Hincks said that to him this was a very embarrassing question — he had stated so on a former occasion — it was one too, that was not to be summed up in the clause of a Statute. The mere reading of that would not do. The question presented a different, and more important aspect; one of serious consideration, viz., that, by the vote of this House, 150,000 souls were to be virtually disfranchised. The character of the government — the character of this House is involved, and although not a member of the profession to decide with legal subtlety on the matter, he was well convinced, he knew, that to aid such a thing as this was wrong. In the Lower part of the Province the general impression was, that the Act was not in force — the question as it was now presented was a stratagem, to get quit of a grave and important matter, but he (Mr. Hincks) would put it to the House if there was not good grounds for investigation. He, for one, doubted if the Election took place at all. Hostile armies, (so to speak) met to fight instead of electing a Member of Parliament. Although opposed to the gallant Knight, (Sir A. McNab), in politics, he (Mr. H.) was glad that the gentleman had come so manfully forward in support of so great a number of Her Majesty's subjects; and he felt deep regret and mortification to observe that members elected as reformers, endeavored to stifle investigation. As for himself, he asked no indulgence, but simple justice, to satisfy the very general feeling that prevailed on the subject. He had a high respect for many of the hon. gentlemen petitioned against, and should be extremely sorry to see the allegations sustained, but a sense of duty to his country compelled him to vote in favor of the resolutions. A ((great)) deal had been said by the hon. member (for Portneuf) and enough to cause government to court investigation. It had been publicly stated that violence had been done. (cries of name, name.) He (Mr. Hincks) was not afraid to name — Mr. Driscoll, Queen's Counsel for Montreal. If hon. gentlemen opposite were not afraid of investigation, why not come forward with a law, which would settle the question at once, and forward the ends of justice; but if the government was in opposition, how could a law be got through the other House — (uproar and cries of order, order.) — Messrs. Johnson, Hale, and Moffat (sic) rose to order. He (Mr. Hincks) thought he was quite in order, and he would reiterate the opinion, that without the support of government, such a measure could not be carried.

With regard to the amount of confidence in Her Majesty's Government he for one was not sorry for any thing he had said on a former occasion, when he gave the grounds why he could not support the honorable gentlemen opposite. Hon. gentlemen say that he (Mr. H.) was mistaken, because they were very liberal; now was the time to show that liberality — now was the time to bring forward a measure to test their sincerity, satisfy the country of it, and relieve this House of an embarrassing question — one, that whatever may be the letter of the law — the necessity and justice of investigation is apparent.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Dunscomb had listened to Mr. Hincks with great attention. That gentleman asked if he (Mr. Dunscombe) did not court investigation in regard to his election. He did not court it, but the petition against him was a tissue of lies. It was said many people were killed; was this not a well known falsehood? Again, it was said his election was gained by the efforts of her Majesty's army; was this not equally false? He (Mr. Dunscombe) would invite the attention of the house to such statements. He fancied it would be found out the dead men were like the Kilkenny cats — there was nothing left of them but their tails, (tales?) (laughter).<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Harrison could not sit still and hear this called a dry question of law. He (Mr. Harrison) expressed no opinion as regards the truth of falsehood of the allegations against the sitting member, but he must repudiate the idea expressed by the hon. member for Oxford, that the Government wish to stifle inquiry, or that this was a test question to try the amount of its liberality. He (Mr. Harrison) thought it would be extraordinary to test this by an act of injustice, which would at all events be the effect of an ex post facto law.<sup>36</sup>

Col. Prince was of opinion that the law was in existence. When it was said that 150,000 persons were without representation this was an argument to arouse our feelings as Britons. But could it be said that the six or eight members who had now the honor to sit in this house, were without a voice in the representation? Had no votes been cast for them? This was a strange and mistaken mode of arguing the question. The petitioners had been charged with ignorance, but he would ask if it could be possible that the gentleman who contended the seat for Terrebonne could be so... ((charged))? Many thought that gentleman second to none in the Province, and he (Mr. Prince) thought it was absurd to charge him with ignorance of the law. If injustice had been done, he would not be one to stand forward and countenance it. But he had yet to learn that 150,000 persons were not represented. If hon. gentlemen would show proof of this, he would go any length to have so monstrous an evil rectified. There may have been rows, but he would ask if this had not always been so? — (Cries of no, no — election for Kingston — roars of laughter). If individuals had taken proper care and diligence, he (Mr. Prince) thought all these complaints might have been avoided. The hon. member for Gaspé in fifteen minutes threw more light on the subject than all that had been said since. He had listened attentively to the hon. Member for Port Neuf, but he thought he only enveloped the matter in a gossamer veil, which when drawn from it, hon. members would look in vain for truth. Seven hours and a half had been spent in discussing the law of a simple question. He (Mr. Prince) could not believe that the hon. member for Port Neuf would stake his reputation as a lawyer on the affirmation of this question. Before sitting down he must remark that he could not take the course of the hon. member for Hastings in believing the allegations true, but must believe those charge (sic) are innocent until proved guilty.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Morin said the question was, had the members whose seats were contested been actually chosen? He thought not and that they did not represent one tenth part of the constituency. Mr. Lafontaine from violence could not present himself. From the place the poll was situated there could be no election. It was placed at the most northern part of the county, and to get to it a large forest had to be gone through, and he would ask the house if there had been an honest intention would this have been done? Most certainly not.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Morin... was corrected by Mr. Simpson and Mr. Dunscomb who respectively declared that they had polled 600 and 500 votes!!<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Black regretted that the misapplication of eloquence, should have been exerted to give a colouring to charges which he was sure would be found untrue. The position assumed by the hon. and learned member on a previous occasion, was maintained by him, fully establishing the existence of the law.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Hincks spoke before the close of the debate — but diverged altogether from the argument. The want of a proper controul (sic) over his feelings subjected the hon. member to many interruptions — and, altogether, his remarks were listened to with much impatience by the house. — It being now past midnight — the debate still heavily progressed amidst the continued and unheeded cries of "order," and the repeated clamours of "question, question."<sup>41</sup>

Sir A. MacNab would vote against the resolution, but nevertheless he hoped the house would do all the justice in its power. In fact, he believed they could not hesitate in doing so, and instigating a full, free and impartial investigation. For this purpose he would move an adjournment; and if this does not take place justice could not be done. (Cries of "No, no.") Without doubt the petitioners had misconceived the law, but a remedy could easily be found. He expected some of the members opposite would have introduced a bill; but as they had not he would do so himself, as it was a matter of vast importance absolutely requiring investigation.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Merritt entertained doubts and would give the petitioners the benefit of these doubts. He (Mr. Merritt) could not divest his mind of the fact that there must be a large majority in that house in favor of investigation. He thought it right to guard against consequences, and if the other house refused their sanction to a bill, it was the more necessary to do so. The Parliament might yet be dissolved on this very question. If he had any prejudice at all it was in favor of the sitting members. He thought the government ought to bring in a bill to do justice to the petitioners; if they did not, and give the subject the go-by, what would the people of Canada say? what could be inferred but that undue executive influence had been brought to bear on these elections.<sup>43</sup>

Sir Allan ... desiring to postpone this already postponed and vexatious discussion, brought forward an amendment, that the chairman do leave the chair, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.<sup>44</sup>

A division took place when it was lost. — Ayes, 27; Nays, 39. The previous question was then put, and negatived by an overwhelming majority.<sup>45</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker, resumed the Chair.

Order of day for com.
of whole on Canada
Fire Assurance
Company, postponed.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill for incorporating the Canada Fire Assurance Company being read,

Ordered — That the said order of the day be postponed until tomorrow.

Then on motion of the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, seconded by Mr. Attorney General Ogden,

The House Adjourned.

Appendix, 13 July 1841.

((Question Re : Sir James Stuart's Commission.))

Mr. Aylwin rose and said if he was in order he would desire to give notice to the hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches, that he would apply for a copy of the commission under which Sir James Stuart was appointed as Deputy Governor of this Province. He perceived by the public prints that such appointment had taken place.<sup>46</sup>

Attorney General Ogden replied that he would save the hon. gentleman the trouble of making any motion upon this subject. A commission had been issued under the great seal of the Province; and upon application at the Secretary's office the hon. gentleman can be furnished, if he desires it, with a copy of that commission.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he presumed that as a member of that house, representing a part of the constituency of this Province, he had an undoubted right to ask for information on any subject, and that he would not be obliged to apply to any public office for such information, but that it would be furnished to this house upon motion by command of his Excellency. He believed that he was perfectly in order to call upon the officers of the government to lay before the house copies of all documents required by the house. The reason of his giving the motion was this: there was nothing more dangerous than an union of the Juridical and Executive powers, and although there was no one whom he (Mr. Aylwin) would be more willing to trust with the exercise of those powers than the Chief-Justice of Lower Canada — <sup>48</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) here interrupted (sic) the hon. member, and remarked that he was perfectly out of order.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Aylwin replied that he would bow with deference to the chair, and sat down.<sup>50</sup>

Capt. Steele said he rose for the purpose of calling upon hon. members to abstain from the practice of putting questions in this abrupt manner to the gentlemen on the Treasury benches.<sup>51</sup>

Petitions brought up.

Of inhabitants of Douro.

Horace Keating,
and others.
Michael Healy,
and others.
Bishop of Montreal,
and others.
Petitions read.

Of Clergy and members of Church of England, Eastern Townships.

Of Louis Mosseau,
and others.

Of Medical Faculty of McGill College.

Of Montreal Ladies
Benevolent Society.

Of Robert Armour,
and others.

Of Board of Trade of Montreal.

Of James Carrall,
and others.

Of the Bishop of Toronto & others.

Of Jacques Voyer.

Of C. M. Lebrun,
and others.

The following Petitions were severally brought up and laid on the table : —

By Mr. Gilchrist, the petition of divers inhabitants of the Township of Douro.

(174)

By Captain Steele, the Petition of Horace Keating, and others, and the petition of Michael Healy, and others, of the Township of Adjala.

By Mr. Burnet, the petition of the Right Reverend, the Bishop of Montreal, and others of Quebec.

Pursuant to the order of the day, the following petitions were read :

Of the Clergy and Members of the Church of England, and others, residing in the Eastern Townships, in the District of Montreal, praying for the establishment of Schools, and for the general use of the Bible in the same.

Of Louis Mosseau, and others, proprietors of the Parish of Berthier, in the District of Montreal, praying for an aid to build a Bridge over the River Bayonne, in the Parish of Berthier.

Of the Medical Faculty of McGill College, praying for an aid to support the Medical School of the said College.

Of Charles M. Lebrun, and other electors of the County of Beauharnois, praying an investigation into the occurrences which have taken place at several of the elections in the District of Montreal, and that the election and return of J. W. Dunscomb, Esquire, as member for the said County, be declared null.<sup>1</sup>

((This)) petition... created some lengthened discussion, in consequence of the decision of the previous evening, that the laws were in force, and that this petition, not having been presented within the first fourteen days, must be rejected. Some angry personalities were bandied, and some hints given to Sir Allan McNab, of his seeking after popularity at a sacrifice, perhaps, of some little principle. The question of receiving this petition remains over for discussion.<sup>2</sup>

Of J. S. Lewis, and others.

Of J. S. Lewis, and other electors of the County of Beauharnois, praying that the election and return of J. W. Dunscomb, Esquire, as member of the said County, be declared null.

Of McCrae,
McGregor, and others.

Of William McCrae, Duncan (sic) McGregor, and others, Magistrates and Inhabitants of the Western District, praying for an aid to complete the Tecumseth Road.

An answer to address of 1st inst., correspondence on Timber duties, presented.

The Honorable S. B. Harrison presented, pursuant to an Address to His Excellency, the Governor General, of the 1st instant, a copy of all correspondence between Her Majesty's Ministers and the Governor General, in relation to any alteration in the scale of duties upon the importation into Great Britain of Foreign and Colonial Timber, or either.

For the said correspondence, see Appendix (H.)<sup>3</sup>

The House having addressed the Governor General for a copy of all correspondence with the House Government on the Timber Duty, His Excellency sent the following...

Government House
Montreal, April 24, 1841.

My Lord.—I have the honor to inclose copies of three Memorials which have been presented to me by the Boards of Trade of Montreal and Quebec, and the merchants of Bytown. I will inclose a copy of my reply.

Great alarm is naturally felt by those engaged in the Timber Trade, in Canada, at the prospect of any alteration in the duties levied on wood in the United Kingdom, which may affect the protection hitherto afforded to Colonial Timber and Deals, but the question must, of course, be resolved by the Government and the Imperial Parliament according to the view which they may take of the general interests of the Empire.

I conceive, however, that in any change which may be determined upon in these duties, if it be one which will disturb the proportions which the Colonial and Foreign Timber Trade bear to each other under existing laws, care will be taken to diminish as much as possible the loss to individuals by rendering the change gradual; as such a course is certainly the most just, as well as the most politic. But above all, I must express my hope, that in whatever alteration is adopted, the recommendation of the committee of 1835, of which I was chairman, will be adhered to, namely that the change shall not affect the Importations of the year, which would be an Act of extreme hardship upon the Colonial Trade, inasmuch as it only can be carried on by the engagements entered into many months before the time at which the goods can be actually shipped, and therefore all the shipments to be made this year, have been entered upon on the faith of the present law, and cannot now be countermanded or stopped.

I have &c.

SYDENHAM

The Rt. Hon. Lord J. Russell, &c.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said it would be fresh in the memories of hon. members that when a discussion took place on an alteration in these duties in the British House of Parliament, it was used as an argument in favour of the change by those who supported the measure, that, if not suggested, it had received the sanction of the Governor General of these Provinces. He was glad to find that this was not the case, and that so far from desiring to plant a deadly blow at the dearest interest of the colony, his Excellency had shown every desire to ward off the stroke. He trusted the Governor General would continue these efforts, which would entitle him not only to the thanks of that House but to those of the whole Colony. At the same time it was evident that there was an error somewhere, as the statements on the other side of the water did not agree with this despatch.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Moffatt. — The hon. member should be more explicit. I have seen no such reports as those to which he alludes.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — I am glad to have an opportunity to give information which I had supposed would have been given in another quarter. If the hon. member had read the debates in the English House of Commons, as I have done, he would have seen that it was stated by one of the Ministers as a reason why the house should receive favourably the proposition, that it had been either suggested directly by the Governor General, or had received his sanction.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Moffatt. — The hon. member is mistaken ; what was referred to on that occasion was the wheat question and not the timber duties at all.<sup>8</sup>

The Honorable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, delivered to Mr. Speaker a Message from His Excellency, the Governor General, signed by His Excellency.

And the said Message was read by Mr. Speaker, all the Members of the House being uncovered, and is as followeth : —

SYDENHAM.

In conformity with the intention expressed in his Speech at the opening of the Session, the Governor General transmits herewith to the House of Assembly the copy of a Despatch from Lord John Russell, explaining the views of Her Majesty's Government on several of the most important subjects connected with Canada.

Government House,
Kingston, 14th July, 1841. }

No. 369.

DOWNING STREET, 3 MAY, 1841.

MY LORD,

Despatch from Lord
John Russel on subjects relating to Canada.

The Despatches which I have received from you on the general state of the Province of Canada, the reports with which you have furnished me on several important subjects, and the approaching meeting of the Council and Assembly of the United Province, have induced me to explain to you, at this time, the views which Her Majesty's Government entertain on the topics most interesting to the welfare of Canada.

In any measures that may be adopted, it must be taken for granted, that Her Majesty persists in the determination to maintain, at all hazards, Her Royal authority in Canada. Neither the honour of Her Majesty's Crown, nor the support due to Her Loyal subjects in British North America, nor the provident care of the interests of the Empire at large, would permit any deviation from this fixed principal of British Policy.

At the same time, Her Majesty's advisers are not insensible to the difficulties imposed upon them in carrying into execution the purpose of the Crown.

A Province bordered by an open frontier of more than a thousand miles, approached with ease at all times by the Citizens of a neighboring and powerful State, separated from England, not only by the Ocean, but by the rigours of climate and season, must be maintained by a judicious preparation for defence in time of peace, and vigorous exertion of the resources of the Empire in time of war ; or not at all. — To trifle with the fortunes of men, whose lives and properties are freely devoted to the service of England, or to encourage foreign aggression by neglect or apathy, would be far worse than the spontaneous surrender of these important possessions of the Crown.

The Canadians, might, in such a case, incur no risk ; no blood need be shed, and the treasures of the Empire might be spared. The other course would be cruel to a brave people, and unbecoming the character of the Country.

But as I have already said, we have no alternative. We have only to Canada.

(178)

to consider the means of binding Canada, more firmly to this Country — of developing her resources — of strengthening her British population — of defending her territory, and of supporting and encouraging the loyal spirit of the people.

In this spirit then, I shall touch upon the principal topics connected with these views.

1. — Finance.

You have stated the debt of the United Province, to amount to £1,226,000, and with the sum required to complete Public Works, necessary for the free passage between the Western portion of the Province, the St. Lawrence, and the sea, to about one million five hundred thousand pounds. *

The Queen's Government coincide in your views of the expediency of making such an arrangement as may employ the credit of this Country for the benefit of the finances of Canada, and have given their best consideration to the plan proposed in your Despatches. They are of opinion that such an arrangement, if it can be carried into effect with the consent of the creditors, would be, in every way, desirable; but they feel that the objections to a Bill compelling parties to receive payment of their money in breach of agreements entered into with them by competent authority, are insuperable.

Her Majesty's Government are ready to give any assistance in conformity with your proposal which does not appear to them inconsistent with good faith. They are ready to propose to Parliament to guarantee a loan, which may be required for Public Works (under the restrictions suggested by you) for the repayment of such part of the debt as may be now redeemable, or may be held by creditors, who shall declare themselves willing to accept reasonable terms.

With regard to this latter sum, it appears to the Government most expedient that you should fix such terms as you may consider sufficient to induce the creditors to accept the proposed equivalent (not of course exceeding £100, for every nominal, £100 lent); that you should make known such tender in such a way as may appear to you most advisable, giving the holders sufficient notice and information, and fixing a given day before which the willingness of the parties to accept such offer, should be sent in.

To do this, an Act of the Canada Legislature will be necessary, and when that is obtained, the subsequent arrangements might be made; or through some party deputed on the part of the Canadas, in this country, with full instructions.

It may perhaps be also expedient at the same time, by Law, to enable trustees, &c. to account as in cases where the interests of loans are received in this country.

Upon receiving the information of the assent of the parties accepting the terms proposed, the necessary means may be taken in this country, to raise the requisite funds, and it may be expedient that you should fix the day for the paying off such assenting creditors, and other claims, at a time when the Parliament of this country is sitting, for should it be necessary to have recourse to a loan, such a measure has always been considered open to objection during the prorogation of Parliament.

2. — Defence.

I have perused with great interest the enclosures in your Despatch of 24th December, 1840, containing reports from Lieut. General Sir Richard Jackson, and Col. Oldfield, the Commanding Officer of Engineers, on this subject.

(179)

The question is one of so much importance, that I was not satisfied with referring your Despatch to the Master General and Board of Ordnance, but I also asked the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief, and requested him to consult the Duke of Wellington, whose high

Despatch from Lord
John Russell on subjects relating to Canada.

authority on every military subject, is, in this instance, of peculiar weight, from the attention he has for many years given to this matter, both on political and on military grounds. Their opinions are transmitted with this Despatch.

Her Majesty's Government agree in opinion with Lord Hill, and Sir Richard Jackson, that "no dependence upon the decided superiority of "our troops and arrangements made for defence, connected with "them, should lead us to neglect the construction, and completion of "permanent works calculated for the protection of the points of most "importance to us."

They likewise concur in His Lordship's opinion that, in the event of the construction of these or any other works, a large effective regular force, and a militia, registered and enrolled, but not called from their Districts, except in case of invasion, will be indispensable.

But it cannot be reasonably expected that works on a large scale should be undertaken without reference to the great expense to be incurred.

I have therefore to inform you that the Government are prepared to state their opinion that, beyond the ordinary estimates of the year, £100,000, should yearly be applied for the defence of Canada. At present, this sum is nearly absorbed in the maintenance, of the militia and volunteers, but by a more economical plan, this expense might be greatly diminished, and a great portion of the sum of £100,000 left for the improvement of military communications, and the erection or repair of fortifications.

You will hear further from me on this point when I have more fully considered the various plans proposed.

3. — Emigration.

I have read with great interest your Despatches on this subject, and I agree with you in opinion that it would not be wise for this Country to engage to convey Emigrants to Canada at the Public Expense. But neither can I agree that this Country ought to pledge itself indefinitely to the expense of maintaining the Emigrants in Canada till they are able to obtain employment.

I quite concur, however, in the sense you entertain of the importance of the object.

It is a hardship to Canada that she should be obliged to maintain the Pauper Emigrants from the United Kingdom who arrive in a state of destitution and disease. But this object was formerly provided for by the imposition of the Emigrant Tax, and I think the renewal of this Tax should be recommended to the Legislature of Canada.

I have recommended to the treasury that the expense thus incurred by the Emigrant, should, in consideration of the great political advantages likely to flow from Emigration to Canada, be defrayed by this country.

Supposing a tax of 5s. a head, 32,000 Emigrants might be freed from the tax for £8,000. This is a sum which, I think, Parliament might be asked to vote for so important an object. The tax might then be paid in Canada, not by the Captain of the passenger ship, but by the Commissary General, on proper vouchers of the number of emigrants landed.

In this case, the only emigrants paid for must be those whose fitness for emigration had been previously attested by an Emigration Agent in this country.

The emigrant tax would then act as a check, and very properly so, on those who could not obtain the attestation required.

I have now adverted to the three principal topics to which I have called the attention of the Queen's confidential servants. There are many others of great importance to the welfare of Canada, but upon which I am anxious to receive your reports before proceeding further.

Of this kind are the engagements of the Land Companies, and the future disposal of the Crown Lands. The means of communication for commercial purposes within the British Territory through the whole length of Canada, must always be a matter of the highest interest, both to Canada and to this country.

But it seems to me that, with a Legislature in Canada, disposed to co-operate with the Queen and the Parliament of the United Kingdom in developing her vast and unexplored resources, there is every hope that we shall behold the prosperity of that noble Province augment every year, and add more and more to the strength and stability of the Empire.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) J. RUSSELL.

1000 Copies of Message to be printed.

Mr. Durand moved, seconded by Mr. Price, that one thousand copies of His Excellency's Message of this day, one half in the English and one half in the French language, be printed for the use of the members of this House.

Mr. Hamilton moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Johnston,

That the words "one thousand," in the said motion, be struck out, and the words "one hundred" substituted.

The question being put upon the motion of amendment, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put upon the main motion, a division also ensued, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

The Honorable D. Daly presented, pursuant to an Address to His Excellency, the Governor General, of the 12th instant, a Report of the School Visitor, under the Ordinance 2 VIC. Cap. 43, in the County of Beauharnois.

For the said report, see Appendix (I.)

Mr. Aylwin moved, seconded by Mr. Cameron,

That 500 copies of the Return of the correspondence laid before the House this day, pursuant to the Address of this House of the 1st instant, be printed for the use of the members of this House.

Report of School
Visitor presented.

Correspondence on timber dues to be printed.

The question being put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Ordered, accordingly.

Report of School
Visitor referred to committee.

Resolved — That the Report of the School Visitor, under the Ordinance 2 VIC. Cap. 43, in the County of Beauharnois, laid before the House this day, be referred to a Committee of three members to report thereon with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Ordered — That Mr. Dunscumb, the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, and Mr. Morin, do compose the said Committee.

Committee on Petitions of Stull and Lampman, John Decow and others,
and of John Kalar,
presents report.

Mr. Merritt, from the Select Committee to which were referred the Petitions of Adam Stull and Peter Lampman, of the Township of Grantham — of John Decow, and others, of the County of Haldimand, and of John Kalar, of the County of Lincoln, with power to report by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House the Report of the said Committee, which was again read at the Clerk's Table, as followeth : —

Report.

"With reference to the Petition of Adam Stull and Peter Lampman, your Committee consider the petitioners as justly entitled to their claim; but as the application of the petitioners would involve the expenditure of public money, it cannot, under the provisions of the Act of Union, be acted upon by the Legislative Assembly, unless recommended by the Executive Government.

With respect to the petition of John Decow, and others, your Committee have carefully considered the prayer of the petitioners, and in compliance therewith have drafted a Bill to incorporate a Company to be called the "Haldimand Glass Factory," which they beg to submit for the adoption of your Honorable House; but as regards that part of the application of the Petitioners which relates to a pecuniary grant to assist the Company aforesaid, the Committee consider that it would be a precedent which would open a door to so many applications of a similar nature, that they cannot recommend that it be granted."

Haldimand Glass
Company bill read.

Mr. Merritt then presented to the House a Bill to establish a Company to be called the "Haldimand Glass Works Company," which was read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Friday next.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Parent,

Order of day for
committee of whole on petition of William Walker and others, revived.

Ordered — That the order of the day for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the petition of William Walker, and other inhabitants of the City of Quebec, relating to the Timber Trade, lost by the adjournment of the House of yesterday, be revived, and that this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into the said Committee.

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Price, House considers amendment made by Legislative Council to Turner's relief

bill and agrees to the same.

Ordered — That the amendment made by the Legislative Council to the Bill intituled "An Act to permit Robert John Turner to practice as Solicitor in the Court of Chancery," be now taken into consideration.

(182)

The House proceeded accordingly to take the said amendment into consideration

And the said amendment was read, and is as followeth : —

"Line 8 — After the word "Province," leave out the word "and" in 12 line."

And the said amendment being again read, it was agreed to by the House.

Ordered — That Mr. Prince do carry back the said Bill to the Legislative Council, and acquaint their Honors, that this House hath agreed to their amendment.

Bill to prevent failure of justice in undue elections, presented and read first time.

Ordered — That Sir Allan McNab, have leave to bring in a Bill for preventing any failure of justice in respect of complaints of undue elections or returns of members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province, at the last General Election.<sup>9</sup>

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was read for the first time, and

Mr. Baldwin observed, it was not to amend, but extend the law.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Cameron asked, whether extension was not an amendment.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Moffatt decidedly would say yes.<sup>12</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab having the scheme already concocted, produced the preamble of his bill, by which he is aiming at the gratification of a party who regard him after all in rather a humiliating light. The bill being read a first time, — he had the extreme candour and moderation, to press the second reading instanter.<sup>13</sup>

He was supported by Mr. Aylwin.<sup>14</sup>

Attorney General Ogden objected. When he had conceded that the bill should be introduced without any previous notice being given, he had not expected that this advantage would be taken. He had not yet seen the petitions, and he thought that before any steps were taken to obtain (sic) a decision, it was due to the house to know whether the existing law was to be maintained or not. Till he had examined the petitions he could not discharge his duty conscientiously; and he would ask what the delay of a day or two was in a matter of this kind.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Aylwin. — The hon. and learned Attorney General asks what the delay of one day is. Though my parliamentary experience has not been great yet I have seen enough to know that if one day's delay had not intervened, a certain measure which has recently received the sanction of this house would not have passed. My desire that an early discussion should take place is that hon. members might not forget their professions of last night. I am surprised to hear the hon. Attorney General say he has not yet read these petitions, involving as they do such serious charges against the administration of which he is a member, charges which have not only been repeated in this country, but which have found their way across the Atlantic, and created in the minds of men there the most extraordinary sensation. I should have thought this alone would have induced him to dedicate five minutes of his time to see what they were made of. Several of those petitions were read in this house, one by myself, and others by hon. friends, so that the learned gentleman can hardly plead ignorance of them. The subject is not one which will admit of further delay, if the house is really sincere that the measure should pass. If the bill is bad in principle I have no objection to its being rejected; but let the opposition be manly, and let it not be attempted to get rid of it by a side blow.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Cameron... disclaimed against this indecent hurry, in a measure so important....<sup>17</sup>

Attorney General Ogden thought there was nothing unreasonable in their asking for twenty-four hours' delay before proceeding to the second reading of a bill which might involve them in the consequences of an ex post facto law. The course, he declared was a most unusual one, though he knew that it was sometimes followed at the end of a session. As to the sensation which the hon. gentleman said had been created in the minds of men in England, he did not care a snap of his finger for those sensations. He knew that a foul use had been made of the public press in that country as well as in this province, and that men had been found base enough to intrude these calumnies into the House of Commons. This would not deter him from his duty, or prevent him from asking that the second reading be postponed till Friday.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Johnston proposed as an amendment that the petitioners should be allowed to proceed on the laws now in force on the understanding that their petitions should not be entertained till the next meeting of the United Legislature. (A laugh.) He would state his reasons for this. It was now more than a month since they had met, and yet they had passed no useful law: nearly all their attention had been taken up with these petitions, and he was not willing to consume any more time or inflict further injustice on those members whose elections were contested, and who had been returned by whopping majorities. If these petitions were taken up next year the petitioners would have the same advantages they had before, and he was not disposed to interfere with the decision of last night. He did not believe there was any intention to prosecute the charges which had been made, and it was only fair that the parties bringing them should be made to feel the responsibility of their acts.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Price. — The hon. member objects that the time of the house is taken up uselessly. If when he goes home he will reflect on the number of speeches which are made on all occasions, he will perhaps see the reason of this delay. I am myself surprised that the government has not thought fit, by the introduction of a bill like the present, to give the parties who have not conformed to the law, an opportunity of doing so.<sup>20</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab was eventually prevailed upon to postpone the second reading for Friday next the first order of the day....<sup>21</sup>

(182)

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Friday next, and that it be then the first Order of the day.

Municipal Bill brought in.

Ordered — That the Honourable Mr. Harrison have leave to bring in a Bill to provide for the better internal Government of that part of this Province, heretofore Upper Canada, by the establishment of local or Municipal authorities therein.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said bill be read a second time on Wednesday next.

500 copies of foregoing bill to be printed.

The Honorable Mr. Harrison moved, seconded by the Honorable Mr. Dunn, that 500 copies of the said Bill be printed for the use of the members of this House.

Mr. J. S. M'Donald, moved in amendment, second by Mr. M'Lean, that all the words in the said motion after "that" be struck out, and the following substituted, "1000 copies of the said Bill in the English, and 200 copies in the French languages, be printed for the use of the members of this House."

The question being put upon the motion of amendment, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put on the main motion, a division also ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Ordered, accordingly.

On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Thompson,

Address to be sent to His Excellency, for information in relation to address to Her Majesty on subject of introduction of products of this Province into British Ports free of duty, &c.

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to inform this House what answer has been received from Her Majesty's Government to the Address of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, during the last Session, on the subject of the introduction of the products of this Province into the Ports of Great Britain, free from duty, and to invest the Legislature with power to originate and vary duties on products when admitted into the Ports of this Province.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honorable the Executive Council of this Province.

Bill to protect copy rights presented and read.

Ordered — That Mr. Campbell have leave to bring a Bill for the protection of Copy Rights in that part of the Province formerly constituting Upper Canada.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Campbell... informed the house that there was already a similar act in force in Lower Canada, and the object ((was)) now to provide for the present measure till that act is enforced, when a general law could be introduced for the whole Province.<sup>23</sup>

(183)

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time, and —

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Monday, the ninth of August next.

On motion of Mr. Duggan, seconded by Mr. Price,

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House copies of all communications had between His Excellency and the Home Government, in reference to the locality of the Seat of Government of Canada, and any other information in relation to the same, that it may be in His Excellency's power to communicate.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honorable the Executive Council of this Province.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Johnston,

Resolved — That this House do now resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the propriety of repealing or amending certain parts of an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to alter the mode of payment of wages to Members of the House of Assembly."<sup>24</sup>

Address to be sent to His Excellency for information in relation to seat of Government.

House to go into committee on payment of wages to members.

Mr. Small... said it was highly necessary that some general measure should be introduced to regulate this matter. As the law now stood, every member from that portion of the Province formerly Upper Canada, was entitled to a sum of £50 for his attendance if the Session was continued more than a month, and £30 if less than that time, but no such provision was made for Lower Canada. — What he now proposed was, that both parts of the Province should be placed on the same footing. It might, in the consideration of this question, be argued that no remuneration ought to be given, and if so, he should not object to it, (hear, hear,) at the same time he thought no such determination should be come to precipitately. Many sections of the country might not be able to bear the expense of sending a member and to these parties it would be hardship to withhold this payment.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Black would not oppose the present motion though he should resist the bill in all its stages.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Baldwin regarded the question as one of great importance and though he was opposed to the principle it contained he should be prepared to support it so far as it went to place all members on the same equality, and mete equal justice to East and West.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. Johnston did not see why a portion of the members should receive 10s. and another portion nothing. If it was refused to those gentlemen he certainly should not take it.<sup>28</sup> Mr. Johnston remarked, that if the learned member for the town of Quebec was against receiving any remuneration; he could indulge his disinterestedness by transferring his allowance to some charitable institution.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Black, in retort, regretted that Mr. Johnston should give way so repeatedly to personalities, especially when a subject of so serious a nature was under discussion.<sup>30</sup>

((There were)) some further remarks....<sup>31</sup>

(183)

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Williams took the Chair of the Committee,

Messrs. Hincks, Harrison, Draper, Johnston, Moffatt, Child, Price, Viger, Macdonald, Prince, and Hamilton took part in the debate.<sup>32</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker, resumed the Chair,

And Mr. Williams reported that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Ordered — That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Friday week.

Progress.
Committee to sit again.

House proceeds to consider the motion of Mr. Prince on the Saint Maurice election.

The Order of the day for taking into consideration a motion made by Mr. Prince, on Monday the 28th of June last, viz: "That the grounds and reasons of complaint set forth in the petition of divers electors of the county of St. Maurice, if true, are sufficient to make void the election of Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Esquire," being read,

The House proceeded accordingly to take the said motion into consideration.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Morin would vote for the resolution, but was not prepared to say that all those allegations, even if true, were sufficient to set aside the Election. He was desirous that an investigation should take place, and therefore would not oppose the motion.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said the charges contained in the petition were scandalous and impertinent, and that if the document were to be judged of by its language, it should be thrown under the table. One of the allegations spoke of perjury. The person making that allegation could only have done so through ignorance and wickedness, since he must have known that even if the case were as he hinted, it would not form a subject for enquiry in a criminal Court. He denied that those who signed the petition, were occupying the most respectable rank in the County, which was one of the largest in the Province. He thought some proof should be advanced before the House said the allegations were true.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Prince said he was surprised to find the Member for Port Neuf take the course he did, after his eloquent defence yesterday of the rights of petitioners. The House was there as the Trustees of the Electors of St. Maurice, and yet his hon. friend turned round and repudiated what he had before so eloquently advocated. He did not wish the House to prejudge the case, but that that ample enquiry which his hon. friend had called for last night for other petitions, should take place in regard to this.<sup>36</sup> and the said motion being again read, and the question being put thereon, it was agreed to by the House and,

Resolved accordingly.

Time fixed for trial of Saint Maurice contested election.

Resolved — That Monday, the second day of August, at 11 o'clock A. M., be assigned for taking into consideration the petition of divers electors of the county of St. Maurice, complaining of the undue election of Joseph Edouard Turcotte, Esquire.

Poll Book to be transmitted to the Clerk of the House.

Mr. Prince moved, seconded by Mr. Black, that the Prothonotary of the Court of King's Bench, for the District of Three Rivers, be enjoined to transmit forthwith, under cover to the Clerk of the House, the Poll Book for the last election of the county of St. Maurice, and all the papers relating thereto.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative, and,

Resolved accordingly.

House in committee on 1st report on clerk's office.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the first report of the Special Committee appointed to enquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House, being read,

(184)

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee,

Mr. Dunscomb took the chair of the Committee.

Several Members having retired,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And the names of the Members present were taken down as followeth: —

Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Black, Mr. Boutillier, Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Dunscomb, Mr. Durand, Mr. Gilchrist, the Honourable Mr. Harrison, the Honourable Mr. Killaly, Sir Allan McNab, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Morin, Mr. Raymond, Mr. Simpson, and the Honourable Mr. Viger.

And at 11 o'clock at night, Mr. Speaker adjourned the House for want of a quorum.

Appendix, 14 July 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Motions.))

Sir Allan MacNab gave notice, that he would move for leave to bring in a bill providing for the independence of the House of Assembly of the United Province of Canada.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Durand moved that the order of the day for a Committee of the Whole, on the Sydenham Road Bill, lost by the adjournment of yesterday, be revived, and that, the Bill be taken into consideration on Friday next.<sup>38</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion Re : Speaker's Warrant.))

A discussion took place on a motion for the Speaker to issue his warrant to require the attendance of the Returning Officer of the District of Three Rivers, at the bar of the House. The resolution was ultimately withdrawn.<sup>39</sup>

Report referred to

Committee on pet's of B. Ham, and
D. Roblin and others, report.

Ordered—That the said Report be referred to a committee of the whole House to-morrow.

Mr. Aylwin, Chairman of the select Committee appointed in accordance with the statute, to try the merits of the Petitions, of Benjamin Ham, of the township of Ernest-town, and David Roblin and others, freeholders of the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, in the Midland District, complaining of the undue election and return of John Solomon Cartwright, Esq., as a Member to represent the said Incorporated counties, presented the final report of the said Committee, which is as follows :

Report of Committee on Lennox and Addington election.

The Committee of your Honourable House, appointed to try the contested Election for the incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, has the honour to report the following resolutions :—

Resolved — That the evidence adduced in support of the charges against the Returning Officer is not sufficient to avoid the last election and Return for the Incorporated Counties of Lennox and Addington.

Resolved — That although the allegations against the conduct of the Returning Officer contained in the Petition are not sufficiently proved to avoid the election, yet it is the opinion of this Committee that the conduct of the said Returning Officer was highly reprehensible.

Resolved — That treating, on the part of the sitting member, at the late Election for the Incorporated counties of Lennox and Addington, was proved, but that it is not, in the opinion of the Committee, a legal ground for avoiding the election under the laws in force in that part of this Province heretofore Upper Canada.

Resolved — That it does not appear to this committee that the sitting member has, by himself or his authorized agents, been guilty of bribery.

Resolved — That the Petitions were not frivolous or vexatious.

Resolved — That the defence of the sitting member was not frivolous or vexatious.

All which is respectfully submitted.

T. C. AYLWIN,

House in Committee
on 1st. Report on
Clerk's Office.

The order of the day for the House in Committee on the first report of the Special Committee, appointed to enquire what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.
Mr. Williams took the chair of the Committee.<sup>1</sup>

Upon motion for the adoption of that item contained in the report relating to the appointment of a French translator with a salary of £250 per annum.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Hamilton moved in amendment that the sum be reduced to £200. That was the amount which had usually been paid in Lower Canada to the person who had filled that office, and he thought it should be no more here.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Moffatt desired to know whether the office might not be dispensed with.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Aylwin rose and indignantly reprobated the idea that the office of translator should be considered unnecessary, there being a large proportion of the members of that hon. house who were not familiar with the English language. He expressed his surprise that the hon. member for the city of Montreal should throw any obstacle in the way of the appointment of a translator, knowing as that hon. gentleman must know the importance which that appointment assumed in relation to a large proportion of the members of that hon. house.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Morin would ask if the hon. member from Montreal represented that city as it is, (hear, hear,) He thought this colony must be greatly behind all others in point of intelligence as well as liberality of view. In the East India Colonies they had translators of all languages used in each particular colony, and they were sufficiently various. Besides the native tongues, there were Maltese, Portuguese, and various others, and the translators of those languages were paid by government. In this county there are only people of two origins, and how could hon. gentlemen who profess to be advocates of any thing like equal justice object to the appointment of a translator?<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Hamilton. — Far be it from me to object to having a translator. I wished only to reduce the sum to be paid to the translator to what it has always been in Lower Canada. He would have less to do here, and his salary surely should not be increased.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Viger differed in opinion with the hon. member for Bonaventure. He thought the labor instead of being less in the united Parliament, would be greater.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. J. S. Macdonald said he was inclined to think a translator was absolutely required... although he did not know the person who had been named to perform the duties of that office...<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Cameron — He is a very good looking man! — (a laugh,) —

Yet he ((Mr. Macdonald)) would vote in favor of the appointment, and also in favor of the original sum proposed as his salary.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Moffatt would ask if there was any thing unreasonable in asking for information upon this appointment, as upon all other questions. The hon. gentleman from Port Neuf had given him no information upon the subject, although he had thought proper to censure his (Mr. Moffatt's) ignorance, and from that very circumstance he was inclined to think that that hon. gentleman was as ignorant as himself. He (Mr. Moffatt) desired to understand the reasons upon which every proposition upon which he was called upon to vote was founded. He had a duty to perform in that house, and he would perform it strictly, in whatever light his conduct might be viewed by hon. members.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Aylwin said he was glad to find that the few words he had made use of had some weight with the hon. gentleman, and that he felt the tenor of his own observations was such as he could not properly justify, (order, order.) If the hon. gentleman desires that there should be no French translator in order that he may put down the French language — Mr. Aylwin was called to order, and sat down.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Berthelot rose and said he would not make a long speech, but would merely refer to the statute, and if hon. members would only consent to be guided by that, he was inclined to think that without any further argument they would all agree to the appointment in question.

No nation could be totally divested of its nationality, or entirely lose its language; and although the Saxon race had in this country exceeded the people of French origin in power, and established a supremacy which redounded to the glory of the English nation, yet it was not to be expected that the French language would be discontinued. He did not claim for it the priority over the English, for since he had been in that house he began to be aware, a little more than formerly, of the generosity and noble-mindedness of the hon. members composing that house. The Imperial Parliament had thought fit to unite the representatives of these heretofore different Provinces into one Legislative Assembly. The Imperial Parliament must be obeyed in all things, but he (Mr. Berthelot) did not believe it had been the intention of the Imperial Parliament to treat the French portion of the Province otherwise than with the most liberal and generous policy, (hear, hear.)<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Holmes said he had listened with a great deal of pleasure to the speech of the hon. gentleman, (Mr. Berthelot,) and from the energy with which he had spoken, no doubt he expressed the true sentiments of his heart. He (Mr. Holmes) for one would regret extremely that any privilege should be withheld from the French members of that hon. house which was enjoyed by their English brethren, or that they should be placed upon a different footing in any respect. No doubt there were very few members in that house who could not, if necessary, express their sentiments perfectly well in English; but he would nevertheless claim for the British nation, whose glory they contributed to support; and he would claim from the representatives of the English portion of the Province of Canada, the privilege of having translated the documents which might come before that house for its consideration, for the benefit of his brethren and himself who were representatives of the French portion of the Province. The language would not be lost or done away. It was very well known that in numerous cases people living under the same form of Government preserve their original language perfectly distinct. The mountaineers of Scotland, for example continue to use the Gaelic tongue; the inhabitants of a certain part of Ireland, of that part the inhabitants of which are sometimes denominated wild Irish, (a laugh,) also preserve their tongue. Perhaps he was offending by speaking in this way — God knows nothing was farther from his intention. He appealed to the honest heart of every man whether that house ought not to allow to the representatives of the French people of the Province of Canada the privilege of understanding all matters which were brought before them in their own language. The hon. member concluded amidst much good humored applause.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Thorburn rose to express the pleasure he felt at hearing the noble and manly sentiments which had fallen from the hon. member from Kamouraska, (Mr. Berthelot.) He hoped the hon. member would not suppose for a moment that there was a desire on the part of that house to withhold the privilege he claims.<sup>16</sup>

The motion was carried for the appointment of Mr. Henry Boyer (sic) as French translator, and Mr. Alexander LeMoin (sic) was appointed assistant.<sup>17</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

House in Committee on subject of warehousing goods.

The order of the day, for the House in Committee, to consider the expediency of introducing measures for the warehousing and bonding of goods in the several free warehousing Ports of this Province, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. D. McDonald took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein, Resolutions reported.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. D. McDonald reported, that the Committee had come to several Resolutions, which Resolutions were again read at the Clerk's table as followeth : —

1st. Resolution.

Resolved — That the benefits intended to be conveyed to this Province by the provisions contained in an Act passed in the Imperial Parliament in the 3d and 4th years of His late Majesty's Reign (WILLIAM IV. Cap. 59) intituled "An Act to regulate the trade of the British Possessions abroad," are not at present fully enjoyed by the Trade of this Province.

2nd. Resolution.

Cap. 59) relating to the warehousing of goods in the several free warehousing Ports of this Province named therein.

Motion for question of concurrence to be put.

Mr. Dunsmomb, moved, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, That the question of concurrence be now separately put upon the said Resolutions.

Motion to defer consideration thereof. Lost.

Mr. Johnston moved, seconded by Mr. Parent,

That the consideration of the said motion be postponed until to-morrow.

The question having been put upon this motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The question being then put upon the main motion, it was agreed to,

Resolutions concurred in.

And the said Resolutions being again severally read, and the question of concurrence being separately put thereon, they were agreed to by the House.

Bill to be drafted thereon.

Ordered — That Mr. Dunsmomb have leave to bring in a Bill to extend the benefit of the warehousing system, established by a certain Act of the Imperial Parliament, passed in the Session held in the 3d and 4th years of His late Majesty's Reign, to the duties imposed by Provincial Acts.

(193)

Bill respecting warehousing system reported and read first time.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrow week.

J. Givins, Esq. appointed Commissioner on Huron contested election, in place of G. Boomer.

On motion of Mr. Sherwood, seconded by Mr. Henry Smith,

Ordered — That James Givins, of the Town of London, Esquire, be appointed a Commissioner for taking evidence on the trial of the controverted election for the County of Huron, in the place of George Boomer, who has declined acting as a Commissioner for that purpose.

Orders of the day postponed.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee, on the Bill for incorporating the Canada Fire Assurance Company, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Prince moved, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

That the Petitions of divers freeholders and inhabitants of the County of Bonaventure, complaining of the undue election and return of John R. Hamilton, Esquire, as a member of this House, be discharged.<sup>1</sup>

This was supported during a short discussion by several members.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Aylwin... was desirous, he observed, of showing the liberality of his views to all parties.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Johnston also made some remarks....<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Turcotte... attempted to prove that there was no necessity for petitioners to enter into recognizances until the petition was acted upon.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Attorney General Ogden hoped, that the hon. member would be more fortunate in his argument in the debate that was about to ensue, — and confuted his opinion, by reading the law upon the case, which distinctly specifies that at an early stage of every petition, against the return of a member, two sureties of £50 c'y shall be given, and security provided for all costs that may occur, arising out of such petitions being vexatious.<sup>6</sup>

Messrs. Sherwood and Henry Smith... ((made a few observations))....<sup>7</sup>

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth : —

reading undue elections Bill read.

The Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill for preventing any failure of justice in respect of complaints of undue election or returns of members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province at the last General Election, being read,

Motion to discharge
the same.

Captain Steele moved, seconded by Mr. Williams,
That the Order of the day be discharged, and that the said Bill be read a second time this day three months.<sup>8</sup>

En fesant (sic) cette motion le Capt. Steele observa que si la chambre la supportait il proposerait que la chambre se mit en comité général pour examiner certains actes d'inconduite tels que spécifiés dans certaines pétitions. Lui (Capt. Steele) depuis le premier instant qu'il avait entendu les plaintes de ces pétitions, avait fait une scrupuleuse enquête parmi ses hbles. et savants amis pour savoir s'il y avait quelque moyen légal d'obtenir le redressement contre l'intervention du gouvernement de sa majesté. Lui (Capt. Steele) voulait sincèrement que tous (sic) les avantages fussent étendus aux pétitionnaires, pour obtenir une investigation; mais quant à ce bill, il ne serait pas justice commune aux membres siégeants et à ceux qui pouvaient siéger dans la suite dans cette chambre, sous les mêmes charges, de donner leur vote en sa faveur. Il accorderait au savant chevalier toute faveur à la pureté de ses intentions; il croyait qu'il n'avait d'autre objet en vue que d'obtenir justice en faveur des pétitionnaires. Cependant il ne pourrait voter pour une mesure rétroactive telle que celle proposée. (Ecoutez, écoutez (sic)) et il était forcé de s'y opposer d'après des circonstances particulières. Lui (Capt. Steele) était là pour remplir un devoir sacré, et en faisant la motion qu'il avait faite, il agissait sous la conviction des fatales conséquences de la passation d'une loi ex post facto. Il n'accéderait pas aux demandes de ceux qui se plaignaient par pétitions devant cette chambre, en tant que ce serait adopter une mesure qui pourrait causer de l'injustice ci-après, en passant un bill rétroactif dans ses effets, dangereux (sic) dans ses conséquences et qui pourrait ci-après être pris comme précédent. C'était sur cela qu'il appelait l'honble. chambre à adopter la motion qu'il avait faite, et alors de continuer sur une autre qu'il se proposerait de présenter pour autoriser une stricte investigation sur les plaintes mentionnées dans les pétitions, (Ecoutez, écoutez) afin que l'honneur de la chambre et du gouvernement demeurât intact. (Ecoutez, écoutez).<sup>9</sup>

L'Hon. S.B. Harrison dit qu'il croyait de son devoir, même à cet état avancé des débats, de statuer qu'il supporterait très certainement la motion, et qu'il le ferait sur ce principe, qu'il ne consentirait pas sous ces circonstances à l'adoption d'une loi ex post facto; elle serait une injustice; tout ce qu'on pourrait dire en sa faveur. était qu'il pouvait y avoir des circonstances qui la justifieraient de quelque sorte, mais non les présentes. Il a été dit que c'était pour remédier à une difficulté technique de manière que justice fût faite aux pétitionnaires (sic). C'était un argument qui aurait un grand poids pour lui s'il supposait qu'il fût strictement vrai. Le bill était nullement nécessaire, en tant qu'il avait été établi par un vote de cette chambre, déclarant que la loi des élections était en force, et en tant que le moyen d'obéir à cette loi était déjà au pouvoir des pétitionnaires, s'ils aimaient à s'en servir ; ce serait aussi un mauvais procédé de leur permettre de détruire cette loi, et de demander d'eux (sic) passer une nouvelle. Comme ils avaient refusé de remplir les provisions de la loi qui est déjà en existence, il ne leur serait pas permis de venir dans cette chambre, demander d'être placés dans la situation dont les avait privé leur propre lâcheté. Il accorderait que justice serait faite aux pétitionnaires, mais ils seraient obligés de suivre la voie que la loi indique, et quoi qu'ils ne se soient point soumis à ses réquisitions, il leur permettrait une perquisition très entière sur les chefs de leur (sic) plaintes, dans le but que justice leur soit rendue ; mais avant de parler de justice, ils devaient considérer quelle est la justice due aux deux partis. La justice passe souvent de main en main. Quand (sic) aux allégués qu'on a dit exister, il les assurait qu'il réclamait, il exigeait une investigation. (Ecoutez, écoutez) Si une enquête eut eu une pleine étendue, on aurait trouvé qu'ils étaient totalement destitués de fondement (sic) ; (Ecoutez, écoutez). Quant au dangereux effet d'une loi ex post facto, sur laquelle il a exprimé ses vœux, il pensait qu'aucun précédent ne justifierait pleinement un exemple d'un procédé inconstitutionnel. Par l'opération d'une telle loi dans ce cas-ci six messieurs ayant, siège (sic) dans cette chambre devraient être probablement privés de leurs sièges (sic) ; c'était clairement montrer que l'intention était de les en priver. (Ecoutez, écoutez) Ce précédent s'il était mis dans le livre des statuts, devrait être ôté et refait jusqu'à ce que la plus innocente action pût être déclarée coupable. Il n'y consentirait jamais, bien qu'elle pût paraître spécieuse, et que la proposition eût été spécieusement proposée par l'hon. membre.<sup>10</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab. D'après la description que l'honorable membre a donné du bill, on pourrait supposer que c'est une terrible affaire. Peut-être que l'honorable Monsieur parle sincèrement sur ce sujet (écoutez, écoutez) Il peut penser que la prochaine enquête sera sur les élections du Haut-Canada : je désire qu'elle vienne à son tour. Nous ne serons jamais effrayés d'une information ; elle ne fera aucun tort à la contrée. Le peuple du Bas-Canada était assez simple pour croire que la loi n'existait plus et considérait qu'il y avait une session parce qu'il y avait une assemblée de la Législature. Je n'en suis pas beaucoup surpris, parce que je vois que le Gouverneur, dans son discours, l'appelle une session. Il n'était pas si sage, ce semble, que, que cette chambre. Je vois aussi que la dépêche de Lord Gosford fait allusion à la session de 1837 : Elle paraît (sic) aussi par les journaux avoir été appelée une session du parlement. Prenant toutes ces choses en considération et voyant de plus que quelques honorables membres, dans cette chambre, tels que les honorables Messieurs pour Hastings et Portneuf, déclarent que la loi n'était pas en force, je pense qu'il ne peut guère paraître étrange que j'aie introduit le bill, ou qu'il y ait quelque chose de bien mal en l'introduisant. Je vois que l'honorable Mr. (Mr. Harrison) était régulièrement chargé.

(Ecoutez, écoutez) J'espère que l'amendement que je vais proposer, prévaudra, et que les honorables Messieurs trouveront qu'ils ne peuvent plus agiter la question ou la mettre de côté, à présent il y a une règle de cette chambre, qui dit que tout membre qui sera présent quand une question est présentée, donnera son vote à moins que la chambre l'en excuse. Hatsell dans son ouvrage sûr (sic) la loi parlementaire, établit que lorsque les intérêts privés d'un membre sont concernés, il peut être excusé de voter — maintenant je conçois humblement que les honorables Messieurs dont les sièges sont contestés, seront exemptés de voter sur cette question ; il est nécessaire pour l'honneur de cette chambre que cette règle soit strictement observée. Je présenterai donc un amendement que tout ce qui se trouve après le mot "présenté" soit rayé et qu'on y substitue les suivants : "que les membres retournés pour les comtés suivants soient excusés de voter sur toutes les questions qui ont rapport à la matière présentement sous considération, savoir, Vaudeuil, (sic) Terrebonne, Beauharnais, (sic) Montréal et Shefford."<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Johnston — avant que l'on dispose de la question j'offrirai quelques remarques. Le savant et courtois chevalier a dit que l'honorable membre pour la ville de Kingston a parlé avec sentiment. Je crois qu'il a parlé aussi sincèrement. Ce cas a deux cotés (sic), et je crois qu'en excusant ces personnes de voter, les élections ne peuvent pas être traitées véritablement. Il y a là une incompatibilité — la motion se coupe le col (sic) (on rit). Je suis fâché que le courtois chevalier ait fait un tel faux pas (on rit beaucoup).<sup>12</sup>

Sir A. MacNab — vous auriez mieux fait de lire encore la motion.<sup>13</sup>

((Mr. Johnston :)) La résolution peut tomber à terre ; à tout événement elle exigera quelque explication.<sup>14</sup>

Le procureur Gén. Ogden dit qu'il espérait que l'hon. Monsieur retirerait l'amendement. Est-ce à dire qu'à chaque ((moment)) qu'il sera introduit un bill pour permettre que ces Messieurs contestent leur siège (sic), à chaque fois il (sic) seront excusés de voter. Je crois que l'hon. Monsieur pour Portneuf voudra voter pour quelque motion.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Aylwin — pour quelque bonne.<sup>16</sup>

((Mr. Ogden :)) Réellement je désire que l'hon. Monsieur ne joue pas avec le précieux temps de la chambre. Il a déjà été décidé que les pétitions qui n'étaient pas accompagnées de caution, ne devaient pas être reçues, et je trouve vraiment extraordinaire d'un côté que vous admettiez que les pétitionnaires n'ont aucun droit légal d'être entendus : de l'autre vous déclarez que les élections seront contestées, et que les membres retournés ne voteront pas sur la question liée à cette affaire.<sup>17</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab — dit que si le savant Proc. Général voulait engager l'hon. Monsieur qui a présenté la motion originale à la retirer et accorder à la chambre d'aller franchement au mérite de la question, lui (Sir Allan) retirerait aussi son amendement ; mais il lui paraissait bien évident que l'intention était de mettre de côté toute cette affaire et par là à la fois assurer à ces Messieurs les sièges (sic) qu'ils occupaient.<sup>18</sup>

Le procureur Général Ogden répliqua qu'il n'avait aucune influence sur quelque non-membre que ce fût pour le guider dans la marche qu'il devait suivre (Ecoutez, écoutez) Si l'hon. Monsieur suppose qu'il (Mr. Ogden) désire éviter la question, il se trompe. Il (Mr. Ogden) est venu préparé pour débattre entièrement la question. Il n'y a rien pour empêcher la discussion et la chambre voudra alors se croire capable d'en décider.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Aylwin — Je ne puis suffisamment admirer les opinions émises par l'hble. monsieur sur l'article de l'argent. Si elles étaient (sic) sincères, il n'y a aucun doute qu'elles devaient être discutées à la barre de cette chambre. Mais je suis convaincu qu'elles ne sont pas sincères, et je dirai ma raison pour penser ainsi. Deux occasions ont été apportées (sic) à ces hbles. messieurs pour entrer dans l'investigation de ce sujet et dans les deux occasions ils ont été les premiers à s'y opposer. Ils nous ont dit que quoique la loi fut (sic) en force, et quoique nous eussions commis une bétise marquante ou supposant qu'elle ne l'était pas, cependant la mesure, si on l'introduisait, trouverait de l'appui, maintenant qu'elle est introduite, elle rencontre une opposition (sic) décidée. Si le bill est rejeté quel sera le résultat. Je suis convaincu que nous rencontrerons encore de la résistance de la part de ces messieurs quand quelque proposition sera faite pour l'investigation de quelques plaintes. L'équité du savant Proc. Général semble avoir été un peu troublée. Il voit la motion de l'hble et savant monsieur pour Hamilton comme quelque chose d'extraordinaire, (sic) Quel est le but de cette motion ; le voici : — six membres de cette hble. chambre ont un intérêt direct dans la question sur laquelle cette chambre est appelée à décider et ils seraient excusés de voter.

Si la motion de l'hble. monsieur pour Simcoé (sic) prévalait, ces six messieurs garderaient leur siège. Si au contraire elle ne prévalait pas et que le bill qui est maintenant introduit passât, alors ces messieurs seraient sujets à l'inconvénient et à la dépense de contester leurs élections. La proposition se réduit à celle-ci, qu'un homme ne peut siéger et décider dans sa propre affaire, (écoutez, écoutez). La motion est une de celles qui je crois seraient à peine nécessaires dans aucune autre place que celle-ci. Ici nous avons vu des hbles. messieurs voter sur des questions où ils étaient directement intéressés (sic). Mais le savant Proc. Général dit que c'est une chose extraordinaire que ces messieurs soient exclus de voter. N'ont-ils pas voté sur toute mesure où ils étaient qualifiés de le faire ? mais en votant sur les questions qui regardent leurs sièges ne violeraient-ils (sic) pas je le demande, tout principe d'honnêteté et de décence ? (écoutez, écoutez), doit-on permettre qu'un homme décide contre son voisin et lui-même ? en un mot, qui peut être impartial sur une question où il est lui-même concerné ? s'il se trouve un tel homme je dis qu'il est quelque chose de plus que l'homme il est un ange. (écoutez, écoutez).

La proposition de l'hble. monsieur est basée sur la justice et telle que personne dont le caractère est basé sur la justice, ne peut objecter contre. Je suis surpris quand j'entends une telle proposition d'un monsieur qui occupe le banc de la trésorerie. Je dois certainement penser qu'il y a une influence qui opère en lui, (écoutez, écoutez). La question est une de celles qui semblent intéresser (sic) fortement ces hbles. messieurs, car au commencement le savant monsieur a senti qu'il était de son devoir de prendre une part éminente dans la discussion. A présent j'aimerais à savoir pourquoi il ressent un si profond intérêt — <sup>20</sup>

((Mr. Aylwin :)) Je suis très content de trouver que l'hble. monsieur prenne l'honneur de la chambre sous sa protection spéciale, (écoutez, écoutez). Et quoique je veuille admettre que cette protection est très puissante, cependant je prendrai la liberté de la prendre aussi sous ma protection. (Ecoutez, écoutez, écoutez). L'hble. monsieur dit qu'il aura un effet rétrograde, que c'est une loi ex post facto. Le monde s'est agité sur des questions, en respectant les mots les hommes se sont sentis la liberté de se couper la gorge les uns les autres sur des distinctions verbales; mais pour ma part, je reconnaitrai librement que je ne suis pas effrayé de ces quelques mots latins. Je serais extrêmement fâché cependant, ((soit)) avec, soit sans ces mots, de passer une loi qui ferait souffrir mes voisins.

Ce que je combats, c'est que nous ne nous laissions pas attraper par les mots — que nous regardions à la substance. Je vous dirai mon attente sur la loi ex post facto. C'est une loi infligeant des peines et des pénalités qui n'ont pas encore existé. Ceci est un bill pour prévenir le manque de justice — comment elle opérerait ? par la simple inobservation de certaines formes. A présent, ces hbles. messieurs qui désirent traiter ceci comme une loi ex post facto, ont oublié les circonstances qui ont eu lieu dans cette chambre il y a quelques semaines. Un monsieur se présenta à la barre de cette chambre avec une pétition contre le membre de Niagara. La pétition fut trouvée vicieuse, et le pétitionnaire désira avoir du temps pour corriger l'erreur. Une large majorité décida qu'elle y consentait. Qu'est-ce qu'on demande à présent ? Une permission de même nature. Le savant chevalier vient devant cette chambre et demande la correction d'une erreur et d'une imperfection dans le mode d'étendre la justice à un large corps de pétitionnaires. Et est-ce quelque chose d'extraordinaire ? Non, n'est-ce pas une chose qui arrive tous les jours dans une cour de justice.

L'hble. monsieur dit que la seule chose requise ici est pour suppléer à une erreur. Y a-t-il dans le monde un code de lois calculés (sic) pour rencontrer chaque exigence, chaque cas possible ? et comment cette difficulté est-elle surmontée ? en passant une loi qui y remédie. Mais je demanderais à l'hble. monsieur, supposons qu'un tel bill passât qui en serait blessé ? S'il en était ainsi, je serais le premier à m'opposer. — 150 mille personnes viennent et nous disent qu'il y a six membres siégeant dans cette chambre, qui les représentent mal ; peut-on dire combien sont bien fondées leur (sic) plaintes, les portes leur sont fermées ! Si ces messieurs croient que leur sièges (sic) sont bien acquis, ils acquiesceront en accordant cette mesure, à ce qu'une investigation ait lieu. Une loi ex post facto, ainsi appelée, opère une injustice ; où est l'injustice dans ce cas ? Si l'hble. membre pour la ville de Kingston veut me montrer quelque injustice, je changerai mes vues ; mais jusqu'à ce qu'il l'ait fait, je tiendrai à croire que ce n'est pas une loi ex post facto. J'étais un peu surpris d'entendre l'hble. membre, dire que c'était clairement du pouvoir de la chambre de décider sur cette matière sans l'introduction de quelque nouvelle mesure. A présent ce mot me convinc (sic) clairement que la matière n'est pas si claire. Seulement depuis quelques jours une discussion a eu lieu comme si la loi était en force, et il n'a pas paru alors que c'était la conviction de tous que la loi était clairement en force. L'hble. monsieur a présentement découvert, en conséquence du vote de cette chambre, que la loi est en force. Mais avec tout mon respect pour les majorités, je ne puis croire que les majorités sont toujours justes ; et l'hble. monsieur peut déjà découvrir que ce n'est pas si clair qu'il a semblé se l'imaginer. L'hble. monsieur dit que les pétitionnaires ont été coupables de lâcheté ; ont-ils été coupables de cette crassa negligentia et le (sic) culpa latissima qui serait peine d'une pénalité (sic), qu'on leur refuserait l'opportunité de les entendre ? Il est vrai, eux et cette chambre fut longtemps sous la conviction que la loi n'était pas en force ; tout ce qu'on peut dire, est que nous étions en erreur ; mais cette erreur est-elle coupable ? J'espère qu'une erreur honnête ne sera pas punie de la même manière qu'un crime, et que les pétitionnaires ne doivent pas être traités comme des criminels, parce qu'ils ont supposé que la loi n'était pas en force. Nous venons ici dire respectueusement, nous avons été dans l'erreur, tout ce que nous désirons c'est d'avoir l'occasion de rectifier cette erreur, et de nous placer dans les bornes de la loi. (Ecoutez, écoutez). Nous réclamons un acte de justice aussi important que la franchise électorale elle-même. Si je supposais que les pétitionnaires désirassent éviter toute responsabilité, loin de souffrir d'être un instrument dans leur (sic) mains, je rejetterais avec indignation leur application. Mon désir est que les plaintes soient aux membres siégeants, et s'il est trouvé qu'elles sont non fondées, ils soient réités (sic) par une amende pécuniaire, et regardés par tout le monde comme calomniateurs et vilains. Je ne voudrais pas emmener les hbles. membres par des spécieuses propositions, par une affectation de libéralité, qui est employée purement pour couvrir l'il libéralité (sic). (Ecoutez, écoutez). Le bill est calculé pour l'avancement de la justice, les hbles. membres n'ont seulement pas besoin de le lire pour se convaincre qu'il est fondé sur les principes éternels de la justice et de la vérité ; et quelque soit le vote de ce jour, j'en serai parfaitement satisfait que ceux qui votent en faveur de ce bill, n'aient jamais raison de regretter ce vote, mais que ceux qui votent contre, je l'espère, soient visités de toute l'amertume d'une propre condamnation. (Ecoutez, écoutez).<sup>22</sup>

M. Durand dit qu'il croyait que s'il fut jamais une mesure introduite dans cette chambre, qui méritât leur ferme appui, c'était la présente. L'erreur où sont tombés les pétitionnaires, était très excusable, et il se sentait convaincu qu'il n'y avait aucun monsieur dans la chambre qui croyait tenir son siège honnêtement et honorablement qui désirât un moment les priver de l'avantage d'être entendus. En somme il serait utile au crédit des hbles messieurs d'accorder une pleine investigation. Il était certain qu'ils ne voulaient pas l'éviter ; il ne croyait pas que la majorité de cette chambre, consentit à refuser justice aux pétitionnaires et que le seul moyen de leur faire pleine et ample justice, et d'étendre le temps pour faire l'investigation, dans le but de se conformer aux provisions de la loi qui est supposée être en force.

Ceci est une proposition si raisonnable qu'il pouvait à peine supposer un hble. monsieur dans cette chambre qui voulût (sic) l'opposer et surtout après la déclaration qu'ils avaient ouïe de la part des hbles. messieurs du banc de la trésorerie, qu'ils étaient prêts et désireux d'entrer dans l'investigation.<sup>23</sup>

Lost.

Bill read 2nd. time.

Amendment proposed.

So it passed in the negative.

The said Bill was then, according to order, read a second time.

Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by Mr. Aylwin — That the said Bill be amended as follows : —

After "whereas" in the Preamble, strike out the remainder of the words in the said Bill, and insert "certain Acts of the Provincial Parliament of the late province of Lower Canada to regulate the trial of contested elections in that province were, by an Act of the said Provincial Parliament passed in the 4th year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, continued until the first day of May, 1836, and thence until the end of the then next Session of the Provincial Legislature, and no longer : And whereas after the said first day of May in the year aforesaid, the Provincial Parliament of the said Province was duly convened by Royal Proclamation on two several occasions at the City of Quebec in the Province, and on each of those occasions continued sitting for several days, and was on both occasions duly prorogued ; on the first by the Representative of the Sovereign in person, and on the second by Royal Proclamation : And whereas as well in common parlance as in the published Journals of both Houses of the said Provincial Parliament, in one of the speeches from the Throne delivered to such Parliament, in the addresses of “both Houses in reply to such speech, and in the official correspondence “of the Secretary of State for the Colonies in reference to the proceed“ings at such meetings, the said meetings were called and spoken of as “Sessions of the said Provincial Legislature : And whereas in con“sequence of the said Act to regulate the trial of such contested elec“tions not having been further continued by any legislative enactment “made at either of the said meetings, such acts had, in the common “estimation of the public, been looked upon and esteemed as having “expired, and as being no longer in force at the time of the passing of “the Act of the Imperial Parliament for suspending the constitution of “the said Province of Lower Canada, and that consequently the said “Acts were not continued by the provisions of the Act of the Imperial “Parliament for re-uniting the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada :

 “And whereas in consequence of their having been no Act of the “Provincial Parliament passed, nor any judgment given at either of “the said meetings, it has been deemed by the Legislative Assembly “of this Province, that the said meetings were not either of them Ses“sions of the Provincial Legislature within the meaning of the Legisla“tive provision for continuing such Acts, and that consequently the “same are in force at this day : And whereas during the present Session

(197)

Amendment.

“divers Petitions have been presented to the Legislative Assembly of “this Province alleging the occurrence of outrages of the most aggrava“ted and atrocious character at several of the late elections for places “in that part of this Province heretofore composing the Province of “Lower Canada, which outrages, if in truth committed, are not only “most injurious to the peace of the country, but destructive of the “character of the said Legislative Assembly as the representative of the “people thereof : And whereas in consequence of the said generally “received impression entertained in the Lower part of this Province “that the said Acts had expired and were no longer in force, many of “the Petitions representing such outrages, and complaining of undue “Elections and Returns for such places have not been accompanied with “all the formalities required by those Acts, nor have the Petitioners “given that security for the prosecution of such Petitions which the “provisions of the said Acts require : And whereas nothing is more “important than that the fullest opportunity should at all times be “afforded for the investigation of alleged infractions of the freedom of “Elections, such freedom being essential to the very being of Parlia“ment : And whereas in these particular instances especially, apart from “their general public importance arising out of the character of the “outrages alleged to have been committed, it would be most unjust to “visit upon the Petitioners the consequences of a misapprehension, into “which it is but just to assume that they have been in a great measure “led by the language of the different branches of the Legislature itself, “as well as by that of the Imperial authorities themselves : — To “prevent, therefore, as far as possible, the failure of justice in this “behalf, and to afford those members of the Legislative Assembly “whose Elections and Returns are contested in the said Petitions the “opportunity justly due to them of vindicating, in the ordinary course “of proceeding in the like cases, the legality of the means by which “they have been returned to the seats which they hold in the said “House : Be it enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty by and “with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and of the “Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, constituted and “assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in “the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, “intituled ‘An Act to Re-unite the Provinces of Upper and Lower “Canada, and for the Government of Canada ;’ and it is hereby enacted “by the authority of the same, that all Petitions which have been “presented to the Legislative Assembly of this Province, complaining “of undue Elections and Returns, or either of them, for any of the "Counties, Ridings, Cities, Towns, or Boroughs in that part of this Province heretofore composing the Province of Lower Canada, shall and may be proceeded with, tried and determined, as if all the forms required by the said Acts of the Provincial Parliament of the said Province of Lower Canada or any of them had been complied with, in respect of the same; Provided always that security for the prosecution of such Petitions respectively shall be first given within thirty days after the passing of this Act, or within such further time as the Legislative Assembly shall or may in their discretion from time to time think fit to allow."

Mr. Dunscomb
excused from voting.

Appendix, 16 July 1841.

((Question re : Political Amnesty for Rebellion Exiles.))<sup>25</sup>

Col. Prince rose to put a question, of which he had given notice a few days previously, to the gentlemen occupying the Treasury benches, whether it was the intention of the Executive government to introduce any measure for the relief of certain individuals who had been banished from this country for political offences. The press of business before the house yesterday had prevented him, but he would now take the liberty of putting this question to the gentlemen forming His Excellency's administration.<sup>26</sup>

Attorney General Draper desired that the hon. gentleman would explicitly state who those certain individuals were; whether by the term certain individuals, he referred to those who had been banished by the sentence of a court of law, or those who had fled from the province. With respect to the latter class, the hon. and learned gentleman must be aware that an act of amnesty was passed in October 1838, which permitted the return of all those not specifically excepted as having had bills of attainder entered against them, and who were required to surrender themselves. He (Mr. Draper) could only say that there is a disposition on the part of His Excellency to allow all those against whom no specific charges had been proven, to return to their homes, (hear, hear.)<sup>27</sup>

He considered it, however, perfectly unnecessary to make any comments, to impress upon that House, the danger that must inevitably ensue to the peace of the country, were some characters permitted to return, whose conduct even in banishment, daily proves, that they only want the power and opportunity, again to perpetrate those deeds of crime and violence, which shook the social system of the colony to its very centre, at a period not very remote.<sup>28</sup>

Col. Prince said, his question was a very simple one, and required only a plain answer. Was it, or was it not, the intention of the Executive to show mercy to those who, the dupes of knaves and villains, by whom they had been betrayed, were now dragging out a miserable existence in that land, which had once dazzled their imagination with dreams of happiness and liberty — the United States — or who, still more unfortunate, were withering beneath the degradation of the felon's brand, in remorse and agony, in New South Wales? <sup>29</sup>

Mr. Draper assured the gallant Col. that where mercy could be extended with safety, it would; but to those who had expressly been excluded by proclamation, there was but little hope, of any dangerous and experimental lenity being shown to them.<sup>30</sup> committee on the Bill.

Bill reported
amended.

The following Petitions were severally brought up and laid on the table : —

By Mr. J. S. Macdonald — The Petition of the Honorable J. McGillivray, and others, of the Eastern District.

By Mr. Morin — The Petition of P. A. Weilbreuner, of Montreal.

By Mr. Holmes — The Petition of the Reverend Edward Black, and others, of the City of Montreal.

By Mr. Duggan — The Petition of Christopher Cheyne, and others, of the Township of Toronto — the Petition of James Clarke, and others, inhabitants of the Township of Caledon — the Petition of James Gillespy, and others, inhabitants of Caledon — and the Petition of J. B. Phillips, and others, inhabitants of the Townships of Toronto, Chinguacousey and Gore, of Toronto.

By Mr. Hincks — The Petition of William Light, and others, inhabitants of the District of Brock.<sup>1</sup>

By Mr. Derbshire — The Petition of F. McKay, and other Justices of the Peace of the intended District of Dalhousie — and the Petition of C. C. Grece, and others, whose lands are intersected by the Grenville Canal.

An Engrossed Bill for preventing any failure of Justice, in respect of complaints of undue elections or returns of members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province at the last general election, was read for the third time.

Mr. Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Buchanan,

That the said Bill be recommitment to a committee of the whole House to-morrow.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

On motion of Mr. Buchanan, seconded by Mr. Noel,

Ordered — That the said Bill be forthwith recommitment to a committee of the whole House.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Captain Steele took the chair of the committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Captain Steele reported, that the committee had gone through the Bill, and had made several amendments thereto, which amendments were again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House ; and are as followeth : —

After the word "Whereas," in the preamble, where it first occurs, strike out all the words in the preamble, and insert the following in lieu thereof : "Doubts have arisen as to whether certain Acts of the "late Province of Lower Canada, relating to the trial of controverted "elections in that part of this Province of Canada, hitherto called "Lower Canada, were in force at the commencement of the present "Session ; and whereas, in consequence of such doubts, the formalities "and requirements prescribed by the said Provincial Acts have not been "observed by certain electors, who have petitioned the Legislative "Assembly against the return of certain members of the same; and

 "whereas it is desirable to afford the said Petitioners an extension of "time within which it may be in their power to complete the said
 "formalities and requirements of the said Provincial Acts."

Press 3, Line 3 — After the words "Provided always," strike out the remainder, and insert the following: "That all the said formalities and "requirements of the said Provincial Acts be complied with within "thirty days after the passing of this Act."

Ordered — That the said Bill, as amended, be engrossed.

The said engrossed Bill, as amended, was then again read.

Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by Mr. Buchanan,

That the Bill do pass.

Mr. Cameron moved, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day,

That the Bill do not now pass, but that a Committee of Privileges be appointed to investigate into the alleged violence and corruption practised at certain Elections in Lower Canada, with respect to which petitions have been presented to the House, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

The question being put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth: —

So it passed in the Negative.<sup>2</sup>

After many hours ... in reiterating the pros and cons of former discussion, the third reading (the preamble being amended by Mr. Buchanan's introducing certain words into it, holding the petitioners to the observance of all the formalities of the law) — was carried.<sup>3</sup>

Among the most prominent who spoke ... in opposition to the measure, were Mr. Day....<sup>4</sup>
 Messrs. Ogden, Harrison, Cameron, Johnston, Capt. Steele, &c....<sup>5</sup>

For it — MacNab, Buchanan, Neilson, Berthelot ... Viger, &c. &c.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Moffatt ... observed, the petitioners having failed to comply with the law, those seats were held with as sound a title, as that by which his own estates were secured to him. The law, affecting the petitioners, was founded in justice, and intended to embrace all petitioners; can, therefore, that which has been established in justice be subverted with justice? —<sup>7</sup>

Bill passed.

So it was carried in the affirmative, and —

Resolved — That the Bill do pass.

Ordered — That Sir Allan McNab do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council and desire their concurrence.

Messages from His Excellency.

The Honorable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, delivered to Mr. Speaker three Messages from His Excellency the Governor General, signed by His Excellency.

And the said Messages were read by Mr. Speaker, all the members of the House being uncovered, and are as followeth : —

SYDENHAM.

Respecting locality of the seat of Government.

In answer to their Address of the 14th instant, the Governor General informs the House of Assembly, that His Excellency is in possession of no correspondence with the Home Government, in reference to the locality of the Seat of Government of Canada, which His Excellency could, with propriety, communicate to the House.

Government House,
Kingston, 16th July, 1841. }

SYDENHAM.

Respecting Address
from Assembly of U.
Canada on introduction of Canadian products into the Ports of Great Britain.

The Governor General informs the House of Assembly, in answer to their Address of the 14th instant, that His Excellency has been apprised by the Secretary of State, that the Address of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, on the subject of the introduction of the products of this Province into the Ports of Great Britain free from duty, and to invest the Legislature with power to originate and vary duties on products when admitted into the Ports of this Province on certain conditions, had been referred, by Her Majesty's commands, for the consideration of the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for the affairs of Trade; and His Excellency has further received the assurance of Lord John Russell, that "It will be the object of the Queen's Government to free the Trade of Canada from restrictions which are unnecessary, and at the same time to do justice to the industry and manufactures of the United Kingdom."

Government House,
Kingston, 16th July, 1841. }

SYDENHAM.

Respecting reserved
Bill for imposing duties on imports from U. States.

The Governor General informs the House of Assembly, in answer to their Address of the 13th instant, that no information has been received from the Secretary of State on the subject of the Bill passed by the Legislative Council and Assembly of Upper Canada, during their last Session, entitled "An Act to impose certain duties on certain articles imported into this Province from the United States of Amer- "ica," and that that Bill is still under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

(202)

Government House,
Kingston, 16th July, 1841. }

Religious Societies to hold lands read 2nd time.

Resolved — That the Extra Clerks and writers employed during the session be paid at the rate of ten shillings, currency, per day of six hours, and so in proportion for extra hours.

Resolved — That A. Leroux dit Cardinal, be appointed chief Messenger, from the 14th June ultimo, with a fixed salary of one hundred pounds, currency, per annum, and the allowance heretofore enjoyed by him as Messenger to the House of Assembly, of the late Province of Lower Canada.

Resolved — That King Barton, be appointed House Messenger, with a fixed salary of forty pounds, currency, for each session.

Resolved — That Hugh McClellan, be appointed door keeper, with a fixed salary of sixty pounds, currency, for each session, not including the allowance of twenty pounds which he now receives by warrant, in virtue of a Law.

Resolved — That the others Messengers and doors keepers be paid at the rate of seven shillings and six pence, currency, per diem, during the session.

Resolved — That a Message be sent to the Honourable the Legislative Council, praying their honors will permit the Honourable Réné Edouard Caron, John Fraser and George Pemberton, three of their members, to attend the Select Committee of this House to which is referred the petition of John William Woolsey, Esquire, and others, of the City of Quebec, praying to be restored to their Elective Franchise, on Wednesday and Thursday next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to be examined on the subject of the said reference.

Ordered — That Mr. Burnet do carry the said Message to the Legislative Council.

On motion of Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Child.

Resolved — That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the expediency of amending a certain Ordinance passed by the Special Council of the late Province of Lower Canada, in the 4th year of Her Majesty's Reign intituled "an Ordinance for making a Rail Road from Sherbrooke to a point upon either Bank of the Richelieu."

A Bill the better to provide for the freedom of elections throughout this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned, was, according to order, read a second time.

A Bill to enable religious Societies of all denominations of Christians to hold the lands requisite for certain purposes therein mentioned, was according to order, read a second time.

Mr. Williams the framer of the bill said that all the petitioners prayed for was ; that all denominations of christians, might be allowed to hold 10 acres of land, for a house of worship, school room, &c.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Cartwright remarked, that a bill introduced by himself upon the subject to extend the amount of land to be held by such societies to the value of £500, had been already transmitted to the Home Government for Her Majesty's assent, and that consequently it would be better for the member for Durham, to defer his motion.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Williams did not feel disposed to do so....<sup>10</sup>

Some suggestions ... fell from Messrs. Moffatt and Merritt....<sup>11</sup>

He (Mr. Williams) concurred in the propriety of the bill's being committed.<sup>12</sup>

(206)

Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Wednesday next.

Bill to enable Christian Ministers of all denominations

Committee on Gaspé
Fisheries.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the report of the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to regulate the fisheries in the District of Gaspé, and on the said Bill, being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Powell took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

Progress.

And Mr. Powell reported that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Leave granted to sit again.

Ordered — That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Wednesday next.

Order for House in Committee on Laws of Feudal Tenure,
postponed.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the Laws of that part of the Province, heretofore known as Lower Canada, touching the tenure of Lands, and commonly known as "Feudal Tenure" and to consider the expediency of altering, and amending the same, and the best and most equitable mode of effecting the alterations that may be deemed necessary, being read.

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Monday next.

The Honourable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, delivered to Mr. Speaker two Messages from His Excellency, the Governor General, signed by His Excellency.

And the said Messages were read by Mr. Speaker, all the members of the House being uncovered, and are as followeth : —

SYDENHAM.

The Governor General recommends to the House of Assembly the propriety of providing for the purchase of the Interest of the private Shareholders in the Welland Canal, conformably to a Bill passed in the Session of 1839, by the House of Assembly of Upper Canada.

Government House,
Kingston, 20th July, 1841. }

Message from His Excellency the Governor General on private Stock, Welland Canal.

SYDENHAM.

Message with statement of Revenue and Expenditure.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Assembly a Statement of the probable revenue and expenditure of the Province, and an Estimate of Expenditure up to the 31st December, 1841; and in conformity with the provisions of the 57th clause of the Union Act, he recommends these estimates to the House of Assembly.

Government House,
Kingston, 20th July, 1841. }

For the said Statements and Estimates, see Appendix (B.)

Welland Canal Accounts presented.

The Honourable S. B. Harrison presented, pursuant to the Provincial Act 7, William 4. Cap. 92, the Welland Canal accounts for 1840.

For the said Accounts, see Appendix (D.)

And annual report from Provincial Penitentiary.

(208)

And also, pursuant to the Provincial Act 4th William 4, Cap. 37, the Annual Report of the Provincial Penitentiary for 1840.

For the said Report, see Appendix (M.)

71st Rule not to be retrospective.

Mr. Durand moved, seconded by Mr. Harmanus Smith,

That nothing contained in the 71st Rule of this House shall be taken to affect any Petition, Resolution, Bill, or other proceeding, which was presented, received, moved, or introduced, before the said Rule was adopted by the House; but that every such Petition, Resolution, Bill, or other proceeding, so introduced, shall be proceeded upon in like manner, as if the said Rule had not been made.

Mr. Hamilton would oppose the motion. The hon. gentleman has in view the revival of a question which has already been twice decided against him. He alluded to the question which had been raised for conferring certain privileges on the Sydenham Road Company. He thought that the parties ought to be bound by the rule of the House, and would therefore oppose the motion, which went to establish a general rule for the especial benefit of the petitioners in this instance.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Durand had thought it unjust to the petitioners that having presented their petition in the usual manner, and before the establishment of the present rule, they should now be called upon to pay twenty pounds before the bill could be proceeded with. He hoped that the House would grant the motion and extend justice to them.<sup>2</sup>

Some further discussion ((ensued))....<sup>3</sup>

(208)

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Resolved accordingly.

On motion of Mr. Derbshire, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day.

Committee of whole to-morrow, on 1st and 3rd Vic. relating to District of Dalhousie.

Resolved — That this House will, on to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the Acts of the 1st and 3d of VICTORIA, relating to the intended District of Dalhousie, and the erection of a Gaol and Court House therein.

Address to be sent to His Excellency for information on loans made to certain Companies, Corporations and individuals, in U. C.

Mr. Hincks moved, seconded by Mr. Price,

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency, the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House a statement of all loans made by the Government to the Cobourg, Port Hope, and Oakville Harbour Companies, and also of the securities, if any, taken for such loans, and the amount of Interest at present due thereon; and that His Excellency will further be pleased to inform this House what steps have been taken to enforce payment of the arrears of Interest, if any be due.<sup>4</sup>

In submitting this motion, he ((Mr. Hincks)) thought it proper to state that a loan of £3000 had been granted to the Cobourg Harbour Company, but instead of going directly into the possession of the Company, it passed by some means or other into the hands of an individual member, who gave personal security for its repayment, and thus exercised a control over the Company. New stock was created, and yearly dividends of about 12 per cent declared, yet not a shilling of either the principal or interest had been paid to the Government for the last four years and a half (hear, hear). The Company came forward a second time and asked for a second loan, and obtained it under the provision that all the tolls, dues, &c., collected by the Company should, after defraying the expenses necessary for collection, be paid into the hands of the Receiver General of the Province, until the principal and interest had been refunded. This stipulation has not been complied with, no monies having been paid to the Receiver General, while dividends have been paid up till last year, nor had any steps been taken, to his knowledge, to enforce the payment. The Port Hope Harbour company was in a similar situation. A loan of £2000 had been granted to the company, and had likewise passed in the hands of an individual. In what manner it had been expended he was not prepared to say. A dredging machine which had cost the Province a large sum of money had been employed in the improvement of the harbour, the charges for repairs upon which amounted to more than its original cost. His object in pressing the motion was, that the House should be informed of the facts of the case submitted.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Harrison had no objection that all the information in possession of the Government relative to these harbours should be laid before the House, but it would be found unsatisfactory, as the plea generally set forth in such cases was, that the interest had been expended in the improvement of the work. The facts cited proved two things, the necessity for a Board of Works, and the impropriety of leaving public works to the speculation of private companies (hear, hear.) It was due, however, to the company to say, that in the early period of the country no such facilities were afforded for carrying on scientific improvements, and were it not for individual enterprise, we would have been destitute of all improvement.<sup>6</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab was afraid the remedy proposed by the hon. member for Kingston would be found worse than the evil (a laugh). He thought that the amount required for the maintenance of this Board of Works would be greater than the interest on all the loans to private companies put together. With respect to the motion before the House, he hoped the hon. gentleman who introduced it would extend the enquiry to every company which had received loans of money. He wished that the whole matter should be brought before the House. The best mode of proceeding was to inquire into all.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Holmes considered that there had been great remissness on the part of the Government in the matter brought before the House.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Boswell was of opinion that the discussion was premature. Although connected with the part of the country alluded to, he would withhold any observation until the returns were made.<sup>9</sup>

(208)

Sir Allan McNab moved, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Cameron, That the following words be added to the said Address : — “And “also similar information with regard to Corporations, or individuals in “that part of the Province lately called Upper Canada.”

A few observations ((were made))....<sup>10</sup>

(208)

The question being put upon the motion of amendment, it was un-animously agreed to by the House.

The question being then put upon the main motion : as amended, it was also agreed to, and —

Resolved — That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that His Excellency will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House a Statement of all loans made by the Government to the Cobourg, Port Hope, and Oakville Harbour Companies, and also the securities, if any, taken for such loans, and the amount of Interest at present due thereon ; and that His Excellency will further be pleased to inform this House what steps have been taken to enforce payment of the arrears of Interest, if any be due ;

and also similar information with regard to all Corporations or Individuals in that part of the Province lately called Upper Canada.

Ordered — That the said Address be presented to His Excellency by such members of this House as are of the Honourable the Executive Council of this Province.

On motion of Mr. Turcotte, seconded by Mr. Parent,

Resolved — That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the propriety of repealing or amending the Statutes and Ordinances of that House to go into Committee, on Monday next, on Statutes &c. of L. C. relating to highways.

(209)

part of this Province formerly called Lower Canada, relating to the improvement of the Queen's Highways, during the winter season.

On motion of Mr. Attorney General Draper, seconded by Mr. Merritt,

Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the expediency of granting a sum of money to purchase the private shares in the Welland Canal, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Thursday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Order of day for Committee on purchasing private stock of Welland Company, revived.

Message of His Excellency on same subject referred to same Committee.

Ordered — That the Message of His Excellency, the Governor General, on the same subject, received this day, be referred to the said Committee.

Mr. Johnston moved, seconded by Mr. Williams,

That the Clerk of this House be instructed to inform the Proprietor of the Canadian Mirror of Parliament, that his paper is no longer required for the use of members of this House.

Motion for discontinuing Mirror of Parliament.

Motion lost.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued and it passed in the Negative.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Christie,

Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the Petition of William Walker, and other inhabitants of the city of Quebec, relating to the Timber Trade, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Order of day for Committee of whole on Petition of William Walker and others, revived.

On motion of Mr. Neilson, seconded by Mr. Christie,

Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the House in Committee, to consider any and what amendments are necessary to two certain Ordinances of the Governor and Special Council of the late Province of Lower Canada, relating to the incorporation of the City of Quebec, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Order of day for Committee on certain Ordinances, revived.

On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Thompson,

Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the second reading of the Bill to amend the Militia Law of that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Wednesday, the 28th instant.

Order of the day on 2nd reading of Militia Bill revived.

On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Powell,

Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the second reading of the Bill for the relief of disabled and infirm persons, lost by the adjournment of the House of Friday last, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Friday next.

Order of day on 2nd reading Bill for relief of disabled and infirm revived.

Mr. Henry Smith, from the Committee of the whole House, on the first Report of the Special Committee on the contingent accounts and expenses of the present Session, reported, according to Order, the Resolution of the said Committee, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Committee of whole report on 1st report of contingent Committee.

£3396 9s. 8d. put into the hands of Jas. FitzGibbon, Esq. to liquidate certain claims against the late House of Assembly of U. C.

Resolved — That the sum of three thousand three hundred and ninety six pounds, nine shillings and eight pence, currency, out of the monies now in the hands of Mr. Speaker, be paid to James Fitzgibbon, Esquire, late Clerk of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, to enable him to liquidate, in part, the several claims against the said House, as per First Report of the Special Committee on contingencies.

House in Committee on Common Schools.

The Order of the day, for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the expediency of repealing certain laws relating to the establishment and maintenance of Common Schools in the late Province of Upper Canada, and of making provision for the establishment and maintenance of Common Schools in this Province, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Boutillier took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Resolution on maintenance of Common Schools reported.

And Mr. Boutillier reported, that the Committee had come to a Resolution, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Resolution.

Resolved — That it is expedient to repeal the Acts and parts of Acts of the Legislature of that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, providing for, or relating to, the establishment, maintenance, or regulation of Common Schools therein ; and to make provision for the establishment and maintenance of Common Schools throughout this Province.

Bill for support of Common Schools brought in and read.

Ordered — That Mr. Solicitor General Day have leave to bring in a Bill to repeal certain Acts therein mentioned, and to make provision for the establishment and maintenance of Common Schools throughout this Province.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received and read for the first time.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Day rose and said that the object of the present motion was the repeal of the existing laws on this subject in the two portions of the Province, and the substitution in their place of one general system which should extend to the whole Province, and embrace the entire population. The subject was one of the greatest importance, and which threw a great moral duty on every man to lend his aid towards supporting it. Those acquainted with the subject well knew that the present measure was but one part of the great general system of national education, which would take in not merely the establishment of common schools, but also of model, and more especially of normal schools, which would train up young men to act as teachers and instructors. Of this system the establishment of common schools would be the foundation upon which all the rest would lie ; and if prudence was only observed in proceeding, there was no reason why everything should not be done on this basis which the importance of the subject required. In order, however, to secure success, it was necessary that the system introduced should be ample, effective and popular, and that it should not interfere with the prejudices of those for whose benefit it was intended. It was not necessary to detain the committee with the considerations of several acts which had existed in Upper Canada, it was sufficient to say that they had proved inadequate for the purpose intended, and that it was necessary that some alteration should take place. The first act of the Legislature on the subject of education in that province was passed in 1816 ; this act was extended by another of 1819, which made further provision by extending the aid previously granted. In 1830 another act was passed, and again in 1833, which was the last attempt at legislation on the subject. There was but one opinion on the effect of these measures, that they had proved insufficient, and had failed to effect the important object held out. By reference to statistics it would be seen that the total number of children educated at the district schools was 300, and at common schools 800, giving out of the total number an average of one only out of 18 who received the benefit of education. If, then, means for the encouragement of education was so much required in Upper Canada, how much more were they required in Lower Canada. There no legal establishment existed, no provision of the law by which the people could obtain access to education. With the exception of a few institutions supported by private benevolence, and maintained by the exertions of a class of men to whom he (Mr. Day) could not pay too high a tribute of praise — he alluded to the Roman Catholic clergy — no means for public instruction existed. The total population of that Province was estimated at 600,000 souls, out of which one-fifth, or 12,000 (sic) men, were without the means of education, and this young population was growing up to the exercise of important duties totally ignorant of the nature of those duties. He (Mr. Day) would not join in the censure which had been so abundantly dealt out on the Legislature: the truth was, that there had been a great deal of legislation on the subject, extending back to the 41st George 2nd, which attempted the foundation of a royal institution, but was productive of no effect. Since then several acts had been passed; in 1814, 1818, and lastly in 1823, which last act was of great importance, and must have produced the most beneficial results. Its effect was to divide the country into districts: and so important was it considered that it had been extended by subsequent statutes down to the 2d Wm. 4, c. 26, which existed up to the time of the suspension of the constitution, since when no provision for the maintenance of schools had been made. These facts alone were sufficient to secure the unanimous support of that house, and he would merely add, that he had bestowed great attention upon the materials necessary for the measure, in order to render it worthy of support. Besides his own labours, he had been indebted for much of the information he possessed to a valuable report furnished by Dr. Duncombe (sic) to the Legislature of Upper Canada on the subject of education in the province, as also to the labours of a gentleman named Dunkin, and to a pamphlet published by Mr. Mondelet, the tenor and spirit of which reflected the highest credit on the writer. After passing a strong eulogy on this pamphlet, Mr. Day moved the reception of the order of the day.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Neilson said that there could of course be no objection on his part to any alteration which might be considered necessary in the law relating to common schools in this part of the Province. But with respect to the eastern part, a portion of which he had the honor to represent, he could state from his own personal knowledge that great efforts had been made by the people themselves — and those efforts, he was happy to say, were successful — to educate the rising generation.<sup>13</sup> Had no objection to the system of education that prevailed in Lower Canada, which was carried to an extent at one time embracing the instruction of 40,000 children.<sup>14</sup>

He (Mr. Neilson) had visited hundreds of schools in Lower Canada, and he never in any part of the world saw greater progress made than was made in those schools. (Hear, hear.) The dissensions between different branches of the Legislature afterwards unhappily put an end to the system of education then in practice, and left that province without any provision for common schools, and nothing remained but what could be derived from the efforts of the people themselves; and he believed it was now going on in such a way that whether assistance were given to them or not, they would be educated. (Hear, hear.) This was the universal feeling throughout Lower Canada. — Notwithstanding this, he would be happy to see the work facilitated by some organized system, by which the people might be fully enabled to educate their children according to their wishes and feelings; and, above all, their religious opinions should not be interfered with. — He (Mr. Neilson) would cheerfully concur in the resolution, and he would also endeavor to aid to the utmost of his power any proceeding upon this subject; but he would, at the same time, watch with great earnestness any thing which he thought was calculated to interfere with the religious prejudices of the people.<sup>15</sup>

Capt. Steele would observe that that part of the speech of his Excellency the Governor General which referred to the subject of education had been received with immense satisfaction throughout the whole western part of the province, and he was happy to perceive that a similar spirit seemed to prevail in Lower Canada. He hoped the house would unite in producing as perfect a system of education as possible; that each denomination of Christians may educate their children according to the principles of their own faith.<sup>16</sup> ((He)) hoped to see Norman (sic) ((Normal)) schools established, and such a system of bringing up young men, as teachers; as would preclude the necessity of catching at every mere adventurer from the States, who was desirous of introducing principles decidedly opposed to those that ought to be inculcated in the minds of youth in a British colony.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Merritt said this was a question which he had heard discussed for a number of years, and up to the present time, he was sorry to say, without any beneficial result. He thought before the system already in existence was condemned, or set aside, they ought to be well assured that they had the means of establishing a better. They might look with great advantage to other countries for examples on the subject of education. In the State of Connecticut a fund was provided by the government equal to the sum which the people were willing to raise voluntarily, and they had by these means an aggregate of four millions of dollars annually for the support of common schools. The result of such a system was, that according to returns which might be relied upon, there was but one person in the whole State who was unable to read and write. He hoped the hon. gentleman would point out some means for providing a permanent fund for the maintenance of schools, which, up to the present moment, had not been the case. Although as far back as 1798 a large appropriation of lands had been made for the support of grammar schools, yet that appropriation had afterwards been diverted to other purposes.<sup>18</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison said he was exceedingly happy to hear the observations of the hon. gentleman, for it fortunately happened that the plan which he recommends is the very one which is intended to be pursued. The fund is provided by the Legislature. With regard to an appropriation of lands an investigation has been going on, and he trusted that before the end of this session a very satisfactory report would be laid before the Legislature.<sup>19</sup> Mr. Harrison said, that it was proposed to raise such fund, by a local assessment in every district, and that details accordingly would be submitted to the house in due course, which he hoped would be satisfactory.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Boswell said the hon. and learned gentleman who introduced the resolution had very properly abstained from entering at large upon the details of the measure which he intended to found upon it; but he (Mr. Boswell) was convinced it was a subject of congratulation to the country that now, for the first time, a minister of the government comes down to this house and proposes a measure for the promotion of education. However we may differ upon the minute details, the very fact of the measure being proposed by a minister of the government is a subject of congratulation. (Hear, hear.) The hon. gentleman from Haldimand says, before we condemn the old plan let us know what the new one is to be. Sir, I have heard the old system condemned from one end of the province to the other. That it is necessary to adopt some change there can be no doubt; there is no difference of opinion upon this point; and I trust that when the plan of the hon. and learned gentleman is brought before the house it will be found to be so liberal in its nature that they will feel it their duty to give it their entire support.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Merritt observed that he was very happy to find that a permanent fund was intended to be appropriated. Under these circumstances he had no idea of opposing the measure.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Hale said he derived much satisfaction from the announcement of the hon. and learned gentleman, not only with regard to the subject itself but with the mode in which he proposed to conduct it. He was happy to find that the measure was to have reference to the various sections of the province. He confessed he was somewhat startled at the expression made use of by the hon. gentleman from the county of Quebec (Mr. Neilson,) that he would watch with scrupulous care the introduction of a system of education which should have reference to Lower Canada. He (Mr. Hale) was induced to believe from this expression that the hon. gentleman had a lurking desire that the union of these provinces should not be consummated. (Hear, hear.)<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Viger said the hon. gentleman seemed to be under a misapprehension with regard to the desire of the hon. member from Quebec. What they desired was that there should be no distinction in religious matters. He (Mr. Viger) could not see any great harm in this. They desired that no monopoly should be established; such things were destructive of the peace of society. They had examples both in Germany and France of government monopolies in the conducting of education, and they had been attended with the greatest abuses. We wish it to be particularly understood that all classes should be equal in the eye of the law, as regards civil and religious liberty. This is a principle which we desire to assert, and which we desire to see put in practice. The hon. gentleman declares that nothing has been done to remove the extreme ignorance which he represents as prevailing in Lower Canada. He (Mr. Viger) was far from saying that they were in no need of instruction, but this much he would say, that they were not altogether in the state which the hon. gentleman would have the house to believe. He would say further, that the efforts made by the House of Assembly to promote education had been extremely successful. Education had been progressing with extreme rapidity.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Holmes said he had heard with great satisfaction the announcement which had been made to this house by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Day) of his determination to bring forward a system of general education, to be provided for by a grant from the Legislature. He could assure that hon. gentleman that he could not bring forward a measure which would be received with more approbation than this one. (Hear, hear.) There had been several petitions presented to that house praying that the holy scriptures might be introduced as a text-book in schools. He (Mr. H.) could not bring his mind to acquiesce in this proposition. Every man is answerable for his religious belief to his own conscience and his God, and every man must be at liberty to instruct his children in that faith which his conscience dictates.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he would support the resolution with great satisfaction, as he perceived that a fund for the purposes of general education was to be created from the lands originally set apart for the support of the schools within the Upper Province, and from what was called the Jesuits' estates in Lower Canada. With regard to the school lands, he (Mr. Hincks) was aware that there had been a great misapplication of the funds proceeding therefrom. He would regret exceedingly that a similar grant should be again made to so little purpose (hear, hear.) They had experienced trouble enough with those grants. The Clergy Reserves was another example (hear, hear.) It was known that great complaints arose regarding such grants, from the circumstance that they obstruct the settlement of the country. This was an important point. For these reasons he was averse to having any lands, more than had been already granted for that purpose, appropriated; and he trusted that those already granted would be disposed of as speedily as possible. It was impossible to enter into a discussion of the subject without having the details before them, but so far as he had an opportunity of judging of the measure from what he had already (sic) seen, he had no hesitation in giving it his cordial support.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Durand said he should be extremely happy to support the resolution. The subject of Education was one which was viewed with extraordinary interest by the whole country. There had been a munificent grant of half a million of acres, which would have amounted at least to two millions of dollars, if sold. A sufficient fund would thus have been secured for the purpose of endowing schools throughout the whole Province. The question is now, what are we going to get in lieu of this fund. I think the people of the province are at all events entitled to an equivalent.<sup>27</sup>

Col. Prince said this was a most important subject; no subject brought before the house could be more so. He, however, would make objections to hon. members going into the details of the bill on the present occasion. The simple question is whether or not the bill ought to be introduced. He is and always has been, a strong advocate for common schools. If properly conducted, they will be productive of immense good to the country, and become the great basis of liberty. Under all circumstances and at all times, Scotland has been celebrated for its educational system; and therefore he would be willing to pay the greatest deference to the opinions of the hon. member for the country of Quebec on a question of this kind. The hon. member took his seat after paying a high tribute of respect to Col. Burwell, late member for London, for his exertions on this subject.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Neilson. — The hon. member for Sherbrooke seems to think suspiciously of me. I am a Scotchman, and think that the old Scotch saying "evil thinkers are always ill doers," will apply very justly to that hon. gentleman.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Morin said that there was education in Lower Canada, but no good had resulted from it, as the Government was not responsible.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said that this was one of the great measures that he had supported in common with the union. It was a measure to prove that the schoolmaster was abroad. — If the people have no education, they can have no notion of the doings of the government, and in such a case it does just as it pleases. A despatch had been sent to this colony to change the lands set apart for educational purposes for better lands. He trusted this would not be overlooked.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Harrison replied that all sums previously allowed were taken into the accounts in possession of the house.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Price stated that the question before the committee was one in which he took a deep interest, and he congratulated the country upon the prospect of a better state of things being about to be introduced. His hon. friend from South Lincoln had stated that the schoolmaster was abroad. He (Mr. Price) trusted that this bill would bring the schoolmaster home to every village and township. It had been a source of regret to him that hitherto all attempts at legislation upon the subject of Education in this province had been made with a view to proselyte the youth of the country to one favorite dominant church, and valuable and rich endowments of lands had been diverted from their legitimate appropriation, that is, from common schools, and applied to build up sectarian colleges. A splendid evidence of this legislative folly may now be seen at Toronto; a large piece of ground has been set apart and at an enormous expense ornamented and decorated as pleasure grounds, for an intended University connected with the Church of England, but no building has been erected, although large salaries have been paid to embryo dignitaries at Toronto and others, to keep up the solemn mockery. If the bill now about to be introduced should be free from sectarianism and otherwise be liberally intended, it should have his (Mr. P.'s) cordial support; but, on the other hand, if it were to be trammelled with religious prejudices and enactments, it should meet his most determined opposition. The success of a ministry and the prosperity of a country depend very much upon the moral instruction of the people; and if the executive government expect to obtain that popularity which every friend of civil and religious liberty should aim at, they must give the country the advantage of a good, liberal, and extensive system of education, and then a good government will have materials to operate upon, which while it confers honor and credit on the executive, will on the other hand give moral influence and power to the people — a power which will be a formidable check upon a bad government and a strong support to a good one. My hon. friend from North Lincoln (continued Mr. Price) has stated that a great deal had been said in former parliaments on this important subject, and that laws had been set apart for the purpose of education, but scandalously diverted to some favorite object than that for which it was intended. This is not now the question; the question is, shall a liberal and extensive system of education be introduced into the country or not. My rooted and settled opinion is that all good governments are bound to provide for the education of the youth of the country; and should there be no means within the reach of the present Executive, I as an independent member of this house, am willing to provide the necessary means by taxation; as no tax could be more just and equitable than one judiciously levied and fairly laid out for the moral education of the people; and I am satisfied that my constituents will bear me out in my vote upon such a measure. I trust that the hon. and learned Solicitor General, when he brings in the bill, will not disappoint this house and the country by introducing any illiberal enactments to mar the present universal satisfaction the prospect of the measure has given.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Parent ... ((told)) the committee that the Bible was a very improper book to be put into the hands of children at schools, and he, as a Catholic, could not sanction it....<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Thorburn advocated the measure as a most important one, observing that any allusion to the Bible, whatever difference of opinion existed, ought at all times to be made with that reverence which was due to so inestimable a volume.<sup>36</sup>

A rebuke ((was heard)) from ... ((Mr.)) Johnston.<sup>37</sup>

(210)

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time this day fortnight.

Ordered — That 200 copies of the said Bill be printed in each of the English and French Languages, for the use of the members of this House.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to repeal the Laws now in force in that part of this Province formerly called Upper Canada, for the recovery of small debts, and to make other provisions therefore, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Holmes took the chair of the Committee.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Draper introducing the second reading of this bill, said that he had been fortunate enough to hear from all parts of the Province that the measure has been approved of.<sup>39</sup> As one out of the many instances of absurdity emanating from the present courts, he instanced the case of an individual at Niagara, who sued for work done in a smuggling transaction, — an award being given in his favour, the Commissioner remarking, that the risk which he ran in performing it, exposed him to a heavy penalty!! A sentence from a law court, thus providing a remuneration for an unlawful transaction.<sup>40</sup>

Bill ordered to be printed.

House in Committee on Small Debt Bill.

Among the very numerous comments of the learned member upon the provisions of the bill, the following remarks may more particularly be noticed. He proposed to divide Upper Canada into 6 Divisions, which would allow of such dispensation of Justice with regard to the courts for which the bill was introduced as would be generally beneficial. The present law, providing that forty days must expire before an execution could issue after judgment, operating to the disadvantage of claimants, he would introduce such an alteration with respect to the period of executions being issued, as he did not doubt would meet with general satisfaction. He also decidedly recommended that the appointment of any deputy in due part of a judge, should be given due notice of the executive, that proper precaution might be adopted to secure an efficient person. In the appointment of clerks and bailiffs, the learned gentleman was also of opinion that the Clerk of the District Court should be ex officio of the clerk of the Court of Requests. Upon the subject of fees, he also recommended that they would be resolved into a regular fee fund being convinced that in some districts they would exceed the demands for which they were levied, and would admit of a surplus that might be beneficially applied. It is within ten years, said the learned gentleman that the business of these courts has increased to a very great extent; he was desirous to introduce therefore, such a revision of the law as would deter the plaintiff from coming forward with a claim which he could not substantiate. Another provision that he contemplated was to enable any one claiming for an amount not greater than ten pounds from several parties, to have such claim answered upon proving the debt against one out of the number, without giving him the trouble to sue all; and also to allow minors to sue for wages due. He also recommended that the judges should have the regulating of the fees, and of any of the minor arrangements of office which their experience must render them competent to manage. There was another point, and he had omitted it purposely that he might now bring it more pointedly under the notice of the committee, that in the Courts of Request judgment is in all cases final. The alteration proposed to be introduced in this bill was that in case either party are dissatisfied with the judgment he should be entitled to appeal from the decision, and in no case should the costs of the appeal be costs charged in the case, but must be paid by the person appealing (sic); in order to do away with that bug-bear which seems to terrify some hon. gentlemen viz: law costs.

I have thus endeavoured to give a general outline of the details of the measure, and in order to bring the measure before the committee, I will now move for the adoption of the first resolution.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. J.S. Macdonald said he thought it highly desirable that some measure should be adopted in order to silence the complaints which were almost universally made with regard to the proceedings of these courts; as far as his own district is concerned, luckily there were commissioners of intelligence and integrity presiding, but this he was sorry to say was not the case throughout the province. — There was one suggestion which he would take the liberty of making, and it was that many persons against whom judgments were rendered, possessed no goods or chattels although they own lands, he therefore thought there should be a power given to parties to certiorari such cases into the high courts, in order to obtain execution against those lands.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he would take the liberty of making a few remarks upon this question as he had said nothing for a considerable time. (A laugh.) The hon. gentleman who spoke last, had taken occasion to eulogise the commissioners in the district in which he resided; one would think they are almost too good for earth; such immaculate purity is a rare thing. He (Mr. Johnston) had met that hon. gentleman in many parts of the province, and also in the United States, but he had never met him in a Court of Request. He (Mr. Johnston) was in the habit of attending these courts, and he could therefore speak from his own knowledge respecting the proceedings, and the honest conclusion which he had come to was that the court of Requests should be abolished.<sup>43</sup> He should be happy to see the poor man have cheap law, but not too cheap, since that in the long run often proved dear law.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said that great complaints existed in his part of the country against the present system. Though in some of the courts competent judges were to be found, yet this was not the rule. One of the evils growing out of the constant communication between suitors and judges in these courts was a serious one. Relying upon that intimacy opinions were frequently obtained before hand what either were or were not supported in the end, and what tended to weaken public confidence by encouraging the impression that justice was not impartially administered. — With a knowledge of these evils he was prepared to support the bill as a whole in the hope that it would obviate the difficulties which at present exist.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Hincks supported the bill and expressed his opinion that justice would never be administered in the Province till a system of Stipendiary Magistrates be introduced.<sup>46</sup> He was also of opinion, that stipendiary magistrates were preferable to our unpaid magistracy.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Viger said in Lower Canada the system of unpaid commissioners of the small courts worked well.<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Chesley would not offer any strong opposition, though he was of opinion that some of the minuita (sic) required alteration.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Merritt opposed the bill. He had been a commissioner in the District where he lived for 20 years, and had had a full opportunity of judging of the working of the present system. This experience led him to believe that the best arbiters for cases in these courts were those who dwell in the district where the disputants lived. The total expense of the administration of justice in the United Province exceeded £12,000, and the present Bill would add some 5000 or 6000 more. He therefore objected on this ground as well as on several others to which he referred. The Hon. member read an amendment he intended to propose, to the effect that it was expedient to amend the lasting law so far as related to the jurisdiction which is extended to £50, and giving power to appoint a jury at the discretion of the parties, when the sum disputed exceeds £5.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Williams threw much of the evils resulting from the old system on the Executive which did not always appoint the most proper persons as judges in the courts.<sup>51</sup>

Mr. Durand thought the bill would require alteration.<sup>52</sup>

Mr. Thorburn was decidedly opposed to the measure which was not in accordance with the "well expressed wants and wishes" of the people, who if there were grievances in these courts, had not availed themselves of their right of petition to complain of them. — In his own District he was satisfied that competent persons could be found to preside in these courts at a much less expense than by the appointment of a district judge. With a little care and attention he believed this would be the case in other parts of the province, and that no necessity would exist for change; at the same time he was willing to support the amendments of Mr. Merritt, because he was aware that a desire did exist to extend the jurisdiction.<sup>53</sup> He related to the House an anecdote, which had given rise to much dispute between the government and certain commissioners in his part of the country, and had probably influenced the ministers in bringing in this bill.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Boswell made some observations on the bill and reviewed the objections brought forward by previous speakers before recording his vote in favor of it.<sup>55</sup>

After some remarks pro and con from several members, Mr. Draper replied and cited several cases in which the decisions given by the courts had been directly in the truth of the law. He also announced his intention to limit the operation of the bill to three or four years, in order to see how it worked.<sup>56</sup>

The first part of the clause was then put and carried, with an amendment; and the committee proceeded to the consideration of clauses 2, 3, 4, and 5, which were agreed to. On arriving at clause 6, which allows the employment of a deputy under certain circumstances, an exception was taken by Mr. Baldwin...<sup>57</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Progress.

And Mr. Holmes reported, that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Sit again on Thursday.

Ordered—That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Thursday next.

House in Committee on Board of Works Bill.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to repeal two certain Ordinances therein mentioned, and to establish a Board of Works in this Province, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Merritt took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,<sup>58</sup>

Mr. Day went through the several clauses of the Bill, and offered a few remarks on each seriatim. He called upon the House to pass the Bill as it was presented; and it was needless for him to enter into any argument to prove the necessity of such a Bill, for all acknowledge it.<sup>60</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab was willing to admit that, but hoped the Hon. gentleman would not press the Bill at this late hour of the evening. It was one of the most important measures of the Session, and ought not to be hurried through this House, and it was rather too much to require us to go into it tonight. He (Sir Allan) understands, and has no doubt that the gentleman who presides over this establishment is every way qualified, but finds him here also in the capacity of an Executive Councillor. The Bill grants to the President £800 per year, an additional engineer got £500, and a Secretary £400, and each to have their travelling expenses paid. The Bill reads very well, but cannot, in some of its material points, be acted upon. He (Sir Allan) should think the presiding gentleman ought to exercise no other calling. In a clause of the Bill it was proposed to take people's property by legal tender at a supposed value. Thought this an arbitrary measure. Would move an adjournment.<sup>60</sup>

Mr. Parke. — How do the ideas of the Hon. gentleman comport with those he advanced the other evening? His conduct on that occasion was very different from that which he now wishes this House to follow. He objects that the President should reside at Kingston, acting in other capacities, and leaving his duty to be done by a deputy. He (Mr. Parke) should like to know, having such numerous duties to perform, how he could act without a deputy? He would have to superintend the whole and be responsible for all. It was a matter of course that the head should reside at some central place, and have sub-superintendants. The Hon. Member for Hamilton objects to travelling expenses being paid. Why, he would ask, should the salaries of the gentlemen employed be extended in that? Again, the learned Knight objects because the works may cost more than estimated for. All Hon. gentlemen connected with public works must know that such things might happen, but much more likely to happen when entrusted to hands who do not understand the business completely. There had been no complaint so general throughout this Colony as the improper way in which the public works had been carried on. Hence the necessity of a Board of Works, responsible to the country. There could be nothing more important than to have works done correctly. A measure of the kind now before us was necessary to the cheapness and permanency of public works, and was urgently demanded.<sup>61</sup>

Mr. Price is in favour of the Bill, and will give it his support. Thinks the government should have the power to establish a Board of Works, but he hopes the Hon. Solicitor General will not push the bill tonight, but allow the Committee to rise in order to give time to Hon. Members to become fully acquainted with its details.<sup>62</sup>

Solicitor General Day has no wish to push the Bill through tonight, but is desirous of forwarding public business as much as possible, and should therefore like the first clauses to be adopted before the Committee rose.<sup>63</sup>

Mr. Killaly — The Hon. Member for Hamilton must know full well that there are many duties that must be done by deputy, and that, consequently, a system of deputies is absolutely required, but the directing Engineer is responsible for all that is done. The gallant Knight objects to the powers granted, but he must know that the responsibility for the proper exercise of those powers is strictly held. Appropriations can only be made by the House in all cases, and it is for it to see that these appropriations are well applied. He (Mr. Killaly) does not pretend that the estimates may be always borne out, but a near approximation will be arrived at. Before any work is undertaken, a careful estimate will be made by disinterested persons, and laid before this Hon. House, by parties having no local interest. After the House has fully considered the necessity of the work, and appropriated funds for the same, its progress will be looked after by the Board.<sup>64</sup>

Mr. Prince had no objection to the principle of the bill, and would support it; but he could not see why the doctrine of responsibility should be brought forward on the occasion so prominently. He (Col. Prince) would vote for the principle, but not because there was more responsibility now than ever there was. He should like to know from the hon. member from Middlesex, why he goes so lustily for this bill, when last session he was as strongly opposed to one introduced by him, (Col. Prince.) It was a bill for a Board of Works, not unsimilar to this. But the hon. gentleman's conduct is very different tonight to what it was when he had the honor of introducing a bill for a Board of Works. — There must be some peculiar influence at work, some change in the atmosphere, as he could not comprehend why the hon. gentleman should start up and so warmly support this bill, when he must recollect his opposition to one of similar character. He (Col. Prince) would ask the hon. members for London and Middlesex where was the responsibility now that did not exist then? Suppose the President fails, what then? — Would the Ministry be broken up? — No, certainly not. The public money would be sacrificed, and that was all. The bill introduced, if supported from this fancied responsibility which hon. gentleman talked so much about, he must say it was a pack of nonsense — a clap-trap to gull fools. He (Col. Prince) would reiterate the fact, that there was no greater responsibility than had always existed, and if there was, he would ask the hon. member from Middlesex to tell him what it amounted to?<sup>65</sup>

Mr. Parke would reply to the Hon. Member who had just taken his seat, in a few words. The Government had conceded the principle of responsibility in good faith; and if it fails to keep this faith, then it was for the ultimate action of the country to say what it would do. But if good faith was to be kept, the principle conceded must infuse itself into every department. He (Mr. Parke) is not aware that any Government before this ever pledged its faith to a principle of responsibility, such as this, with an intention to carry it out. Suppose we establish a Board of Works such as this Bill proposes, the officers of it would be responsible to the country and this House. Permit him (Mr. Parke) to ask if this was the case before? Most assuredly not. The Executive appointed whom he pleased, and all was jobbing and speculation; but now this would be completely done away with. There would be no such thing as taking the money of the public, putting it in the pockets of the contractors, and getting the work half done for debt. A great responsibility would rest upon the Officers of this Board of Works, and upon Government who placed them in office.<sup>66</sup>

Mr. Price — The question was not whether one particular measure is right or wrong, but had the Government the confidence of the country. Supposing that any particular department should happen to fail, that was no reason why that confidence, if it existed, should be withdrawn. That would be the consequence of the general tendency of their measure, and the spirit of illiberality which they evinced.<sup>67</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison — The Hon. Member for Essex is exceedingly facetious on Responsible Government. It appeared to him (Mr. Harrison) that it was unfortunate to come out in this way. The same responsibility which he finds so much fault with is the basis of every despatch from the Home Government and the foundation of the present Provincial one.<sup>68</sup>

Col. Prince said, if the hon. gentleman for Kingston cannot introduce stronger arguments than these, he had better have remained silent, and he would be satisfied that responsibility and the Board of Works would fall together. He has repeatedly asked hon. gentlemen what this responsibility meant, but no satisfactory answer has yet been given. He again asks what it means, and echo answers what? Responsibility in what, and to whom? The member for London is employed in the Western railroad, for instance; suppose his skill fails, and the whole thing becomes a matter of nullity. Turn him out, says one hon. member; but for his part he ridicules that kind of responsibility. He (Col. Prince) is an advocate for the measure, but not because parties were to be held responsible, for there is none attached to the office, more than any other individual who misconducts himself in any public office — only liable to be indicted if he acts wrong. He, therefore, will repeat that it is all a pack of nonsense.<sup>69</sup>

Mr. Hincks. — If the hon. member for Essex is in favour of the measure he takes a curious way of showing it. All are agreed as to the principle and for his part he was in hopes that the measure would have been got through with. He (Mr. H.) perfectly understood that Government measures were to be brought before this house, the present week, and if hon. gentlemen chose to absent themselves on an occasion of this kind, he was not to be told that the house must adjourn in consequence. He (Mr. H.) had some objections to several of the clauses. For instance, he thinks that the President ought to hold no other office. He agreed with the member for Hamilton in this, and thought the President of the Board ought not to be an Executive Councillor, nor even have a seat in the house.<sup>70</sup>

Mr. Moffatt considered the explanation of the hon. member from Middlesex unsatisfactory. The principle was certainly the same as it was three years ago. With reference to the observation which had been made that the President of the Board of Works would hold no political situation, he concurred in the opinion that the hon. President should neither be a member of the Executive Council nor of that house, because when petitions for public improvements came before the house and government, and the application failed, the disappointed party would attribute the failure to the political influence which the hon. gentlemen as a member of the government exercised in that house. On these grounds he conceived the duties should be separated.<sup>71</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab was of opinion that the discussion of the measure had done no harm at all. The bill was one of very great importance, and was deserving of special consideration, as he imagined it placed great power in the hands of individuals. He had learned for the first time this evening that a Board of Works was a necessary appendage to responsible government. (A laugh.) Some hon. gentleman had stated that the Board would be responsible for the correctness of its estimates, &c. and these were not to be depended upon under the old system. Now he believed that the hon. gentleman who filled the office of President of the Board was a gentleman of high attainments in his profession. With respect to the travelling expenses in addition to the high salaries of the others of the Board of Works, he would call to the memory of the hon. member for Middlesex, his (Mr. Parke's) opposition in the Upper Canada House of Assembly to the allowance of the travelling expenses to the Judges, whose salary amounted only to £900 a year, and whose travelling expenses did not exceed £50. The connection of the President of the Board with the Government and the house placed in his hands a power to which he (Sir Allan) would not assent. If he (Sir A.) were to bring a bill into that house for some public improvement in his section of the country, the hon. President was politically opposed to him, and he was the officer on whom Executive relied for correct information, what would be the fate of the measure if the hon. gent. should think proper to oppose it as emanating from me? The bill was of great importance, and he hoped it would not be pushed through the house without giving hon. members an opportunity to express their opinions in regard to its provisions.<sup>72</sup>

Mr. Johnston could not sympathise with those who had taken upon themselves the harness of responsible government. He did not pity any man who held situation under the humbug system of responsible government. What responsibility is there in the office of the President of the Board of Works? He could see none, save that his reputation; as that of every hon. man, was at stake in the conduct of it.<sup>73</sup>

Mr. Viger. — Much has been said about the responsibility attached to the office, but in my opinion there is no responsibility at all.<sup>74</sup>

Capt Steele would confine himself entirely to the question. The objection of the hon. and gallant knight from Hamilton he really thought was not tenable. The President of the Board of Works should in his opinion be in that house, and also in the Executive Council, as one to whom reference can constantly be made, and who would be enabled by his connection with the Legislature to proceed in the examination and report upon the propriety of applications for public works without so much being said about them. One of the advantages connected with this Board was, in his opinion, that we should see no more jobbers and interested individuals hanging round commissioners and giving them rest neither day nor night until they would get a slice of the cake. We should have no more of these things under the new system, and he trusted for the benefit of the province that it would be adopted.<sup>75</sup>

Mr. Duggan. — The question, in my opinion, involves the principles of Responsible Government, and the House should understand what control there will exist over the Board, and how it is to be exercised. I hope the house will look seriously into the matter before coming to a decision on the bill.<sup>76</sup>

Mr. Day moved that the chairman leave the chair, report progress and ask leave to sit again....<sup>77</sup>

(210)

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Progress.

And Mr. Merritt reported, that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Sit again on Thursday next.

Ordered — That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Thursday next.

Then on motion of Mr. Price, seconded by Mr. Boutillier,
The House adjourned.

And also,

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, 21st JULY, 1841.

Evidence on which the Assembly passed the Bill to prevent failure of Justice in late Election in L. C.

Ordered — That the Master in Chancery do go down to the Legislative Assembly and acquaint that House, that the Legislative Council request that they will be pleased to communicate to the Legislative Council the evidence upon which they passed the Bill entitled "An Act for preventing any failure of Justice in respect of complaints of undue elections or returns of members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province, at the last General Election."

And then he withdrew.

Answer given to Master in Chancery.

The Master in Chancery was then called in, and informed by Mr. Speaker, that this House will send an answer by Message.

Certain Crown Land
Accounts presented.

The Honourable D. Daly, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, laid before the House, by command of His Excellency, the Governor General, the Accounts current of the Crown Land Department of Upper Canada, to 7th June, 1841.

For the said Accounts, see Appendix (K.)

Statement of certain Moneys expended in Gaspé presented.

The Honourable D. Daly presented, pursuant to an Address of the House of Assembly, of the 30th of June last, a Statement of the money appropriated for and expended in the District of Gaspé, from the year 1835, to the year 1840, both inclusive.

For the said Statement, see Appendix (N.)

Committee on Turnpike Trusts, Gore
District, reports bill, which is received and read 1st time.

Mr. Durand, from the Select Committee appointed to report upon the Turnpike Trusts in the Gore District, by Bill or otherwise, presented to the House a Bill to repeal a certain Section of an Act of the Legislature of Upper Canada, relative to macadamized roads, which was received and read for the first time.

Second reading on Monday.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Monday next.

Call of House at 3 o'clock P. M.
To-morrow.

On motion of Mr. Boswell, seconded by Mr. Holmes.

Resolved — That the names of the members of this House, that are now in Kingston, be called over on to-morrow, at 3 o'clock, P. M.

Number of Members eligible to serve on Election Committees, insufficient.

Resolved — That the number of members of this House who have not served on an Election Committee, for the trial of a controverted election, during the present Session, is insufficient to fulfil the purposes of the Law.

Motion for Speaker to issue his warrant for new writ of Election for Hastings, in room of
R. Baldwin, Esq.

Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by Mr. Woods,

That Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, to make out a new writ for the election of a member to serve in this present Parliament, for the County of Hastings, in the room of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, who, since his election for the said

County, hath accepted the Office of one of His Excellency, the Governor General's Council.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Baldwin was speaking to this motion when the Reporter entered the house. The appointment, Mr. Baldwin said, had been gazetted, and was perfectly well known to have taken place by the constituency which elected him. His acceptance of that office was communicated to His Excellency in writing, and so far as the salary was concerned, he had enjoyed (as the hon. and learned Knight had expressed it) the profits and emoluments arising from that office from a period antecedent to the time of presenting himself before the electors. Mr. Baldwin also cited precedents to show that the entering upon office had been taken to commence from the time when acceptance was signified, either by kissing of hands, or any action by which an officer signifies his assent. The kissing of hands not being practised in this Province, he considered the circumstance of the gazetted of the appointment, and the acceptance having been communicated to His Excellency was sufficient. Mr. Baldwin instanced the case of the Governor of the Isle of Wight, who, after receiving the notification of his appointment to that station, and before the patent was issued, was elected to a seat in the House of Commons. The issuing of the letters patent was considered a matter of form only, as completing the appointment which had already taken place.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he hoped before the question was put that the matter would be more fully argued upon the position taken up by the hon. and learned Knight. He (Mr. Boswell) for one had no hesitation in awarding to the hon. and learned Knight great praise for the extreme solicitude which he had shown to uphold the liberties and privileges of the house. They must all feel greatly indebted to him for the care he had displayed in preserving the house from all difficulties in which they were likely to be involved. He (Mr. Boswell) certainly thought the Governor General should appoint the hon. and learned Knight to office, being a very prominent individual in the ranks of the opposition. But he apprehended the gallant Knight would in such case draw a very marked distinction between the appointment to office and the acceptance. (Hear, hear, hear.) With regard to the return of Mr. Baldwin as a member of that house, at the time when that took place it was perfectly well known to the electors that he held the office of Solicitor General, whether that of Executive Councillor or not. He thought, therefore, the nice distinction now drawn between the appointment and acceptance of the latter office was of very little consequence.<sup>3</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he supposed the hon. gentleman would have been as anxious as himself that his point should be decided. It was the desire of the committee of which that hon. gentleman was a member. The question was not whether he (Sir Allan) was a suppliant for office, or whether that hon. gentleman himself was so; it was the desire of the select committee upon the election trial for Hastings that the question should be propounded to the house as to what should be considered acceptance of office. He (Sir Allan) was of opinion that until the oath of office had been taken the hon. gentleman could not be in full possession of that office.<sup>4</sup>

(213)

Motion lost.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

On motion of Mr. Hincks, seconded by Mr. Price.

House to go into Committee, on Wednesday next on Mutual Insurance Company Act of U. C.

Resolved — That this House will, on Wednesday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the expediency of amending a certain Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, intituled "An Act to authorize the establishment of Mutual Insurance Companies in the several Districts of the Province."

Order of the day Judicature of Gaspé revived.

On motion of Mr. Christie, seconded by Mr. Armstrong,

Ordered — That the Order of the day for the House in Committee, to take into consideration the expediency of altering and amending the Judicature Acts relating to the Inferior District of Gaspé, lost by the adjournment of the House of yesterday, be revived, and that this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Addition to Committee on petition of P. A. De Gaspé.

Ordered — That Mr. Taché, Mr. Attorney General Ogden, Mr. Berthelot and Mr. Quesnel, be added to the Special Committee to which was referred the Petition of Philippe Aubert De Gaspé, late Sheriff of the District of Quebec.

Order of day for
com. of whole on
Ordinance of Special
Council relating to Taverns, revived.

On motion of Mr. Delisle, seconded by Mr. Neilson,
Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the House in Committee, to consider the expediency of amending in part an Ordinance of the Special Council of the late Province of Lower Canada, 4 VIC. Cap. 42, intituled "An Ordinance to repeal and to render permanent, as amended, a certain Ordinance therein mentioned, relative to Taverns and Tavern Keepers, and to make further provision relative to the same subject," lost by the adjournment of the House of yesterday, be revived, and that this House will, on Wednesday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

Order of day for second reading Ballot
Bill, revived.

On motion of Mr. Small, seconded by Mr. Baldwin,
Ordered — That the Order of the day, for the second reading of the Bill to authorize the Voting by Ballot, lost by the adjournment of the House of yesterday, be revived, and that the said Bill be read a second time on Friday next.

Members seats vacation Bill read 2nd time.

A Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats in certain cases, and for other purposes, was, according to Order, read a second time.

House in Committee on said Bill.

Ordered — That the said Bill be now referred to a Committee of the whole House.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.
Mr. Simpson took the chair of the Committee.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Small upon moving for the adoption of the enacting clause of the bill, observed that he thought it was important that the members of that house should have the power to vacate their seats whenever they desire to retire from public life, or when their constituents might call upon them to retire. He (Mr. Small) having been called upon at the hustings to say whether he would retire in case he did not give them satisfaction, had stated that he would do so when he found that they felt no further confidence in him. If called upon he would be most happy to avail himself of this law. (Hear, hear, hear.)<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Neilson said he would not vote against this bill, although he had been opposed to a similar bill in Lower Canada. — He believed it was unconstitutional.<sup>8</sup> The sound English system was, to hold their seats up to the end of that term for which they had offered themselves — the close of the Parliament; besides, he remembered very well, that this kind of permissive vacating of seats, was productive, at one particular period, of much mischief in Lower Canada — a number of elections having taken place there, in consequence, that produced, for the time being, much agitation.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said one strong reason for the passing of this bill he thought was, that at present the power of vacating seats in that house rests entirely with the gentlemen occupying the treasury benches, by appointing a member whom they desire to remove from the floor of the house, to some office. But we who breathe the uncongenial atmosphere of the opposition side of the house, have no such power.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Harrison said after the facetious observations which had fallen from the hon. and learned gentleman, he would merely say he had not the least objection to allow the opposition the privilege which the hon. and learned gentleman claims for them. He was perfectly willing to meet the views of the hon. gentleman, and to allow to all sides of the House a fair field, and fair play.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Derbishire agreed with the Hon. Member for Quebec (Mr. Neilson) in thinking this Bill unconstitutional. Because the hon. gentleman who introduced the Bill had given a pledge to his constituents — a pledge very appropriate perhaps under the circumstances — that he would resign when they required it, was that any reason for his drawing all other Members, who had made no such pledge, into the same predicament. The working of this measure, as he had understood its author, was to be, that when any constituency required the resignation of the electoral trust into their hands, the Representative of that Constituency should act upon the suggestion, and vacate his seat in the Assembly. If this was the object of the Bill, there was needless circumlocution in its provisions. The shorter plan would be to give at once to the constituencies themselves the power of vacating the seats of their Representatives, and of compelling at the same time the Crown to issue a new writ. (Hear.) This would, indeed, be something like reversing the monarchical order of proceeding under a Representative system, for it places the power of calling a new Election in the Constituencies, and not in the Crown; but, he understood the Bill before the House, this, or something closely bordering upon it, would be its practical operation, as it was its professed principle. This was not the practice of the British Parliament, nor the principle of the British Constitution; and at a time when we were entering upon new principles, and an untried path in Parliamentary Government, we ought to be cautious in casting down those ancient landmarks by which only perhaps could we hope safely to prosecute our course. For his own part he approved of no man sitting in Parliament when his Constituents had entirely lost confidence in him. He would not do so himself. But these cases rarely arose, and required no Legislative interference, the only effect of which might be to suggest to the Constituencies the advantages of keeping up the Election contest after its natural close, until a majority can be obtained to call upon the seated Member to retire.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Viger said he believed it would be as well to adopt the English practice in this respect. As a man might be elected against his will, and compelled to serve, it was not right that he should be displaced abruptly.<sup>13</sup> Mr. Viger said, that the plan was similar to that of accepting the Chiltern Hundreds.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Cartwright said in order to follow English practice completely, it would still be necessary to pass a Bill. There was a certain Island called Snake Island, the representation of which might be accepted by an hon. Member changing, however, the name to Sneak Island, to make it more appropriate; it would answer very well for the chiltern hundreds.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Dunn said he approved of the Bill. It would give him great pleasure to resign whenever those who put him in should require his resignation.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. J. S. Macdonald hoped the Bill would pass. He thought those who had mistaken their proper sphere of action by becoming Members of that House, ought to have an opportunity of mending their mistake.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Cameron said it should be confined to Lawyers.<sup>18</sup> ((He)) hoped that the bill did not contain a clause compelling members to vacate.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Chesley said he was prepared to support the bill. Whenever a man was desirous of returning to his constituents and declaring to them that he is unable to perform the duties of the situation, he should be allowed to do so; he thought, however, such instances would be rare. On the other hand, he was of opinion that by allowing the Constituencies of Hon. Members to decide when they should withdraw from that House, would have the effect of keeping the poll open, not for a week; as by law very properly provided, but for the whole four years.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he would like to know when it was intended, that the Bill should go into effect; because if it be in the present Session — during the continuance of the contract entered into between hon. Members and their constituents, — The next question would be, might it not be considered an ex post facto law. (A laugh.)<sup>21</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

M. Speaker resumed the chair,

Bill reported
amended.

And Mr. Simpson reported, that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and had made an amendment thereto, which amendment was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House.

Bill as amended to be engrossed.

Ordered — That the said Bill as amended be engrossed.

Order of day for 2nd reading Municipal Bill postponed.

The Order of the day for the second reading of the Bill to provide for the better internal Government of that part of this Province heretofore Upper Canada, by the establishment of local or Municipal authorities therein, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Tuesday next.

Victoria College Bill
read 2nd time and ordered to be engrossed.

(214)

A Bill to incorporate the Upper Canada Academy, under the name and style of "Victoria College," was, according to order, read a second time.

Mr. Boswell, who had introduced the measure, said, that the establishment had been founded by the Society of Methodists, in the town he had the honour to represent. It was an excellent establishment, had given a good education to many, and the school building was a credit to the town: it was chartered by William IV, and desired to be erected into a College, to be called Victoria College, with the power of conferring degrees similar to other Colleges.<sup>22</sup>

A few farther (sic) remarks ... ((were made.))<sup>23</sup>

(214)

Ordered — That the said Bill be engrossed.

House goes into Committee to consider the matter of providing for taking periodical Census.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the expediency of making provision for taking a periodical Census of the inhabitants of this Province, and obtaining other statistical information, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

The Honourable Mr. Moffatt took the chair of the Committee,

Mr. Day made a few remarks upon the bill, which was to subvert the present defective system, and embrace statistics as well as numbers.<sup>24</sup>

Among other advantages that will be derived from this, said Mr. Thorburn, it will enable the emigrant, upon landing in this colony, by reference to ascertain, which districts contain the greatest portion of settlers — an important consideration.<sup>25</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And the Honourable Mr. Moffatt reported that the Committee had come to a resolution, which resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth :

Resolution for making provision for obtaining periodical Census, &c.

Resolved — That it is expedient to repeal those parts of an Act of the Legislature of the late Province of Upper Canada, passed in the 5th year of the reign of His Majesty WILL. IV., Cap. 8, and of any other Acts of the Legislature of the late Province of Lower Canada, which provide for taking an enumeration of the inhabitants of the said Provinces, or either of them, or relate to the obtaining of statistical information therein, and to make provision for taking a periodical census of the inhabitants of this Province, and for obtaining other statistical information therein.

Ordered — That Mr. Solicitor General Day have leave to bring in a Bill to repeal certain parts of an Act therein mentioned, and to provide for taking a periodical census of the inhabitants of this Province, and for obtaining other statistical information therein mentioned.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House, and the same was received, and read for the first time.

Census Bill brought in and read first time.

Second reading
tomorrow week.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time, to-morrow week.

North American
Colonial Association
Bill read 2nd time.

A Bill to authorize the North American Colonial Association of Ireland to loan money's, and to prosecute certain public works in the county of Beauharnois, was, according to order, read a second time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Friday next.

The Order of the day, for the House in Committee on the Bill to enable Religious Societies, of all denominations of Christians, to hold the lands requisite for certain purposes therein mentioned, being read,

House goes into
Committee of whole
on Religious Societies Lands Bill.

Bill amended and agreed to by the House.

House goes into Committee on Bill for payment of claims.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Noel, took the chair of the committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Noel reported, that the committee had gone through the Bill, and had made several amendments thereto, which amendments were again read at the Clerk's table and agreed to by the House.

Ordered — That the said Bill, as amended, be engrossed.

The Order of the day, for the House in Committee on the Bill to amend and enlarge an Act of the Legislature of the late Province of Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and Invasion of this Province," being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Mr. Turcotte took the chair of the Committee.<sup>26</sup>

Col. Prince informed the House, that the present bill had been introduced by him simply to extend the time allowed for the Commissioners to sit, to twenty-eight days instead of fourteen. He contended that it was high time that the parties should be indemnified, a further delay reflecting only greater discredit upon the power which withheld it. The provisions of the bill, he maintained, (as a professional opinion,) included all claims: he also dwelt with much emphasis, upon the loyalty, hardships and noble disinterestedness of those for whom he proposed the present alteration in the law, and trusted, that the good sense of the House would enable it to come into action, with as little delay as possible.<sup>27</sup>

A desultory conversation took place on the subject, in which Mr. Baldwin moved an amendment to the bill to the effect that the losses should be divided into — 1, the loss of the arms, 2, violence of soldiers or militia, 3, property taken possession of by regular troops or others, with or without the consent of the parties.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Johnston hoped, that Mr. Baldwin's amendment, was not going to saddle the country with every ox or ass, or rusty old musket, or leaky boat, that might be claimed for, as having been seized upon or destroyed, in the days of our grandfathers.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he would protest against the principle advanced by several hon. gentlemen on the floor of this house. He maintained that all losses of this character ought to be sustained by the mother country: it was preposterous to think of this country being saddled with these expenses. When the Legislature passed this bill, it is said that the class of persons intended to be remunerated were specified, and it would be unfair now to introduce others — it would defeat the object of the bill. He could not agree with the hon. member for Essex that the measure ought to be confined to the class of persons contemplated, if that were circumscribed, but if £40,000 was not enough, more must be had. He (Mr. B.) thought that sum ought to be shared among all.<sup>30</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab had no objections whatever to have all claims paid, but he would resist the introduction of new claims. If £40,000 would not cover the whole of the losses, the legislature must be again applied to, but it would be unfair to take any part of that sum already appropriated, as it were, and divide it among others. The argument of the hon. member for Northumberland had been repeated five thousand times, but he was of opinion still, that the bill ought to be passed as introduced; and let other claims, if there be any, stand upon their own merits. He (Sir A.) would oppose the amendment, as its object was to have Commissioners sit twice, and take the money from one set and give it to another. It will be seen from the bill that it was contemplated a greater sum might be required. It must be known there are a great number of persons in Lower Canada who have been immense sufferers, and these have not been considered at all. It would be as just to introduce them, and thereby reduce the amount of remuneration which each would receive to a trifle, as to bring in other claimants into this section of the Province now.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Parke. — The hon. gentleman who has just spoken has a very great sympathy for a certain class of persons, yet he seems to have very little regard for another, who no doubt were equally unjustly dealt with. He would even shut them out from the benefit of common law. A great deal has been said about taking from one to give to another, but in his (Mr. Parke's) opinion equal justice ought to be done to all Her Majesty's subjects. This is ((a)) true principle, which ought to be considered, carried out, and preserved. It would be much better to give ten or fifteen shillings to each than to leave some without remuneration at all. There is nothing so unjust as an exclusive law, and he would oppose every attempt approaching to partiality. Let the claims be carefully examined, and an equitable appropriation made. If there was not enough of funds to liquidate the whole of them, then apply for more. But in the meantime let equal justice be extended to all.<sup>32</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab thinks it exceedingly unfair that after claims have been enquired into, and a bill passed and become a law, that hon. gentlemen should now wish to introduce new matter. The other side of the house would say, this cannot be. Here are certain sums granted, and no alteration can be made. If hon. gentlemen succeed in their amendment, it would only be the means of causing the whole thing to fall through.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Hincks. — The hon. member for Middlesex has anticipated what he (Mr. Hincks) meant to say on this subject. The member for Hastings only desired to receive other claims under the act. He himself was aware of the existence of other claims; although the aggregate was not great, but yet if they were passed by without notice much individual hardship would be the consequence. He (Mr. Hincks) wished the amendment recognized, and if the amount already appropriated was not enough, then apply for more. Any person not coming in then would be forever excluded. The hon. member for Bonaventure is mistaken. There was no particular claim decided upon — no one settled to the exclusion of all others. They must be ascertained and determined by the Commissioners.<sup>34</sup>

Captain Steele said that he as a magistrate was called upon to furnish volunteers to relieve Toronto. Well, every one in that city was to be paid the utmost farthing, even £50 for wine, yet inn-keepers in the back country who might have furnished a glass of spirits were to have no pay at all, and many of them to this hour had never got any thing for refreshments &c., afforded to the Militia troops. The bill ought to cover every legitimate claim, but the further from the centre the less justice was obtained. Claimants will have to dance attendance some fifteen or sixteen times, and the same story was generally told them, viz; no funds to cover these claims. He (Capt. Steele) would call the late act a law of partial justice, which in his opinion ought not to obtain.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Cook had opposed the bill before and would oppose it now, because it was unjust to the people of Upper Canada to require them to pay tavern bills; a line of demarcation ought to be drawn between them, and remuneration for losses.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Hamilton. — The member for Oxford did not understand his objection. The question was, the hon. member for Hastings brought in a partial amendment leaving out all the sufferers in Lower Canada, and adding to those of Upper Canada. He objected to take away £40,000 already voted for a specific purpose and give it to other persons not contemplated by the law. To do this would in his (Mr. Hamilton's) opinion be to commit an act of great injustice, by taking away what was granted and sanctioned in the Imperial Parliament.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Boswell thought that hon. members on the floor of this house were as capable and as competent to judge of the nature of the act as the members on the treasury benches.<sup>38</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab. — The hon. gentleman from Northumberland may yet occupy the treasury benches, but he was not there now, although he will not take upon himself to say how soon he may be. If it depends upon the hon. gentleman, he thought it likely he would take his seat there before long.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Secretary Harrison was always ready to answer any question, but he thought it strange to ask him to put a construction upon an act of Parliament.<sup>40</sup> ((He)) said, that £40,000 had been allotted by the Government, as an indemnity for claims set up, which, as he was desirous should mean all claims, he saw no reason to oppose the amendment. A word, as regards the claimants, said the learned Secretary — I think it is not just to treat those with indifference, whose services in the hour of need, were found indispensable and invaluable.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Moffatt thought the suggestion of the surveyor general ought to be adopted — if there were not funds enough they should get more ; but he (Mr. M.) did not think it right to introduce new matter. The bill as already passed was a guarantee — an act if not interfered with, which would go immediately into operation. If claims have been left out and cannot be included, of course they will be ; but to force them, in his opinion, was not right. The member for Essex proposes that another act should be brought in if necessary, but the one already in being should not be touched. He (Mr. M.) perfectly concurred in this opinion. The assurance that claims would be settled was all that was wanted.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Thorburn. — If hon. members interfere with this act, they would be doing injustice. If new claims were introduced, the Commissioners could not take cognizance of them at all. Their oath would not allow them. The plan proposed by Mr. Moffat (sic) was the correct one, and he (Mr. Thorburn) certainly thought if new claims were introduced the bill would be rendered a nullity. If there were any other claims than those contemplated, bring in another bill, but do not meddle with the existing one.<sup>43</sup> Among other observations, Mr. Thorburn remarked, that it devolved upon the Executive, to adjudge the claims that were brought forward.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Small could see no possible reason why we should not declare more distinctly what kind of claims were to be admitted, or came within the provisions of the act, and this is all the amendment contemplated. He (Mr. Small) was acquainted with several people whose houses were entered and five or six stand of arms taken away. He believes the act contemplates paying them, but he desires the house to say so, as it is not specially stated in the act, and surely we cannot be guilty of so manifest injustice as will certainly take place if this amendment is not carried. The Commissioner in such an event would say to many claimants, your case does not come within the act. He (Mr. Small) would be most happy to vote compensation to the Lower Canadians. They have as good a right to the indemnity as any other. The simple question is whether we shall extend the operation of the act so as to do injustice to none.<sup>45</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Bill amended.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,
And Mr. Turcotte reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and had made an amendment thereto, which amendment was again read at the Clerk's table, as followeth : —

Amendment.

Add to the Bill the following clause : — “And be it enacted that “the powers vested in, and duties required of the said Commissioners “under the said Act, shall extend to enquire into all loss sustained by “Her Majesty's subjects and other residents within that part of this “Province to which the said Act extends, from the first breaking out “of the said Rebellion to the passing of the said Act ; and the several “claims and demands which have accrued to any such persons by such “losses in respect of any loss, destruction, or damage of property occasioned by violence on the part of persons in Her Majesty's service, “or by violence on the part of persons acting, or assuming to act, on “behalf of Her Majesty, in the suppression of the said Rebellion, or for “the prevention of further disturbances ; and all claims arising under “or in respect of the occupation of any houses or other premises, by “Her Majesty's Forces, either Imperial or Provincial.”

Ordered — That the question of concurrence be now put upon the said amendment.

And the said amendment having been again read, and the question of concurrence being put thereon, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Ordered — That the said Bill, as amended, be engrossed.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to enable the Ministers of all denominations of Christians to solemnize Marriage under certain restrictions, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Johnston took the chair of the Committee.<sup>46</sup>

House in Committee on bill to enable all denominations to solemnize marriage.

Mr. Williams explained the object of the bill.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he regarded the bill as being one of importance; he looked upon it as an evidence of the extension of liberal opinions. But in point of liberality, it was still far behind the law which prevails in Great Britain. There marriage was no longer looked upon as a religious ceremony. It was only necessary to repeat in the presence of certain witnesses a form of words, such as, I, A. B. take thee, C.D. to be my wedded wife &c. and the ceremony is complete. The bill was one, however, which met his decided and hearty concurrence.<sup>48</sup>

Col. Prince said he was in favor of the bill; but he would like to be enlightened by the hon. and learned gentleman from the south riding of the county of Northumberland, as to what description of ministers of religion in England are entitled to perform the marriage ceremony in this manner.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Boswell. All.<sup>50</sup>

((Mr. Prince.)) Surely the hon. and learned gentleman does not mean to say this is the case universally? <sup>51</sup>

Mr. Boswell. — I say so most decidedly.<sup>52</sup>

((Mr. Prince.)) If so I must beg to differ with him in toto. I will state most distinctly there is no such law existing in England. The marriage ceremony, as performed by the Ministers of the Episcopal Church, is on all occasions in strict accordance with the Rubric in the book of Common Prayer.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Cameron said he did not think that all the statutes which they could pass in England would compel the church to adopt any other course.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he believed that the hon. and gallant Colonel had misapprehended the meaning of the hon. gentleman, (Mr. Boswell.)<sup>55</sup>

Col. Prince said he did not rise for the purpose of prolonging the debate, but merely to say that he did not like in a deliberative assembly to hear an hon. gentleman make such an assertion.<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Boswell. I say so still.<sup>57</sup>

((Col. Prince.)) Then I say the assertion is incorrect. The law in England is not as it is laid down by the hon. gentleman. The marriage ceremony of the Protestant Episcopal Church is the same as it was an hundred years ago.<sup>58</sup>

Mr. Boswell. I do not speak of that church. Mr. Boswell said it would be found to be exactly as he had stated. Two individuals, if they please, may go before the Register, and it is not necessary it should be a registered building — it may be in the open air — in the presence of certain witnesses, and be legally married: He (Mr. Boswell) was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and if he were to be again married he would choose to be married according to that ritual which so happily bound him before. (Hear, hear.) But as to the law it was as he had stated.<sup>59</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Johnston reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill, without making any amendment thereto, and the report was again read at the Clerk's table.

Bill to be engrossed.

Ordered — That the said Bill be engrossed.

House goes into Committee on Ladies
Benevolent Society
Bill.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to incorporate the Ladies Benevolent Society of Montreal, being read —

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Cameron took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Cameron reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill without making any amendment thereto, and the Report was again read at the Clerk's table.

Ordered — That the said Bill be engrossed.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Report of the Special Committee on the Bill to regulate the fisheries in the District of Gaspé, and on the said Bill being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said committee.

Mr. Sherwood took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

And Mr. Sherwood reported that the Committee had made some progress, and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

(216)

Ordered — That the said Committee had leave to sit again on Friday next.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the Acts of the 1st and 3rd of VICTORIA, relating to the intended District of Dalhousie, and the erection of a Gaol and Court House therein, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Thorburn took the Chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

And Mr. Thorburn reported that the Committee had come to a Resolution, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Resolved — That the acts of the 1st and 3rd years of VICTORIA relating to the erection of the intended District of Dalhousie, and the building of a Gaol and Court House for the said District, be amended so as to enable certain persons to raise money upon loan to complete the building of the said Gaol.

Ordered — That Mr. Derbshire have leave to bring in a Bill to authorize a further loan to complete the building of the Court House and Gaol for the intended District of Dalhousie.

He accordingly presented the said Bill to the House and the same was received and read for the first time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be read a second time on Monday next.

Then on motion of Mr. Thompson, seconded by Mr. Derbshire, The House adjourned.

Bill ordered to be engrossed.

House in Committee on Gaspé Fishery Bill.

Progress.

Committee to sit again on Friday.

House in Committee on Dalhousie Gaol and Court House Act.

Resolution reported.

Resolution.

Dalhousie Gaol and Court House Bill read first time.

Second reading Monday next.

(217)

The hour appointed for taking into consideration the Petition of James Mathewson, of the township of Pittsburgh and of divers Inhabitants of the county of Frontenac, complaining of the undue election and return of Henry Smith, Esquire, as a member to represent the county of Frontenac in the present parliament, being come,

The House proceeded to the appointment of a select committee to try and determine the merits of said Petitions.

The Sergeant at Arms was directed by Mr. Speaker to go with the Mace to the places adjacent and require the attendance of the members on the business of the House.

And he went accordingly.

And being returned, the House was called, and more than thirty members being present,

Mr. Speaker called upon the Petitioners, their Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

Christopher Armstrong Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for James Mathewson, the Petitioner, — and James Mathewson, Esquire, appeared as Agent for the Petitioners, of the County of Frontenac.

Mr. Speaker called upon the Sitting Member, his Counsel or Agent, to appear at the Bar.

William Ross, Esquire, appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Sitting Member.

Mr. Speaker then desired the Sergeant at Arms to lock the doors.

And the doors being locked accordingly, and the order of the day for taking the said Petitions into consideration, being read, the attestation of the Speaker was taken from off the Box in which, agreeably to the Statute, the names of all the members of the House were sealed up, and the same was read by the Clerk, as follows : —

House proceeds in trial of Frontenac contested Election.

House called.

C. Armstrong, Esq. appears as Counsel, and J. Mathewson, Esq., as Agent for petitioners.

W. Ross, Esq. as Counsel for sitting Member.

Doors locked.
 Order of day read.

Attestation of
Speaker.

"I attest that this Box was, on the twenty first day of July, 1841, made up in my presence in the manner directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign", intituled "An Act to regulate the trial of controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly," and to make more effectual provision for such trials."

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker.

Attestation of Clerk.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the Box, and read by him, as follows : —

"I attest that I did, on Wednesday, the twenty first day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of this House, put into a Box in which this attestation is found, the names of all the Members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King GEORGE the Fourth, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign", intituled "An Act to regulate the trial of controverted Elections or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly," and to "make more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the Members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

Drawing (sic) of names proceeded in.

(218)

The drawing of the names was then proceeded in, in the usual manner, and the following names were drawn to which no objection was taken :

1 Armstrong,	8 Daly, Hon. D.	15 Hincks
2 Barthe,	9 Day, Hon. C. D.	16 Moffatt, Hon. G.

AUSTIN CUVILLIER,
Speaker.

The Box was then opened, and the attestation of the Clerk was taken out of the box and read by him, as follows : —

Attestation of Clerk.

"I attest that I did, on Thursday, the 22d day of July, 1841, in the presence of the Speaker of the House, put into a box in which this attestation was found, the names of all the members composing the present Legislative Assembly, written upon slips of parchment, and rolled up, as directed by an Act passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His late Majesty, King GEORGE the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His late Majesty's Reign, " intituled, 'An Act to regulate the trial of Controverted Elections, or Returns of Members to serve in the House of Assembly,' and to make "more effectual provision for such trials."

W. B. LINDSAY,
Clerk of Assembly.

The names of all the members were taken out of the Box and put into three other Boxes.

Main Motion amended carried.

The question being then put upon the main motion, as amended, it was unanimously agreed to, and

Resolved, accordingly.Hastings Election Committee have leave to adjourn till 2nd
August.On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Boswell,Ordered—That the Committee appointed to try and determine the merits of the Petition of T. Parker, and others, of the County of Hastings, in the District of Victoria, complaining of the undue election and return of Robert Baldwin, Esquire, as a member to represent the County of Hastings in the present Parliament, have leave to adjourn until the 2d day of August next.Motion for referring Message from Legislative Council relating to Bill to prevent failure of Justice in relation to the late Elections in Lower Canada, to a Special Committee instructed to prepare statement of grounds and reasons for passing said Bill.Sir Allan McNab moved, seconded by Mr. Buchanan,That the Message from the Honourable the Legislative Council, of Wednesday last, relating to the Bill entitled "An Act for preventing any failure of Justice, in respect of complaints of undue Elections or Returns of Members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province at the last General Election," be referred to a Committee of nine members, with instructions to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, a statement of the grounds upon which this House proceeded in passing the said Bill — and that Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Thorburn, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Roblin, Mr. Sherwood, Mr. Morin and Mr. Boswell, do compose the said Committee, and that the 77th Rule of this House be dispensed with, in so far as relates to the appointment of this Committee.

Amendment proposed.

Mr. Cartwright moved in amendment, seconded by the Honourable Mr. Moffatt,That the documents and evidences in the possession of this House, on which this House passed the Bill entitled "An Act for preventing any failure of Justice in respect of complaints of undue Elections or Returns of Members of the Legislative Assembly of this Province at the last General Election," be communicated to the Honourable the Legislative Council, by Message.<sup>1</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab objected to the amendment which would cast on the Council the necessity of rejecting the bill. The reasons which had guided the house in passing that measure was the belief that the petitioners had labored under a misconception of the law, and that this error had been encouraged by acts of the legislature itself. Was it not right to put the Council in possession of these facts? otherwise they would only send half the evidence, and put that honorable body in a position to reject the bill.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Ogden said there could be no doubt of the right of the council to make this request, and referred to numerous precedents which could be found on the books; whereas he denied the existence of any precedent for the course recommended by Sir Allan MacNab. The request was for the evidence on which the bill was passed, and where was that evidence to be obtained if not in the facts before the house? It could not be supposed that the house had been influenced in passing this bill by mere opinions, but that they had proceeded upon facts, and where were these facts recorded if not on documents in the possession of the house.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Morin said the house had been inclined to pass the bill on high public considerations, and therefore a declaration, through a committee, of the motives by which they had been guided was by no means singular.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Cook objected to the explanation required as interfering with the privileges of the house. If the council required information they should seek for it themselves by sending for persons and papers connected with the matter.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said that the Council in making this application was not requiring the reasons which induced the house to pass the measure, but merely exercising a constitutional right to call for evidence.<sup>6</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said that a great deal had been said on the course which the Council might think proper to pursue with regard to this measure, but in his opinion they would elevate rather than lower their character in the eyes of the country by passing it.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Small doubted the expediency of entrusting the original documents in the hands of the Legislative Council, and thought the precedent would be a dangerous one. The grounds, he said, on which the bill had passed the house were well known to the public, and though the Council might honestly believe that voluminous documents did exist, yet there could be no doubt in the minds of the large mass of the community on the matter.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Baldwin asked whether it would be showing a proper respect to the hon. body from which this request emanated to depart as far from the object of the application as would be the case if the amendment were adopted? What was required was information of the grounds on which the house had passed the bill, and then they came to the question what that evidence was. On this question he thought it rather too bad that the gentleman on the other side, a minority, should offer to state the grounds upon which they, the majority, had proceeded. He thought they should at least let them speak for themselves, and not endeavor to put words into their mouths. — They had not, he contended proceeded on the petitions which it was now proposed to send up to the Council, but on statements made in that house by hon. members, and on facts which appeared in their Journals, and which had been to some extent confirmed by the acts of the Legislature. To misrepresent their proceeding, then, would be inconsistent with the dignity of the house and yet this would be the case if the petitions only were sent up, as they had in part proceeded on other evidence, they should either not send up any, or send up what was really the true sense of the house.<sup>9</sup>

Mr. Attorney General Draper said he had not had the pleasure of being present when the bill was passed and therefore he could not judge of the evidence upon which the house had decided. Upon examining the preamble of the bill, however, it appeared that from facts which had been brought under the notice of the house this enactment became necessary. If there were no such facts as would demand from that house the passage of a measure of this kind, the majority had placed themselves in a predicament. It could hardly be considered an improper act in the other branch of the legislature to ask on what premises it was that you came to the conclusion which you have arrived at. The formalities of the election law not being complied with by certain electors in consequence (sic) of a supposition that that law was not in force, a majority of this house seems to have thought it necessary that this act should be passed. The evidence sought for by the council then are these facts. We are told further that they wish to know the grounds from which this house drew its conclusions. This is the first time that I ever, as a lawyer, understood facts to mean conclusions. It is possible that this may be done by the Legislative Council to give an opportunity of kicking the bill out. Now I must say, they need not have been at a loss for reasons for kicking it out; they might assign reasons sufficient. Any one who will take the trouble of reading the bill, as a legal reader and construer of statutes, will at once find that the enacting clause is merely directory and carries no consequence whatever; and therefore if reasons were wanted for kicking the bill out it furnishes sufficient of itself. I therefore conceive it was not in this spirit that the message was sent to this house, but really to acquire a knowledge of the facts, but there is one thing which I do not agree with, and for this reason I shall be compelled to divide against the amendment: I do not consider that the petitions are evidence of facts (hear, hear); they are statements, it is true, but not evidence: they are mere declaration of facts which we are hereafter to investigate. If the facts were proved by presenting these petitions I think we passed the law to little purpose. I agree with the Honourable and learned Gentleman from Hastings in believing that to ask this House its reasons for passing the measure would be, indeed, trifling with the house. On the same ground, they might send down for our reasons for passing any public measure. I think it does not become the character and dignity of this house to give the grounds and reasons of the conclusions at which they arrive; and it would but ill sustain its reputation by admitting the right of the Council to demand these grounds and reasons. The proper way of procuring information, I apprehend, is by asking for a committee of conference. I threw out these remarks not in a spirit of opposition, as a member taking part on one side of the question or the other. I think it would be a departure from what is right. Instead of sending up matters of evidence, to send our grounds and reasons which involve principles of political consideration, would place that branch of the Legislature in a painful and unpleasant situation; they might truly say we asked for bread and you have given us a stone.<sup>10</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab said he regretted that the learned and hon. Attorney General for the west, had not been in his place in the house the other day; from his high regard for the privileges of the house, he (Sir Allan) was quite sure, he would have corrected any error into which they might have fallen in passing the bill. It would be recollected that he (Sir Allan) had proposed to insert in the preamble a more full and explicit statement of the grounds and reasons for passing the bill, and it had been objected to by the learned colleagues of that gentleman. (No, no) Well, there is no understanding those hon. gentlemen.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Ogden; it was go with all its deformities.<sup>12</sup>

((Mr. Baldwin)) It cannot be said to be very deformed. Those hon. gentlemen, if they did not attempt to correct its imperfections, ought, at least, to endeavour to secure its passage in the other branch of the Legislature.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Cartwright said it appeared to him it was the duty of this house to send an answer to the message of the council; and it was with this view that he (Mr. Cartwright) had proposed this amendment. The most ready method of complying with the request of the Council was by transmitting the documents which they had in their possession. If it was necessary, however, to name a Committee at all, the learned knight was perfectly correct in naming those who were most favorable to the measure.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Turcotte spoke in favor of the original motion. He was opposed to the amendment.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Neilson was of opinion that no precedent could be found either in the practice of the House of Lords in England, or in that of the Legislative Council of any of the Provinces, for a proceeding of this kind. In the case of public bills, or of matters relating to the privilege of the House of Commons, it was highly improper that it should be done; and the matter in question clearly falls within the latter class. However, it was the duty of that house to do every thing which is proper to maintain a good understanding with all the other branches of the Legislature, in order to carry on the business of the country with perfect harmony. He thought, therefore, it should be left to those who carried out this bill, to adopt such course as they may deem proper with regard to it.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he also considered the matter was one which concerned the privileges of this house. He believed that it was altogether unusual for petitions to be presented to the Legislative Council, concerning contested seats in the House of Assembly.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Boswell said before the question was put, he felt bound to make a few observations, for he felt himself placed in a situation of considerable difficulty in voting upon either the original motion or the amendment. In the first place, he thought every member was bound to treat the matter without reference to any vote he had given on a former occasion, (hear, hear.) The question now is altogether different; it assumes an entirely new feature. In the first place, it is a question of privilege whether the course which has been pursued by the Council in sending down this message, is a proper one. (Hear, hear.) He had himself considerable doubt as to whether such message were the correct course in relation to a bill of this nature. — (Hear, hear.) He had no doubt the Council were desirous of obtaining the evidence upon which this house proceeded. He (Mr. Boswell) had felt himself in much the same dilemma.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Merritt was of opinion that the course proposed by the learned and hon. Knight was the only course which would relieve the house from the danger of collision with the Council.<sup>19</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison said it appeared to him that to say this matter was one of pure privilege involved a contradiction, because if it were a matter of privilege it would not be necessary to call in the assistance of the other branch of the Legislature to pass the bill. He perfectly concurred with the gallant Knight that if a committee were appointed it should consist of those who were favourable to the bill. He would, however vote for the amendment, because he thought it desirable that a courteous answer should be returned.<sup>20</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he should support the original motion. He had very strong doubts whether the Council had a right to ask for this evidence. That would be a subject for the consideration of the committee.<sup>21</sup>

Main motion carried.

So it was carried in the affirmative, and
Resolved, accordingly.

Victoria College Bill
read third time and passed.

An engrossed Bill to incorporate the Upper Canada Academy under the name and style of "Victoria College," was read for the third time.

Resolved — That the Bill do pass.

Ordered — That Mr. Boswell do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council and desire their concurrence.

Societies Lands Bill read the third time and passed.

An engrossed Bill to enable Religious Societies of all denominations of Christians to hold the lands requisite for certain purposes therein mentioned, was read for the third time.

Resolved — That the Bill do pass.

Ordered — That Mr. Williams do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council and desire their concurrence.

Bill to enable Ministers of all denominations to solemnize matrimony read third time and passed.

An Engrossed Bill to enable the Ministers of all denominations of Christians to Solemnize Marriage, under certain restrictions, was read for the third time.

Resolved — That the Bill do pass.

Ordered — That Mr. Small do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council, and desire their concurrence.

Members seats vacation Bill read third time and passed.

An engrossed Bill to enable members of the Legislative Assembly, for places within that part of the Province formerly constituting the Province of Upper Canada, to vacate their seats in certain cases, and for other purposes, was read for the third time.

Resolved — That the Bill do pass.

Ordered — That Mr. Small do carry the said Bill to the Legislative Council, and desire their concurrence.

Bill for payment of Claims read third time and passed.

An engrossed Bill to amend and enlarge an Act of the Legislature of the late Province of Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to ascertain and provide for the payment of all just claims arising from the late Rebellion and Invasions of this Province," was read for the third time.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Johnston moved that the Bill be recommitted for the purpose of amending the same, by adding a clause to prohibit the granting of compensation to the proprietors of the steam boat Sir Robert Peel. Since the destruction of that steamer took place, the chance of obtaining payment had been made a matter of speculation. The stock had been transferred from hand to hand, and the parties were not entitled to remuneration.<sup>23</sup> It would be unjustly burthening the country with an item of £7000 which had no right to be paid.<sup>24</sup>

Col. Prince said he could not comprehend why compensation should not be paid for the loss of the Sir Robert Peel, as well as of any loss which occurred upon the waters. All losses of that description were contemplated by the Bill. If that vessel had not been destroyed by brigands, the Commissioners will of course reject the claim for compensation. — It is a matter to be determined by the Commissioners themselves. The act embraces all losses sustained upon the water, and to make exception of this vessel would be most invidious, unjust and improper.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he must certainly coincide with the remarks of the hon. gentleman from Essex with regard to the Sir Robert Peel. He could see no reason why that should be made an exception. — There was no evidence before the House to warrant them in coming to such a conclusion. Other hon. members might rise and object to particular cases, and by allowing all such objections to prevail, the whole intent of the bill would be frustrated. (Hear, hear.) It is to be presumed that the Commissioners will do their duty faithfully, and decide upon all cases impartially. If there are any circumstances which ought to preclude the owners of the Sir Robert Peel from receiving payment, the Commissioners are the proper persons to adjudicate upon the matter.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Hincks spoke to the same effect.<sup>27</sup>

Mr. J. S. Macdonald said he could not discover the propriety of the hon. gentleman's motion. — The proprietors of the steamer Sir Robert Peel, he was aware, had petitioned the Home Government without success, and he believed they were entitled to the consideration of that house. He (Mr. McDonell) well remembered the events of that night on which the vessel was captured, and well he might, having been a participator in the calamity.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Johnston. — The hon. gentleman is very charitable indeed. He says the Home Government have refused to acknowledge the claim, and therefore we ought to admit it! The bill is the production of the hon. and learned gentleman from Essex, and I confess I am at a loss to understand from it what description of losses are to be compensated. — Whether it be the horse which carries the man to the battle or which enables him to fly from the battle, I would like to hear the hon. gentleman state whether the Peel is one of those losses which are to be comprehended within its provisions.<sup>29</sup>

Col. Prince said with permission of the House, as he had been called upon by the hon. gentleman, he would state for the information of the hon. gentleman that, although he was the one who had drawn up the Bill, yet when a bill was adopted by the House it was no longer the bill of the member who had drafted it, but the Act of the House. It was the Act of the Province at large. He (Colonel Prince) was sorry that the intellects of the hon. gentleman did not enable him to understand a plain enactment — so plain that he who runs may read. — And he who reads, if possessed of common sense, may understand.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Small remarked that he had drawn up the motion for the hon. gentleman (Mr. Johnston) with a view of trying the sense of the House upon it, as he found that the House were against it, he trusted the hon. gentleman would now withdraw it. — (Hear, hear.)<sup>31</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier))... decided upon the irregularity of proposing an amendment in the third stage of a bill...<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Johnston moved for leave to withdraw the motion.<sup>33</sup>

Of Thos. Carr and others.

Of Thomas Carr, and others, of the township of Otanabee, praying for a sum of money to construct an embankment over the river Otanabee.

Of John Bonner and William Petry.

Of John Bonner, and William Petry, of Quebec, respecting a Patent for land in free and common Soccage, and praying relief.

Of Alfred Todd, T. Patrick & Charles FitzGibbon.

Of Alfred Todd, Thaddeus Patrick, and Charles Fitzgibbon, Clerks in the office of the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, stating that in consequence of the consolidation of the offices of the two Legislatures of Upper and Lower Canada, the permanent Clerks of both Houses of Assembly have been considered too many for the duties required in the office of the present Legislative Assembly, thereby depriving Petitioners of the standing they formerly held in the office of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, and praying relief in the premises.

Of Jos. B. Clench, Chairman of Quarter Sessions London District.

Of Joseph B. Clench, Chairman of the Quarter Sessions of the District of London, praying for an additional sum to that already granted, for the completion of a new Gaol in the Town of London.

Of David Annis.

Of David Annis, of the township of Whitby, protesting against an application to incorporate a Harbour Company in the Eastern part of the Township, the applicants having included Lot No. 5, his own property.

House to go into
Committee of whole
on Boundary line
Commissioners Law,
on Monday next.

On motion of Mr. Roblin, seconded by Mr. Johnston,

Resolved — That this House will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the propriety of amending the Laws now in force respecting the Boundary line Commissioners within the Western part of Canada.

On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Resolved — That the Message of His Excellency, the Governor General, in answer to the address of this House of the 14th instant, on the subject of an address of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, relating to the introduction of the products of the Province into the Ports of Great Britain free of duty, be referred to a Committee composed of the Honorable Mr. Harrison, Mr. Morin, Mr. Prince, the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Roblin, Mr. Borne, Mr. Powell, Mr. Taschereau, and Mr. Thompson, to report thereon, from time to time; with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and that the 77th rule of this House, be dispensed with in so far as relates to the appointment of this Committee.

Excellency the Governor General, relating to the admission of the products of this Province into the Ports of Great Britain, free of duty, referred to Committee.

Mr. Hincks approved of the plan taken by the member for Lincoln (N. Riding) — it was a matter presenting no new feature.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Harrison preferred a committee of the whole.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Merritt said the advantage of a select committee was, that resolutions might be drawn up. Upon the motion of same hon. member, the committee for inquiring into the prices of the various water communications, was consolidated into same select committee.<sup>36</sup>

(229)

On motion of Mr. Prince, seconded by Mr. Thorburn,

Ordered — That the further consideration of the Petition of Alphonso Wells, Esquire, presented to the House on the 25th of June last, complaining of the undue Election and return of Stephen Sewell Foster, Esquire, as a Member for the County of Shefford, be discharged, the Petitioner having desired that it should be so discharged.

abled & infirm persons read second time.
Motion to refer Bill to a Committee of whole lost.

A Bill for the relief of disabled and infirm persons, was, according to order, read a second time.

Mr. Merritt moved, seconded by Mr. Roblin, that the said Bill be now referred to a Committee of the whole House.

The house was not desirous at this period of going into committee upon it.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Merritt, who had introduced the bill ... ((made some observations)).<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Boswell said, that no one here in Canada, could be said to be in such a very distressed and starving condition.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. J.S. Macdonald remarked, that in Glengary the infirm poor were liberally supported, — he wished that in other parts of the country it was the same.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Merritt said it was not contemplated to provide for the lazy and worthless, but for those who were incapable of making a provision for themselves, and who now were wholly at the mercy of the cold hand of charity.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Cameron said if a bill was properly drawn with reference to such a class, he had no doubt but it would be well received by the house — but according to his version of some of the clauses, he considered the present one as a virtual introduction of the poor law.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Neilson said, that in Lower Canada (that was,) a true spirit of charity existed, preserving a noble feeling of sympathy between the rich man and his poor neighbour.<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Small suggested that the measure should be postponed, till the Municipal Corporation Bill which would probably include such provision.<sup>44</sup>

Mr. Thorburn, as an argument in favor of the Bill, adduced an instance of a helpless idiot girl, who had been thrown upon the support of a charitable individual, who was incapable of continuing it, consequently he himself had been applied to; he found, however, that there were no means of providing her with relief. As regarded poor houses, he did not think they would be countenanced, on the objection of persons being supported by them who were undeserving of it.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Williams maintained, that the grand juries of sessions, awarded relief out of the district treasuries.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Harrison — with respect to so serious a consideration as establishing a precedent in favour of the poor law, recommended to postpone the measure, until the District Councils were taken up.<sup>47</sup>

Mr. Viger reprobated any system of compulsory charity being introduced into the late Province of Lower Canada....<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Baldwin ... ((was)) of opinion that any measure repugnant to the feelings of the inhabitants would not work well. The poor law especially he had an antipathy to.<sup>49</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab remarked, that the member for Hastings, coming from Toronto, where there was an excellent hospital well supported — he felt, no doubt, some little indifference on the subject as regarded other parts of the province.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Sherwood was desirous that every part of the Province should support its own poor.<sup>51</sup>

The house still ((showed)) no desire to entertain the motion....<sup>52</sup>

(231)

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it passed in the negative.

The order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the propriety of repealing or amending certain parts of an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, intituled "An Act to alter the mode of payment of wages to Members of the House of Assembly," being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Roblin, took the Chair of the Committee.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Small said, that it was consistent both with justice and propriety that the representatives, of the people should receive some compensation for their services. In a colony like this, many men might be elected to a seat in parliament, whose means were not very ample — expence (sic) to them, was therefore an object. He knew it would be objected to by some — that under these circumstances, they should not offer themselves — such a ...

House goes into Committee on Bill for remuneration of Members.

((plea)) would go to exclude all who were not fortunate enough to be rich men. It was his desire, therefore, that a bill should be framed upon certain resolutions embracing the United Province, and that a certain allowance should be voted, to be defrayed out of the politic expenditure.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Baldwin coincided with the hon. member, that whatever was fixed upon should be paid out of the general revenue.<sup>55</sup>

Mr. Boswell dit qu'il voterait pour la résolution, parce qu'il était juste que les membres de cette chambre fussent tous sur le même pied. Il différerait cependant d'opinion avec l'hble. membre pour Oxford, quant au mode de payement. Il désirait que l'on comprit qu'il ne s'agissait que d'un salaire, que comme les membres servaient leurs constituans (sic) ils devraient être payés. Le Bas-Canada en retirerait peut être un plus grand avantage, ayant un plus grand nombre d'électeurs; mais il était d'opinion que ceux qui envoyaient des personnes pour les représenter, payeraient volontiers pour leurs services.<sup>56</sup>

M. Moffatt s'opposait au payement pris sur les fonds publics. Il doutait si la chambre pouvait s'occuper d'une semblable mesure.<sup>57</sup>

M. Harrison était en principe contre l'indemnité des membres, mais il croyait cette mesure nécessaire dans les circonstances actuelles. Ce payement devait être fait à même les fonds des districts représentés. Il pensait qu'il était incompatible à la dignité de la chambre tenant les cordons de la bourse, d'y plonger la main pour en rémunérer ses membres.<sup>58</sup>

M. Viger dit que les membres étaient les serviteurs de toute la province et comme tels devaient être payés sur les fonds publics.<sup>59</sup>

M. Watts l'hble. membre d'un des Quartiers (Ridings) de York a dit que par le non-payement des membres, la représentation serait laissée entre les mains de l'aristocratie. Il demanderait à ce Monsieur en quelle (sic) mains il voulait confier la représentation, entre celles des propriétaires, ou de ceux qui n'ont rien. Il pensait que si les représentans (sic) ne pouvait (sic) servir gratuitement, ils devaient s'abstenir d'offrir leurs services.<sup>60</sup>

Mr. Johnston remarked, that the representatives of the people, though designated by some to be their servants, he thought might be looked upon rather as their masters. He approved of a compensation being given.<sup>61</sup> Il ne parlait pas seulement pour lui-même. 20 piastres par jour ne payeraient pas leur perte de tems, leurs dépenses à Kingston, la métropole du Canada.<sup>62</sup>

Mr. Price était en faveur d'une certaine indemnité, mais il pensait qu'aucune somme ne pourrait indemniser les membres. Quel avantage était-ce pour lui de laisser sa maison ses affaires pendant 3 à 4 mois pour aller au loin s'occuper des affaires du pays? C'était bien assez de laisser sa famille.<sup>63</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said, that the more independent members were, the less would they be liable to be influenced by the Government.<sup>64</sup>

Mr. Hincks espérait que l'exécutif recommanderait cette mesure, et il espérait que les subsides seraient refusés jusqu'à ce que cette recommandation eut été faite. Il ne pouvait s'imaginer que les membres de l'exécutif payés par le peuple pussent mépriser l'opinion des représentans du peuple (sic). Il pensait que ce payement devait être fait à même les fonds publics.<sup>65</sup>

Mr. Moffatt admired the candour of Mr. Hincks, who, as one of the champions of reform, now advocated the withholding the supplies until this principle should formally be recognized by the government.<sup>66</sup>

Mr. Morin had no desire to grasp at the public money, but was of opinion that a grant so reasonable as this had as much right to come out of the public chest as the salaries of the government officers.<sup>67</sup>

Mr. Parent était surpris d'entendre énoncer dans cette chambre qu'il fut inconstitutionnel de payer les membres. Il prétendait qu'il était beaucoup plus constitutionnel de payer les membres à même les fonds publics que sur les fonds locaux des comtés. Ils étaient les représentants de toute la province, et comme tels ils devaient être payés par la province. Les comtés peu étendus auraient une très grande difficulté et trouveraient fort dur de payer leurs représentants ainsi que leurs frais de voyage. C'était d'ailleurs une question assez intéressante pour la liberté du peuple, si les membres seraient payés par la province entière, ou par leurs électeurs respectifs. Il est facile au riche de se rendre ici mais comme ceux qui sont dans des circonstances peu aisées ne peuvent supporter ces dépenses il s'en suivra que les riches accaparaient la représentation entière.<sup>68</sup>

Mr. Baldwin ajouterait une seule remarque, c'est que les membres devraient faire payer ceux qui ont voté pour eux.<sup>69</sup>

Mr. Christie dit que la remarque de l'hble. membre pour Oxford au sujet du refus des subsides était correcte que la chambre devait adopter une mesure de cette nature.<sup>70</sup>

Mr. Draper (if he was heard aright) argued against it, on the score of precedent and unconstitutionality.<sup>71</sup>

Mr. Sherwood dit que ce serait une mesure facile, vu que le gouvernement a pourvu à ce cas, en prenant ce qu'il lui fallait.<sup>72</sup> Mr. Sherwood preferred that the public fund should be drawn upon for this purpose — not that a local assessment should be made.<sup>73</sup>

Mr. Dunscomb. — Cette question n'était pas nouvelle elle avait déjà été discutée ailleurs et avait attirée l'attention des plus habiles écrivains. Il n'avait entendu qu'un seul argument en faveur de cette mesure, et il défiait de le renverser; c'est que cette mesure offrait au peuple un vaste champ dans le choix de ses représentants (sic).<sup>74</sup> Mr. Dunscombe quoted a high authority, (Sir Jeremy Bentham's,) showing that by this means, the people had a wider field to choose their representatives.<sup>75</sup>

Mr. Hincks, dit qu'il concourait dans ce qu'avait dit l'hble. membre pour Beauharnois.<sup>76</sup>

Mr. Merritt était en faveur de la mesure, mais il ne pouvait concilier la conduite actuelle des membres avec celle qu'ils avait montrée quelques instants avant, lors de la pétition pour le soulagement des personnes pauvres et infirmes et qu'ils avaient refusé de référer à un comité. Et maintenant cette chambre votait des argens (sic) pour se payer elle-même.<sup>77</sup>

Mr. Small proposa la seconde résolution comportant que les membres seraient payés 15s. par jour et les frais de transport à raison de 20 milles par jour.<sup>78</sup>

The first and second resolutions were then carried, embodying the expediency of repealing the law of Upper Canada, and enacting one for the province generally, providing that members should be paid for their parliamentary services at the rate of 15s. currency per day, allowing time for travelling at the opening and close of the session at the rate of 20 miles per day — the Speaker issuing his warrant for the clerk to make the necessary returns. — <sup>79</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

Committee reports
Resolutions.

And Mr. Roblin, reported that the Committee had come to several Resolutions which he was directed to submit to the House whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.

Report to be received on Monday next.

Ordered — That the report be received on Monday next.

House goes into Committee on Canada
Fire Assurance Company Bill.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill for incorporating the Canada Fire Assurance Company, being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Durand, took the Chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair,

And Mr. Durand reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill without making any amendment thereto, and the report was again read at the Clerk's table.

Bill reported amended and ordered to be engrossed.

Mr. Dunscomb moved, seconded by Sir Allan MacNab, that the said Bill be engrossed.

The question having been put upon the said motion, a division ensued, and the names being called for, they were taken down as followeth :

The order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the Petition of William Walker, and other inhabitants of the city of Quebec, relating to the Timber Trade being read —

Ordered — That the said order be postponed until Monday next, and that it be then the first order of the day.

The names of the members present were taken down as followeth : —

Mr. Speaker,

Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Boutillier, Mr. Derbshire, Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Dunscomb, Mr. Hincks, Mr. McLean, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Quesnel, Mr. Roblin, Mr. Sherwood, Hon. Mr. Viger.

And at 20 minutes past midnight Mr. Speaker adjourned the House for want of a Quorum.

Appendix, 23 July 1841.

((Notice of Proposed Motion.))

Mr. Price read (with reference to the composition) a harrowing petition in allusion to the Orange riots a short time ago, and gave notice thereon for Monday next.<sup>80</sup>

((Withdrawn Motion Re : Committee on Supply.))

Mr. Harrison moved, that on Thursday next the house resolve itself into committee of supply, on the statement of revenue and expenditure, with reference to His Excellency's message to the house.<sup>81</sup>

Sir Allan MacNab suggested that a committee of finance should be appointed, that they might have time to examine the necessary statements.<sup>82</sup>

Mr. Hincks, preferred a committee of the whole.<sup>83</sup>

Mr. Harrison had based his motion on His Excellency's message. He was also desirous as much as possible to conform to British practice, — to meet the wishes of the house however, he consented to withdraw his motion.<sup>84</sup>

((Discussion on Alleged Contempt of Parliament by Newspaper.))<sup>85</sup>

Col. Prince rose for the purpose of bringing under the notice of the House a paragraph which had been published in a certain newspaper. — (Cries of "name, name.") — The Montreal Herald. He desired to ask if a committee of privilege had been struck, if not he thought that it should be done, that there might be a tribunal to take cognizance of subjects of this nature. When the publisher of a newspaper allows himself to be guilty of a contempt such as the one as to which he now referred, (and he would take the liberty of reading the article to the House,) it should not be permitted to pass unnoticed by that House. — There was no man in this province who was a more staunch supporter of the liberty of the Press than himself, but he would most decidedly set his face against the abuse of that liberty. The licentious portion of the press would find in him a determined enemy. — When he read a public newspaper containing a deliberate falsehood; when he saw a portion of the House stigmatized as rebels, he thought it was time that the House should assert its rights, and hold the author of such a libel answerable for the consequences of his misconduct.

Order of day for Committee of whole on Petition of W. Walker and others postponed until Monday.

Col. Prince read the article referred to by him, being the leading article in the Montreal Herald of the 20th instant.

The Editor (Col. Prince said) he imagined would be somewhat puzzled to show that he (Col. Prince) had ever moved for the introduction of a bill to pardon universally and indiscriminately. He never even gave notice of such a bill.

Col. Prince read another extract, in which a portion of the House was stigmatized as "rebels." (A laugh.)

Col. Prince said, hon. gentlemen may laugh at this — I do not. I stand here to assert and to protect the rights and privileges of this House and of myself; I will not quietly submit to hear it asserted that there are rebels among the representatives of the people. — (Hear, hear.) The time may come when every honest and honorable opponent of a ministerial measure will be branded as a rebel. I make these observations to show how necessary it is that we should have a committee of privileges.

Col. Prince concluded by explaining that the simple question put by him a few days back to His Excellency's advisers as to whether any relief was intended to be offered to any of the misguided men who had left this country, had been (as he could not but imagine wilfully) misconstrued by the Editor of the Montreal Herald into the actual introduction of a bill for the indiscriminate pardon of all; a measure which every lawyer must well know would be unconstitutional and a direct interference with the prerogative of the Crown, and therefore illegal. (Hear, hear.)<sup>86</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he concurred in the greater part of the editorial comments of the paper to which the gallant Col. alluded. (A laugh.) He (Mr. Johnston) had never been more astonished in his life than when he heard the gallant Colonel demand from ministers of the Crown whether it was the intention of government to pass a bill for the relief of the rebels. (Hear, hear.) He was quite as much astonished as the Editor of the Herald had been. (Order, order.) He believed he was in order: he would not let the matter be disposed of so easily.<sup>87</sup>

The Speaker ((Mr. Cuvillier)) informed the hon. member that he was altogether out of order, as there was no motion before the House.<sup>88</sup>

Statement of Bank of British North America laid before the House.

(232)

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a statement of the liabilities and assets of the Canadian Branches of the Bank of British North America. For the said statement see Appendix (C.)

Committee on Niagara
contested Election adjourned further until 10th August.

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Small,
Ordered — That the Select Committee appointed to try the merits of the Petition of Robert Melville and John McBride, electors of the town of Niagara, complaining of the undue election and return of Edward Clarke Campbell, Esquire, sitting member for the said town of Niagara, do stand further adjourned until the 10th day of August next, in as much as the House has prolonged the time for the return of the Report of the Commissioners appointed to take evidence on the subject of the said controverted Election, until the said 10th day of August next.

Committee of privileges appointed.

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Thompson,
Resolved — That a Committee of privileges, consisting of nine members, be appointed, to which shall be referred all matters connected with the rights and privileges of this House, to report from time to time, with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and that other members of the House may attend when they see fit.

Committee of Privileges.

Ordered — That Mr. Thorburn, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Morin, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Solicitor General Day, the Honourable Mr. Viger, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Boswell, and Mr. Parent, do compose the said Committee.

Select Committee to try the merits of the Frontenac contested Election report the absence of a member.

Mr. Morin, Chairman of the Select Committee appointed for taking into consideration the Petitions of James Mathewson, of the Township of Pittsburg, and of divers inhabitants of the county of Frontenac, complaining of the undue election and return of Henry Smith, Esq., as a member to represent the county of Frontenac, in this present Parliament, presented to the House a report of the said Committee which was again read at the Clerk's table, as followeth : —

Your Committee met this day at 11 o'clock, A. M. pursuant to adjournment, and John R. Hamilton, Esq., one of its members, being absent, your Committee remained in Session for one hour, at the expiration of which time he was still absent.

Mr. Hamilton excused from serving on said Committee on account of ill health.

Mr. Morin moved, seconded by Mr. Price,
That J. R. Hamilton, Esquire, be excused from serving on the said Committee, on account of ill health.

The question having been put, upon the said motion, a division ensued, and it was carried in the affirmative.

Resolved — Accordingly.

Petitions brought up.

The following Petitions were severally brought up, and laid on the table : —

Ordered — That the Petition of Louis Norreau, of the Parish of St. Roch's of Quebec, late Messenger of the Legislative Council of Lower Canada, be referred to the Special Committee appointed to require what assistance it will be necessary to afford to the Clerk, and what offices and departments it will be expedient to establish for the effective and orderly conduct of the business of this House.

Petition of Alfred Todd, Thaddeus Patrick and Charles FitzGibbon referred to same Committee.

Ordered—That the Petition of Alfred Todd, Thaddeus Patrick, and Charles Fitzgibbon, Clerks in the office of the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, presented to the House on the 21st instant, be referred to the said Committee.

Petition of Peter Leppard referred.

Resolved—That the Petition of Peter Leppard, of East Gwillimbury, Home District, be referred to a Committee of five members, to examine the contents thereof and report thereon from time to time; with power to send for persons, papers and records.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Price rose, he said, for the purpose of bringing under the notice of the House the circumstances relating to a certain outrage committed at a public meeting which had been held on Yonge street, in October, 1839. He had thus far deferred bringing the subject forward lest it might be imputed to him that he was willing to impede the government. He trusted, however, that he would now be exonerated from any such charge. The subject was one of that importance which should not be delayed. It was one of the boasts of British subjects that they can petition parliament for the redress of any grievances under which they labour. He (Mr. Price) entirely concurred in the sentiment that it was one of the dearest rights not only of Britons, but also of her Majesty's subjects in this Province, that they can claim to be heard upon all subjects of complaint whether imaginary or otherwise. An interruption or denial of this right would render the boasted freedom of British subjects but a name. In the year 1839, shortly after the late lamented Earl of Durham had left this Province; at a time when a new system of government was about to be introduced into this Province, which should assimilate as far as possible the institutions of this country to those of Great Britain; when it was expressly desired by the Ministry that the views and wishes of the people should be declared with regard to the question of the Union of the Provinces, and also with regard to the principles of Responsible government which have been propounded by Lord Durham, a meeting was called by the Sheriff of the Home District, that the yeomanry of the District might consult together. After the meeting had been so called by the Sheriff, whose duty it is to call together and preside at such meeting, upon a requisition of certain inhabitants of the District, a counter requisition was got up, addressed to the Sheriff, demanding that the meeting should not be held and alledging (sic) as a reason, that riots would ensue.

Those who had signed the first requisition, immediately by notice in the public prints called a meeting in order that they might quietly pursue their original intention of taking the sense of the yeomanry of the District upon the subjects already adverted to. On the day previous to the meeting there was a general movement throughout the city of Toronto, to counteract if possible the proceedings which it was supposed would take place: it being supposed that those who were favourable to the meeting were the friends of the doctrine of responsible government as promulgated by Lord Durham, and that it was also the intention of the meeting to hail the approach of the present Governor General, who was then on his way to assume the government of this Province, as one likely to carry out the views of Lord Durham. It was stated to him (Mr. Price) on that day, that if he attended the meeting his life would be in danger; and as for the hon. gentleman who is at present the member for Oxford, if he attended the meeting his life would not be worth an hour's purchase. (Hear, hear.) It was determined, however, that they would not be intimidated by threats, and deprived of the exercise of their undoubted rights; that they would go peaceably to the place of meeting, pass their resolutions, and go peaceably away; and although it was reported that the opposite party were arming themselves with bludgeons and offensive weapons, yet they confidently relied upon the authorities to take proper precaution for the prevention of riots and disorders. In obedience to the call, the yeomanry of the District assembled, and were quietly proceeding with the business of the meeting, when a large concourse of people from the city, at the head of whom were the Mayor, the Clerk of the Peace, and various officials, came up with flags and banners, and having taken possession of the platform, proceeded to elect a different chairman from the one who had been proposed by the friends of the meeting, who immediately separated themselves and removed to a distance. They were not, however, permitted to retire peaceably. The Sheriff at the head of a body of men came up to their waggons, foaming with wrath, and to save themselves from violence and perhaps from death itself, they were obliged to fly in different directions. He (Mr. Price) escaped by getting over a fence, and he believed the hon. gentleman from Oxford had saved himself by his speed in running. (A laugh.) Hundreds were knocked down, dozens were seen weltering in their blood. Magistrates were upon the spot, many of them participators in the outrage. Is it surprising, then, that the parties should not have been brought to justice? — One unfortunate individual was inhumanly murdered. And after all this the officials and their band of rioters proceeded to pass their own resolutions, and then returned to the city in triumph.

Mr. Price read the resolutions which it had been intended to submit to the meeting, and also certain affidavits setting forth the proceedings of the aggressors, which had been laid before Sir George Arthur.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Johnston here interrupted the hon. member, and desired to be informed what answer Sir George Arthur had returned to the application.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Price. — The answer was, we might go before a jury of the country and obtain redress. But how could it be imagined that justice could be obtained from a jury composed of the very persons most deeply implicated; from a grand jury composed of the very persons who were foremost in creating the disturbance. To shew the intent of the parties, it will only be necessary to state that the rioters came to the ground decorated with ribbons and distinctive badges by which they might be known to their hirelings. The brother of the Chief Justice who was present, having been accidentally knocked down, reproved the person who gave the blow by pointing to his ribbon and saying, my good man you must be more careful to distinguish your friends, did you not observe the ribbon? The man acknowledged he had mistaken him for one of those he was employed to beat. What justice could be obtained in such a case? Has not impunity been given to crime? Has not the Riding which I represent been the scene of riots and murders? Laws though bad, if properly administered, are better for any country than good laws badly administered, better would it be that we have despotism at once. Let us not be led to expect justice if the government is too weak to render it. It is a question of vital importance, but I will not detain the house any longer upon it at present. I will merely move for the appointment of a select committee to enquire into the matter and report thereon.<sup>4</sup>

As to the hon. member for Oxford, had not that gentleman have perfectly comprehended the sauve qui peut, and exhibited "a clean pair of heels" with peculiar effect — any allusion to him now would admit only of the melancholy appellation of the "late Mr. Hincks."<sup>5</sup>

Here Mr. Price moved for the appointment of certain gentlemen whom he named. He had left himself out of the committee, he said, because as he was a party engaged, so far as running away was concerned — (a laugh) — he did not wish to act as judge and accuser.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Johnston said before that motion was granted which required the 77th rule of the house to be rescinded, so far as relates to the motion, in order that the committee may be named by the hon. gentleman who is the champion of this cause, that hon. gentleman ought to show good cause why it should be done. He hoped the committee would be selected in the ordinary way.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Johnston felt great satisfaction at the activity displayed by Mr. Hincks on the occasion — quoting the old adage "he that fights and runs away, &c."<sup>8</sup>

Captain Steele said he would claim the indulgence of the house upon this occasion. Some two years back this country was in a state of suspense and anxiety as to the future management of affairs on the part of the government. The Imperial Parliament had refused to legislate upon the affairs of this colony, because they were not in possession of sufficient information. The Ministry were desirous that the question should be delayed, that an opportunity might be given for the people to express an opinion upon the important question. There was on the other hand a sort of (he would call it by its proper name,) conspiracy that the voice of the people should not be heard — that the right which was guaranteed to British subjects in ages by-gone should be withheld. Meetings were, however, called in various parts of the Province, and an expression of public opinion pronounced upon various question — upon the union of the Provinces — upon that State paper, I may call it, Lord Durham's Report. There was a feeling of approbation in favor of these meetings. Men of high respectability attended them, and also signed the requisitions calling them. But to produce a counter requisition was a thing altogether unheard of in the county to which he (Capt. Steele) had the honor to belong. — And in this case it would be remarked that an incorporated city comes forward to counteract the wishes of a whole District. Notwithstanding the counter requisition, the meeting took place, and the proceedings of that meeting were as had been stated by the hon. gentlemen who moved the resolution. The yeomanry assembled peaceably and quietly. On the contrary, the citizens of Toronto came out with a sort of warlike preparation. The Sheriff harangued the people, and represented the people assembled to carry on the business of the meeting as seditious and rebellious. He (Captain Steele) hoped never again to witness such proceedings as he there witnessed. If the people were to be prevented from meeting peaceably to discuss subjects of a public nature, the privilege of assembling in Parliament was nothing better than a solemn mockery. (Hear, hear.) Neither time nor space can resist the steps (sic) of justice. As sure as the sun rises and sets it must take place, and he hoped the gentlemen of the committee would enter into the investigation of the subject with a determination that justice should take place. He hoped there would not be a dissenting voice to the appointment of the committee. All complaints, and complaints of this nature especially, should be fully investigated. Upon this rests the stability of the throne itself.<sup>9</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison said he quite agreed with what had fallen from the hon. gentleman that this is a most important question. Because if they took the language of the petitions, or the eloquence of the learned gentleman (Mr. Price) as the guide by which to form their opinions upon the subject, in either case it was abundantly evident that the case was an important one; as there are not only charges of misconduct against the Sheriff, but also a violent imputation is thrown upon the administration of justice. It is a question of such importance therefore (said Mr. Harrison) that I think decidedly it should be investigated. I have not the least objection, and I only rise to disabuse (if the hon. and learned gentleman will allow me to use the expression,) the minds of hon. members of the impression that there is any objection existing against the enquiry on the part of the government. No doubt the parties had a perfect right to call the meeting, and no doubt the Sheriff was wrong in refusing to call the meeting in consequence of the counter requisition. The reason why no Executive investigation could take place was this; the parties themselves placed it out of the power of the executive to do any thing in the matter; because the charges preferred extended not only to complaints of official misconduct, but to accusations of positive crime. This is certainly a picture of the state of society which is most deplorable. But in justice to the late Lieutenant Governor Sir George Arthur, it should be stated that the affidavits which have been read by the hon. and learned gentleman were never laid before him at all.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Small said having seconded the resolution he would now with the approbation of the hon. mover propose that a portion of the same be altered and that the Committee be named by the House. He (Mr. Small) was as little interested as any hon. member ought to be in a matter of this important nature. But he was satisfied that any one who had heard the petition read, and particularly having heard the speech of the learned and hon. gentleman opposite, who had just concluded must be convinced that a stronger case could hardly be made out. It was a perfect mockery to tell the complainants to go to the grand jury and prefer their complaints. He (Mr. Small) did not happen to have been in the country when that affair took place: if he had been he would probably have had his brains knocked out: he should certainly not have run away. (Hear, hear.) He hoped the matter would be calmly and dispassionately investigated.<sup>11</sup>

Col. Prince said he did not rise to prolong the debate, but if possible to put an end to it. The motion was an important one, and the documents which were read still more important, and having heard from one of the officers of the government that it is the desire of the government that an investigation should take place, he thought there could be no objection to the appointment of the committee forthwith. Already sufficient time had been employed in explaining what was abundantly evident, that there was a necessity for an investigation. The motion ought to be granted at once.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Hincks desired before the question was put to observe that he could not exactly comprehend why it was out of the power of the Executive Government to enquire into and redress these complaints. The learned and hon. gentleman, the member for Kingston, had said that charges of official misconduct had been mixed up with that of crime. Then I suppose (said Mr. Hincks) we are to understand that when an officer of the government is accused of being guilty of notorious official misconduct, because he is at the same time accused of crimes of a higher nature, he is to be totally absolved and acquitted — rather an absurd mode of reasoning I should think, yet this is the doctrine of the hon. and learned gentleman. When on a late occasion serious riots were represented to have occurred in the city of Toronto, in which also certain judges and magistrates were concerned, a commission was issued for this investigation, why was not the same course followed with regard to these now under consideration? Now I, for one, am of opinion that when judges of the land and other officials identify themselves with electioneering and election riots, it is impossible under such circumstances that the people can have confidence in the administration of justice. (Hear, hear.) In England a much less urgent case of complaint would be at once investigated by the government and I think it should be so in this Province.<sup>13</sup>

The motion was altered, and the committee appointed by the House.<sup>14</sup>

(234)

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Small, Mr. Neilson, the Honourable Mr. Daly, Mr. Christie and Mr. Merritt, do compose the said Committee.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Child took the chair of the Committee.<sup>16</sup>

Some time was taken up in the consideration of Mr. Thorburn's motion for the distribution of the journals, and some amusement created in consequence of the numerous places that were suggested. Not only were the neighbouring Colonies of British North America and the West Indies spoken of, but we had also New South Wales, Van Dieman's Land, Jersey, and I know not what other places recommended.<sup>17</sup>

La chambre en comité a résolu de faire imprimer les journaux a (sic) 500 exemplaires, partie en anglais, partie en français. Trois exemplaires seront donnés à chaque membre, et il en sera envoyé en change aux autres colonies d'Amérique, il en sera aussi donné en Angleterre au parlement, au bureau colonial et aux membres du parlement impérial, et aux bibliothèques publiques du Canada que l'orateur désignera.<sup>18</sup>

Among other resolutions that were adopted, Jamaica and Newfoundland were to be furnished with a copy each, with a request for a copy of theirs in exchange.<sup>19</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

And Mr. Child reported that the Committee had come to a resolu-

To be received
to-morrow.

Speaker to have authority during session and recess to carry into effect the orders of the House.

Resolutions from Committee of whole on Members remuneration, read at the Clerk's Table.

Resolutions.

First Resolution carried.

House divides on second Resolution.

Second Resolution carried.

On motion of Mr. Thorburn, seconded by Mr. Neilson,

Resolved—That when this House is not in Session, as well as when it is, the Speaker may give such directions as he may think necessary and proper for carrying into effect the orders of the House, and for ensuring the safety of its records; and all the Officers and Messengers of the House, shall be under the direction of the Speaker in all matters whatsoever connected with the performance of their official duty.

Mr. Roblin, from the Committee of the whole House, to take into consideration the propriety of repealing or amending certain parts, of an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, entitled "An Act to alter the mode of payment of wages to Members of the House of Assembly," reported, according to order, the resolutions of the said Committee, which resolutions were again read at the Clerk's Table, as followeth:—

1. Resolved—That it is expedient to repeal a certain Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Upper Canada, intituled "An Act to alter the mode of payment of wages to Members of the House of Assembly," and to provide for the remuneration of the Members of the Legislative Assembly for their loss of time in coming to, attending at, and returning from the said Legislative Assembly, at the several Sessions thereof.

2. Resolved—That the sum of fifteen shillings per diem be allowed to Members of the said Assembly for their said attendance, including travelling at the rate of twenty miles per day.

3. Resolved—That the said allowance ought to be paid by the Receiver General of the Province, upon the production of the Speaker's warrant stating the number of days the member producing the same has been absent from his place of residence in coming to and attending at the respective Sessions of the Legislative, and the number of days necessary for such Member to return to his place of residence.

Ordered—That the question of concurrence be now separately put upon each of the said Resolutions.

And the first of the said Resolutions being again read, and the question of concurrence being put thereon, it was unanimously agreed to.

The second of the said Resolutions being again read, and the question of concurrence being put thereon, the House divided, and the names called for they were taken down, as followeth:—

Third Resolution carried.

So it was carried in the affirmative, and — <sup>20</sup>

Mr. Small being desirous of eliciting the views and intentions of government relative to it, was anxious to amend this resolution, leaving a blank in it to be filled up by a committee of 3, specifying how the money was to be placed — such committee having among those composing it, one of the members of the treasury benches. The forms of the house would not, however, admit the amendment.<sup>21</sup>

(237)

Resolved — That this House does concur with the Committee in the said Resolutions.

Macadamized Road
Act read second time and referred to a Committee to report thereon.

A Bill to repeal a certain section of an Act of the Legislature of Upper Canada, relative to Macadamized Roads, was, according to order, read a second time.

Resolved — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of five Members, to report thereon with all convenient speed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Durand, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Henry Smith, Mr. Thorburn and Mr. Price, do compose the said Committee.

Dalhousie Gaol and Court House bill read second time, and ordered to be referred to Com. on Wednesday next.

A Bill to authorise a further loan to complete the building of the Court House and Gaol for the intended District of Dalhousie, was, according to order, read a second time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Wednesday next.

House goes into
com. of whole on
Pet. of Wm. Walker, on timber trade.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the Petition of William Walker, and other Inhabitants of the City of Quebec, relating to the Timber Trade, being read —

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Moore took the chair of the Committee.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Neilson said, that in offering these resolutions, all must know that they related to a most important subject. In regard to the welfare of the country none could be more so.<sup>23</sup>

The trade of which the destruction was contemplated, gave employment to upwards of 2,000 vessels — and the profits which were derived from it were engaged in it.<sup>24</sup>

He presumed all were aware that the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to lay a duty of 15 per cent. on the timber trade of Canada. If this was carried out, the trade between this and the Mother country must cease. He (Mr. N.) was disposed to bow to the opinion of the Imperial Government in matters necessary to the welfare of the empire. He conceded its right to alter and impose duties; but under circumstances like this, we may be excused in going before the Government in the matter. The inhabitants had been invited to go into this branch of trade, and had embarked a very large capital in it; one hundred vessels were at all times going across the Atlantic engaged in the timber trade. Whatever then might be the right of the Imperial Government, there was a right superior, that of justice to all. He (Mr. N.) trusted that the representative of the Imperial Government would reflect on the matter, and see that the trade was not interfered with too prematurely. It had been entered upon at great individual sacrifices, and the existing laws ought to be continued in common justice. If this trade belonged to any particular class of her Majesty's subjects it would be a different matter, but when it was open to all and left to free competition, every one must be aware that capital will always make level profits to a fair, if not a minimum recompense.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said the hon. gentleman had admitted the power of the Imperial Government, and its right to alter duties, but that injustice would be done in this instance if the duties on the timber were altered as proposed. He (Mr. M.) thought it was useless to expect any thing else, however, but every one must concur in so reasonable a matter as listening to the resolutions.<sup>26</sup>

Mr. Cameron thought that the resolutions would meet the unanimous support of the House. The timber trade was in his (Mr. C.'s) opinion the most important trade in the country. He was willing to admit the right of the Mother country to interfere in the matter, and legislate on it, but thought they had proceeded on statements and arguments ex parte, which were not capable of demonstration. For instance, it had been said that red pine was not equal to Baltic or Norway timber for the decks of vessels; now he was satisfied this was not a fact: again, it was stated that exports to the Baltic would increase if the duties were altered, but if not, they would decrease in a far greater ratio. He believed the experiment would not be attended with profit to the Mother country, while the alteration would be attended with ruin here. The trade had taken 33 years to bring it to its present state, and he (Mr. C.) believed England would not be benefitted by the alteration. — 1400 vessels come to this country in consequence of the trade; these convey an immense number of emigrants; and this source of profit would be lost to the country. He (Mr. C.) said, that if any alteration took place, the whole northern region would be abandoned. If time were given to go into other evidence than ex parte, a very different case would be made out. He (Mr. C.) was convinced that it would be impolitic to both countries to make immediate alteration. 20 years at all events ought to be given.<sup>27</sup>

M. Cook pensait que le commerce tomberait bientôt s'il n'était pas protégé par une loi.<sup>28</sup>

M. le Sol. Gén. Day ne pouvait donner un vote silencieux sur cette question. Il supporterait les résolutions, parce que l'importance du commerce justifiait pleinement notre intervention dans les mesures du Parlement impérial. Il était convenable d'attirer l'attention du gouvernement sur les capitaux considérables versés dans cette branche du commerce; mais il pensait que l'établissement des droits protecteurs était incorrect et que dans ce siècle on devait les condamner. Il est vrai que les relations entre les Colouies (sic) et les autres pays devaient modifier l'application de ce principe; il y avait certaines choses que l'on devait se garder de faire disparaître (sic) trop subitement. Dans le cas où la Grande Bretagne voudrait augmenter sa marine, elle dépendrait en grande partie de cette colonie relativement au bois; il était donc sage pour elle de ne pas y détruire le commerce du bois. Il pensait que les avancés (sic) au sujet de considérations ex parte étaient erronés.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Hincks était satisfait du discours du Solliciteur Général. Il prouvait que le ministère est disposé à soutenir. (sic) les intérêts du Canada dans ses relations avec l'Angleterre (sic). Il espérait que les résolutions seraient adoptées par une grande majorité. Tout ce que les Canadiens désirent, est d'être bien traités par le peuple anglais; mais il pensait que tôt ou tard on abandonnerait le principe des droits protecteurs du commerce. Ce principe était vicieux, et tous ceux qui étaient engagés dans le commerce devaient se préparer à les voir détruire; on avait eu assez d'avertissement à cet égard. Quant aux allégués extravagants, il pensait que le peuple anglais comprenait bien la question et qu'il savait qu'en établissant des droits égaux, il aurait des articles de commerce à meilleur prix et d'une qualité bien plus supérieure. C'était sur ce principe qu'on agirait. C'était un principe établi en économie politique qu'un peuple ne pouvait acheter les produits d'un autre peuple, a (sic) moins que l'un ne prit en retour, les produits de l'autre, ou qu'il existât un marché facile où on pouvait échanger. Il suivrait de là, que si l'Angleterre recevait de la Baltique une plus grande quantité de bois, le peuple anglais serait obligé d'exporter une plus grande quantité d'effets pour les échanger contre le bois. Cependant il serait peiné de voir adopter aucune démarche qui put engager à abandonner le commerce du bois.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Harmanus Smith although aware of the importance of the trade, would prefer to see capital laid out in some other investment less fortuitous, and affording a sure and lasting resource ; — in the fisheries said the honourable member. He also considered the timber trade as productive of immorality.<sup>31</sup>

Mr. Child ne pouvait concourir dans les opinion (sic) généralement émises pendant le cours des débats. Sans doute on retire des avantages du commerce de bois ; mais cet objet n'est pas le plus important pour la prospérité du pays. Autrefois il existait dans ce pays différentes branches d'industrie dans un état florissant et qui sont maintenant tombées. On avait le commerce des pelleteries, de la potasse et perlasse. Il ne considérait pas le commerce du bois comme très moral dans ses effets, et il aimerait mieux voir la population s'occuper de l'agriculture qui produisait avec elle la richesse et la vertu. On ferait mieux d'y employer les capitaux et dans les pêches. Il exhortait les personnes engagées dans le commerce du bois, à s'en retirer, mais il espérait qu'on adopterait aucune mesure pour faire perdre à ces personnes.<sup>32</sup>

M. Dunscomb concourrait dans les résolutions ; mais ce sujet devait être traité ouvertement et avec justice. Il pensait que l'établissement de droits ne pouvait donner aucun avantage, cependant dans l'état actuel il serait dangereux (sic) de les abolir subitement.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Viger ne demandait pas l'établissement de droits. Il les considérait presque dans tous les cas comme injurieux au pays et aux marchands qu'ils étaient destinés à protéger. Il désirait qu'on les tranchât tous, persuadé qu'il était, que ce pays en retirerait de l'avantage. Il citerait un exemple : En 1770 Bristol pétitionna contre l'indépendance des Etats-Unis, parce qu'elle ruinerait le commerce entre cette ville et l'Amérique ; cependant tout le monde sait que depuis ce tems, (sic) le commerce de cette ville a centuplé. La même chose aurait lieu en Canada. La liberté du commerce requiert l'économie et cette économie serait appliquée à l'augmentation du commerce.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Roblin was for supporting agriculture, as the true basis of our prosperity. The protecting duty contended for, he regarded as a kind of monopoly of profit, and said that from his experience he had found the timber trade most perniciously injurious to the farming interests.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Merritt estimated the consumption of British manufactures in Canada, with its handful of inhabitants as greater than that which finds its way to Russian markets with a population of sixty millions and upwards. It was said that differential duties were vicious, and that our policy was a vacillating one. For his part, he was prepared to remove all duties from our products, if Great Britain would consent to do the same with hers. And as an equivalent for any loss that might be apprehended, he would establish a foreign commerce which would produce a revenue that would yield ample compensation.<sup>36</sup>

Mr. Buchanan concurred in the resolutions. He was opposed to what was called free trade. He could understand the desirubleness (sic) of free trade between the different parts of the same empire, and hoped to see the day when Canada would be recognized as British ground, — the English sending here their manufactures duty-free, and they in their turn receiving Canadian produce duty-free. If such an arrangement seemed to our fellow subjects at home, too favourable to us, by themselves at any time becoming colonists they could enjoy the advantages they envy, without leaving the protection and laws of the British Empire. — With regard to timber, it would not be more unjust to the colonies than injurious to the general interests of the empire to pay the foreigner as much for his timber in specie as England pays the colonies in her manufactures, whose price includes all the taxes which sustain the empire. He was willing that the question should be argued wholly as a consideration of British policy apart from what could be viewed peculiarly Canadian interests. — British interests had originated the protection to Canadian timber, and he was willing that its continuance should be argued for wholly with reference to what is best for the general interests of the Empire. It ought not however to be forgotten what was the excited state of public feeling in England, in 1808, when cut off by war from all supply of timber. This called into existence that committee of the House of Commons which recommended the timber protection duty to induce British subjects to emigrate to the colonies as lumberers, and he (Mr. Buchanan) had every confidence, that any modification of the protection will be so prospective, as sufficiently to guard the interests of those, who have embarked large means in the Canadian timber trade through the inducement of acts of the Imperial Parliament. His (Mr. B's) object in rising, was to refer to that great revenue juggle lately proposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, commonly known as Mr. Labouchere's resolutions, whose principle was to tamper with and sacrifice great and staple interests for the sake of mere revenue arrangements. It was iniquitous to argue that these regulations would confer any advantage on Canada at all, to compensate for the protection to our products in the home market. They allow us to buy from other countries, after depriving us of the means wherewith to do so!! And their effect on British manufactures and British shipping would be most fatal. The effect of these resolutions would be, to make a foreign port (New York) our port of supply. Under their operation, we should immediately be supplied with American cotton manufactures instead of British; and gradually all other American fabrics would supercede English goods in Canada, and thus, eventually, one good argument would be put in the mouth of free trade theorists and revolutionists at home, "that Canada in reality is not a consumer of the manufactures of the empire." He (Mr. Buchanan) thought, the less we have to do with the Yankees, the better for ourselves, and certainly the better for England. — The Americans do not act upon free trade principles. They do not take our Canadian produce, and consequently our trade with them must necessarily be paid with English money.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Parke coincided with the opinions of the member for Oxford at an early period of the discussion. The days of protective duties he looked upon as numbered. Nor did he think it reasonable to expect that the people of Great Britain would continue with their eyes open to pay the same price for inferior Canadian timber, as they paid for superior Baltic. Agriculture in the hon. member's opinion was of a far greater and more lasting importance than the timber trade.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Moffatt asked how agriculture was to prosper here, if the lumber trade was annihilated? Mr. Merritt had proposed to remove all duties pro and con. Now, of the £400,000 duties on British manufactures imported into the Province, he would not hesitate to say, that the lumber trade contributed £350,000 — and as to the immorality of it, when a chairman of committee of Legislative Council, he had on one occasion been able to ascertain the untruth of such a charge.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Williams declared as a magistrate, the trade was grossly demoralizing, and instanced where many farmers had been most ruinously robbed of valuable trees worth £50 each which had been cut down by these fellows and dishonestly sold, under a fabricated assertion that they were for the use of the government which would indemnify the parties.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Holmes said that the duties having spontaneously originated with Great Britain, could not be withdrawn rashly without having a ruinous tendency. As regarded the immorality of the lumber trade, he perfectly agreed with those who had disclaimed against it in that respect — and with respect to its being an interest paramount to agriculture, he was much more inclined for the permanent and general welfare of the colony to support the converse.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Neilson the hon. mover, having listened as he said till he was tired to a tautology of opinions, was desirous of hearing the votes of hon. gentlemen and not their speeches.<sup>42</sup>

Some further repetition however still took place — but he was listened to with much impatience.<sup>43</sup>

(237)

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

Committee reports
resolution.

And Mr. Moore, reported that the Committee had come to several Resolutions, which Resolutions were again read at the Clerk's Table, and agreed to by the House, and are as followeth : —

1st Resolution.

1. Resolved — That we have learned with serious apprehensions, that Her Majesty's Government has recently proposed to the House of Commons an unfavourable alteration in the scale of duties levied on Foreign and Colonial Timber and Deals, on their importation into the United Kingdom.

2nd Resolution.

2. Resolved — That the said relative scale of duties has remained nearly the same, during the last thirty years.

(238)

3rd Resolution.

3. Resolved — That the discriminating duty in favour of Colonial Timber and Deals, was originally established without any solicitation on the part of the Inhabitants of the Colonies, and was considered by them as connected with objects of national policy, and therefore likely to be permanent, and they accordingly embarked their Capital and industry in the Trade of preparing and bringing to the Home Market the produce of the Forests of Canada, which Trade, during the continued encouragement of the said relative scale of duties, has grown, from the loading, in part, a few Vessels frequenting the Saint Lawrence, to the loading of more than a thousand large Ships annually.

4th Resolution.

4. Resolved — That the competition in the Trade in Timber and Deals in the Colony, is free to all Her Majesty's Subjects, and that under an unfavourable alteration of the existing duties, the Trade must, almost altogether, cease, and a great part of the Capital vested in the Trade, and in Lumbering Establishments, be lost, while a very large portion of the Inhabitants must be deprived of their usual employments — the Agriculturists be, to a great degree, deprived of a near and advantageous market for their produce — importations be greatly diminished, and the Province left without a sufficient Revenue for the support of its local Government, the discharge of its existing engagements, and providing for the public wants.

Petitions to be sent to H. M., and Im. Parl.

Resolved — That humble Petitions to Her Majesty, and both Houses of the Imperial Parliament, be drawn up in conformity to the said Resolutions.

Resolved — That a Committee of five Members be appointed to draft the said Petitions.

Committee to draft Petition.

Ordered — That Mr. Neilson, Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Thorburn, and Mr. Buchanan, do compose the said Committee.

House goes in to Com. of whole on certain ordinances relating to the Corporation of Quebec.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to consider any and what amendments are necessary to two certain Ordinances of the Governor and Special Council of the late Province of Lower Canada, relating to the incorporation of the City of Quebec, being read.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee,

Mr. Ruel took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

A Resolution reported.

And Mr. Ruel reported that the Committee had come to a Resolution, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's Table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

Resolution.

Resolved — That it is expedient to repeal certain clauses of two Ordinances of the Governor and Special Council, 3rd and 4th VIC., Cap. 25 and 4th VIC., Cap. 31st, relating to the Incorporation of the City of Quebec, and also to amend the said Ordinances so as to render the said Corporation elective within the least possible delay, and to extend and limit the powers of the said Corporation.

Resolution referred to a Select Committee.

Resolved — That the said Resolution be referred to a Committee of five Members to report thereon, with all convenient speed, by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Committee formed.

Ordered — That Mr. Neilson, Mr. Morin, Mr. Attorney General Draper, Mr. Price, and Mr. Solicitor General Day, do compose the said Committee.

Order of day for House in Com. on amending Judicature Acts of Gaspé, postponed 'till to-morrow.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the expediency of altering and amending the judicature Acts relating to the Inferior District of Gaspé, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until to-morrow.

(239)

House goes into
Com. on North American Colonial Association of Ireland bill.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to authorize the North American Colonial Association of Ireland to loan moneys, and to prosecute certain public works in the County of Beauharnois, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Hincks, took the chair of the Committee, and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Progress.

And Mr. Hincks reported that the Committee had made some progress and had directed him to move for leave to sit again.

Sit again on Friday next.

Ordered — That the said Committee have leave to sit again on Friday next.

Order of the day for House in Com. on the Inspection Laws, postponed till Wednesday
the 4th August.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee to take into consideration the expediency of allowing the exportation from this Province of Flour and Meal, Pot and Pearl Ashes, and Beef and Pork, without inspection, and of amending and consolidating the Laws now in force in this Province in relation to the inspection of the said Commodities, and other references, being read,

Ordered — That the said Order of the day be postponed until Wednesday, the 4th day of August next.

The names of the Members present were taken down, as followeth : —

Mr. Speaker,

Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Borne, Mr. Boutillier, Mr. Solicitor General Day, Mr. Derbshire, Mr. Attorney General Draper, the Honorable Mr. Dunn, Mr. Durand, Mr. Hincks, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Johnston, Mr. McLean, the Honorable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Moore, Mr. Morin, Mr. Raymond, and the Honorable Mr. Viger.

House adjourns for want of Quorum.

And at half past eleven o'clock at night, Mr. Speaker adjourned the House for want of a quorum.

On motion of the Honourable Mr. Harrison, seconded by Mr. Solicitor General Day.

Resolved — That so much of the Message of His Excellency, the Governor General, as relates to the Estimates for the year ending 31st December, 1841, together with the Documents connected therewith, transmitted to this House on the 20th instant, be referred to a Committee of nine Members, consisting of the Honourable Mr. Harrison, the Honourable Mr. Daly, the Honourable Mr. Moffatt, Mr. Neilson, Mr. Hincks, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Cameron, and Mr. Quesnel, to report thereon with all convenient speed; with power to send for persons, papers, and records, and that the 77th Rule of this House be dispensed with in so far as relates to the appointment of this Committee.

Ordered — That the Petition of Duncan Patton, and others, Cullers of Timber, of Quebec, presented to the House yesterday, be referred to the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to regulate the Inspection and Measurement of timber, masts, spars, deals, staves, and other articles of a like nature, in the Ports of Quebec and Montreal, and for other purposes relative to the same.

Ordered — That Mr. Gilchrist have leave to absent himself from this House until the 1st day of August next, on urgent business.

Message from Legislative Council

A Message from the Legislative Council, by John Godfrey Spragge, Esquire, Master in Chancery.

MR. SPEAKER,

Court of Chancery
Bill passed by Legislative Council.

The Legislative Council have passed a Bill, intituled, "An Act to explain and amend an Act passed in the Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, in the seventh year of the Reign of King WILLIAM the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to establish a Court of Chancery in this Province,' and to render more effectual the said Court," to which they desire the concurrence of the Assembly.

And then he withdrew.

Bill read 1st time.

An engrossed Bill from the Legislative Council, intituled "An Act to explain and amend an Act passed in the Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, in the seventh year of the Reign of King WILLIAM the Fourth intituled 'An Act to establish a Court of Chancery in this Province,' and to render more effectual the said Court," was read for the first time.

The Honorable S. B. Harrison, one of Her Majesty's Executive Council, delivered to Mr. Speaker a Message from His Excellency, the Governor General, signed by His Excellency.

And the said Message was read by Mr. Speaker, all the members of the House being uncovered, and is as followeth : —

SYDENHAM.

Message from His Excl'y. the Gov. Gen., on provision for salaries of Judges and Clerks of District Courts.

The Governor General recommends to the House of Assembly that provision be made for the salaries of the Judges and Clerks of the (241)

District Courts and Division Courts in that part of the Province heretofore called Upper Canada, to meet the possible contingency of the General fee fund created not being in the first instance adequate for that purpose.

Government House,
Kingston, 27th July, 1841. }

Committee of whole
House on printing of Journals report
Resolution.

Mr. Child, from the Committee of the whole House to take into consideration what number of the Journals should be printed for each and every Session during the present Parliament, and to whom such printed Journals should be given, reported, according to Order, the Resolution of the said Committee, which Resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and agreed to by the House, and is as followeth : —

500 Copies of
Journals to be printed.

Resolved — That five hundred copies be printed of the Journals of this House, with the Appendix thereto, after every Session, to be disposed of as follows : —

Distribution of Journals.

Three copies to each Member.

One copy to each of the Members of the Legislative Council.

Six copies to His Excellency, the Governor General.

Three copies in English, and two in French, to the Library of the Legislature.

One copy each, to the Governors, Legislative Councils, and Assemblies, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward's Island, the Island of Jamaica, and Island of Bermuda.

Two copies to the Colonial Department.

Three copies to the Library of the House of Commons.

Three copies to the Library of the House of Lords.

Six copies to the Clerk's Office for the use of this House.

One copy to each Law Library in this Province, as the Speaker may direct.

Speaker to communicate aforesaid resolution to the authorities mentioned in as far as respects them severally requesting them to forward in return copies of their Colonial Journals. Municipal Corporation bill read second time. Bill to be referred to Committee of whole on Thursday next. House goes into Com. on Board of Works bill.

And that Mr. Speaker be requested to communicate to the Governors and the Speakers of the Legislative Councils and Assemblies of the above-mentioned Colonies and Islands, so much of this Resolution as relates to them respectively, with a request to the several Legislative Bodies that they will transmit a copy of their own Journals in return.

A Bill to provide for the better internal Government of that part of this Province heretofore Upper Canada, by the establishment of local or municipal authorities therein, was, according to order, read a second time.

Ordered — That the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Thursday next.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to repeal certain ordinances therein mentioned, and to establish a Board of Works in this Province, being read,

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Captain Steele took the chair of the Committee.<sup>2</sup>

Upon clause 6, to incorporate the Board, some discussion arose: — Mr. Day said, that it was merely intended to give the Board an individuality, as a body corporate, in trust for the execution of Public works.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Killaly maintained, that it was upon the same principle that the Board of Works was established in Ireland.<sup>4</sup>

Col. Prince regarded it as a decided benefit, that it should be incorporated — any parties coming into collision with it having then a tangible substance to lay hold of.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Merritt was for having the Board regulated upon the New York plan, for which he seemed to entertain a great partiality.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Viger appeared to be opposed to the bill altogether, regarding it as injurious to public improvements, instead of promoting them.<sup>7</sup>

Mr. Merritt, in answer to some observations relative to the Welland Canal Company, said that the power which had been conferred upon it, had been conferred upon a body, who had actually gone to the expense of a public work.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Baldwin was of opinion that any other servants of the public had an equal right to be incorporated as well as those who would compose the present Board.<sup>9</sup>

Col. Prince considered that it was in every way similar to the Board of Ordnance, and in answer to some remarks upon American improvements, observed that to their cost, British capitalists knew all about them.<sup>10</sup>

Mr. Hincks looked upon the act of incorporation as a protection for the public against the government.<sup>11</sup>

The 9th clause rendering all plans, surveys and estimates subservient to the approval of the Governor, was pronounced by ((Mr.)) Merritt, as another proof of the intentions of the Executive to monopolize all control over the Board.<sup>12</sup>

Mr. Harrison said in answer, that the clause merely provided that all improvements should be sanctioned by the Governor, the house still possessing the power of voting the sums necessary to effect them.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Cameron was decidedly in favour of an incorporated public Board of Works, having seen quite sufficient to disgust him with private schemes, which were got up with much plausibility, and carried out most selfishly. Witness, said the hon. member, (as an allusion has this day been made to the States,) the railroad companies in Michigan, where five millions of dollars have been pouched by some of this description of disinterested speculators — while the only portions of road which the public have got for the money might have been effected for a decimal of the amount.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Moffatt could not see how the clause could give any undue power to the executive.<sup>15</sup>

Mr. Parke said it appeared to him, that the only responsibility to be recognized, was the despotic responsibility of the house, which was responsible to none.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Johnston observed, that if scientific men had been judiciously employed on the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence, those works would present very different features to what they do now.<sup>17</sup>

Mr. Merritt defended the public works in Canada, and gave as a corrected estimate of the Welland Canal expenses, £500,000.<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Small said that he was perfectly satisfied with the responsibility which the bill involved, a vote of the house being necessary to furnish funds.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Hincks rather damaged the character of Welland Canal management, by giving some details relative to it: among them, vouchers for money signed by a cross only, — no witness.<sup>20</sup>

Clause 15, Mr. Merritt was at issue with, considering it impossible to form a correct estimate of the expense of a given work.<sup>21</sup>

Mr. Killaly did not appear to take this as a compliment to the professional ability of engineers, which he considered involved in the indispensibility (sic) of such a quantum of judgment.<sup>22</sup>

Mr. Draper confirmed the advantage of this clause, (that no public work shall be undertaken unless the means are adequate to it,) by mentioning an instance, where by computation, it was ascertained that one item alone would have swallowed up the funds that were to embrace the whole.<sup>23</sup>

Mr. Cameron pronounced the Welland Canal to be a job at both ends and money in the middle!! (hear, hear,) and hoped that when the present board was established we should no longer see a canal widened on some people's lands, and economically narrowed on others.<sup>24</sup>

Mr. Thorburn defended the Welland Canal, exonerating his friend (the member for Lincoln N. Riding) from having reaped any pecuniary benefit from it.<sup>25</sup>

Mr. Boswell said if the clause was a trap, the government itself would fall into it.<sup>26</sup>

Several clauses were added to the bill; — That the acts should be submitted yearly to the House of Assembly, — That the expenses (probably meaning salaries) should be limited to the provision of the Union Act, £3000, — That any members of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, who shall hereafter accept the appointments of chairman or secretary to the board, (the first appointments excepted) shall there and then vacate their seats, with the privilege of being re-elected, should their constituents so approve —<sup>27</sup>

Several clauses ((were)) ... adopted cosecutively.<sup>28</sup>

Mr. Hincks moved seconded by Mr. Moffatt, that the president of the Board of Works during his continuance in office shall not be capable of sitting in the House of Assembly as a member thereof, nor of being appointed an Executive Councillor.

On making this motion Mr. Hincks observed that he was as strong an advocate for responsible government as any hon. member of that house, but he did not think that the President of the Board of Works should be allowed to hold any responsible office other than that of President of that Board. He would have quite enough responsibility resting upon him, and would have quite enough to engage his attention without being a member of that house or an Executive Councillor. He should be divested of all political responsibility.<sup>29</sup>

Mr. Small said he would not have been surprised to hear this clause moved on by an hon. gentleman who was opposed to responsibility. He was not surprised that the hon. gentleman from Montreal had seconded it; that hon. gentleman had declared himself averse to responsibility. But that an hon. gentleman so acute, so cautious, so prudent as the hon. gentleman from Oxford should have been the mover of a question of this kind seemed certainly rather extraordinary. Now, if we have responsible government (said Mr. Small) it strikes me that the very principle of responsible government requires that the government shall be represented in this house by heads of departments; and I cannot conceive that there is a department which is of more importance than the Board of Works. I think it is one which will advance the interests of the country more than any other; I think it is one which will give satisfaction to the country. If the hon. gentleman had not been so quick with his motion I intended to have moved that any member of the Assembly who shall accept the office of President of the Board of Works shall vacate his seat and return to his constituents for re-election. (Hear, hear.) This I think would have been a sufficient safeguard. — (Hear, hear.) This is a system which I desire to be carried out. (Hear, hear.) But we have no right to prescribe to the constituency of the country whom they shall elect and whom not, if qualified, according to the laws now in force, in other respects, we have no right to preclude any one from being elected. — And a gentleman having gone before his constituency as President of that Board, and having been elected while he was such President, we are bound to believe that he possesses the full confidence of his constituency. No one should be excluded except it be the Judges of the land.<sup>30</sup>

Mr. Thorburn said he really thought the hon. and learned gentleman had been too severe upon the hon. mover of the resolution, in saying that he had departed from the principles of responsible government. He (Mr. Thorburn) was inclined to think that he was still acting (in) defence of those principles in moving the clause he had moved. He is desirous of dividing the responsibility, that too much may not rest upon a single individual.<sup>31</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison said he must confess he was considerably surprised at the amendment of the hon. and learned gentleman. It assumes a two-fold character; in the first place it takes away the right of the constituency to elect a gentleman who happens to preside over the Board of Works, and in the next place it limited the prerogative of the crown. These two objections would appear to be quite sufficient; but (Mr. Harrison continued) I must again express my surprise when I see a strong advocate for responsible government bringing forward a motion of this description. I do not hasten, to say that it is essential that the gentleman at the head of the Board of Works should be a member of this hon. House; but it must be confessed that it would be a matter of very great importance. I think the view taken by the hon. and learned member for the third riding of the county of York is a very proper one, that any one, being a member of this house, who accepts that office should return to his constituents. It is quite right that this should apply to the chairman and secretary of that Board; but as to the other members of that Board, they have no salaries and cannot be considered as being under executive influence in the smallest degree. I hope the hon. member will see the necessity of withdrawing his amendment.<sup>32</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said he could not see that this question affects the principle of responsible government. He would not admit that it was necessary the Chairman of the Board of Works should have a seat in that house. The government is bound to defend the conduct (sic) of its servants or to dismiss them from office. This is the conduct which I approve on the part of the government; and because I would desire that we should have an efficient Board of Works, I would not have the intention of the gentleman at the head of that Board withdrawn from it. That gentleman being necessarily a scientific person, should not be rendered liable to be removed from office in the event of differing from the views of a majority of this house. It is under these considerations that I have seconded the resolution of the hon. gentleman from Oxford.<sup>33</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said he certainly concurred in what had fallen from the hon. gentleman from Montreal and the hon. gentleman from Oxford. The simple question is, is it expedient or not that this should be one of the heads of departments having seats in this house, which is to be considered responsible to the representatives of the people? I certainly think the office of President of the Board of Works should not be a political office. If it be now adopted as a part of the system of responsible government that the head of the Board of Works shall be a political officer, removable from this office in the same manner as other officers of the Executive government, it will be necessary that not only the gentleman who fills that office at present but his successors also shall be members of this house. This in my opinion will be throwing an embarrassment in the way of carrying out that responsibility to which we are all willing to give a fair trial. I think the hon. gentleman is giving the best evidence of his sincerity in favor of responsible government by bringing forward this amendment. I for my part shall heartily support the amendment, and I hope it will be supported by the house.<sup>34</sup>

Mr. Parent said that in passing the bill now before the committee they should endeavor to render the Board of Works as efficient as possible. And he thought the best way to render it efficient was by adopting the amendment of the hon. gentleman. The gentleman filling the situation of President of that Board must necessarily possess qualifications of a very superior order. It is a very responsible situation, and by passing the bill without the amendment which has been now proposed, you run the risk of losing a very useful officer, and one whose place it will be difficult to fill. The President of this Board will exercise an immense influence by his control over all public works, and over the expenditure of large sums of money, (to the extent, perhaps of a million and a half,) in the improvements of the country, and if you make it necessary that this officer shall hold his situation only so long as he votes with the majority, you put him completely under the influence of parties. Now he would not put him in this situation. For this reason he would support the amendment.<sup>35</sup>

Mr. Boswell said he should oppose the amendment, and he should do so, as the staunch friend of the principles of responsible government professed, and no doubt sincerely, by hon. gentlemen. The only argument which he had heard against allowing a seat in that house to the chairman of the Board of Works, was, that the situation was one of great responsibility (sic), requiring a person of eminent acquirements, and in case of a vote of want of confidence he would have to vacate his office. Now in the first place this argument is applicable to every individual in the ministry, and he would ask is not the office of Attorney or Solicitor General a difficult office to fill? (Hear, hear.) Is it right that the gentleman who fills the office of President of the Board of Works is to be excluded from a seat in this house, simply because he fills that situation? If he be a gentleman of that talent which enables him to command the confidence of a majority of the country on the one hand and the government on the other, he will of course retain his situation. He (Mr. Boswell) perfectly agreed with what had been stated by the learned member for the town of Kingston, that it is infringing on the prerogative of the Crown as well as the rights of the people. There are not so many distinguished individuals in the province, that the legislature ought to narrow the choice of the people. The amendment suggested by the hon. gentleman from the third Riding of York or somewhat similar to that, he (Mr. Boswell) would readily support, but to say that the individual appointed to this office should not be re-elected is certainly a principle which they were not borne out in adopting.<sup>36</sup>

Colonel Prince said the subject had been handled with great ability, and by none more so than by the hon. and learned gentleman who had just sat down. He (Col. Prince) would therefore content himself with making very few remarks upon it. He could see no reason why a scientific gentleman standing at the head of the Board of Works should be excluded from a seat in that house; but on the contrary there were many reasons why he should not be excluded. He believed it was in perfect accordance with the doctrine of responsible government that a gentleman holding this high and important situation — a situation of profit and emolument — should have a seat in the House of Assembly. Cases had been cited, some of which were analogous and some are not. He (Colonel Prince) would give one which he considered precisely analogous: in England the Master General of Ordnance is almost invariably a member of the House of Commons. I recollect (said Col. Prince) a question came before the House of Commons which in some degree affected the ministry. Lord Beresford who was then Master of Ordnance, being a member, gave his vote according to his conscience as a private member, without reference to ministerial interests: the next day Lord Wellington sent for him, and made this very significant remark: as Lord Beresford you will of course vote as you think proper; but as Master of Ordnance you must vote with the ministry. I can see no reason why the President of the Board of Works should be excluded than the Master of Ordnance should. Generally speaking, officers of this description should have seats in the House, with the proviso, however, that upon every new appointment they go back to their constituents.<sup>37</sup>

Mr. Roblin said he was of opinion that it was wrong to create a disability where none existed before. He was not aware that there was any disqualification at present existing which prevented any one whom his Excellency might name, from sitting at the Council Board; and he thought they should consider carefully before they created any disqualification.<sup>38</sup>

Mr. Cook said he thought that since he had been a member of that house he had not seen a measure proposed which was more calculated to infringe upon the prerogative of the Crown than the amendment proposed by the hon. gentleman; he would always consider it his paramount duty to protect the House of Assembly against any rash act of that kind. It was assuming a power which they did not really possess: they had no right to dictate to the Governor General whom he should select to compose his Council.<sup>39</sup>

Mr. Hincks said as he had been charged by several hon. members as acting contrary to the principles of responsible government, he would take the liberty of making a few remarks. He believed there was nothing in the resolution which he had proposed which could be construed as unfavorable to responsible government. The question is, ought the situation of President of the Board of Works to be a political one? There is no doubt that gentlemen who hold office ought to be responsible, but whether this is such an office as ought to be placed upon the same footing as a political office is questionable. If I thought the resolution would have the effect of embarrassing (sic) the views of the hon. and learned gentleman who introduced the bill, I would not have offered it. I desire to see that bill become a law, but I cannot see that the bill would be materially affected by it; and I think the gentleman who presides over that Board will be able to perform the duties of his office more satisfactorily to himself and to the country if he is not a member of this house. If the country was in a situation to multiply public offices it would be all very well; but there was no necessity for any thing of the kind. Upon — looking over a division in this house the other day, he found the proportion of government officers who voted upon that division was very great indeed; out of nineteen who voted on one side of the question eight or nine were members of the government. Hon. gentlemen talk about the desire to take away the rights of the people; it is not favorable to the rights of the people that there should be too many dependants on the government in the House of Assembly. With regard to the latter part of the resolution he (Mr. Hincks) had no desire to press its adoption if contrary to the sense of the house; but he certainly continued to think that it was of great importance that the gentleman at the head of the Board of Works should not sit in that house as a member thereof.<sup>40</sup>

Mr. Merritt. — I have my apprehensions, I must confess, respecting making the Board of Works a political office. We should look more to its utility than to its political effect. As to excluding him from a seat in that house it would no doubt be a benefit to him individually. (Hear, hear.) But that exclusion might operate unfavorably in changing the whole plan of the measure proposed by the hon. and learned member. Another plan might be adopted — the duration of the bill might be limited. Let the Board of Works have a trial, and if found to work well let it be continued.<sup>41</sup>

Mr. Johnston said he was desirous of supporting the amendment. Without that he thought the gentleman at the head of the Board of Works would have an exceedingly arduous duty imposed upon him. A man cannot serve two masters, and he (Mr. Johnston) was not favorable to a plurality of offices. As to the humbug of responsibility, it would before long be knocked in the head altogether.<sup>42</sup>

Mr. Parke said, under the system of government heretofore practiced in Upper Canada, when the Government and the House of Assembly were antagonists, striving to injure and counteract the operations of each other, there was some show of reason for an attempt of this kind to limit the prerogative of the Crown. But under the new and more genial order of things, the Government, instead of being the antagonist of the people, desires to conduct the administration of affairs in harmony with their wishes, as expressed in the Legislature. — (Hear, hear.) And if the government is to be conducted in accordance with the wishes of the people, a man cannot be the servant of one without being so of the other also. The office of President of the Board of Works is connected with some of the most vital interests of the country; upon it will depend some of those great public improvements by which the country is to be materially benefitted. He was perfectly satisfied that the adoption of a resolution of this description would go far towards discouraging the very principle which they had so many years been laboring to establish. — (Hear, hear.) Instead of sapping the very foundation of that principle they ought to cherish it. He believed that excluding that officer from a seat in the house was not in accordance with what the people desired.<sup>43</sup>

Mr. Hincks said if anything were wanting to make him fully satisfied of the necessity of this amendment, it would be supplied by the speech of the hon. gentleman. The hon. gentleman said that the constituency which had elected the hon. gentleman from London did so, knowing that he was already at the head of the Board of Works. He (Mr. Hincks) believed there were few constituencies having large public improvements in contemplation who would not be desirous of having that hon. gentleman for their representative. For this very reason, if for no other, he (Mr. Hincks) thought he should be excluded from Parliament. There being an impression, however, that it would be fatal to the bill to press this amendment, and being anxious that the bill should not be endangered, with the permission of hon. members he would withdraw the amendment.<sup>44</sup>

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.<sup>45</sup>

Mr. Small moved that any member of that hon. house who should hereafter accept the office of President of the Board of Works shall upon accepting such office vacate his seat, which after a short discussion was negatived.<sup>46</sup>

Mr. Durand moved that the duration of the act be limited to four years.<sup>47</sup>

Solicitor General Day suggested that it might be found exceedingly inconvenient that the act should cease perhaps at a time when there were important works in progress. In whose hands then would be the power of carrying on the public works be vested upon the lapse or cessation of the operation of the bill?<sup>48</sup>

Mr. Durand would ask if the learned and hon. gentleman was not willing to trust to the legislature for renewing the act. In order to meet the views of the officers of the government he (Mr. Durand) was perfectly willing to support the bill; but as it was only an experiment and would doubtless be attended with expensive machinery, he thought it should be limited in its duration.<sup>49</sup>

Mr. Johnston. — The hon. gentleman forgets that we may repeal the act if we please next session.<sup>50</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said the committee, he thought, would consider the peculiar position in which the country is placed. The advisers of his Excellency have acknowledged that they are responsible to this House, but at the same time that they hold out this concession to the wishes of the country, it must be recollected that the civil list has been permanently provided and this house has not therefore, that check upon the Executive. This is one of the evils which the permanent civil list is going to entail upon the country; that we are to be obliged to make temporary laws. He should support the amendment and he hoped the committee would adopt it. The Board of Works is as yet but an experiment; and if after some years it be found to work well there will be no difficulty in reviving it. A sort of threat had been held out that by limiting the duration of the act it would endanger its passage, but he did not think that they should be deterred from making any useful provision lest the bill might be defeated in consequence of such necessary provisions.<sup>51</sup>

Mr. Chesley said he hoped the house would not make itself so ridiculous in the eyes of the public as they would do by allowing to appear upon the journals two amendments so completely contradictory as the two which had been proposed; the one to provide that the President of the Board should vacate his seat upon appointment to office, and again that the law shall be in force only four years.<sup>52</sup>

Col. Prince said, the motion was certainly plausible, but he had not heard the objections of the hon. and learned gentleman from Ottawa answered satisfactorily. What are to become of the works which may happen to be in progress when the bill expires. But there was another thing to be considered, they had been told in the speech from the throne that the government in England were pledged to loan us a million and a half to be expended on public improvements. Before they advance this sum it is probable they will desire to see some permanent measure to provide for its proper expenditure. No government, and no individuals, would advance such a sum when they find upon the face of the statute a clause which puts a stop to its operation in the space of four years.<sup>53</sup>

Mr. Viger said he was not aware that it was provided that the million and a half should pass through the hands of the Board of Works. He (Mr. Viger) had already declared that he did not entirely approve of the bill. It did not contain such enunciation of principles as satisfied him. However, as the majority of the house were against him he was bound to submit. It would scarcely be treating this house fairly if the advisers of the Crown, upon whom the house so confidently relies for carrying out the principles of responsible government, about which so much has been said, refuse to make some slight concessions to the wishes of the house in return for the confidence which the house so readily reposes in them.<sup>54</sup>

Mr. Price said, he could see nothing unreasonable in limiting the duration of the bill. There might be a difficulty in repealing the law if found to be bad, because it would not only be necessary to convince that house of the propriety of repealing it but also the other two branches of the Legislature. (Hear, hear.)<sup>55</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison said, it does appear to me that it is exceedingly desirable the committee should look upon the question in a more extended view than as merely legislating for the Province of Canada. The effect it would have at home should be considered. This colony is expecting to receive considerable advantages from the Mother country, and those advantages mainly depend upon the enactments which may be provided by the wisdom of the United Legislature. It had been the practice he was aware to pass temporary enactments and perhaps for colonial purposes there could be no great objection to that course, but in a measure of this kind it would have a mischievous effect.<sup>56</sup>

Mr. Merritt. — Does the hon. gentleman suppose that capitalists in England will look to the board of works, as any security to them in loaning money to this province? no, they will look to the Revenues of the Province. He hoped that in four years time the great improvements in this Province will be completed; that of the St. Lawrence particularly. By that time they would be able to ascertain the operation of the system, and if necessary they could then continue the act.<sup>57</sup>

Mr. Moffatt said, he was not surprised at the amendment coming from the quarter it did. It only convinced him that the staunch advocates of responsibility had no confidence in what they professed. (Hear, hear.) If the government be conducted according to the principles professed, what have you to dread? The enactment can be at any time repealed. He would like to see hon. gentlemen consistent; if they find that the principle conceded is not carried out, then they would have some reason to come forward and say some further sacrifice is necessary: but until this is clearly shown, it is not proper to attempt to coerce the government by temporary acts; they had already had enough of temporary legislation; they had seen the inconvenience of it, and he hoped the house would weigh seriously the consequences of such a proceeding.<sup>58</sup>

Mr. Baldwin said, as the Ministers were supposed to possess the confidence of the house, of course if they opposed the present amendment it would be rejected.<sup>59</sup>

Mr. Parke said he thought it would be a singular mode of coercing the government by stopping the improvements of the country. (Hear, hear.) He did not think it had been rightly considered by hon. gentlemen. If it were desired at any time to stop the operations of the Board of Works, the way to do so would be by refusing to make appropriations. (Hear, hear.)<sup>60</sup>

Mr. Morin said it was really difficult to understand from the proceedings and the language of hon. gentlemen whether they considered the advisers of his Excellency as being responsible to the house, or the house responsible to them. (Hear, hear.) They seem to have great faith in responsible government, but no confidence in its continuance. The child is born and christened — it has a name and that is all. (Hear, hear.)<sup>61</sup>

Mr. Boswell said the question is, are temporary or permanent laws best under the circumstances? Looking upon the question in this point of view alone he was of opinion that permanent measures were decidedly preferable. There was something odious in the idea of looking upon their own measures with suspicion. The passing of temporary laws was not the legitimate means of holding the power within our hands against the government. The inconvenience falls not on the government but on the people themselves.<sup>62</sup>

The motion was negatived.<sup>63</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Bill reported amended and ordered to be engrossed.

And Captain Steele reported that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and had made several amendments thereto, which amendments were again read at the Clerk's Table, and agreed to by the House.

Ordered — That the said Bill, as amended, be engrossed.

House goes into Com.

House goes into Committee of whole on Civil Rights Bill.

Ordered—That the Petition of divers inhabitants of the County of Leeds, in the Johnstown District, presented to the House on the 22nd of June last, be referred to the Special Committee to which was referred the Bill to repeal a certain section of an Act of the Legislature of Upper Canada, relative to macadamized roads.

The Honourable S. B. Harrison, presented, pursuant to an Address of the House of Assembly, of the 6th instant, an extract of a despatch from Lord John Russell to His Excellency the Right Honourable Charles Poulett Thompson, dated, Downing-street, 1st July, 1840, which was read as followeth :—

“Regarding the Address on the subject of Christopher Leggo, I have “to state, that it appears that this person’s loss arose, not from the “violence of a foreign enemy, but from the misconduct of persons acting as volunteers for the defence of the Province.

“I have therefore not thought myself at liberty to advise the Queen “to recommend to Parliament that provision should be made at the “expense of the Revenue of this Kingdom, for indemnifying the sufferer.”

On motion of the Honorable Mr. Harrison, seconded by Mr. Attorney General Draper.

Resolved—That this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration the expediency of repealing the Law of that part of the Province heretofore Upper Canada, for the disposal of the public lands of the province, and providing, by a Law applicable to all parts of the Province, for the disposal of public lands therein.

On motion of Mr. Christie, seconded by the Honorable Mr. Viger,
Ordered—That the Order of the day, for the House in Committee, on the Report of the Special Committee, to which was referred the Bill to regulate the Fisheries in the District of Gaspé—and on the said Bill—lost by the adjournment of the House, of Monday last, be revived, and that this House will, on Wednesday next, resolve itself into the said Committee.

On motion of Mr. Parent, seconded by Mr. Barthe,
Ordered—That the Clerk of this House do cause to be inserted in the Appendix to the Journals of the House of Assembly, for the present Session, the returns made by the Prothonotaries of the Courts of King’s Bench, of births, marriages and burials, in the different Districts of the late Province of Lower Canada, for the years 1838, 1839 and 1840.

The Order of the day for the House in Committee on the Bill to secure and confer upon certain inhabitants of this Province the civil and political rights of natural born British subjects, being read,

(244)

The House accordingly resolved itself into the said Committee.

Mr. Borne took the Chair of the Committee.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Cartwright called upon the hon. gentleman who brought in the bill (Mr. Harrison) to show what authority the house had to pass such a measure. He was aware that a law to that effect existed in Upper Canada, but the parliament of Upper Canada was no longer in existence, and no provision had been made by the Union Act.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Viger thought the gentleman who had just sat down was in error. The parliament had the power of naturalizing and constituting an alien a British subject in the colonies; not so in England.<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Cartwright alluded to the law which was passed by the Imperial Parliament which enabled the legislature of Upper Canada to naturalize aliens, and he contended that they had no right to pass such a measure unless similarly authorized.<sup>4</sup>

Mr. Quesnel stated that there were two acts, one for Upper Canada and one for Lower Canada, and by the Union Act those statutes continued in force until repealed or amended.<sup>5</sup>

Mr. Draper. — There was another consequence to the objections which had been urged, and this might be found in the Act of Union itself. After referring to persons naturalized by Acts of Parliament of either Upper or Lower Canada, as eligible to public offices, it also includes those who are naturalized by the parliament of Canada.<sup>6</sup>

Mr. Neilson stated that he was of opinion that as a small portion of the British empire they had no right to make British subjects in any other than the natural way. (A laugh.)<sup>7</sup>

Colonel Prince rose and said he should feel it his duty to propose an amendment which would have the effect of altering the bill in a very material degree. The bill proposes that foreigners who are now residents of this Province should be naturalized. This does not go far enough to meet my views: I am in favor of encouraging the introduction into this country of wealth, enterprize, and industry, from whatever quarter they may come. (Hear, hear.) The bill is certainly a very good measure as far as it goes, but it is not sufficiently comprehensive. We want our country populated: we want foreigners from all nations; there should be no line of distinctions drawn. We want Prussians, Belgians, Hollanders, Swiss and Americans. (Hear, hear.) Yes, Americans, for I am far from imputing to the American nation the crime of their worst citizens, the injuries which we have sustained from a portion of the lowest class of society. (Hear, hear.) I would make no invidious distinction. We talk of sending Emigrant agents to England; we have one there already, a talented and sensible man, but what description of emigrants does he send us? They are of that class which we do not want; they are paupers. (Hear, hear.) We want capitalists, and if they are American capitalists so much the better. In the county which I have the honor to represent there are many American Farmers, and there are no better Farmers, and no better and more loyal subjects. That is the inducement which brings them here. Is it that lands are cheaper; that the soil is richer? I answer in the affirmative. Is it because they prefer the quiet and liberal government under which we live, to the turmoil and excitement (sic) of republican institutions, with their elections recurring month after month? I answer in the affirmative. No American will come to this country unless he prefers our institutions, (hear, hear,) and shall we not be liberal enough to welcome him? We are not precluded from purchasing and holding lands in the U. States, I speak particularly with reference to Michigan, and I would allow them an equal privilege. I would if possible heal the dissensions which have existed so that no trace of their existence should remain.

I shall therefore take the liberty of moving this amendment. Here Colonel Prince read the amendment, which was to the effect that all Foreigners should be allowed the full enjoyment of the privileges of the subjects of this province as far as related to the purchasing, holding, granting, devising or conveying of lands, provided they became actual settlers (sic) upon the lands so purchased.<sup>8</sup>

Mr. Merritt understood the bill to have a perspective view without limitation. We had an opportunity of seeing the working of the old system by which Americans were allowed to settle in the country and after a residence of seven years became naturalized. Previous to 1812, there were no restrictions, persons of capital flowed into the Province to take advantage of the natural advantages of the country.<sup>9</sup> When the war of 1812 was declared they were the chief defenders of the country.<sup>10</sup> After that period, from the representation of interested persons, the restrictive policy was adopted, and the consequence was, that instead of settling in the Province, the Western States were selected not only by the Americans but by the European Emigrants — the State of Ohio for instance, then having about 240,000 inhabitants, had now a million, and a half. This was the consequence of the restrictive policy. He trusted that now a liberal measure would be adopted.<sup>11</sup>

Mr. Cameron said he had seconded the motion because he was willing to show the hon. gentleman that he had not changed his opinion since 1837. It would be observed that the clause now moved confers upon foreigners no political privileges. It does not make them British subjects; it only gives them the right to hold property. Some of the most valuable settlements in the United States had been acquired in consequence of their liberal policy in this respect, and this Province could not do better than follow the example; not that he considered Americans as making the best subjects of this country. They invariably became the most violent Tories.<sup>12</sup>

Hon. Mr. Harrison had no hesitation in saying that the amendment would be exceedingly inappropriate. The object of the bill was to confer certain privileges; to give not only the right to hold lands, but to give political rights. It becomes, therefore, a matter of serious consideration whether we should extend this prospectively. We know those who are at present within the Province — we know their political character; and it is a serious consideration whether we will allow persons of whom we know nothing to be placed upon an equal footing with them. With regard to holding lands, as the law now stands, they have that right until office found. It would be much better that this amendment should form a separate measure.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Roblin said he could not agree with the hon. gentleman from Lanark that the Americans make the best Tories. He considered them the worst Tories. When I see a man who has been nurtured and bred a Democrat come into this country and declare himself a Tory, I cannot believe him. With regard to the principle of the bill, he (Mr. Roblin) was in favour of doing something in behalf of those who are now domiciled in the Province, but he thought it wrong that this measure should be encumbered with an amendment of this description.<sup>14</sup>

Mr. Johnston said that although he should feel it his duty to oppose this amendment, he would not allow it to be supposed that he was less liberal than the hon. and learned gentleman from Essex himself, whose bosom is completely overflowing with liberality.<sup>15</sup> He ((Mr. Johnston)) wished to protect the loyal inhabitants of the province, and he would move an amendment to that effect.<sup>16</sup>

Mr. Hincks said he was opposed to the amendment, although he had no objection to the principle contained in it if brought in as a separate measure; but attached to this bill it might endanger its success. He (Mr. Hincks) thought the country was very much indebted to the government for bringing in a measure of this kind. He hoped the amendment would be withdrawn.<sup>17</sup>

Col. Prince said, from the turn which the debate had taken he felt quite assured that the amendment, not as an amendment but as a separate bill, would be an extremely acceptable measure. And although he consented to withdraw it with great reluctance, yet lest it might endanger the passage of this very excellent bill he would do so.<sup>18</sup>

Capt. Steele said he was happy to find that the gallant colonel was willing to withdraw the amendment. He (Capt. Steele) would give the bill his cordial support, and he would also support the bill of the hon. and gallant Colonel founded upon the amendment whenever it was brought forward. — (Hear, hear.) He was satisfied that all must agree in the propriety of giving to the industrious class of settlers the advantages and privileges of British subjects.<sup>19</sup>

Mr. Neilson said that all foreigners could come into the country and after a residence of seven years, be entitled to the privileges of British subjects. Hon. members would really make us believe that the government of Great Britain was worse than that of Turkey, that it would not allow any foreigners to enter the Province with security to their lives. In fact, in his opinion, the British Government had been culpably liberal with respect to foreigners.<sup>20</sup>

and after some time spent therein,

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair,

Bill reported
amended.

And Mr. Borne reported, that the Committee had gone through the Bill, and made several amendments thereto, which he was directed to report to the House whenever it shall be pleased to receive the same.

Mr. Speaker having put the question,

"Is it the pleasure of the House to receive the report of the Committee"?

The House divided on the question, and the names being called for, they were taken down, as followeth: —
